Eugene Stanley, of Middletown, was placed under arrest at his home and will have to answer to a charge of dynamiting fish at the next term of court. Deputy Sheriff Ira Burr made the arrest and Stanley gave bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance later for trial. For some time complaints have been lodged with the officers of dynamiting going on.

Following some words with her husband, Mrs. Ben Soule, at Auburn, attempted suicide by swallowing paris green. A physician who was called promptly succeeded in saving her life. It is said that some time ago Mrs. Soule sought to end her life by taking carbolic acid, but a 13-year-old daughter prevented it by knocking the bottle from her mother's hand.

Mrs. Ione Black and sons, Richard and Tom, have returned to their home in Greenfield, after four years in Europe. While they were away they traveled by bicycle all over France and Spain, and brought back with them the same bicycles they took away and used in their travels. One of the wheels has the same set of tires it left with, due to the splendid roads there.

Thousands of fish and turtles are dying in Busseron creek, and hundreds of dead bodies can be seen floating on the surface of the water. Various theories are advanced. Some persons believe that the water draining off the "gob piles" at the mines contains a large amount of alum, which proves fatal to the fish, and the State fish commissioner has been asked to investigate.

Since the opening of the season for hunting squirrels and woodcock, sports men of Morocco have been busy, but not with results altogether satisfactory. Woodcock are reported abundant, but hunting is curtailed by the farmers, who will not permit trespassing. Young squirrels are also numerous, and the same is true of prairie chickens, but not many are being killed for the reasons mentioned.

The family of Ellis Gray, consisting of husband, wife and six children, who reside near Petersburg, were thought to have been poisoned by drinking impure milk, are now all seriously ill of typhoid fever. Two physicians are almost in constant attendance. A coincidence in connection with the family illness is that all the members were taken sick within a short time of one another, and all have the same disease.

"I have a hen that one thousand dollars can not buy," declared Elvert B. Rhodes, of West Baden. "Six little kittens deserted by the mother cat were immediately taken under the protecting wing of the hen that refuses to leave the box of kittens. She seems as proud of the kittens as she ever was of a brood of chickens. She is attentive to them. When they mew she clucks, and objects seriously to any one molesting the kittens."

Philip Trontman's barn burned at Shoals and Trontman was severely injured while trying to save property. One horse was cremated. The loss is severe, on which there is no insurance.

With her children from far and near gathered about her at a supper in honor of her seventy-seventh birthday anniversary, Mrs. Sarah Collis, of Princeton, became the victim of a coughing spell while at the table, and died in a short time.

Noble Bassett, of Hanover Township, has bought 160 acres of farming land in the western part of Fayette County for $17,000.

Considerable speculation and much comment has been caused by the disappearance of the criminal docket of the Police Court in Newcastle. An air of deep mystery surrounds the bold theft.

Caleb A. McCarthy disappeared from his home in Richmond a week ago and nothing has been heard of him. An employe told Mrs. McCarthy that her husband was called away by telegram.

Roy Rider, aged 4 years, fell from a cart in Warsaw a few days ago and broke his collar bone, but he continued playing with his companions until his condition was discovered by his parents, who had the injury attended to.

Of the officers elected at the first county election in Newton, John Ade, of Kentland, father of George Ade, author and playwright, is the only one now living. Mr. Ade is 80 years old. He was the first recorder of Newton County.

Katherine, the 4-year-old daughter of Albert Daniels, of New Albany, was burned to death while playing with matches, with which she attempted to start a bonfire in an alley. Her mother was badly burned while trying to save the child.

Miss Hannah Stuckman, 70 years of age, walked the nine miles from Milford Junction to Nappanee, carrying a bundle of luggage swung on a broom-handle over her shoulder, and reached Nappanee so fresh that she ventured the assertion that she could keep on for another nine or ten miles without excessive fatigue.

A 1-year-old babe of Mrs. D. K. Mann of Vine street, in Elkhart, swallowed an open safety pin which lodged in its throat. While waiting for a physician the mother grabbed the child by the foot and by swinging it produced a nausea and dislodged the pin. The throat was scratched, but no serious results will follow.

John W. Emison, Jr., the 20-year-old son of Postmaster John W. Emison, and one of the prominent young men of Vincennes, was probably fatally injured by being crushed between the touring car of William H. Glover and an iron fence. The young man cranked the car while the engine was set for operation, and he was carried against the fence before the car could be stopped.

Father Lynn, who served as assistant in the Catholic church in Peru for two years, and was recently transferred to Academie, near Fort Wayne, was the recipient of a roll of money as large as a tin cup, when a committee of twelve men called on him at the rectory. The bills were of $1 denomination with the exception of the outside one, which was a $10 gold certificate. John Toomey made the presentation speech.

Postoffice inspectors are investigating depredations of young men on two rural mail routes out of Richmond and arrests are expected. Nearly every farmer's mail box on routes Nos. 1 and 2 have been made targets for rifle shots by these young men and in some instances boxes have fairly been riddled by bullets. The shooting was done in a spirit of fun, it is asserted, but the inspectors do not appear to see anything humorous about it.

The tiger which ran amuck in the bottoms near Oakland City, last winter, seems to be back to his old camping ground. Blackberry pickers, who have been working in the Patoka bottoms, have been frightened by the screams of some animal, and many of them are afraid to enter the woods. No one has met it face to face, so the identification is not complete, but as only one tiger is known to be loose in Southern Indiana, this must be it.

Clement Studebaker, son of the late Clem Studebaker, has bought twelve acres of land at $1,000 an acre on the east side of South Bend, and he will immediately begin the erection of one of the finest mansions in that part of the State. The residence will be in the center of a magnificent park, which will be laid out by a famous landscape gardener. While the cost of the improvement has not been announced, it is understood that it will be in the neighborhood of $200,000.

Mrs. Lucinda Copper, 78 years old, who is dead in Wabash, suffered heavily in the wars in which the Government has been involved. Her husband and two brothers were killed while fighting for the North in the Civil War. Another brother was killed in the Mexican War and two grandsons fell by Filipino bullets. Her ancestors fought in the War of the Revolution and in the War of 1812. During the War of the Rebellion, every member of her family, and that of her husband, of fighting age, enlisted.

Jacob Tallman, a farm hand living nine miles north of Elkhart, stepped into the cylinder box of a threshing machine and before the machine could be stopped his left foot was severely mangled.

Will Finn has been notified by Harry Barnett, of Beeville, Ont., that an ordinary toy balloon, sent up by Finn from St. Joseph, July 4, was recovered by Barnett intact when it descended July 6, more than 150 miles from its starting point.

CHICAGO MAN NAMED PROHIBITION LEADER

Eugene W. Chafin Is Nominated for President by the Aqua Pura Party.

WATKINS IN SECOND PLACE.

Shortest Platform in History of National Conventions Is Adopted at Columbus.

Columbus Correspondence:

Eugene W. Chafin, of Chicago, was nominated for President of the United States by the Prohibition national convention Thursday. For Vice President the convention named Aaron S. Watkins, of Ada, O., a professor in the Ohio Northern University. Both candidates are gubernatorial candidates of the Prohibition party in their respective States. The shortest platform on record and one containing for the first time in the history of important national parties in this country a declaration in favor of equal suffrage was framed for the candidates to stand upon.

Republican and Democratic [illegible] dates and platforms were s[illegible] and evidence held to prove [illegible] was a Prohibitionist was [illegible] the opening session of the [illegible] party's national convention [illegible] and Bryan were stamped a[illegible] liquor in the address of th[illegible] chairman, Robert H. Pat[illegible] field, Ill.

Mr. Patton held the att[illegible] audience throughout his sp[illegible] times moved his hearers to grea[illegible] siasm.

"Take off your coat," and "Hit h[illegible] again!" cried the delegates, and these shouts were interspersed with "Amens." The speaker took off his coat and then paid his compliments to the late Herman Raster of Illinois, author of the personal liberty plant of the 1872 Republican platform. He read a letter from Wade H. Ellis, attorney general of Ohio and author of much of the Republican platform of this year, declaring that he could find nothing in the Raster plank "inconsistent with Republican doctrine."

"Caught with the goods!" shouted some one in the audience.

Passing from the Republican party, Mr. Patton spoke of that "very talkative man from Lincoln," and said that in the last sixteen years Mr. Bryan "has championed everything loose under the sun in the way of a political issue except the prohibition question."

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock in Memorial Hall by Chairman Jones. The invocation was offered by Rev. E. L. Eaton of Illinois, and after the formal reading of the call for the convention the name of Robert H. Patton of Springfield, Ill., was announced as temporary chairman.

Following the address of Mr. Patton the roll of states was called for the announcement of committees. An address of welcome to the delegates was delivered by Mayor C. A. Bank of Columbus, and a response was made by W. P. F. Ferguson of Chicago.

Planks in the Platform.

1. Submission by Congress to the several States of an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes.

2. Immediate prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes in the District of Columbia, in the territories and in all places over which the national government has jurisdiction, the repeal of the internal revenue tax on alcoholic liquors and the prohibition of interstate traffic therein.

3. Election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people.

4. Equitable graduated income and inheritance taxes.

5. Establishment of postal savings banks and the guaranty of deposits in banks.

6. Regulation of all corporations doing an interstate business.

7. Creation of a permanent tariff commission.

8. Strict enforcement of law instead of the official tolerance and practical license of the social evil which prevails in many of our cities, with its unspeakable traffic in girls.

9. Uniform marriage and divorce laws.

10. An equitable and constitutional employers' liability act.

11. Court review of Postoffice Department decisions.

12. Prohibition of child labor in mines, workshops and factories.

13. Legislation basing suffrage only upon intelligence and ability to read and write the English language.

14. Preservation of the mineral and forest resources of the country and improvement of the highways and water ways.

Shop for the Blind.

Helen Keller has opened at Manchester, Mass., the first of what she expects will be a chain of shops for the sale of the handicraft of blind workers. The display includes fine products of the loom and various house furnishings.

Nelson Downs Gans.

At San Francisco Joe Gans, the negro who so long had held the lightweight championship, was beaten in seventeen rounds by "Battling" Nelson.

JULY

0255

L 903

AUGUST CLEARANCE SALE

Commencing SATURDAY, AUG. 1, and Closing

SATURDAY AUGUST 15.

We have put off our Mid-Summer Sale until now in order that those people who were waiting for their Harvest returns might be able to secure some of the good things in the merchandise line. We are going to make it worth your while for the waiting. Look over this bill and come. The goods are from our regular stock. No remnants or short lengths bought especially for bait.

Domestics

We are enabled to offer you cottons at the lowest price in years and from the present outlook the lowest prices for sometime to come.

9-4 full bleached sheeting worth 35c Sale price per yard	24c	Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 9c now at	7c
8-4 full bleached sheeting worth 30c Sale price per yard	22c	Good yard wide unbleached muslin Sale price per yard	5c
Full yard wide bleached sheeting worth 12c now at	8½c	All our apron check ginghams Sale price per yard	6c
Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 8c now at	6c	A big lot fancy ginghams, dress styles Sale price per yard	12c

Shirt Waists.

A big reduction on these waists, fine sheer cloth with Val Lace and insertion finely made in latest styles.

$1 25 waists now for	$ 98	$1 50 and 1.75 waists for	$1 29
2 00 and 2 25 waists	$1 59	Jap silk waists at big reduction.

All Our Prints

50 new pieces just in @ ..... 5c per yard.

Oxfords

All new up-to-date footwear, three months yet of oxford season. Sizes somewhat broken.

Men's $3.50 patent and tan oxfords Sale price	$2.79	Ladies $3.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price	$2.48
Men's $3.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price	$2.48	Ladies $2.50 patent and tan oxfords Sale price	$2.19
Men's $2.50 patent oxfords Sale price	$2.19	Ladies $2.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price	$1.79
Boy's $2.50 patent oxfords Sale price	$2.19

Misses and childrens patent and tan oxfords at reduced prices.
Ladies, Misses and Children's white canvas slippers, 69 to 98c per pair.
All dress shoes discounted 10 per cent.

Special 25 pairs childrens $1.00 slippers at ..... 49c.

Skirts = = Jackets.

All our Spring Jackets & Skirts 1-4 off.

Hats.

$3.00 Stiff hats, black or brown	$2.48
$2.50 Stiff hats black or brown	$1.98
$2.00 stiff and soft hats Sale price	$1.69
$1.50 soft hats Sale price	$1.29
$1.25 soft hats Sale price	98c
$1.00 straw hats Sale price	75c
$.50 straw hats Sale price	40c

Ladies Shirt Waists.

All new stock. Not a last year's waist in the lot. You can't miss the opportunity to buy some of them.

$1.25 and $1.50 lawn waists Sale price	98c
$1.75 and $2.00 lawn waists	$1.29
$2.25 and $2.50 lawn waists	$1.69
$3.00 and $3.25 silk waists	$2.48
$4.50 and $5.00 silk waists	$3.48

Overalls.

85ct. overalls during Sale	75c
60ct. overalls during Sale	55c
50ct. overalls during Sale	45c

DRESS SHIRTS:
$1 25 dress shirts @ 98c; 1 00 shirts @ 90c
50c shirts @ 45c; Special lot @ 35, 69c.
All 50c work shirts @ 43c.

Gents Furnishings

25ct. hose, plain and fancy Sale price per pair	22c
15ct. hose, plain and fancy Sale price per pair	13c
Linen Collars Sale price each	13c
50ct. ties During sale	45c
25ct. ties going at	22c

GENT'S Summer Underwear.

$1.75 union suits Sale price	$1.48
$1.50 union suits Sale price	$1.29
$1.00 union suits Sale price	90c
50 ct. shirts and drawers Sale price	45c
25 ct shirts and drawers Sale price	23c
Odd shirts and drawers Sale price, each	19 & 35
Boy's 25 ct. shirts and drawers	20c

You are now fully enjoying the harvest time, pleased with the rich returns. It means that the farmer is going to be able to make many purchases for the comfort of himself and family. Come to our sale, rich in savings on good merchandise.

OUR BARGAINS WILL CERTAINLY INTEREST YOU.

THE BIG FOUR STORE,
ST. JOE IND.

Local Items.

Harry Milliman and John Simanton with their wives took a day's outing at Hamilton Lake, last Wednesday.

Mr. Humphrey of south Bend was in town Thursday, taking subscriptions for a new county and state atlas to be published by the Rand, McNally Co., of Chicago.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

Editor Yeiser and daughter Lilieth of Avilla were callers in town Wednesday.

The St. Joe base ball club will go to Hicksville Thursday and play in the forenoon at the races against the Hicksville team. A large crowd will accompany them.

Mrs. Frank Bolph of South Bend came Wednesday evening to visit her parents and to assist in the work during the sickness of her brother, Elmer.

The Imported Hackney Stallion, New Fashion is now owned by Wm. Watson, who lives three miles southwest of Spencerville. He will stand the entire week, except Saturdays, as the owners barn, when he will be at the Moffett Feed barn at Auburn.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Last Tuesday afternoon some small boys were playing catch on the Lutheran church lawn and accidentally threw the ball into the large window in the north end. One of the youngsters paid a dollar and the balance have not done their part. The boys should pay it and no doubt it will take a man from Wayne to replace the section broken, as it is a particular job

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

Miss Lora Hull spent several days last week with friends in Ft. Wayne.

Franc Rhodenbaugh has been sick with malarial and intermittent fever

Mrs. W. R. Osburn after spending a week with relatives and friends in this locality, returned to her home in Ft. Wayne, Sunday evening.

J. D. Leighty was at Mt. Clemens Mich. taking treatment for rheumatism.

Hattie Ferguson of Auburn visited with her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Milliman a couple of days last week.

Mr. Phillips a student at Yale, whose parents live near Maysville, was in town Thursday trying to get a lecture course for the coming winter.

JULY

0256

L 903

The Popular Pulpit

RANK AND WIN PLACIDITY.

By Rev. N. M'Gee Waters.

The parable of the talents—Matt. xxv. 14-30.

The question of rank has been the perpetual heartache of human society. The Orient has solved the puzzle of caste. The West has solved it by democracy.

The West with its democracy has a part of the truth. A man's chance in life must not be determined by where he was born or by his inheritance, but by his personal worth. Every man must have a full chance to be all the man there is in him to be.

But the East, with its clumsy caste system, also has a part of the truth. Inequality is a fact among men. When the West, as it has sometimes done, interpreted democracy to mean equality among all men, it has fallen into grievous error. Equality in opportunity, variety in ability is God's law.

Jesus spoke the truth. There is the five-talent man. Homer saw him and named him Ulysses—there was found none who could bend his bow. Scotland found him at the plow and his name was Burns. In New England he was born in a cabin on the frontier of Puritan civiliation. He walked straight to the Senate. In our age he directs the fleets of commerce and organizes corporations.

There is the man to whom God has intrusted two talents. We know him better. He lives in our block. His name is legion. He is the average man. He has a chance in the world. For of him is humanity principally made up. He makes up the armies that fight. He makes up the force of men that till soil, hold the levers of commerce, bear the burdens of trade, fill the churches, crowd the schools, build the homes of men where the great children are to be born and will make up the vast multitude in heaven. God has a great need of him, and, as Lincoln said, "God best loves the common people because He has made so many of them."

There stands sullen and despairing the man to whom God has given but a single talent. I have met him in college. He traded all his patrimony to get there—he would be a scholar. Now the tragedy begins. Tries he ever so hard, he is always at the bottom of his class. He goes into a profession and he is a failure in the eyes of men. In business he never gets ahead and constantly the temptation is with him not to use the talent he has. And yet somehow he must not fail in his place. The heroes have done almost all they can for the world; the future welfare of the world as in the past hangs on the one and two talented men doing their best.

That is a photograph of the world, and note, Jesus drew it—I did not. He saw and called attention to the fact of inequality in this world. Moreover, he gave no hint of condemning it; he proposed no leveling. There is no such thing as equality in capacity between man and man. No law of larger liberty, no economic or socialistic scheme, no state of lawless anarchy can ever make men equal—God made them otherwise, and unequal they will be to the end.

Christ says the station in life is not the real difference in men, but the way they fill their station. Reward is based on faithfulness. You are paid, not for what you do, but how you do.

This truth is the one needed in our time. The truth of the parable is with your talent be content. Use it well and God will pay thee full wage. The ten-talent man can have no higher crown. In his small church the country minister may work miracles. In your handicraft you may do great things. Getting up is not getting on. The coming man is the becoming one. Here lies the hope for the man of mediocrity or one talent. Greatness depends on service. All service ranks the same with God. With Him there is neither last nor first.

THE HEAVENLY VISION.

By Henry F. Cope.

"I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision."—Acts, xxvi, 19.

He who has fully followed his ideas may have missed all other prizes in that pursuit, yet he has found happiness and riches that could have become his in no other way. Here is the secret of satisfaction, here is high success in any life, that one shall have followed fully his ideals, shall have kept the best steadily before him.

Heavenly visions come to all. They may not come with the rushing of angels' wings, nor with strange and mysterious signs and appearances. Perhaps some of the old time visions of great missions and of heights of character are described in terms of the supernatural only because they seem so much above the plane of the normal, average experience.

None is poorer than he who has never known high aspiration, who has never lifted his eyes to see the glory set before him. After all, the measure of any life is the extent to which such visions of great possibilities and lofty tasks has entered into the being and dominated the deeds.

There is nothing like this to make a man strong to endure, to make him despise the paltry prizes that seem so attractive to eyes blind to the greater glory. This is the food that angels envy, food that has sustained the soul through long days in the deserts, through weariness, toil, disappointments, fears, forsakings, losses and loneliness. They are able to despise the cross and to endure the shame who have seen the glory set before every worthy life, and leading on every high path of service or of sacrifice. No man or woman ever attained anything without this; nothing is impossible to those who cherish this light and heed this call.

Livingstone, Lincoln, Garibaldi, Florence Nightingale would have failed without the vision. In the rewards of wage or fame there would be no power to bear them up, on the contrary their daily experiences were enough to turn them from the chosen path, but for the lofty confidence that they were doing the one work for them, but for the inspiration of the ideal before them.

And this is any man's religion, to follow his ideal, to seek to be the best that day by day he knows, to do the highest duty that any lofty desire indicates, to take the path that leads up in love, and service, and purity of living. The religious life is the life that moves up into its higher self, and so ever finds new heights before it.

The great question for every man in religion is, not so much whether he will obey the ten commandments, not so much whether he will bend to the dictate of church or preacher, but whether he will be obedient to the inner vision, of the voice from heaven that speaks in his own heart and bids him forsake his dull ways of self-content and rise to higher living, to sacrificial service.

That vision calls us to paths of pain, that vision, if you but heed and seek to obey, makes tremendous demands of you. It is not the easy, heedless following of an emotional, romantic love for glory; it is the thorny path of the cross, the way of burden bearing; it is so hard as to be heroic.

The thing that is eating like a canker into our hearts, and robbing us of our power, and stealing our possibilities is our love of ease, our hatred of the things that are hard; we refuse to obey the heavenly vision because to do so would be to endure hardness, to forsake our soft and pleasant ways. So seeking ease we lose life.

Our days are filled with a dull discontent, not because we do not possess the things of this life, but because we have missed its greatest prize, the joy of following growing ideals. There is nothing we need to cherish more, to guard more closely than this, the visions that stir to greatness, the passion for perfection, the hope of high living and serving.

LAW AND GRACE.

By Rev. R. W. Dale, D. D., LL. D.

Text.—"For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1: 17.

Grace came by Jesus Christ. You think that by an eternal law you must suffer for your sins. The Christian Gospel declares that Christ suffered for them. His relations to us are of a kind which made it possible for Him, as it was possible for no one else. He suffered for them, and instead of your suffering whenever you remember them He brings remission of sins, He breaks, He dissolves the iron links which bind men to their sins, He releases them from the sense of guilt, He gives them cheerfulness and buoyancy again. "As far as the east is from the west, so far does He remove our transgressions from us." From that inner consciousness of guilt Christ gives us perfect deliverance.

Grace came by Jesus Christ. He does not say "live righteously, and God will be at peace with you," but "God is at peace with you, therefore live righteously." He finds us in our sin. Whenever He really finds us we are conscious of our sin, and so we are ready in our strong belief in that form of law which is familiar to us to say, "God can be no friend of mine as yet; I must amend my ways, I must break off my evil habits, I must master my evil passions, I must become pure, devout, earnest about religion, and then God will be at peace with me." That is law. What Christ says is, "God is already at peace with you, is already your friend. He will not wait till you have amended your ways before He dismisses the remembrance of your sin. He dismisses it at once and will help you to mend your ways, will help you to break off evil habits, will help you to master evil passions, will help you to become pure, devout, and earnest about religion." That is grace. People do not see the glory of it, do not see what it means. They think that Christ only came to make some things plainer to the world than they were before. It never occurred to them that it would not have been worth while for the eternal Word of God to become flesh in order to do that. He came to reveal what man had not known before, cannot know apart from Him. "Do this and live," as some one has said, is the voice of the law; "live and do this" is the voice of grace and the voice of Christ. Grace comes, grants us to begin with more than man had ever hoped for by perfect obedience and grace, tells man that by an obedience he would never have been capable of before, he is to retain this great wealth and constantly to augment it. And so in a higher region grace and law blend. The law is not made void—it is established; the righteousness that law demands grace renders possible; and so man is glorified forever in the eternal glory of God.

Smiles of the Day

Sure He Could.

The art photographer had visited the farm.

"I want to make an exhaustive study of this particular bit of landscape," he said, "and would like to have your hired man retain his present position on the fence there. Can he sit still?"

"For days at a time," replied the farmer.

Much the Same.

"As near as I can figure it out," said the mere man, "heaven must be a place where it is always summer."

"Yes," rejoined the sweet young thing, "and doubtless the proportion of men to women there will be about the same as it is at the summer resorts."

Rather Scarce.

Wedderly—I say, old chap, why don't you pick out some good woman and enter into a matrimonial partnership?

Singleton—What I want in that line is a silent partner, and I don't believe it is possible to find one.

At the Grand Canyon.

She—What a magnificent, sublime wealth of scenic grandeur!

He—Yes; but doocid poor judgment, I should say, to have it away out here.

Where the Fault Lies.

"But," protested the wayward son, "you should make allowance for the follies of youth."

"Huh!" growled the old man. "If it wasn't for the allowance you get there would be less folly."

Why He Didn't Sleep.

"Well, no," said Brightly, who had shared his bed with McFidgett. "I must admit I didn't sleep well last night."

"That's too bad, old man," replied McFidgett. "I assure you I slept like a top."

"Quite so. When a top sleeps it's continually turning around."—Philadelphia Press.

Chance of Her Life.

Judge—Do you swear that you will tell the truth, the whole truth, and—

Miss Sweet—Oh, how lovely! Shall I really be allowed to talk all the afternoon if I want to?

Real Unkind.

Reggy—I'm studying French, doncher know. I cawn't—aw—speak the language yet, but I can—aw—think in it.

Kitty—As that is more than you can do in English, allow me to congratulate you.

Small Boy's Theory.

"I wonder why the bride is crying?" remarked one of the guests at the wedding. "Can it be because she is leaving home?"

"No, I guess it ain't that," answered the bride's small brother. "She's in love with the fellow she married and I guess she's crying 'cause she feels sorry for him."

Could Watch Strollers.

Helen—Such a delightful chaperon for the summer. Such a far-seeing old lady, you know.

Harry—Far-seeing? Then she would never do for a summer chaperon.

Unidentified.

Man at Phone—Hello! Hello! Who is this?

Voice (from other end of line)—How do I know? Look yourself up and see.

As Amended.

"I can marry any man I choose," boasted the fair but freckled summer girl.

"Always provided your choice is willing," amended summer girl No. 2.

Different.

"Did he propose to you last night?"

"No."

"But I heard you say, 'This is so sudden'!"

"He was paying some money he owed me."—Houston Post.

The Darwinian Theory.

Count De Bree—I would like to show you my family tree.

Miss Gottrox—Oh, please do! I've never seen a cocoanut tree!

A Pleasure Not to Be Missed.

A teacher of a certain school received the following note explaining the absence of one of her pupils the day before:

"Pleze excoose Henry for absents yesterday. Him an' me got a chance of a ride to a funeral in a charrige, an' I let him stay to home as he had never rode in a charrige an' never went to a funeral, nor had many other pleasures. So pleze excoose."—Sacred Heart Review.

Had Him Cornered.

Hilow—Do you know how much money there is in this country per capita?

Milow—About $33, I believe.

Hilow—Have you got your share?

Milow—Sure.

Hilow—That's good. Lend me five for a few days, will you?

How About Uncle?

"Well, Georgie, you've been fishing with your uncle, have you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Your uncle told us he caught a dozen big fellows. Can't you tell us how many you caught?"

No response from Georgie.

"But you haven't lost your tongue, have you? How many did you catch?"

"I haven't lost my tongue, sir, but papa's sittin' just over there and he always punishes me for lying!"—Yonkers Statesman.

She Is a Genius.

Horace—That Bunsby girl is a genius.

Evelyn—Which one?

Horace—Mary Jane.

Evelyn—In what way?

Horace—See how her name figures on the program of graduating exercises. Here it is: "Marye Jeanne De Bunnesbie.

Enough to Think About.

"When do you think the Panama canal will be finished?"

"Now, what's the use," rejoined Farmer Corntossel, "of tryin' to take my mind off this job of ditchin' I've laid out on my own little patch of land?"—Washington Star.

Why They Were Clean.

Mother—Why, Bobbie, how clean your hands are!

Bobbie—Aren't they! But you ought to have seen 'em before I helped Bridget make the bread!—Life.

Dirt Cheap.

Farmer Wayback—Gosh! Cabinets, fifty cents a dozen. Guess I'll buy one to put seeds in.

Accomplished.

Loraine—I think I would rather fence with Evelyn than with anyone I know.

Marion—Yes?

Loraine—Yes, she can give you all the gossip of the neighborhood and make it interesting with the foils at the same time.

Quite Different.

Dickson—I wonder if I shall ever be rich enough to own a steam yacht?

Wickson—Um! That isn't my ambition.

Dickson—What is?

Wickson—I want to be rich enough after I own one to run it for a few weeks each season.

A Test.

Annabel—But do you think he loves her?

Arthur—Sure. He saw her out in the back yard beating carpets with her hair tied up in a towel, and he still wants to marry her.

His Success.

"Your friend Little tells me he's got his wife pretty thoroughly trained now."

"Yes, he's got her trained so that he can make her do pretty nearly anything she wants to do."—Philadelphia Press.

Got Rattled.

Tired Thomas—After givin' me sumthin' t' eat, dat ole farmer asked me t' turn de grindstone fer him.

Lazy Lewis—Wot did youse do?

Tired Thomas—Nawthon'. I was so rattled I didn't know which way to turn.

Going a Gale.

"Yes," said the Kansas farmer, "one of them thar actor folks came through here and eloped with my daughter in an automobile."

"And did you pursue them?" asked the lightning rod man.

"Yes, on the old gray mule."

"Hm! Hopeless chase, eh?"

"No, stranger. Providence sent along a cyclone, picked up me and the old gray mule and landed us right in front of the automobile. Before they could get away I had them."

No Cause for Complaint.

"I went fishing yesterday," remarked the obese passenger.

"Have any luck?" queried the drummer.

"Sure," answered the o. p. "I didn't get drowned or lose any of my bait."

What It Would Say.

Sentimental Young Lady—Ah, professor! what would this old oak say if it could talk?

Professor—It would say, "I am an elm."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Misses' Blouse.

The blouse that allows effective use of the fashionable buttons or embroidered discs as trimming is one certain to be in demand just now, and here is a model that is admirably well adapted to the treatment. In the illustration it is made of pongee with trimming of applique and chemisette of all-over lace while the wide tucks at the shoulders are trimmed with buttons, but in place of buttons embroidered discs would be handsome and equally smart, while the blouse itself is suited to almost all seasonable materials.

PATTERN NO. 5983.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5983.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Girl's Dress.

Simple little frocks made with straight full skirts are among the most practical and the most desirable of the warm weather season. This one is pretty and attractive and can be made from almost any really childish material, the linens, batistes, dimities and the like of the present season, and also challis, cashmere and similar lightweight wools. In the illustration, however, dotted batiste is trimmed with embroidery.

PATTERN NO. 6012.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6012.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

UNFAMILIAR FACTS.

The song of the bird was originally a cry of alarm.

Red-haired persons are usually impulsive and outspoken.

Watchmakers' oil is from the jawbone of the porpoise.

Pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust.

The Lusitania has 49 clocks on board, all controlled by a master clock in the chart house.

CUTICURA CURED FOUR.

Southern Woman Suffered with Itching, Burning Rash—Three Little Babies Had Skin Troubles.

"My baby had a running sore on his neck and nothing that I did for it took effect until I used Cuticura. My face was nearly full of tetter or some similar skin disease. It would itch and burn so that I could hardly stand it. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment cured me. Two years after it broke out on my hands and wrist. Sometimes I would go nearly crazy, for it itched so badly. I went back to my old stand-by, that had never failed me—one set of Cuticura Remedies did the work. One set also cured my uncle's baby, whose head was a cake of sores, and another baby who was in the same fix. Mrs. Lillie Wilcher, 770 Eleventh St., Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1907."

2,400 Babies in Twenty-Five Years.

When Dr. J. W. Carmichael assisted at the birth of an eleven-pound boy to-day he announced that this infant was the twenty-four hundredth at whose arrival he had officiated. Dr. Carmichael is also a minister, and he has frequently served at the wedding of a couple and later at the birth of their children. Once he carried it so far as the baptism.

The first of the 2,400 was a relative of Henry W. Grady. When the boy grew up Dr. Carmichael married him—Atlanta Cor. New York Sun.

A TERRIBLE CONDITION.

Tortured by Sharp Twinges, Shooting Pains and Dizziness.

Hiram Center, 518 South Oak street, Lake City, Minn., says: "I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not straighten up after stooping without sharp pains shooting through my back. I had dizzy spells, was nervous and my eyesight affected. The kidney secretions were irregular and too frequent. I was in a terrible condition, but Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Ins and Outs.

"What's that noise?" asked the visitor in the apartment house.

"Probably some one in the dentist's apartments on the floor below getting a tooth out."

"But this seemed to come from the floor above."

"Ah, then it's probably the Popleys' baby getting a tooth in."—Philadelphia Press.

Do Your Clothes Look Yellow?

If so, use Red Cross Ball Blue. It will make them white as snow. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

AN INSECT TRAGEDY.

The Nest the Mother Butterfly Builds for Her Young.

There is something really pathetic in the way a mother butterfly builds a nest for her children. In the first place, the little home where the eggs are deposited represents a great deal of sacrifice, for it is lined with several layers of down plucked from the mother's own soft body. The eggs having been laid carefully upon this luxurious, pretty couch, are protected by an equally pretty coverlet made of the same material.

These butterfly bedclothes are often arranged with an intricacy that is quite curious and perplexing. Sometimes a bed is made so that each separate delicate hair stands upright, thus giving the entire nest the appearance of a little brush of downy fur. Then again the eggs are laid spirally round a tiny branch, and, as the covering follows their course, the effect resembles the bushy tail of a fox, only the nest is more beautiful than the brush of the finest fox that ever roamed over country.

The building of this downy nest is the latest earthly labor of the mother butterfly, for by the time it is completed her own delicate body is denuded of its natural covering and there is nothing left for her to do but die, a sacrifice which she promptly and heroically makes in the interest of the coming butterfly generation.

HEALTH AND INCOME.

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts, which I did, making this food a large part of at least two meals a day.

"To-day I am free from brain-fire, dyspepsia and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

JULY

0257

L 903

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

To Ladies Only.—The wish to be beautiful is predominant in every woman, and none can say she does not care whether she is beautiful or not. Dr. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier elicits a clear, transparent complexion, free from Tan, Freckles, or Moth Patches, and so closely imitating nature as to defy detection. It has the highest medical testimony as well as professional celebrities, and on its own merits it has become one of the largest and a popular specialty in the trade. FERD. T. HOPKINS, Sole Proprietor, 37 Great Jones Street, New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe.

Uncle Allen.

"Lots of politicians," remarked Uncle Allen Sparks, "turn up their noses at the vice presidency when they lack a million miles of being in smelling distance of it."—Chicago Tribune.

You Can Get Allen's Foot-Ease FREE

Write to-day to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for a FREE sample of Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder to shake into your shoes. It cures tired, sweating, hot, swollen, aching feet. It makes new or tight shoes easy. A certain cure for Corns and Bunions. All Druggists and Shoe Stores sell it. 25c.

The per capita circulation of the United States is exceeded by only one other country of importance, and that is France.

Clear, white clothes are a sign that the housekeeper uses Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Canadians regard the settlers from the United States as the most desirable of all the immigrants coming into that country.

CASTORIA

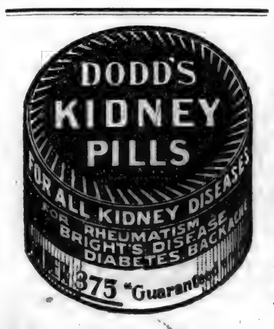
For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

A Rabbit and a Whistle.

Did you know that a short, sharp whistle from the mouth would stop a rabbit? It surely does. Next time you see little Molly Cottontail leap from her burrow and make off don't shoot; just whistle. Whether from fear or curiosity I cannot tell, but she will stop still in her tracks. An antelope has been known to do likewise. An African hunter once said that the elephant is the most timid of all animals and can be frightened into a cold sweat by a mysterious noise.—New York Press.



SO SHORT IS TIME.

So short the time, so much to do,
So frail this tenement of clay,
That some rude wind may shake the reed,
And scatter all life's seeds away.
How many resolutions made,
That fade like clouds in summer skies;
How many hopes so strong and brave,
That never to their summit rise?
How many steps to Calvary's height,
Fall backward from the mountain side,
When fright from shadow of the cross
Will quickly weaken our flesh and pride?
How many struggling wrecks we see,
A friendly hand we oft' can give;
How many sorrows, sins and shames,
In broken hearts that feign would live?
Be quick, the light is passing now;
Then gather up the flowers cast
Upon your path, where'er you turn,
For aye their sweetness will not last,
So brief the day, so long the night;
Thus, catch the sunshine while you may,
A word, a thought, a deed may make
Another happy, who can say?
The time is ripe, we live but now,
The hours go on swallow's wings;
Then do some good each minute here,
Tho' it should be but little things.
—Rixford J. Lincoln.

Lifted Shadows

No finer man than young Donald Carmicael could have been found between Land's End and John o' Groats. He was what the Irish would have called "a broth av a bhoy," the Scotch, "a braw laddie;" the English, "a strapping young fellow."

Six feet three in his socks, broad in proportion, lithe and clean-limbed, straight as a lance, he went far to merit the description. And he was as handsome as he was big. His face was large and open, no single feature marring the harmony of the whole. Many a bonnie lassie's heart beat faster when Donald Carmichael went by.

But there was a shadow on young Donald's life, against which his gifts of face and physique went for naught.

He was a stammerer. His affliction was not of that mild form, commonly met with, which is capable of being controlled, and is accounted no great disadvantage. The malady had visited him in its most virulent form.

He was able to form a sentence only with the greatest difficulty, after repeated attempts. Even this was beyond him upon frequent occasions. The smallest experience outside the routine of his restricted life reduced him to absolute incoherence.

And Donald was shy, sensitive and proud. His disability spoiled his life. It made him a confirmed recluse, hating society, hugging solitude. And that is why we find him in this lonely lighthouse on the northeast coast of Scotland. That is why he had adopted a calling which appealed only to men such as old Tammas, who was predestined for the work, his father, grandfather and great-grandfather having been keepers before him.

To-night Donald was strangely restless. A peculiar mood was upon him; he was fanciful, imaginative, apprehensive. He had an uneasy sense of impending calamity. Anything might happen on a night like this!

What was that? A cry of distress, or only the shriek of the wind? Donald looked with straining eyes out into the brooding night. Surely that was a schooner? He seemed to descry it struggling through the storm, reeling and tottering, like a wounded elk with merciless dogs at its haunches.

Then a sudden impact of water driven by the fierce wind against the windows of the lighthouse made vision impossible. When the ensuing lull occurred nothing was visible on the face of the deep, so Donald concluded that the laboring schooner had been a figment of his imagination.

Toward dawn the storm abated in fury, and a more comfortable state of mind came to the watcher. He looked toward the distant horizon with the pall of cloud changed from black to a sullen gray, developing by imperceptible gradations into a fixed luminous purple. Then he extinguished the lights.

His eyes, roving once more over the limitless expanse of ocean, suddenly altered their direction and looked sheer down at the rugged rocks which constituted the base of the lighthouse.

What he saw there brought swift expression to his eyes—of alarm, astonishment, incredulity, startled awe. Prone on the rocks, a few bare inches' purchase from the lapping water, was a human form. Donald concentrated his vision, but was unable to tell whether it was man or woman, boy or girl; nor dared he hazard a guess whether the poor soul was alive or dead.

He quickly roused old Tammas, and together they descended to the rocks below. Both stood for a brief moment inactive, silently regarding the body which had escaped from the clutches of the sea.

'Twas a maiden in the first access of young womanhood—of some eighteen or nineteen summers may be. She was very beautiful to look upon.

Was that the pallid hue of death on her cheek? No; she still breathed. A half-sob escaped from Donald's throat—his heart was very tender.

"Puir bit lassie!" said Tammas. "Some puir mither will greet sair the nicht. Help me wi' her, Donal'. Puir bit lassie!"

Her waist was encircled by a life-belt—though insensible, she was still clasping it. They gently disengaged her fingers and bore her to the one bedroom of the tower. Donald tumbled the belongings of himself and Tammas to the storeroom below. For three long days they fought for the girl's life. No woman could have been more tender than were these two rough men. Strange emotions welled up in Donald's breast, and ere long the labor for him had become one of love.

With joy they watched the color stealing covertly into the face of their patient, and on the fourth day their work was completed. The crisis was past, the danger gone; the girl was saved.

It was 3 o'clock one boisterous afternoon when she opened her eyes and for the first time was able intelligently to appraise her surroundings. She looked around her, marveling greatly. Then she remembered the storm, the wreck, her struggle with the waves. So she had been rescued; by whose hands she did not know.

Then Donald came.

He stopped sort on the threshold. If the girl had been desirable before, what was she now, her face lighted up by beautiful eyes, smiles trembling on her lips, her whole self sweet and appealing.

Donald walked to the bedside. A torrent of words rushed to his lips. Then—he remembered his terrible affliction; he had forgotten it for the moment. The words were unuttered; his lips closed like a vise. Oh, she must not know—she must not know! He could not bear it. Heaven help him to keep his secret from her!

Intuition told the girl that Donald was her rescuer. She did not speak, but suddenly a rich red color flooded her cheeks, and with an impulsive gesture she seized his hand and pressed it to her lips.

He snatched his hand away and rushed from the room.

Presently old Tammas shambled in. Donald had sent him in to hear the girl's story and learn her behests. Tammas was with her half an hour or more. When he came out of the bedroom there was a look of perplexity on his face.

"Puir bit lassie!" he soliloquized. "I'll keep her secret, gin I can, bit I sair misdoot my abeelity. The limmer's got thochts o' Donald an' disna want him tae knaw. She na minds me knawin'—I dinna coont. But fine I'm o' the opeenion Donal' will no' be owre lang findin' oot the truth."

DONALD WAS STRANGELY RESTLESS.

Later in the afternoon, however, Tammas had food for further reflection.

"Weel, that cowes a'. Fust, I maun keep bit lassie's secret, an' noo I maun keep Donal's."

He scratched his pate in perplexity. Then a sudden thought struck him, causing him to chuckle long and loudly.

"Michty, they'll keep yin anither's secrets."

During ensuing days the lighthouse was a different place to Donald. The presence of the girl seemed to have shed a tranquil sweetness over everything. Even the storerooms and kitchen were different. There was an intangible atmosphere about them which awed him, and caused him to tread softly.

A new land was opening out before his gaze, beautiful and enchanting. A beckoning finger bade him enter it. But he held back; to him it was a forbidden land. Was he always to abide under the shadow of his hateful affliction?

Meanwhile, there was one thing about the girl which puzzled him sorely. This was her absolute avoidance of him. Albeit he had registered a vow always to keep at a distance from her, he had scarce thought that circumstances would so aptly fall in with his desires. He marveled often.

The girl, too, was puzzled, and many were the wistful glances which she cast in Donald's direction. She would not have him by her side, and yet—yet—why did he stay away!

* * * * * *

"Donal', Donal', the pains I' the sma' o' my back ha' a' gane awa', an' I ken we'll sune ha' a gey muckle o' bonnie weather. Mon, tak' this glass an' look it owre alang thae shore. The laddies are aye pittin' a boat oot to sea, or I'm a senner."

Donald clapped the glass to his eyes, and an involuntary groan escaped his lips. His worst fears were realized. He watched the advancing boat like one fascinated. Tammas stumbled down the stairs to put a few things together.

Suddenly Donald heard a footstep on the stair, lighter than that of Tammas, and, turning, he saw the girl, who now had made a place forever in his life and memory.

He looked at her hungrily, curiously conscious of every detail about her—her slim, supple figure, sweet face, gleaming eyes, and wealth of beautiful brown hair. Never had she appeared fairer, more desirable to him, than at this moment.

And the boat was coming which would bear her away. Henceforth their ways might lie widely apart. Perhance his eyes would never more behold her.

He could not bear the thought. In a moment he had forgotten everything save his great love. He was by the girl's side, holding both her hands, looking into her eyes (which held an expression he could not fathom), pouring forth his burning passion.

At length he paused, a choking sensation in his throat. The girl made no answer. Whence came that look in her eyes? He had seen it before in a seagull lying behind a boulder with a broken wing.

He looked at her, amazed. Then the pain in her eyes was blotted out by blinding tears. She drew from her bosom a scrap of paper and a pencil, and, hastily writing a few words, thrust the paper into Donald's hand.

He read in a haze:

"Poor Greta is deaf and dumb, and, alas! cannot understand your words."

A lump rose in Donald's throat. But soon a great joy surged over him. Underneath the simple message he inscribed these words: "Donald loves you!" and gave back the paper to the girl.

A burning blush leapt into her cheeks. She shyly raised her sweet eyes, and in their limpid depth, Donald saw the light of heaven shining.

The shadow had lifted. A love had come to them both, requiring neither speech nor language to express it.

At this moment a shock of red hair appeared above the plane of the lighthouse floor. Old Tammas took in the situation, and shook his head sorrowfully.

"I'm no' wanted here," he said, and forthwith descended to the storeroom.
—Pearson's Weekly.

MAGIC MIRRORS.

Peculiar Effects in Some of the Polished Bronze Reflectors.

Now and then mirrors of a curious kind are seen in Europe. They are called "magic mirrors" and are of Japanese origin, made not of glass silvered, but of cast bronze, polished on the face and bearing on the back raised patterns, inscriptions, symbolical designs, crests or pictures. When exposed to a bright beam of light from the sun or from an electric lamp they reflect in the light from their polished face the image of the pattern on their backs.

This is a purely optical property and has of course nothing in common with the fortune telling magic crystals of the astrologer or the alleged magic mirrors of necromancy, yet it long puzzled the scientific optician and even now is little known or believed. The researches of various scientific men have established the fact that the phenomenon is due to very minute differences of curvature in the polished face, differences so minute that they do not affect the ordinary use of the mirror as a looking glass and that can be detected only by delicate optical tests.

The only remaining mystery has been as to how these delicate differences of curvature were produced in exact correspondensce to the pattern on the back. The makers themselves are often in ignorance of the magic property and do not know which of their mirrors possess it and which do not. The mirrors are cast in molds and afterward polished by hand, and it is held by scientific men that the difference of curvature is caused by the metal's yielding unequally under that pressure of the tools used in scraping and polishing, the thin parts naturally bending more than the thick. This accounts for the mirrors' becoming magic.—Chicago News.

PERUVIAN WOMEN'S HEADGEAR.

Lima's Beautiful Belles Have Acquired the Habit—The Manta.

As the visitors from the American fleet went about in Lima one change, national in character, impressed itself upon them immediately, says the New York Sun. Every writer on Peru has commented on the fact that the headdress of the women, worn universally, is the black manta. It is said that it is a relic that has come down from the Incas when they put on mourning for their great chief, Atahualpa. Rich and poor have worn that headdress on the street for centuries. It was an established institution.

Well, it is going. About one-half of the women, some of them in good circumstances evidently, wore mantas on the streets, but as for the rest—well, a man has no business to write about women's hats. All that this man can say is that he never saw more dazzling specimens of flower gardens than those bobbing around over the graceful drapery with which the Peruvian women adorn themselves.

Thus does fashion war successfully upon established custom. The Peruvian woman loves a beautiful hat just as much as any other woman on earth. Moreover, what is said about her surpassing beauty is true. Given great beauty and the love of a hat on the part of a woman—what chance has a black manta got? The manta has got to go and is going. Truly this is a world of change and there are those who will say it is one of decay, but let no one breathe that in a fashionable millinery shop in Lima.

When a lonely rich man reaches fifty, the people never look at him without wondering who will get his money.

Don't expect the preacher to "make good" for the entire congregation.

Legal Information

The United States Circuit Court for Ohio in Wall Paper Company v. Louis Voight & Sons Company, 148 Federal Reporter, 939, denies the right of the wall paper trust to recover from a wall paper dealer for goods bought by the dealer from various members of the wall paper combine.

Connecticut has a law giving any railroad company which, acting under authority of the laws of the State, shall have acquired more than three-fourths of the capital stock of any other railroad, and which cannot agree with the holders of the outstanding stock for the purchase of the same, the right to have such stock appraised and surrendered to it on payment of the appraised value. The validity of this statute is upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in Offield v. New York New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, 27 Supreme Court Reporter, 72. As sustaining authority is cited the case of Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 116 U. S. 685, 17 Supreme Court Reporter, 718.

The distinction between the rights of a parent and a stranger to induce a wife to leave her husband is pointed out by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Mutter v. Knibbs, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 762. A stranger may disprove any intent on his part to cause a separation in advising a wife to leave her husband, and show that his advice was honestly given. But the rights of a parent are much greater. He may give his daughter such advice and bring such motives of persuasion to bear on her as he fairly and honestly considers to be called for by her best interests, and is not liable to the daughter's husband in damages for her desertion resulting therefrom unless he has been actuated by malice or ill will.

An ingenious marriage contract not to be performed until the death of the young lady's mother, presumably to avoid any disagreeable interference by the mother-in-law with the connubial bliss of the wedded pair, is revealed in the case of Bailey v. Brown, 88 Pacific Reporter, 518. Judge McLaughlin, of the California Court of Appeals, who filed a concurring opinion in the case, intimates that a breach of such contract did not constitute a cause of action. He asked the question, "How could a contract to marry exist when the promiser might never be under an obligation to marry the promisee, and vice versa?" and continued: "If this good mother should live to a very ripe old age, as mothers sometimes do, no human could tell what might happen. Either of the parties might be waiting for the other, harp in hand, beyond this vale of tears, or both might pine away and die before this promise of future connubial bliss could ripen into a cause of action enforceable in earthly courts."

WOMEN IN OFFICIAL LIFE.

Results of Elections in Bohemia and Norway—Swedish Policewomen.

The progress of women in official life in Europe is slow, but it cannot be doubted that progress is being made.

Within the last few weeks women appeared for the first time as candidates for election to the Bohemian Diet. It had been demonstrated as a logical proposition that if they fulfilled the other requirements their sex was no bar to their election.

So far their candidacy stands merely as a demonstration. Two women received votes of some importance. One, Marie Jumore, who ran in the district of Hopenmouth, had 144 votes, while the man who won had 502. In Prague the social democrats made a woman, Miss Macheva, their candidate. She polled about 20 per cent of the total vote.

The woman suffragists of Norway were disappointed at the outcome of the local election in Christiana. In all the other parts of the country they elected important delegations to the commercial councils. In the capital only five women were chosen in a total of eighty-four city councillors. There is an active agitation going on all over the country to bring the women—and men—voters of Christiana to a different frame of mind.

Of advances made where the suffrage was not involved, the appointment of three women policemen in Stockholm is an instance. The authorities have determined to experiment with them. They are to have salaries of 1,500 kronen, or about $390 a year, to begin with.

England also has just named her first woman school physician. She is Miss Sophy B. Jackson, M. D., and she has been appointed in the borough of Craydon.

Where Total Eclipses are Rare.

It is a fact well known to astronomers that the average number of total and partial eclipses in any one year is four; that the maximum is seven and the minimum two. Where only two occur they are always both of the sun. There are a great many more eclipses of the sun in the course of a year or a hundred years than there are of the moon. This fact, notwithstanding, however, London, the metropolis of the world, seems to be a place where such obstructions to the sun's light seldom occur.

The most natural man in a play is the villain.

A man usually deserves as much as he will stand.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna

Cleanses the System Effectually; Dispels Colds and Headaches due to Constipation; Acts naturally, acts truly as a Laxative.

Best for Men, Women and Children—Young and Old.

To get its Beneficial Effects Always buy the Genuine which has the full name of the Company

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

by whom it is manufactured, printed on the front of every package.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS.

One size only, regular price 50¢ per bottle.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 50 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Texas Pan-Handle Farm Lands

Come to our Chicago Office and go with us on Special Train

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH

To examine our FARM LANDS, equal to any in CENTRAL STATES. Our Prices are so LOW and TERMS so very REASONABLE you will buy.

LOCATORS LAND COMPANY

646 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

DAISY FLY KILLER Placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies, neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Absolutely harmless; will not soil or injure anything. Quick and effective. All dealers or sent prepaid for 25c. Harold Somers, 140 De Kalb ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO-NIGHT Cascarets

BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER

10c. 25c. 50c. THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP All Druggists

Handsome Picture of a Negro Angel; sixteen by twenty; a work of art; copyrighted. Sample by mail eighteen cents. Dashboard lineholder holds lines perfectly; secured in an instant; boon to everyone who drives a horse; Sample 25 cents. Egg separator separates the yellow from the white; does not break the yolk; Every household needs one; Sample 15 cents postpaid; Agents getting rich.
Southern Photograph & Novelty Co.,
Letohatchee, Ala.

Wanted Agents in every community to help us sell our Panhandle Texas lands which adjoin improved farms. Level, fertile, no stones, sand or alkali. Price $10 to $17 per acre. We operate farms and furnish tenants. Write for circular. "Farmers" Colonization Company, 1213 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

WIDOWS' PENSIONS under NEW LAW obtained by JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C.

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 31—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

The government of Spain has just started in to foster its agricultural industry by sending touring lecturers over the country.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething: softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

JULY

U 258
L 903

Special Attractive Features
OF THE
AUGUST CLEARANCE SALE
at the BIG FOUR STORE.

A continued list of good things that are to be offered at our sale in connection with the wonderful bargains already announced on another page.

TRUNKS and SUIT CASES.

An opportunity to buy one of these desirable articles for that trip this fall. Students going away to college—now is your time to buy a trunk or suit case.

34in wall trunk, a $9 00 value for only..... $7.48
32in trunk, a $7 50 value for only..... $6.00
30in trunk, a $6 50 value for..... $5.48
28in trunk, a $5 00 value for..... $3.98
24 and 26 in. suit cases, $2 00 values for..... $1.29
26 in genuine leather suit case $6 00 value for..... $4.98
Ladies Reed suit case $3 50 value for..... $2.98

5 styles of suit cases to select from. BUY NOW.

Wash goods at 1-2 price.

ALL OUR WASH DRESS GOODS CONSISTING OF DIMITIES, BATISTES, LAWNS, AT JUST HALF PRICE. NOT A PIECE RESERVED.

Men's Elastic seam drilling drawers, the coolest, most sensible underdrawers made. You will never wear anything else when you try them. 50c. value for 43c.

Salt

The salt that is all salt and will not harden in the barrel..... $1.10 per bbl.
Rock Salt for stock

Dress Goods.

One of the seasons best opportunities to buy a dress pattern at a low cost.

All our 50c. dress goods Sale price..... 43c
All our 75c. dress goods Sale price..... 67c
All our $1 00 dress goods Sale price..... 89c
All our $1 25 dress goods Sale price..... 98c

GROCERIES.

We never miss giving our customers more than full value for their money in our Grocery Department.

For this sale we are going to give you $2.00 worth for $1.00. Everything pure and fresh. Don't miss this.

2lb. Gran. sugar worth 12c for.....6c
1lb. good bulk coffee 20c for....10c
4lb. best Jap rice worth 40c for ...20c
2lb. lump starch worth 10c for.....5c
1lb. can Bak. powder 30c for....15c
½lb. best ground pepper 20c for....10c
2 Bars Laundry soap 10c for.....5c
½lb. best Japan tea 30c for....15c
1 Box tooth picks worth 5c for.....3c
1 sack of salt worth 5c for.....2c
1lb. corn starch worth 10c for.....5c
3 nutmegs worth 3c for.....1c
1 market basket worth 5c for.....5c

$2 00 $1 00

Remember this basket of groceries worth $2 00 will go at this sale for only $1 00.

WABASH CORNERS.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

Rev. Heininger spent Friday night at George Wade's.

Gene White, wife and three children, were Sunday guests of Will Lucas and wife.

Rev. Lilly, of Montpelier, Ohio, spent Saturday night with P. A. Shurtz and family.

Mrs. Hullie Rummell and children, spent part of last week with Will Lucas and wife.

Dan Knisley, wife and children, and Mrs. Bert Pierson of Scipio, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Rachel Knisley.

Little Waneta Pervines is on the sick list.

The White reunion will be held at the home of J. B. White, in St. Joe on Wednesday, Sept. 9th.

Mrs. John Sturgis, of Sturgis, Mich., and John Ulms and family, were Sunday guests at Emanuel Ulms.

Rodger Tryon returned to his home at this place Sunday evening, after a weeks visit with his mother at Newville.

Hazel, Lois, Helen and Roscoe Stafford, of Garrett, Lizzie Pervines, of Auburn, and Neva Andress of St. Joe, were Sunday guests at Wm. Pervines'.

FAIRVIEW

Lawrence Brown was the guest of Harry Seibert Sunday.

Edward Bussetts' spent Sunday evening with Lankey Morrs'.

Mr. Colman, wife and grandaughhter called on Ruben Kochs' Sunday.

Oma Coye returned home Friday from Helmer where she has been working.

Mrs, Frank May and son took Sunday dinner with her mother, Mrs. William Kriss.

Mr, Oliver Markins, wife and daughters of Ft. Wayne and Maud Book of Garrett, were the guests of H. F. Houser a few days last week.

4 %
INTEREST

Ask about it. A splendid Savings Proposition.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid
$50,000
Security to Depositors
$100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.
3 per cent Interest paid on Deposits, if left two months.
Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner, David S. Otter
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher C. West

SPENCERVILLE
R. F. D. No. 1.

Mrs. Henry Walter is on the sick list with rheumatism. She has been afflicted for some time.

Charles Starr of Harlan, died the latter part of the week, of neuralgia of the heart. Funeral Monday.

Arthur Walter who had been attending school at Terre Haute and came home sick, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goldsmith of Hursh, went to Ft. Wayne, Saturday, to visit relatives, returning Sunday.

Mrs. Dwyer and children went to Streator, Ill. to visit relatives, some of whom are very sick. She will be gone several weeks.

Mrs. Emma Stump, wife of Rev. Adam Stump of York, Pa., visited relatives in this vicinity last week. Rev. Stump has been preaching in York for the past eighteen years.

The Misses Marguerite and Bertha Jenkins of Guthrie, Iowa, visited their aunt Mrs. Frank Horn, last week. They drove to Hicksville last Friday and visited in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hull.

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Coburn's Corners

Harry Driver of Hall's Corners visited with Saze Hadsell and wife, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Headley and Mrs. Elizabeth Gee of Newville spent Friday with Laney Gees'.

Steve McKinley and family of Georgetown were Sunday visitors at the home of J. M. Milliman.

W. F. Maxwell and wife took dinner with the latters parents, Daniel Oberholtzer and wife, Sunday.

Mrs. Ems Schoolmaster and two children of Fremont, Michigan, came last week and expect to spend a few weeks visiting relatives.

Rev. Brown will preach at the Corners next Lord Day. The morning services will at 11:00 a. m. and the evening services at 8:00 p. m.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

Bert Cole and wife, who have been at Thompsonville, Mich., came Saturday noon and expect to remain for sometime visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. Henry Funk, mother of Nick Funk, died at her home east of the Corners, Tuesday morning. The funeral will be held Thursday forenoon at 10:00.

Irvin Hadsell was called home Saturday evening as it was thought Mrs. Hadsell was going to have the typhoid fever. The latest report indicates that her condition is much improved and that she will get along alright.

The Sunday School of this place will attend the picnic at Scipio, next Saturday.

H. A. Coburn and family took dinner with Mr. George Wade and family Sunday.

Mr. Barnhill and family of Paulding, Ohio spent Saturday and Sunday with Nicolas Funk and family.

W. F Maxwell and son, Merritt were in Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee and daughter, Mildred were guests of Avery Zimmerman and family of near Butler Sunday. Miss Myrtal Zimmerman of Fostoria, Ohio accompanied them home for a few days visit.

Mrs. War Coburn of Ft. Wayne visited with Matie Gee a few days last week.

Miss Agnes Cunn of Evansville, Ill. arrived Tuesday for a weeks visit with her cousin, Pluma Hamilton

County Line News.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY'S.

Buy our stationary.

Wm. Watson attended to business in Auburn Saturday.

Raleigh R. Wyatt and wife went to Auburn Saturday afternoon.

Solomon Goldsmith and wife were Auburn visitors Saturday.

W. T. Wyatt and wife attended the Concord picnic Saturday.

Quarterly meeting services at Rehobeth Saturday and Sunday were well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lige and Mrs. Dave Heitz and Mrs. Jim Armstrong, of Butler Center, attended quarterly meeting Sunday. The quartette took dinner with Enos French and family.

Miss Minnie Kester is assisting in the culinary department at the home of Clay Rinehold.

Mrs. John Weaver and Mrs. Music attended church at Rehobeth Sunday.

W. F. Wyatt and Sam Steward and wife took dinner with R. E. Chomey and wife Sunday.

C. Stuckey and family entertained a large number of friends and relatives Sunday. There were 50, more or less, present.

Albert Sanders was looking after his interests on the county line Sunday evening.

Theron Foltz returned from a two weeks visit with his sisters, Mrs. George Frederick and Mrs. Clyde Frederick, of Big Rapids, Mich.

Jacob Grim and family and Dan Gratz spent Sunday with William Watson.

Mrs. Clyde Frederick came back with her brother Theran from Big Rapids, Mich., for a short visit with her parents.

William Foltz and family spent Sunday with Sam Foltz and family.

Ezra Foltz and wife, of Auburn, spent Saturday and Sunday with the former's brother, Sam Foltz and family.

Rev. Boxell will preach his farewell sermon at Rehobeth Sunday morning, Aug. 9th.

Rev. Jackson, of Bern, preached at Rehobeth Sunday morning and evening.

Andy Sponhour, Ruby and Hobort Stivice spent Sunday afternoon with Grandpa Huffman and wife of St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Sponhour will attend the camp meeting at Hamilton, Aug. 4th to 16th. Others contemplate attending.

Marie and Lena Conner were on the sick list the past week.

R. U. Bowser and family spent Sunday with C. A. Conner and family.

The stork and Dr. Shook, of Spencerville, left a fine 8½ pound baby boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Rinehold last Friday noon. Mother and child doing fine. Father somewhat frustrated, but will recover in due time. Grand parents all show signs of broad, deep smiles and refuse to admit they are any older.

Rev. Boxell, Rev. J. Jackson, Miss Nellie Stafford and C. Bowers took dinner with E. J. Armstrong and family Sunday.

Ralph Furnish and family spent Sunday with Mr. Furnish's parents.

The St. Joe News will publish an extra large paper this week. Great preparations are being made.

E. Freeman and family spent Sunday with Lem Farver and family.

Inez Bishop of Auburn, is spending a few days with A. E. Sponhour and family.

Frank Simanton and wife returned to Auburn after a few weeks visit with the formers parents, Milton Simanton and wife.

Ruby and Hobart Stevice of Ft. Wayne are spending a few days with A. E. Sponhour and family.

Agnes Rinehold was on the sick list a few days the past week.

Vince Squiers lost a valuable two yr. old colt, last week, in rather an unusual manner, it seems the animal in some way got its fore foot in the low fork of an apple tree, breaking its leg and almost tearing it from the body. The colt had to be killed.

Clyde Maurer and Chas. H. Bartels are building fence on the old Maurer farm.

Mrs. John Koble is on the sick list.

Just Rceeived.

Car Load Wabash Portland Cement.
Consignment of Gasoline Vapor Stoves.

I Keep on Hands
Hydrated Ground Lime
Stoves and Ranges Cooking Utensils
Steel Goods of all kinds.
All Kinds of Roofing:
Best quality Red Cedar Shingles
Gravel Roofing Asbestos, Rubber, Felt and Galvanized Roofing.
SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT
Linseed, Automobile and Lubricating Oils. Gasoline, Etc.
GLASS, SASH AND DOORS.
Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

Mrs. Geo. McNutt and son Lemon spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Samuel Gage and family of Ashley.

C. W. Bartels and wife spent Sunday with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hustin of Garrett.

C. W. Bartels and family, C. H. Bartels and family, Clyde Maurer, Roy Nugen, John Weaver, Ada Weaver and Miss Music of Penn., spent Tuesday with P. P. Lechner and family.

Clare Wastler is working for Clay Rinehold.

R. U. Bowser and George Gloyd have purchased the S. H. Maurer Implement store at Spencerville, and will take possession in the near future.

Grace Sponhour, the 6 year old daughter of A. E. Sponhour, had her thumb on the left hand severely crushed last Friday morning. It seems that she with the other children were playing with an old Champion binder truck. They were taking play auto rides down a grade which leads to the barn. In some way the motorman ran the car too close to the corn crib and struck one of the posts on which it rests. Catching the little the little one's thumb between the car and the post. The thumb will be badly disfigured.

For a change why not go to KAGEY'S and try a glass of Liquid Force.

Andrew Patterson, and son, King of Hicksville were in town Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Patterson and daughter, Helen, returned Saturday from their outing at Winona Lake.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY'S.

Mae Openlander of Sherwood, Ohio came Saturday evening, remaining with her parents over Sunday and until Monday noon.

S. W. Tustison took the Monday noon train for Wawasee to spend a part of the week.

Sam White of Ft. Wayne spent Saturday with his father at this place.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. M. T. Bishop, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. C. A. Woodcox went to Garrett Saturday to stay for a week with her parents.

George Milliman and family spent Sunday at the home of his parents in Coburntown.

Mrs. Sturges came Saturday from her home in Sturges, Mich. to visit her brother, Harlow Ulm.

Mr. William and Mrs. Ed Leighty attended the funeral of Charley Starr, at Maysville, Monday afternoon.

Mr and Mrs. Kirkpatrick of Ft. Wayne were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Price over Sunday, returning home Monday noon.

Mrs. S. W. Tustison and daughter, Margaret, left Monday noon for Tiffin Ohio, to visit with Rev. and Mrs. Johnson.

Wm Leighty and wife, Ed Leighty wife and daughter and Mrs. S. Openlander enjoyed a Sunday dinner at the country home of Mr. Mack Leighty.

Dale Walter who is employed in the Enterprise restaurant at Ft. Wayne spent a few days during the past week at home. He returned to his work Monday

The Bluffton Banner states that M. E. Olds was overcome with the heat Tuesday afternoon of last week and was not able to be down town at his place of business. On Monday he ran from his store to his home that he might close the windows before a storm. He was very much heated and felt the result of the sprint next day. On his homeward trip Tuesday noon, the heat was intense and he grew ill being compelled to stop several times on the way. In the afternoon he was better but not able to be down town.

Harry Milliman
The Druggist
Handles a full and well selected line of
Drugs and Patent Medicines.
Rubber Goods
Special prices on Syringes, Atomizers, Douches, Sprays, Hot Water Bottles.
Toilet and Fancy Goods.
Large Assortment
Of Sponges, Chamois Skins, Trusses, Supporters and Shoulder Braces.
Confectionary and Perfumes.
Spectacles.
A large line of these has just been received and are now ready for sale. Come in and see them.
GOOD GOODS AT REASONABLE PRICES.

JULY

U259
L 903

Spencerville News

A Department of THE ST. JOE NEWS for Spencerville People.

Bridge Repaired

The bridge across the river at this place has been in such condition that it was unsafe to cross for sometime. People coming to town from across the river were compelled to drive around by way of the Bair bridge. Workmen finished reflooring the bridge Sunday, and travelers can now cross as usual.

Slowly Improving

George Wilson who has been suffering with a badly broken limb for the past four weeks, is slowly improving. The fractured bones have begun to knit and he continues to be in a good spirit. Although it will be many days before he will be able to be around, his many friends will be glad to learn of his improvement.

Local Briefs

Jacob Baltz was in Ft. Wayne, Friday.

William Allen and F. D. Lake were at Butler Friday.

J. E. Sturges of Butler called on friends last week.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman called on Dr. Bowman at St. Joe, last Tuesday.

Frank Silberg and George Jenkins attended the races at Ft. Wayne, Friday.

The Lutheran Sunday School is planning to have a good time awaiting everybody who comes to the picnic in Hendersons grove, Aug. 8.

Miss Jennie Steward left Friday for Marion Normal College where she will attend the oratorical commencement, the guest of a to me school friend who graduates. She will remain a couple of weeks to visit friends.

IMPORTANT
To the Spencerville People.

The editor of THE NEWS made a visit to Spencerville last week and enjoyed the hospitality of its dusiness men. They took a kindly interest in the proposed improvement the News is making, and so generous were they with advertising and good wishes that the publishers have decided to print one page each week in the interests of the Spencerville people. This new departure ought to be of interest not only to Spencerville readers and business men but to all readers of the St. Joe News everywhere. We feel assured that our Spencerville friends will support this new venture. We want you to feel that we have an interest in your welfare, and regard you as our own home people. The St. Joe News is your home paper and as such it ought to do more for you and at the same time receive the hearty support of every loyal citizen in Spencerville and locality. It is not our purpose to neglect St. Joe in any way to render you the servite you deserve. Every department of the paper will be improved in order to better serve the needs of both towns. And so we extend a hearty greeting to the people of Spencerville and solicit your kindly interest and support in this our move in your behalf.

FRED THOMAS
THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing
and
All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing
and
Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Brighten Up

"Brighten Up" time is here—the time to clean up about the house, renovate, and make the old things look neat and clean again. We can help you in the work with our line of SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS AND VARNISHES.

It is really surprising what a little paint or varnish will do toward brightening up dingy surroundings. Take The S-W. Family Paint, for instance. This is a linseed oil paint specially prepared for home decorating and painting. With it any one can renew the appearance of a hundred little things that now look worn and old. It dries with a good gloss and will stand scrubbing with soap and water. Comes in 26 attractive shades.

The S-W. Floorlac is another splendid household brightener. It is a stain and varnish combined and can be used on old or new woods equally well. Imitates the natural woods and gives a most pleasing effect.

These offer a few hints for you. Come in and have a "Brighten Up" talk with us and learn more about how we can help you in your Fall cleaning. Our line has a paint or varnish for every purpose.

Remember, we sell

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PRODUCTS

F. R. BOWMAN.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER
CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DELAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

Mr. Stevens made a business trip to Auburn last week.

Miss Cornelia Coburn visited Mrs. Clyde Wilson Sunday.

Jack Beams took in the races at at Ft. Wayne, last week.

Mesdames Sade and Daisy Butler were at Ft Wayne, Thursday.

Lee O. Tustison of St. Joe was in in town on business, Friday.

Mrs. Audry Wade and dessie Wade were in Ft. Wayne last Friday

Mrs. Rose Beams is visiting her sister at Holgate, Ohio, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Zimmerman of Harland visited friends here Tuesday.

Mr. Samuel Steward purchased a $200 horse of Frank Workman, Tuesday.

Josephine Carnes and John Coburn attended the ball game at Antwerp, Wednesday.

Maggie Kesinger of Hicksville, Ohio is visiting her aunt this week, Mrs. Katie Kesinger.

George Fields who has been residing at the county farm, was in town a few days last week.

Mrs. D. D. Metcalf, of Ridgeville, Ind. is spending two weeks visiting with Rev. Bartens.

Mrs. F. R. Bowman went to Reading, Michigan, Wednesday to visit with Mrs. Chas. Bishop.

L. W. Steward purchased two $200 horses, Monday. One of Steven Brown and the other of John Webb.

Andrew Rectenwal and family of Maumee, Ohio, were the guests of Clyde Rectenwal and wife, Sunday.

Charles Scott and family are taking a vacation this week at the small lakes in Michigan, also visiting relatives.

Mr. George Horu who has been traveling in the west for the past few months, returned home Tuesday.

Samuel Kail of Perryville, Ohio, Frank Kail and Wilbert Keys of Akron Ohio, were the guests of David Butler last week.

Mr. Wesley Wilson and wife of Hicksville, Ohio, returned home Tuesday, after a weeks visit with their son Clyde and family.

David Butler delivered some very fine peaches through town last week and expects a mammoth crop this year from his small orchard.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

George Millman of St. Joe was in town, Thursday.

Mort Weldfield of Harlan was the guest of relatives here, Sunday.

The second base ball team will play a double header with Harlan the picnic day, Aug. 8.

Mr. Charles Grill had a horse badly hurt Saturday. Dr. Landry was called to care for the animal

A large number of young people from this place attended the band concert at St. Joe Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins of Auburn, visited relatives and friends at this place a few days last week.

Mrs. Jane Butler spent Monday at the home of her father, John Boots where she assisted in caring for her sister Pearl, who is very sick.

Frankie Baltz who has spent the past year with her grandmother has returned home and her sister Grace, will now stay with Mrs. Baltz at this place.

Mrs. Walter Newman and daughter Tressie, of Garrett is visiting her parents near this place for a few days Mr. newman spent Sunday with them.

Frank Steward of Garrett visited relatives here, Sunday.

Miss Ardie Wilson returned to her home at Norris Chapel, Saturday.

Mrs. Joseph Somers of Akron, Ohio. is visiting her son William, for a couple of weeks.

The Luthern Sunday School attended the picnic at Concord Saturday and report a good time.

George Steward and family were visitors with Arthur Stewards on the County Line Sunday.

Misses Lena and Mandy Dressel of Convoy, Ohio, are visiting their brother, Rev. Dressel for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Dr. Hull of Hicksville and Mrs. Fowler of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, were guests of Mrs. Isreal Horn, Sunday.

Miss Malindia Fredericks has returned to her home in Chicago after a six weeks visit with her mother, Mrs. George Kimes.

"Kid" Hull assisted the St. Joe team in their game at Antwerp last Wednesday. He pitched Sunday for the Ft. Wayne Shamrocks against the All Kentucky team at Newport, Kentucky.

Beams & Co.
General Merchandise.

It is our desire to give our customers good goods at right prices. Our stock of general merchandise comprises dry goods, groceries and shoes and represents as good a class of stock as is usually found.

Handsome Presents Given Away.

Just now we are giving valuable presents to our cash customers. A coupon is given with every cash purchase and when they amount to $25 you can exchange them for handsome and useful articles of table ware which are now on display in our store. Call and see these beautiful presents.

The Harvest Time

is proving to be a delightful one on account of the excellent crops. Our farmer friends have no hard times story to tell us and are now ready to spend money for the necessities of life. We want a fair chance with you and will always endeavor to treat you fairly and courteously. Come to Spencerville and call at our store.

JULY

0260
L 903

Sacrifice Sale.

On account of the change in business location to be made soon, I am willing to make a great reduction in price on POST CARDS, PICTURE FRAMES, CANDIES, PLANTS and RUBBER HEELS for shoes. A few cans of good Baking Powder to be sold at half price.

HARTZ MOUNTAIN CANARIS FOr SALE HERE

George Milliman.

NEWVILLE.

Mr. Sherwood and lady friend of Auburn, were in town last Wednesday

Lew Grest and family of Hicksville are visiting at the home of David Grest.

Mrs. Mosier of Elkhart, called on Rebecca McDonald, Wednesday of last week.

Lizzie Benninghoff visited in Butler, Friday, with her sister, Mrs. Frank Brink.

Manford Smith and family of Hicksville, spent Sunday with Elmer Wyatt and family

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brewster returned, Friday, to their home in Grand Rapids, Ohio.

Maurice Headley, wife and Elizabeth Gee, visited Friday with Laney Gee of Coburn Corners.

Mrs. K. N. Fusselman spent a few days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Webster.

The U. B. Sunday-school attended the picnic at Concord Saturday. They report a good time.

Mrs. Howard Northrup, Pluma Hamilton and Agnes Dunn visited Monday at the home of Maurice Headley.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Oberlin of Hamilton, visited over Sunday with the latters parents, Horace Enzor and wife.

Sadie Washler left Monday for West Unity where she expects to visit a few days with Summer Rose and family.

Frank Griest formerly of this place, and Mrs. Myrtle Fish of Hicksville were united in marriage, Saturday, July 18th.

Mr. Durham, wife, children of Cumberland, Iowa came Friday for a weeks visit Mrs. Durham's uncle, Elijah Inhofe.

Mrs. Nettie Hablawetz of Butler and Mr. Robert Johnson of Wichita, Kansas, visited Friday at the home of Mrs. Simon Nichols.

Dell Wyatt and family of Hamilton, came Saturday to visit with his brother Clarence Wyatt and family, returning home Sunday.

F A. Thomas and wife left Monday for Bethany Park, where they will attend the Teachers Training Assembly held at that place.

Word came to this place of the marriage of Mort Cole, who went out west to take up a claim. It seems as if he was more fortunate than the rest of them for he received two claims

Mrs. Burket and two children Georgia Burket and Jesse Booher of Groverhill, Ohio came last Thursday to spend a few days with her sister, Mrs. Williams returning home Monday....A surprise party was given at the home of S. S. Casebere, Saturday evening, in honor of Homer's twenty-first birthday.

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,
Roofer & Tinner.

The Laurel Ranges.

SOMETHING NEW
AND SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Two Flue Construction.

Can use 6 lids without heating Reservoir or oven. Can use by heating the Reservoir only, or by heating the Reservoir and Oven.

Guaranteed to Save 1-3 Fuel.

COME IN AND LET US DEMONSTRATE THE STOVE TO YOU. ON EXHIBITION AT OUR STORE.

H. V. Kinsey & Son.

STATE OF INDIANA, DEKALB COUNTY } S. S.

Notice is hereby given that a petition will be presented to the board of Commissioners of the County of DeKalb, in the State of Indiana, at the September Term, 1908 of said Board, asking for the location of a new public highway along the line between Jackson and Concord Townships in said County and State, on the following route towit:

Commencing in the center of the public highway at the north west corner of section nineteen (19,) in township thirty three (33) north of range fourteen (14) east, in said county, thence south on the west line of said section to the center of the public highway at the south west corner of said section nineteen (19) and there to end.

Said proposed highway will affect lands owned by Miletus A. High, Samuel M. High, Lorenzo D. Nelson, Charles R. Morr, Carrie B. Morr, Rosa High and Malvina Nelson.

Said highway being on the west line of said section 19 and on the east line of section twenty-four (24) in Jackson township, said DeKalb County, State of Indiana, and shall be 30 feet wide.

Witness my hand and seal this 28th day of July, 1908.

EMERY A. SHOOK,
Auditor DeKalb Co. Ind.

Advertising Races.

The famous Hart's Boy Band of Hicksville visited Spencerville, St. Joe and Concord, Tuesday afternoon, and gave a series of excellent concerts They are making a tour in automobiles advertising the Hicksville races which occur Thursday and Friday of this week. The band consists of twenty members and makes a good appearance and playing some very fine music

Just Exactly Right.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for several years and find them just exactly right," says Mr. A. A. Felton of Harrisville, N. Y. New Life Pills relieve without the least discomfort. Best remedy for constipation, billousness and malaria 25c at H. Milliman's drug store.

Hair Tonic.

Herpicide, Dermotine, Quinine. Tone up your scalp. Application 10c. or buy it in bulk and apply it yourself.

J. C. HULL,
City Barber.

Notice to Patrons.

All persons owing us are requested to settle their accounts by August 1st either by cash or by note drawing 6 per cent. interest.

KEESLER MILLING CO.

A new cement walk was built along the west side of J.D. Leighty's house, last week.

Frank Leighty and Wes Hathaway assisted the Auburn base ball team in a game at South Whitley, Tuesday.

Two Mormon elders were in town, Tuesday, and held services on the street in the evening.

Wm. H.Bickel and wife of Fairfield Center spent Saturday and Sunday with J. H. Reinoehl and family.

Anyone knowing themselves indebted to me please call and settle at once.
Mrs. Alice Warner.

Mr. Richie of Hamilton came to this place, Tuesday and returned home Wednesday with Bert Bowman and family.

Grover Curle and Evan Link accompanied by their lady friends, Dema and Eva Ridgway, spent Sunday at Ft. Wayne.

A party of men composed of Ora Wilmot, Sam Keesler, John Woodcox, Clay and Allen Coburn left Saturday for Lake Gage to spend the week in fishing.

Mrs. Emma Woodcox and grandson Gray, returned Wednesday from Warsaw, Ind., where they had been visiting with Austin Eicholtz and family for the past two weeks.

Harry Cox of Ashley was at this place a few days last week the guest of John Reinohl. He was here getting acquainted with the line so as to act as wire chief as soon as the new owner takes charge.

The first public sale of the season will be a large stock sale on the farm of H. M. Widney, August 14, 1908 at 10 a. m. This sale will include 21 head of horses; 90 head of hogs; 50 head of sheep. Watch for large bills.

The Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise but fail to perform," says Mrs. E. R. Pierson, of Auburn Centre, Pa." It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieves only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much good that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at H. Milliman's drug store 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Erick & Co.

It is our aim to keep a full line of the staple articles of General Merchandise, so that we may be always ready to supply our customers with something that is good in

BOOTS, SHOES, STRAW HATS, DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES.

This week we are pleased to announce our showing of

New Dry Goods.

They have just arrived and we invite you in to examine and ask for prices.

Highest Market Price

Paid for poultry on every Thursday forenoon. Special effort this week. Bring us your poultry.

Spencerville, Indiana.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No 2.

Ray McEntyre has been suffering with tonsilitis but is some better at this writing.....Arthur Daub, wife and son of Garrett, Paul and Olen Davis of Huntington and Mrs. Tony Snider of Harlan spent Sunday with Wm. Davis'....Harvie Kimes made a business trip to Ft. Wayne, Thursday.....The Misses Fern and Zenith Wearley entertained the following Sunday:- The Misses Avis Clark of Garrett, Nellie High of Concord Iva Zehner, Bessie Hart, and Eva Miller, The Messers DeVern Kelley of Toledo, and Vernie and Cormie Kelley....Wm. Miller and family also Freman Miller spent Sunday with Ben Smith and wife.....Ort Wearley made a business trip to Ft. Wayne Saturday.....Mrs John Benningoff spent Monday afeernoon with her daughter, Mrs. A. F. Heyman of Spencerville.

Mrs. Pinkstaff is visiting with David Miller and family, this week....Mrs. Ella Byrne of Chicago, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. C. M. Wearley left Saturday for North Baltimore, O. where she expects to visit friends.

Coburn's Corners.

Mae Hamilton left Wednesday noon for Alliance, Nebraska, where she will make an extended visit with her brother, Frank.

Misses Estella McConnell, and Esther and Helen Mommer of Ft. Wayne are visiting with Morris Lothammer and family this week. They attended church at the Catholic church of Auburn, Sunday... J. N. Scholes and Scot of Newark Ohio, arrived Monday evening for a visit with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Scholes. Mr. Scholes is taking his summer vacation.

A number of committees have been appointed to arrange for the picnic to be given in Hamilton's grove Aug. 15. A special committee on sports has been appointed. This committee will try to procure a ball game for that day and there will also be boats along river for those wanting them. The ladies will serve dinner, the price of which will be 20 cts.

WE HAVE IT

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

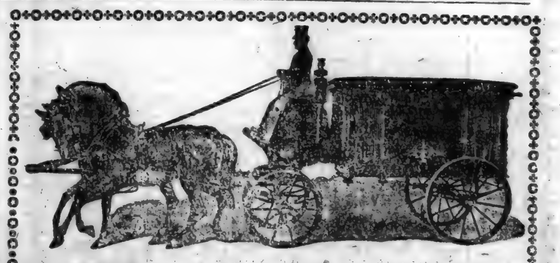
No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.



Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable.

Beams & Baker.

JULY

U261

L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1908. NO. 31

Another Victory.

St. Joe Wins from Antwerp in a Nicely Played Game.

The St. Joe base ball team went to Antwerp, last Wednesday, and played with the Antwerp Reds on their home grounds. The game was nicely played throughout and resulted in a score of 3 to 1 in favor of the St. Joe boys. This is the second game won from our Ohio friends this year. Both were taken with a close score, the first on the home grounds 2 to1.

Hull pitched for the St. Joe team Wednesday and struck out eleven men, allowing three hits and two bases on balls. Hathaway did the receiving and played a clever game. The entire team did excellent work and came home with an errorless game to their credit.

The Carr brothers did the battery work for Antwerp. The man in the center secured eight strike outs off the St. Joe sluggers, allowing five hits and one base on balls. The Antwerp boys are good players and make the St. Joe team play the game in order to win.

There's Music In It.

The Coburn's Corners Band has been organized something like eight months. In that time they have succeeded in making a permanent organization and now have a musical aggregation of fifteen pieces. Some of the players have had experience in a band previously, but the large majority are beginners These are to be complimented on their improvement and the interest they have manifested. Under the leadership of Foraker Fersill rapid improvement has been made, and he has fully demonstrated his ability as a bandmaster in the manner in which he has tuned this raw material.

Since this is the only musical organization of its kind in this locality, it deserves the support of the home people. Young men in a rural district, who have farm work and chores to do, deserve to be encouraged when they give their extra time to practicing in order that they may be able to entertain their hearers. The boys have been quite successful thus far and are playing well for the excellence they have had. The practice of another winter will do much for the band and by next spring it can be one of the leading musical organizations in this corner of the state.

Just now there is considerable demand for their services at picnics. Last Saturday they played at the Concord Sunday School picnic, and have made future engagements as follows: Scipio, August 1; Spencerville, August 8, and will be at home August 15. During the past few weeks they have given concerts at St. Joe and no one will deny that they they have benefited the town. Last Saturday they made the first appearance in their newly purchased suits and their playing did themselves and their new suits full credit.

THE NEWS manifests a kindly interest in the band and commends the members for their efforts in making the organization a success. Keep the good work going and before long you will be amply repaid in many ways for the efforts that have been put forth.

Marriages.

WOODRING—KOEPPE.

A pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A C. Koeppe, north of St. Joe, last Wednesday evening at 8:00, when their daughter, Hazel was united in marriage with Orley Woodring. Elder Fred Thomas conducted the ceremony. The couple was attended by Hazel Whitehurst as bridesmaid and Earl Tustison as best man. Those in attendance at the wedding were Wm. McNab and family, Mr and Mrs. Woodring, Ed May and family, Homer Casebere, Mrs. Steepleton, Mr. Orin Hook, wife and daughter Helen of Butler; Mrs. Lamen, son and daughter of Concord; Rev. Thomas and family.

The contracting parties are both very highly respected young people in the community in which they reside. At present at the they will stay home of the brides parents.

GILHAUSEN—JOHNS.

Wedded without announcement and unostentatiously, the nuptials of Mr. Arthur D. Johns and Miss Mae Gelhausen last Thursday evening were a distinct surprise to their friends.

That Miss Gelhausen was betrothed to Mr. Johns was suspected by their acquaintances but no more than that was known. The groom-to be, who is a B. & O. brakeman, recently was transferred to the Cleveland division. He returned to Garrett on Thursday morning, presumably for an ordinary visit. It was not until the next day that the true motive of his mission was known.

The marriage occurred at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ed. Gelhausen on south Randolph street and the officiating clergyman was the Rev. D. V. Williams of the Methodist Episcopal church. The ceremony was strictly private, there being no witnesses excepting the bride's mother and brother, George Gelhausen.

Mr. and Mrs. Johns will make their home with the mother of the bride. However, the groom will be stationed at Cleveland until fall, while his bride will remain here.

Mr. Johns is an exceptionally fine young man, industrious and exemplary in habits. His bride is one of Garrett's brightest and best young ladies. She has always been prominent in younger society and both she, and her husband are greatly esteemed by a legion of friends.—Clipper.

REEDER—BLEEKS.

Frank C. Reeder, of Auburn, and Sadie Bleeks, of St. Joe, were married at the Lutheran parsonage in Auburn at 3:30 Thursday afternoon. Rev. S. E. Slater pronounced the words that made them man and wife. The bride is a daughter of ex-Sheriff Bleeks, of this place. The newly wedded couple came to this place Saturday and expect to reside at St. Joe.

A very sumptuous supper was served at J. F. White's in St. Joe Monday evening in honor of the Misses Maggie and Bertha Jenkins, of Guthrie, Iowa. Those present were E. L. Dilley, of Spencerville; Sherman Wolff and wife of Wabash Corners; Gene White and family and Mrs. Ann Dilley, Ella Gill, Charley Woodcox, wife and son Homer, of St. Joe. The afternoon was spent in visiting. After supper ice cream was served to all.

The Public Press published at Garrett came out last week enlarged to six columns. This paper is just a little past six month of age and already is a thriving publication.

LEE O. TUSTISON

FRED B. LEIGHTY

A Mid Summer Greeting.

DEAR READER:— You have here the first issue of THE NEWS from its new publishers. With it we send our heartiest greetings. The people of the community and a large majority of all readers of the St. Joe News are acquainted with the members and the several abilities of the new firm. We need no introduction but we do need a chance to show the mettle that is in us. So here goes.

We want you to watch us because we are going to keep our eye on you. We are going to say things about you; whether they be good or bad depends largely on the way you behave. We are going to say things to you; whether they please you or not will depend on how you look at the matter. We do not hope nor do we desire that you agree with us all the time; neither do we care to have you come into the office, armed to the teeth ready to demolish the entire plant, nor expect you to commit even a graver mistake by stopping your paper if we say something contrary to your way of thinking. Our convictions are not always your convictions, for which we are thankful and you at least ought to be glad.

We are going to publish this paper for the good of the community, all its social and business institutions. The home, the church, the school, all educational and fraternal organizations meet with our approval and it is our desire to further their interests in so far as they promote principles for the common good and come within the realm of our activities.

We are here to co-operate with the business men. Without their help we cannot live and without our assistance they must surely die. Therefore since we need each other we must get together. John Jacob Astor once said, "Success depends upon a liberal patronage of printing offices". We do not care to dispute his assertion and you must certainly realize that he was one who knew the causes that contribute to success.

And so we greet you in friendship and ask you to give this our first number a very thorough examination. Remember that we are trying to do things to merit your confidence and thereby receive the support which we deserve and upon which our success depends. We are not willing however to be your slave or your dog, but do wish to remain

Your humble and profitable servants,
THE PUBLISHERS.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

The last quarterly conference for this year will be held in the St. Joe M P. Church, July 31, at 7:45 P. M. All official members are earnestly requested to be present. Important business. Next Sunday preaching and communion services at St. Joe at 10:15 A. M. preaching at Fairview at 7:30 P. M.

S. Helninger, Pastor.

Christian Church.

There will be Sunday Schol next Sunday at 9:30, and Mothers day in the afternoon at 3:00. All are invited to attend these services.

SECRETARY.

Remonstrators Won.

The application of Wm. H. Oberlin for a license to conduct a saloon in Butler was heard by the county commissioners, Friday and Saturday of last week. A remonstrance had been filed, signed by a majority of the voters in his ward. The applicant through his attorneys challenged seven of these names and succeded in getting four of them. The remaining three were sustained, leaving the remonstrators a majority of one. The case was appealed and will go to the circuit court.

Pioneer Reunion.

The 38th Annual Reunion of the Pioneers of Steuben County will take place at Angola, Thursday, August 13. This is always a great occasion for Steuben county and many people from a distance attend. The exercises will begin at 8:00 A. M. and last until the theatre is over in the evening.

Republican Convention.

The Republicans of DeKalb county will meet in convention at Auburn, Friday August 28, for the purpose of nominating a county ticket.

Free Lecture

Prof. E. L. Coburn of St. Louis, Mo. will deliver his lecture entitled, "Mother's Songs" at the Christian Church next Sunday afternoon, Aug 2, at 3:00 P. M. This lecture is intended especially for those who are interested in the training of children. Prof Coburn has had a large experience in this class of work and his lecture is said to be one of the best. All are cordially invited

Two Games

Two special events of base dall that will be of interest to the local fans will take place between St. Joe and Hicksville within the next two weeks. The first game will be played on the fair grounds at Hicksville Thursday, July 30, beginning at 10 A. M. This is the first day of the races and a large crowd will witness the game.

The second game will be played on the local grounds Thursday August 6, beginning at 10 A. M. Base ball enthusiasts should not fail to see both of these games.

Soldier's Reunion.

The DeKalb County Battalion to Hold Annual Reunion at St Joe Thursday, August 6

Arrangements for the Annual Soldier's Reunion at St. Joe, August 6th are nearly completed and the program promises to be one of unusual interest. It is also expected that the old soldiers with their family and friends will be here in large numbers on that day.

The forenoon will be largely one of recreation in which war Veterans may meet each other and recount incidents of field and camp. There will also be a battle royal, between the base ball teams of Hicksville and St Joe. Both of these teams have a reputation for playing good ball and fans well remember the struggles of earlier days between these two nines. The game will be called at 10:00 o'clock.

The battalion program is to begin at 1:30 p m. The general public will gather in the Opera House and listen to an address by Hon. Clarence C. Gilham

The audience will also have the pleasure of listening to Hon. Cyrus Cline of Angola. After these two worthy men have spoken, the battalion will hold their business meeting.

Promptly at 6:30 the camp fire will convene in order to have time for the exercises and allow the comrades and others going west to take the 8:42 train for their homes. The exercises of the camp fire will consist of an address by the Chaplain of the Battalion, Rev. J. A. Brown. Incidents of the war as related by comrades will also be a large feature. Among those who will speak are John Young and Gabriel Miller of Butler; John A. Provines and Rev. E. W. Erick of Spencerville; Robert Simpson, of Auburn and Wm. Meek, of Newville. Mrs. H. M. Henning of Auburn, will recite a selection. The music in the evening will be Grand Army Songs, led by a quartette in charge of C. A. Woodcox.

Ample provision is being made for the entertainment of our visitors on this day. Meals will be served by the ladies of the Lutheran Church, by Mrs. A. B. Filley, White and Cottage hotels. The restaurants will also serve lunches.

St. Joe is ready to welcome all and hopes that our town will be crowded to overflowing. You will not miss the ball game, and stay all day that you may hear the excellent addresses, help the boys "March thro Georgia" and have a general good time.

Political Announcements.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. Concord township.

D. W. BAKER.

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.

Business College

Many DeKalb County people owe their present position and standing in life to the training received in the International Business College of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Twenty years of continued success has brought this school to rank among the highest of its class in the United States. Fort Wayne is a great city, almost at your door, and many opportunities are to de had, if you Possess a first-class Business Education.

Write for our large handsome catalogue.

Orange Herrick, wife and son Ray, of Wabash Corners, and J. B. White and wife, Charley Woodcox, wife and son Homer, of this place, were Sunday guests at John Gill's.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will serve dinner and supper in the basement of the church Thursday, August 6th A general invitation is extended to the public

Miss Nelle Heatherington, of Caldwell, O., who has been visiting friends here and at Spencerville for the past two weeks, went to Reading, Mich., last Wednesday accompanied by Mrs. F. R. Bowman, of Spencerville, to visit Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bishop.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

Snap for You.

12-15c Geraniums - 5c
10-8c Geraniums - - 2c
Coleons - 1c

Must clear out benches at ONCE.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 22.

St. Joe, Indiana.

This Piano Used.

3rd. GOLD MEDAL CONTEST

St. Joe M. P. Church,
Saturday, August 12, 8:15 pm

AUBURN, AUG. 29, BUTLER SEPT. 4, NEWVILLE SEPT 5

JESSIE HEADLEY, Organ Graduate.

Higher grade and more finished playing than previous contests.

Opening prelude, Organ Fantasia, a solo for the left hand alone by Mr. Johnston. Program not so long as some and exclusively by students.

ALL MUSIC STUDENTS ADMITTED FREE if accompanied by one other person, conditions being the filling out of a blank which will be mailed or given free to any who does not receive one five days before the contest. We have a list of 1,400 names in the county.

CHASTINE JOHNSTON.

JULY

L 903

U 262

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 JULY 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30	31	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 6th. F. M. 13th. L. Q. 20th. N. M. 28th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Prince of Wales Lands at Quebec.

The Prince of Wales landed at Quebec from the British battleship Indomitable amid the deafening roar of guns from the international fleet of British, French and American warships and tumultuous demonstrations of 50,000 persons massed upon the wharves and the terraced heights of the city. It was a spectacle of truly royal splendor, for the latest type of British Dreadnaught, with the royal standard flying, came to anchor among the double column of foreign warships and the Prince was welcomed ashore by Earl Grey, governor general of Canada; Premier Laurier and the assembled dignitaries, flanked by thousands of soldiers and a multitude of people. Premier Laurier delivered to the prince an address of welcome, in which he assured him of the unswerving loyalty and devotion of Canada to the King and its resolution to promote the interests of the two countries. The Prince responded in a happy vein, speaking both in English and French, extending the good wishes of his royal father to Canada and making pleasant allusion to the loyalty of England and French Canadians alike.

Shoot Up Old Boston.

Eleven persons were shot, three of them probably fatally, by two desperadoes, who, on being pursued by policemen and a crowd of citizens, fled for two miles through a thickly settled district of Jamaica Plains, a suburb of Boston, Mass., firing madly right and left, and disappeared in the woods near Franklin Park. The men are believed to have been two of the gang of three who robbed a saloon in Jamaica Plains after shooting and killing one man and wounding two others. Mrs. Delia Fallon is one of the most seriously injured of the victims. She was standing in front of her home with her baby in her arms when the two men, pursued by a crowd, came down the street. As they passed her one of them fired and the bullet entered her head behind her right ear. She was removed to the City Hospital in a critical condition.

Will Insure Against Stork.

Insurance against visits by Cupid or the stork is the purpose of an application made in the Michigan State insurance department by a party who wishes to pay benefits in case of marriage or births. After much consideration the perplexed commissioner has decided that this case can be classed under "casualty insurance." He argues that while the visit of Cupid or the stork might bring much joy it might also entail a large expense and therefore be regarded as a misfortune.

Three Killed by Live Wire.

During a fire in the Kline building in Altoona, Pa., three persons were electrocuted by live wires which dropped to the street. The dead are: Joseph H. Byers, fireman; Joseph Frick, lineman for the Edison Electric Company, and Harry Deshong, a lad of 12 years. Byers and Frick were instantly killed. The wires fell around the neck of young Deshong and nearly burned his head off, the terrified crowd being afraid to render assistance.

Accident Befalls President's Yacht.

The President's yacht, the Mayflower, with the President on board, ran into and sank the lumber laden schooner Menewa. All on board the schooner, consisting of the captain and five men, were taken on board the Mayflower. The President's yacht had her bowsprit and one anchor carried away but the jar of the collision was so slight that none of the President's party knew of the accident until they arose in the morning.

War Declared in Central America.

A prominent foreign consul, who lived for many years in Central America, has just informed the Associated Press that he had received a cablegram stating that war had been declared, or would be declared at any moment, between Nicaragua and Honduras against Guatemala and Salvador.

Two Fatally Hurt at Fire.

Four men and a boy were hurt, two of them probably fatally, in a fire in a St. Louis, Mo., boarding house. Two of them jumped from upper windows on finding themselves trapped by the flames.

Big Fire in Idaho.

Fire destroyed the business section of Cottonwood, Idaho, entailing a loss of $300,000. This is the second fire to destroy the place within a year.

BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER DEAD.

Episcopal Prelate of New York Succumbs to Lingering Illness.

Henry Codman Potter, seventh Protestant Episcopal bishop of the diocese of New York, died Tuesday night at his summer home, Cooperstown, after an illness of several weeks.

BISHOP POTTER.

Bishop Botter was born in Schenectady, N. Y., May 25, 1834. His father was Alonzo Potter, bishop of Pennsylvania, and his grandfather was Dr. Knott, president of Union College, and his uncle, Horatio Potter, was bishop of New York. In 1857 he was graduated from the Theological Seminary of Virginia, and a year later was ordained in Trinity Church, Pittsburg.

The young rector's first charge was in Greensburg, Pa., where he served a year. Then he went to Troy, N. Y., where he was for seven years at the head of St. John's Church. In 1866 he became assistant rector of Trinity Church, Boston, and two years later was elected rector of Grace Church, New York City.

In 1887 Bishop Horatio Potter died and his nephew succeeded him as bishop of New York.

Bishop Potter was twice married. His first wife was Eliza R. Jacob, of Philadelphia. Five children were born of the marriage. In June, 1901, Mrs. Potter died and a year later the bishop married Mrs. Alfred Corning Clark, a widow possessed of a fortune estimated at $13,000,000.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

Western Farmers Are Taking Steps to Organize One.

The organization of a new political party throughout the south and west is predicted by some of the active leaders of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which boasts 700,000 members in the United States at the present time, and 200,000 in Oklahoma alone. It is expected to interest the labor unions in the proposed new party.

The initiative steps in the organizing of the new party are now being taken. Consideration and discussion by the brainiest leaders in this movement are being had at the gatherings of farmer union members and their friends at picnics throughout Oklahoma, in particular. Politics in all its phases is being discussed, especially the issues of the two old political parties being outlined and criticised.

The old-time Grangers and Populists are among the leaders in all these farmer movements, so far as the west is concerned, and many of the most prominent Populist leaders of 10 or 12 years ago may now be found organizing and advocating the union of the farmers.

TEXAS RANCH PASSING.

Great Tracts Rapidly Being Cut Into Small Farms.

The land of west Texas is rapidly being cut into small farms, and a few years will see the end of the big ranch in this section. Two years ago one could travel for mile after mile in Lubbock, Hockley and Cochran counties, without meeting a person or seeing a habitation. Those old frontier scenes are passing away with astonishing rapidity.

At times one still reads of a tract of 15,000 to 50,000 acres being sold, lock, stock and barrel, as the saying goes, with no more flourish than a rancher would sell a Hereford steer. But these big deals are growing less and less, and the end of the 50,000-acre tract is near at hand.

The Heredity of Hair.

Gertrude and Charles Davenport, connected with the Carnegie Institution's station at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., writing in the American Naturalist of the results of their observations on the "Heredity of Hair Form in Man," say it is now possible to predict from the hair of parents the form of their children's hair, whether straight, wavy, curly or frizzy. They find that the following rules are almost invariable: "Two wavy-haired parents may have straight, wavy or curly haired children, but the chances of curly hair are slight. Two curly-haired parents may have children with either straight, wavy or curly hair, and the proportion of curly-haired offspring will probably be large."

Service Before Dividends.

In commenting on the recent court decisions in New York City, canceling street railway leases, which proved unprofitable and allowing new plan of operation without regard to the payment of former rate of dividends, the Wall Street Summary says: "It must be understood that a franchise to a public service corporation is given under conditions which make an adequate service to the public obligatory. The costs of providing this adequate service come before dividends or any return on the capital invested; and a corporation which, from poverty, owing to mismanagement or any other reason, is unable to fulfill its obligations to the public, is unworthy to have a franchise."

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Both the Senate and the deputies of France have passed the electoral reform law, the object of which is to provide complete secrecy of voting.

As the large force of Mexican regulars began to surround the northern territory in which a revolt against the government was in progress, the so-called army of the rebels divided into small bands and escaped through the lines of the regulars. But it was expected that the raiders would be soon rounded up.

SIX AUTOISTS KILLED WHEN TRAIN HITS CAR

Mother, Father and Three Girls Are Among Those Dashed to Death.

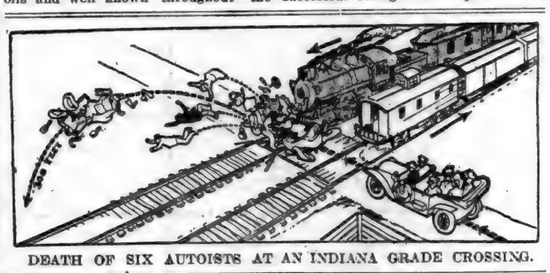
FAIL TO SEE LOCOMOTIVE.

C. S. King, Fort Wayne Politician, and Family and Guest in Fatal Accident.

Six lives were crushed out in an instant near Columbia City, Ind., when a Pennsylvania Railroad train smashed an automobile in which were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman King, their two daughters. Miss Fayma Bradshaw and Carl Timmins, the chauffeur, all of Fort Wayne. The machine was stopped about a half-mile west of Columbia City at a railroad crossing by a freight train and the chauffeur drove onto the second track, waiting for the freight to pass. He failed to see the Manhattan Limited passenger train which came at a high rate of speed. The automobile was destroyed and the bodies of its six occupants were flung along the track for a distance of a hundred feet and terribly mangled. Skulls were fractured, arms and legs broken, chests crushed and clothing stripped off. So great was the force of the collision that the huge locomotive of the passenger train was derailed.

The party was in Mr. King's automobile and was going from Fort Wayne to Lake Wewasee to spend Sunday. It is said that when the party started on the trip Mr. King ordered the chauffeur to make the run in two hours and a half, which is about half an hour less than the usual time.

Mr. King formerly was a member of the Indiana Legislature from Wabash County, being chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. He was a member of the Columbia Club at Indianapolis and well known throughout the State. He was one of the best-known Republicans of Indiana and had taken a prominent part in public affairs. His daughters were Katherine, aged 16, and Josephine, aged 12. Miss Bradshaw was 16 years of age and was a neighbor of the King family, whose guest she was to have been over Sunday at the King cottage at Lake Wawasee. She was a daughter of Robert F. Bradshaw, of Fort Wayne.



DEATH OF SIX AUTOISTS AT AN INDIANA GRADE CROSSING.

Woman Dead; Mother Hurt.

Miss Elizabeth Dupree, aged 40, is dead and her mother, Mary Dupree, a widow, aged 65, is critically injured as a result of a runaway at Columbus, Ind., which was caused by an automobile owned by Tom Taggart, of Indianapolis, chairman of the National Democratic Committee. Taggart's chauffeur, Harry Stodler, was driving the big touring car from Indianapolis to French Lick, when he met the two women in a buggy at Garden City, one mile south of Columbus. The horse became frightened at the car and ran away. The two women were thrown from the buggy against an iron fence.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition nominee for President, proposes to speak in every State before election.

Frank H. Hitchcock, general manager of Taft's pre-convention campaign, has been made chairman of the national Republican committee.

President Roosevelt has refused an offer to make speeches into the receiver of a talking machine for the purpose of making records for public sale.

William H. Taft has completed at Hot Springs, Va., the first draft of his speech of acceptance, but he hopes to trim it down by revision to 3,500 words.

Congressman Theodore E. Burton, in a statement issued at Cleveland, said, while he desires to be elected United States Senator, he considers the election of Taft more important and will ask no pledges for his own candidacy.

W. J. Bryan speaks lightly and sarcastically of W. H. Taft's reported declaration that no campaign contributions from corporations will be accepted.

W. J. Bryan, in an address at his home, declared that society has not given the producer his share of the reward and that the government must correct this condition.

The Republican State convention at Bangor, Me., nominated B. M. Fernald for Governor and reaffirmed the party's belief in the prohibitory law. Resubmission of the law to the people was the main issue before the convention.

HAS THREE MILLION ACRES.

Oklahoma Puzzled as to Whether to Hold Land or Sell Immediately.

Under the initiative and referendum law of Oklahoma there is to be submitted to the voters of that State in the November election a proposal to sell the 3,000,000 acres of public lands which the State holds in its school and public buildings funds. The bill for this purpose has been carefully drawn and contains minute details of the terms, conditions and methods of selling the land. If a majority of the voters in November give affirmative ballots for it, it will become effective as a law without action of any sort by the Legislature.

Ten years hence these lands will doubtless be worth several times more than they are now. But supposing all these 3,000,000 Oklahoma acres to be good for agriculture, they would cut up into 75,000 40-acre farms, each occupied and tilled by a thrifty farmer, contributing to the wealth of the State and paying taxes to the State's revenue fund and to local and State school funds.

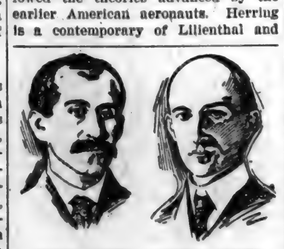
If the lands are held they will be leased by a State Board and are likely to become the subject of political favoritism. The lessees will not take the same interest in cultivating and improving them that they would in lands secured by ownership to themselves and their children. It is probable, therefore, that in the end the lands will prove to be worth more to the State if sold now than if held for the higher price which they undoubtedly would bring later.

NATION LEADS IN AIRSHIPS.

United States Is First in Heavier-than-Air Machines.

Although the United States government is just giving recognition to practical aeronautics, with the trials to be held at Fort Myer, this country may claim the distinction of being the first to make progress in the heavier-than-air type of flying machines. Captain Ferber, one of the pioneers in the development of the aeroplane in France, gives Octave Chanute and Lilienthal, the American inventors, credit for the ideas carried out by Harry Farman and De la Grange in France. Other successful foreign air ships are said to show the practical development of theories advanced by Professor Langley.

The Wright brothers and A. H. Herring, who will submit their aeroplanes to the government for acceptance trials at Fort Myer next month, have followed the theories advanced by the earlier American aeronauts. Herring is a contemporary of Lilienthal and



WILBUR WRIGHT. ORVILLE WRIGHT.

Octave Chanute. His machine is about half the size of that of the Wright brothers, and its principal feature is an automatic device for maintaining its equilibrium.

Until recently it was feared that the Wright brothers would forfeit the bond which they had placed with the government when their bid was accepted rather than disclose the secret of their machine, which they guarded successfully for several years. This fear has been dispelled by the Wright brothers themselves, who say they have their machine fully patented and are willing to make public demonstrations of its success.

A Great Army of Pythians.

The twenty-fifth session of the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, which convenes in Boston, will result in bringing together the greatest gathering of members of the order ever known. The number of Pythians who will visit the city on this occasion is estimated at 100,000. The session will be marked by two great parades, one of the uniformed rank and one of the other ranks on the following day. Reports of the organization show that it has at present 800,000 men in its membership, while the ladies' auxiliary, the Pythian Sisters, numbers 200,000, making a total of 1,000,000.

Failures of a Half Year.

Commercial failures in the United States during the first half of 1908, says Dun's Review, were 8,700 in number and $124,874,863 in amount, as compared with 5,607 failures in the first half of last year, for $69,568,062. Still, the report calls attention to the hopeful fact that in the later months of the period the showing was better, making it "evident that the commercial death rate is diminishing."

BIG STANDARD OIL FINE IS KNOCKED OUT

Court of Appeals Sets Aside Enormous Penalty Imposed on Gigantic Corporation.

FAMOUS CASE TO BE RETRIED.

Three Jurists Unanimous in Opinion That Original Judgment Is Based on False Premises.

John D. Rockefeller's luck abides. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, in a unanimous decision completely reversed Judge Kenesaw M Landis' decision in the Standard Oil case, wiped out the famous $29,240,000 fine, and remanded the case to the lower court for a retrial. The opinion was written by Judge Peter S. Grosscup and is fully concurred in by Judges Seaman and Baker.

But the reversal was more than a temporary setback to the government, inasmuch as the upper court cut the ground out from under the Federal prosecutors in several extremely important features.

The government reversal was based on the following points:

That Judge Landis was wrong in assuming that it was the business of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana to make sure that the rates tendered it by the Alton railroad were the lawfully published rates. This, it was held, threw an unfair burden upon the shipper, whoever he might be, and tended to check rather than promote industry.

That Judge Landis was wrong in his view that the number of offenses involved was the number of car loads of property transported, regardless of whether each car load constituted the whole or a part only of a single transaction resulting in a shipment.

JUDGE K. M. LANDIS.

That Judge Landis was wrong in basing his fine—$29,240,000—upon the wealth of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey—which the upper court held was not a defendant—instead of upon the capital stock of $1,000,000 of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the legal defendant.

History of the Great Case.

In the summer of 1906 indictments against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana were returned in the Federal court at Chicago charging the corporation with obtaining concessions from railroads in shipments of oil from Whiting, Ind., where its plant is situated. At the trial of the case involving the Chicago and Alton, which began in March, 1907, many counts of the indictment were quashed, leaving 1,462 counts on which judgment was asked.

The hearing continued six weeks and many witnesses were examined. The jury returned a verdict finding the defendant company guilty and leaving the sentence to be fixed by Judge Landis. In determining the amount of the fine the Judge caused John D. Rockefeller of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to testify as to the real ownership of the Indiana company, this furnishing one of the most sensational incidents in the case. Following all the testimony Judge Landis imposed the maximum fine of $20,000 on each of the 1,462 counts of the indictment, making the total of $29,240,000 the largest fine known to the history of the courts.

One of the points argued in the appeal was that the fine was excessive and would wipe out the assets of the Indiana Oil Company. In an effort to increase the amount of the appeal bond counsel for the government introduced testimony on the earnings of the company taken from an examination of its books in a New York court.

NUBBINS OF FARM NEWS.

War is being made on the large mail order houses by small retail dealers throughout the country.

It is always harvest time and wheat is being cut every day in the year in some country of the world.

The big milk companies of Chicago recently reduced retail prices from 9 to 7 cents per quart, and in surrounding towns from 7 to 6 cents.

Shareholders in the Co-Operative Creamery of Motley, Minn., own 800 cows and take the milk of 500 other cows in their community.

Elgin, Ill., fixes the price for cow butter, not only for the United States, but for nearly all the world besides, but recently three restaurant keepers in that town were charged with selling bogus butter.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Payments through the banks furnish the closest comparison seen in some time. Other favorable indications of trade recovery appear in more active discount operations, increasing specifications in steel working and more extended demand for early deliveries of merchandise.

Announcement of an advance in American prints is calculated to hasten heavy selections for the interior, and the dry goods lines generally report sustained improvement. Weather conditions stimulated sales in the principal retail branches and lightweight goods have become reduced to a comfortable size.

Bookings in the industries include a greater number for moderate tonnages of pig iron, structural shapes and wire, and there is a gain in production at furnaces, rolling mills and electric factories.

Public improvements involving large outlays are now pushed forward and require much material and labor. Leather working trades run strongest upon footwear, and there is much wider buying of tanned material and hides, the latter being scarce in desirable qualities and selling higher than in June.

Crop reports sustain the favorable features recently noted. Winter wheat grades surprisingly well, and corn growth advances seasonably. Crop marketings have declined more than expected, but the markets for breadstuffs, live stock and provisions continue fairly active. Prices mostly rose this week, with the leading cereals, unusually strong and averaging much higher than at this time last year.

The total amount of grain at this port, 6,594,493 bushels, compares with 5,905,165 bushels last week and 6,934,048 bushels a year ago. Compared with 1907 there is a decrease in receipts of 21.6 per cent and increase in shipments of 8.5 per cent. Live stock receipts improved to 268,906 head, against 216,510 head last week and 298,329 head in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 30, against 25 last week and 21 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 10, against 6 last week and 5 in 1907.—Dun's Review.

NEW YORK.

Trade and industry are still in a condition of midsummer quiet, with preparations for fall trade, stimulated by generally good crop progress, going forward with confidence, but with conservatism ruling operations, pending clearer views of ultimate crop and political results. Activity in retail trade is centered in the disposal of surplus stocks of summer goods at concessions, but reduced public buying ability is reflected in reports from some centers of slow progress in clearing shelves of goods. Jobbing activity is still mainly confined to filling small but frequent repeat orders for summer fabrics, though a few southern and northwestern points report enlargement of takings for fall.

There is a little more life in building lines, particularly South and West, and yellow pine is firmer, with optimistic predictions from southern and Pacific northwestern lumbermen.

Iron and steel are quiet, but a slightly larger percentage of finished capacity is claimed working, a larger proportion of this, however, than usual on export business.

Business failures for the week in the United States ending July 16 number 258, which compares with 240 last week, 177 in the like week of 1907, 188 in 1906, 166 in 1905 and 190 in 1904.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 28, which compares with 39 last week and 26 in this week of 1907. —Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime $4.00 to $7.80; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.87; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.75; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 92c; corn, No. 2, 75c to 76c; oats, standard, 57c to 58c; rye, No. 2, 74c to 75c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $12.50; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 21c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 19c; potatoes, new, per bushel, 90c to $1.13.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.50; hogs, good to choice heavy, $6.50 to $7.05; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 87c to 88c; corn, No. 2 white, 77c to 78c; oats, No. 2 white, 53c to 55c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.60; hogs $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, $3.00 to $4.40; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 92c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, No. 2, 53c to 55c; rye, No. 2, 74c to 75c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.25; hogs, $4.00 to $7.05; sheep, $3.00 to $3.85; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 92c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 57c to 58c; rye, No. 2, 84c to 86c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.75; hogs, $4.00 to $6.80; sheep, $2.50 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 90c to 91c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 3 white, 61c to 62c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.15 to $1.17; corn, No. 3, 74c to 75c; oats, standard, 57c to 59c; rye, No. 1, 73c to 75c; barley, No. 2, 68c to 69c; pork, mess, $16.00.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $7.00; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.00; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.50.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $7.40; hogs, $3.50 to $7.25; sheep, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2 red, 99c to $1.00; corn, No. 2, 83c to 84c; oats, natural white, 60c to 63c; butter, creamery, 20c to 23c; eggs, western, 18c to 21c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 89c to 91c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 77c to 78c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 57c to 59c; rye, No. 2, 71c to 72c; clover seed, October, $8.00.

JULY

L 903

0263

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1904, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER I —(Continued.)

"Of course she is quite right," Constable went on, "but that doesn't make it any easier to bear. With all the impressiveness which comes of being twenty and a girl—that was the Madame's first voyage, five years ago—she informed me that a man is a nobody, even if he has a billion, when he isn't of some use in the world. Exquisite little preacher! Such things were never thought of, nor spoken to, mortal man before! I explained my view, that having all the money needful, it was my privilege to play for culture instead of coin, to water my mental garden as a life pursuit, but she broke up all my arguments, beat down my ideals. I regarded my valueless past and yearned to become an apostle of action instanter.

"I see I am entertaining you, so I'll finish. I went home, buckled the Madame to Brooklyn, and disappeared—took her at her word! I shall do it again some time. For two solid months I didn't hurt anybody's feelings, and earned seventy dollars and board, stoking. Good clean stoking. Back and forth from Savannah to Boston in the bowels of an old coast liner, learning bunkers, boilers and firebeds at first hand; specializing in coals and callouses. I made a fairly decent coal passer, and met Denny Macready down there in the dark—Denny, who now passes tea. Then I scrubbed up again and steamed the Madame down to Martinique, to tell Miss Stansbury all about it, and show her my recommend from the third engineer. She was away in Europe. Her father says she will never be as beautiful as her mother. I thought perhaps we might look in on Martinique on our way around the islands. The statue of Josephine is there, you know."

"Your sentences are becoming uncoupled, Peter. You are shirring the narrative," said Breen.

"Well, I've been taking an annual course in old Pelee since then. Saint Pierre sits in the shadow of the volcano, and from a geological standpoint——"

"Exactly, but——"

"Oh, there is no joyous cracker at the finish of this story. Lady Commander—that is the creature of splendor, the mother—is still at war with me, and Miss Stansbury still cherishes the view that I am 'just sailing 'round.'"

Peter Constable was singular in various ways, possessing a large fortune and no fixture, save the natural bent of a student. He had specialized in geology for a dozen years. Exceedingly tall, bigboned, and angular, Constable had a plain, kindly face and large, quick hands. His nose was immense, and not to be classified. He carried his head bent slightly forward, as many tall men do; and it was a well-browed head of goodly contour. There was a puzzling solemnity in his countenance. One would not have been surprised to hear that this man was a gambler, a preacher, or a humorist; and, not knowing exactly why, one would expect it to be added that he was a good man in his class.

CHAPTER II.

Constable had an un-American capacity for waiting. He might have gone ashore in Saint Pierre that night, but instead he sat alone on deck, in the windless harbor. Queerly restless, he regarded the illumined terraces of the city. Back of all his levity and deliberation, it was not to be concealed from his own mind that before him lay the goal of the cruise. She was there, far to the right, among the lights on the mountain side—the little girl who had told him he was a nobody. Constable smiled, and grew serious from the start of an old thought. It was not impossible for her to have met some emperor who had demanded her heart for his throne room.

The harbor was weirdly hot. The heavy, moist sweetness of a horticultural garden, to which he had likened the nights of Saint Pierre, had been supplanted by dry, devitalized draughts of air. His throat and nostrils were irritated, and tobacco became unpalatable. There was no moon, and the stars were so faint in the north that the mass of Pelee was scarcely shaped against the sky. The higher lights of the city had a reddish, uncertain glow, as if a thin film of fog hung between them and the eye; but to the south the night grew clearer. He followed the circling shore with his eyes to the Morne d'Orange, which marked the southern boundary of the city. Beyond the morne stood the great plantation house where she lived. The night was pure purple in that direction, and the torrid stars unsullied.

Breen essayed to read the following forenoon away, leaving Constable to make his first descent upon the city alone. The Madame had already been sighted from the plantation house, and certain members of the establishment were out to welcome the guest. Indeed, Constable had scarcely stepped ashore from his launch at the Sugar Landing when he heard his name called and saw the flutter of a handkerchief above the burdened heads of the natives in the market place. It was Miss Stansbury, in a carriage. She greeted him merrily:

"Uncle Joey went out to the ship from the lower landing. I told him I would capture you if you touched here. We are very glad you've come, Mr. Constable."

He took her hand and gained the seat beside her in the carriage. "This is great luck," he said nervously. "I feared you might be away somewhere—in Europe or the States. Would you mind me looking at this little book in your lap?"

"It's a little volume of essays," she told him, "and I'm not sure that I greatly admire their spirit, nor the views of the writer. He makes a statement, for instance, that women are incapable of the finer senses of friendship; that women cannot adhere through severe tests."

Miss Stansbury was to encounter, a few days later, stirring cause to remember these words, and Constable's reply, which is neither here nor there, ethical niceties not being his specialty.

"The man is an arrant fool, and probably couldn't get a woman to live with him," he said with finality.

The ponies were ascending the rise in Rue Victor Hugo, at the southern end of the city. The porteuses, coming down from the hill-trails, the lithest, hardiest women of the occident, bore a pitiable look of fatigue in their faces. The pressure of the heat, and the dispiriting condition of the atmosphere, were revealed in the distended eyelids and colorless, twisted lips of the burden bearers. As Miss Stansbury looked out toward the harbor for Uncle Joey's boat, Constable regarded her profile. The delicacy of color and contour brought to him an imperious realization of her fairness. It appeared that in his absence the rarest touches of perfection had been set.

"You haven't changed much," she said laughingly. "You were always willing to agree that I was right, and all men, yourself most of all, deeply in the wrong. Don't you remember how I used to preach to you about a man's need of doing something emphatic?"

"Indeed I remember. Your lessons made a deep impression."

"At least, you bore very gracefully with an oppressive companion,' she declared. "Just as if you didn't know best how to dispose of your time and talents!"

"On the contrary, you were more nearly right than you knew. I was in need of just such moral stimulus. The sorry part, Miss Stansbury, is that I don't bring you admirably invested talents even now."

She glanced at him quickly. "I believe I understand better some of the difficulties you have had to contend with," she said. "We all read how you kidnaped the entire New York newsboys' association—how you fed the grimy little chaps oceans of charlotte russe and mountains of plum-duff, giving them a Sunday afternoon at sea, and presents to remember. That was fine."

"I forgot to tell Breen about that," he remarked, smiling at the recollection. "Breen is a friend of mine, who was good enough to come along. He's a rare fellow, and you'll like him."

"You make people find out by themselves so much about you," she observed. "Think how you let me believe you were absolutely without interests or ambitions—even last year, while you were making daily visits to the jaws of Pelee. It was months afterward that I learned what those journeys meant—and then through the press. We all read the paper you delivered before the geological society on Antillean formations. Think how I felt while recalling some of my lectures on your careless attitude toward life. You might have told me!"

"I failed to discover the secret, Miss Stansbury," he said quickly. "Old Pelee has a big story for the right man, but I was unable to drag it forth. I had nothing to be proud of to tell you."

The ponies had gained the eminence of the Morne d'Orange. Ahead was the broad, white plantation house, where the Stansburys and Constable's uncle lived. To the right was the dazzling, sapphire bay, where the Madame was moored among the shipping; behind and below, the red-tiled roofs of Saint Pierre, and behind the city, back of all, La Montagne Pelee, hung like an emperor of the Romans, paled in the intense light of morning, and wearing a delicate white ruching of cloud about his crown.

"It is different with most people," she replied. "They have so much to tell of little things. The silent men who are dreaming of big things all the time—think of a conversation like this when the island is glowing like a brazier!"

"What is the meaning of this terrific sultriness and the white scum in the gutters?" he asked suddenly.

"Why, I supposed you understood——"

"Understood what, Miss Stansbury?"

"Why, old Pelee has been showering us with ash from time to time during the past ten days. It is the taint of suphur that spoils the air. The city would have been white now, except for the heavy rain that washed the ashes away just before dawn."

Constable turned apprehensively toward the volcano. He had come into an inheritance of winged thoughts in the presence of the woman, but the news of Pelee's activity disordered the very root of things. Mrs. Stansbury was standing on the porch of the great house, whose walls, verandas and portcullises were cooled and perfumed by embroidering vines. The driveway was bordered by Rose of Sharon hedges, and the gardens flamed with poisettias and roses. There was a cool grove of mango and India trees at the end of the lawn, edged with moon-flowerets and oleanders. Back of the plantation house waved the sloping seas of cane; in front, the Caribbean. On the south up-reared the peaks of Carbet; on the north, the Monster.

Constable advanced eagerly to give his hand to Mrs. Stansbury, who received his greeting with cooling repression. He would have been dismayed, had he not felt on former occasions polar draughts from this source. Still, he paid her unquestioning homage. It was enough for him that Mr. Stansbury, an admirable American gentleman, honored her with a life of one-pointed devotion; that his uncle, Joseph Wall, of sound mental balance and heart vastnesses, cherished her good-will. It was enough for Constable, indeed, that Mrs. Stansbury mothered a daughter. He was by no means above conceiving that another should dislike him; although Mrs. Stansbury was in other respects an Isis veiled too darkly for his perception. The years had not touched the elder woman. She had the same tendril-like delicacy of figure and refinement of face. Her eyes had often startled him with their world-weariness and world-knowledge. They were always wonderful—the eyes of a mystic and vibrant with the suggestion of undiscovered continents in their depths. The cool, gracilent fingers slipped quickly from his hand.

"I have always remembered your gracious hospitality," Constable said.

"I remember, too," Mrs. Stansbury replied, with scarcely a trace of a smile. "Who could forget the dentist—the dentist to La Montagne Pelee? Have you come again to look into the mouth of the mountain?"

CHAPTER III.

Constable had incurred the especial displeasure of the mother on a former visit, through the unabashed fashion with which he had endeavored to pry into the secrets of the volcano. Old Pelee was identified with the inner life of Martinique, like the memory and the statue of Josephine. Mrs. Stansbury felt that the mysteries of the mountain were not for the eyes of man; least of all, for the eyes of an American, in whom the spirit of veneration was not. She had a very clear picture in her mind of Constable as he peered, and possibly spat, into the appalling chasms of the summit, and pottered about in the dim gorges which seamed the Titan's flanks. The daughter had shared a tithe of her mother's opinion until Constable's monograph on the mountain had fallen into her hands. Then she realized that this was no parvenu who had carried on his studies in their midst.

Mr. Stansbury was away on his annual trip to the States. The mantle of host fell, accordingly, upon the ample shoulders of Uncle Joey. He arrived within an hour, and his trip out to the Madame had not been futile, since he brought Breen with him. The latter seemed to divine at once the defective current between Mrs. Stansbury and his friend, and forestalled any slight tension during dinner that evening by sprightly narratives of the voyage. He seemed to attract the attention of the elder woman, and to be stimulated by her close scrutiny of his face and personality. That evening, after dinner, the men moved out upon the veranda to smoke.

"This is second-hand air, Uncle Joey," Constable remarked. "I shut my eyes a moment ago and thought I was down among the steel mills of the lower Monongahela."

"You're the expert in Pelee, not I, Peter," the old planter answered. "April and May aren't our best months, but I never knew such heat betwen rains as we are having now."

Constable moved out into the garden to look at the sky. In no way did he underestimate the seriousness of the time. In the south, low and to the left of the Carbet peaks, the new moon arose, but without the sharpness of outline peculiar to the tropics. It was an orange hue, instead of silvery, and blurred, as if seen through a fine wire screen. A faint, low rumbling was heard from the north. It was like thunder, but the horizon above and around Pelee was unscathed by lightning. Miss Stansbury had been at the piano, but the music now ceased.

"How long is it since the mountain has had a session of grumbling, Uncle Joey?" Constable asked.

"From time to time for the past ten days. Before that; twenty years, Peter."

"This is quite a novelty—this addled-egg moon," Constable added. "It's the ash-fog lying between. If there isn't a heavy rain in the night, we'll have a white world to-morrow."

Miss Stansbury appeared on the veranda, and moved out upon the lawn, where Constable was standing.

"Are you really so greatly worried, Mr. Constable?" she asked in a low tone.

"Why, the fact that Pelee is acting out of the ordinary is enough to make any one skeptical of his intentions. There are a few man-eaters among the mountains of the world—Krakatoa, Bandai-san, Cotopaxi, Vesuvius, Etna—chronic old ruffians, whom you can't tame. A thousand years is nothing to them. They wait, still as crocodiles, until cities have formed on their flanks and seers have built temples in their rifts. They have tasted blood, you see, and the madness comes back. Pelee is a suspect."

(To be continued.)

Hard on the Janitor.

In some of the downtown skyscrapers the elevator service is suspended on Sunday and the janitors and their families, who in many buildings are quartered on the topmost floor, have to descend and climb from 20 to 30 flights of stairs whenever they want to get in touch with the outside world, says a New York paper. In one building, which is 24 stories high, the 10-year-old daughter of the janitor makes three round trips each Sunday one when she goes to church in the morning, one when she attends Sunday school in the afternoon and another when she goes to meet her playmates after dinner. Each flight consists of 20 steps, making 960 steps to a round trip. Three trips make it 2,880 steps—a mountain climbing record.

Similarity.

"Beerness!" boasted the Parisian portrait painter. "Why, monsieur, I remember when patrons were packed in that little room like sardines, waiting to have their portraits painted."

"Like sardines?" echoed the man from Montana. "Oh, I see. Waiting to be done in oil, eh?"

Just Like a Bee.

"Why doesn't that lazy Philander find something to do?"

"Find something to do? Why, he's busy as a bee."

"But he hasn't done a thing this winter but loaf."

"Well, that's what a bee does in winter, doesn't it?"

That Gas Bill.

"Say," exclaimed the irate flat dweller, as he rushed into the gas office, "do you mean to say this bill represents the amount of gas we burned last month?"

"Not necessarily," calmly replied the man behind the desk. "It merely represents the amount you have to pay for."

Unnecessary Now.

"They used to give such splendid entertainments, but they never seem to have anything worth going to any more."

"No. They have an established position in society now."

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The annual reunion of the Forty-fourth Indiana regiment of Volunteer Infantry will be held at Kendallville August 26 and 27.

Russell Norris, of Frankfort, aged 9 years, tied himself to a cow he was leading from a pasture and was dragged five squares. Part of his scalp was torn off.

The 18-year-old son of B. E. Russell, near Goshen, was fatally hurt while aiding his father in putting up a wire fence. During the work a chain on the stretcher broke, and a piece of scantling used as a lever hit him on the head, fracturing the skull at the base of the brain.

A fine flow of gas has been obtained from a well on the Joseph Winslow farm, one-half mile north of Fairmount, by the Indiana Natural Gas and Oil Company. It will be pumped to Chicago, while the people of Fairmount will continue to depend on coal and stovewood for fuel.

George Grable, son of R. C. Grable, of Petersburg, who has seen service in the regular army for the last thirteen years, and whose fourth enlistment expired several weeks ago, has enlisted for the fifth time, and he has been assigned to duty with a cavalry regiment at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

While at home in Flora Mrs. Edward B. Rock received burns which resulted in death. She was in the act of starting a fire in the kitchen stove, and picked up what she thought was the coal oil can, but what proved to be gasoline. A violent explosion followed, causing her death in a short time.

When George Peters, of Logansport, fired a shot at a cat which was running off with one of his young chickens, he missed the cat, but the bullet struck Joseph Kiefner, who was standing on the Vandalia tracks, a block away. The bullet entered the calf of his leg, was deflected by the bone and lodged underneath the skin at the other side.

Eugene Stanley, of Middletown, was placed under arrest at his home and will have to answer to a charge of dynamiting fish at the next term of court. Deputy Sheriff Ira Burr made the arrest and Stanley gave bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance later for trial. For some time complaints have been lodged with the officers of dynamiting going on.

Following some words with her husband, Mrs. Ben Soule, at Auburn, attempted suicide by swallowing paris green. A physician who was called promptly succeeded in saving her life. It is said that some time ago Mrs. Soule sought to end her life by taking carbolic acid, but a 13-year-old daughter prevented it by knocking the bottle from her mother's hand.

Mrs. Ione Black and sons, Richard and Tom, have returned to their home in Greenfield, after four years in Europe. While they were away they traveled by bicycle all over France and Spain, and brought back with them the same bicycles they took away and used in their travels. One of the wheels has the same set of tires it left with, due to the splendid roads there.

Thousands of fish and turtles are dying in Busseron creek, and hundreds of dead bodies can be seen floating on the surface of the water. Various theories are advanced. Some persons believe that the water draining off the "gob piles" at the mines contains a large amount of alum, which proves fatal to the fish, and the State fish commissioner has been asked to investigate.

Since the opening of the season for hunting squirrels and woodcock, sports men of Morocco have been busy, but not with results altogether satisfactory. Woodcock are reported abundant, but hunting is curtailed by the farmers, who will not permit trespassing. Young squirrels are also numerous, and the same is true of prairie chickens, but not many are being killed for the reasons mentioned.

The family of Ellis Gray, consisting of husband, wife and six children, who reside near Petersburg, were thought to have been poisoned by drinking impure milk, are now all seriously ill of typhoid fever. Two physicians are almost in constant attendance. A coincidence in connection with the family illness is that all the members were taken sick within a short time of one another, and all have the same disease.

"I have a hen that one thousand dollars can not buy," declared Elvert B. Rhodes, of North Baden. "Six little kittens deserted by the mother cat were immediately taken under the protecting wing of the hen that refuses to leave the box of kittens. She seems as proud of the kittens as she ever was of a brood of chickens. She is attentive to them. When they mew she clucks, and objects seriously to any one molesting the kittens."

Philip Troutman's barn burned at Shoals and Troutman was severely injured while trying to save property. One horse was cremated. The loss is severe, on which there is no insurance.

With her children from far and near gathered about her at a supper in honor of her seventy-seventh birthday anniversary, Mrs. Sarah Collis, of Princeton, became the victim of a coughing spell while at the table, and died in a short time.

Noble Bassett, of Hanover Township, has bought 160 acres of farming land in the western part of Fayette County for $17,000.

Considerable speculation and much comment has been caused by the disappearance of the criminal docket of the Police Court in Newcastle. An air of deep mystery surrounds the bold theft.

Caleb A. McCarthy disappeared from his home in Richmond a week ago and nothing has been heard of him. An employe told Mrs. McCarthy that her husband was called away by telegram.

Roy Rider, aged 4 years, fell from a cart in Warsaw a few days ago and broke his collar bone, but he continued playing with his companions until his condition was discovered by his parents, who had the injury attended to.

Of the officers elected at the first county election in Newton, John Ade, of Kentland, father of George Ade, author and playwright, is the only one now living. Mr. Ade is 80 years old. He was the first recorder of Newton County.

Katherine, the 4-year-old daughter of Albert Daniels, of New Albany, was burned to death while playing with matches, with which she attempted to start a bonfire in an alley. Her mother was badly burned while trying to save the child.

Miss Hannah Stuckman, 70 years of age, walked the nine miles from Milford Junction to Nappanee, carrying a bundle of luggage swung on a broom-handle over her shoulder, and reached Nappanee so fresh that she ventured the assertion that she could keep on for another nine or ten miles without excessive fatigue.

A 1-year-old babe of Mrs. D. K. Mann of Vine street, in Elkhart, swallowed an open safety pin which lodged in its throat. While waiting for a physician the mother grabbed the child by the foot and by swinging it produced a nausea and dislodged the pin. The throat was scratched, but no serious results will follow.

John W. Emison, Jr., the 20-year-old son of Postmaster John W. Emison, and one of the prominent young men of Vincennes, was probably fatally injured by being crushed between the touring car of William H. Glover and an iron fence. The young man cranked the car while the engine was set for operation, and he was carried against the fence before the car could be stopped.

Father Lynn, who served as assistant in the Catholic church in Peru for two years, and was recently transferred to Academie, near Fort Wayne, was the recipient of a roll of money as large as a tin cup, when a committee of twelve men called on him at the rectory. The bills were of $1 denomination with the exception of the outside one, which was a $10 gold certificate. John Toomey made the presentation speech.

Postoffice inspectors are investigating depredations of young men on two rural mail routes out of Richmond and arrests are expected. Nearly every farmer's mail box on routes Nos. 1 and 2 have been made targets for rifle shots by these young men and in some instances boxes have fairly been riddled by bullets. The shooting was done in a spirit of fun, it is asserted, but the inspectors do not appear to see anything humorous about it.

The tiger which ran amuck in the bottoms near Oakland City, last winter, seems to be back to his old camping ground. Blackberry pickers, who have been working in the Patoka bottoms, have been frightened by the screams of some animal, and many of them are afraid to enter the woods. No one has met it face to face, so the identification is not complete, but as only one tiger is known to be loose in Southern Indiana, this must be it.

Clement Studebaker, son of the late Clem Studebaker, has bought twelve acres of land at $1,000 an acre on the east side of South Bend, and he will immediately begin the erection of one of the finest mansions in that part of the State. The residence will be in the center of a magnificent park, which will be laid out by a famous landscape gardener. While the cost of the improvement has not been announced, it is understood that it will be in the neighborhood of $200,000.

Mrs. Lucinda Copper, 78 years old, who is dead in Wabash, suffered heavily in the wars in which the Government has been involved. Her husband and two brothers were killed while fighting for the North in the Civil War. Another brother was killed in the Mexican War and two grandsons fell by Filipino bullets. Her ancestors fought in the War of the Revolution and in the War of 1812. During the War of the Rebellion, every member of her family, and that of her husband, of fighting age, enlisted.

Jacob Tallman, a farm hand living nine miles north of Elkhart, stepped into the cylinder box of a threshing machine and before the machine could be stopped his left foot was severely mangled.

Will Finn has been notified by Harry Barnett, of Beeville, Ont., that an ordinary toy balloon, sent up by Finn from St. Joseph, July 4, was recovered by Barnett intact when it descended July 6, more than 150 miles from its starting point.

CHICAGO MAN NAMED PROHIBITION LEADER

Eugene W. Chafin Is Nominated for President by the Aqua Pura Party.

WATKINS IN SECOND PLACE.

Shortest Platform in History of National Conventions Is Adopted at Columbus.

Columbus Correspondence:

Eugene W. Chafin, of Chicago, was nominated for President of the United States by the Prohibition national convention Thursday. For Vice President the convention named Aaron S. Watkins, of Ada, O., a professor in the Ohio Northern University. Both candidates are gubernatorial candidates of the Prohibition party in their respective States. The shortest platform on record and one containing for the first time in the history of important national parties in this country a declaration in favor of equal suffrage was framed for the candidates to stand upon.

Republican and Democratic candidates and platforms were scored alike, and evidence held to prove that Lincoln was a Prohibitionist was presented at the opening session of the Prohibition party's national convention. Both Taft and Bryan were stamped as friends of liquor in the address of the temporary chairman, Robert H. Patton of Springfield, Ill.

Mr. Patton held the attention of his audience throughout his speech and at times moved his hearers to great enthusiasm.

"Take off your coat," and "Hit him again!" cried the delegates, and these shouts were interspersed with "Amens." The speaker took off his coat and then paid his compliments to the late Herman Raster of Illinois, author of the personal liberty plant of the 1872 Republican platform. He read a letter from Wade H. Ellis, attorney general of Ohio and author of much of the Republican platform of this year, declaring that he could find nothing in the Raster plank "inconsistent with Republican doctrine."

"Caught with the goods!" shouted some one in the audience.

Passing from the Republican party, Mr. Patton spoke of that "very talkative man from Lincoln," and said that in the last sixteen years Mr. Bryan "has championed everything loose under the sun in the way of a political issue except the prohibition question."

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock in Memorial Hall by Chairman Jones. The invocation was offered by Rev. E. L. Eaton of Illinois, and after the formal reading of the call for the convention the name of Robert H. Patton of Springfield, Ill., was announced as temporary chairman.

Following the address of Mr. Patton the roll of states was called for the announcement of committees. An address of welcome to the delegates was delivered by Mayor C. A. Bank of Columbus, and a response was made by W. P. F. Ferguson of Chicago.

Planks in the Platform.

1. Submission by Congress to the several States of an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes.

2. Immediate prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes in the District of Columbia, in the territories and in all places over which the national government has jurisdiction, the repeal of the internal revenue tax on alcoholic liquors and the prohibition of interstate traffic therein.

3. Election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people.

4. Equitable graduated income and inheritance taxes.

5. Establishment of postal savings banks and the guaranty of deposits in banks.

6. Regulation of all corporations doing an interstate business.

7. Creation of a permanent tariff commission.

8. Strict enforcement of law instead of the official tolerance and practical license of the social evil which prevails in many of our cities, with its unspeakable traffic in girls.

9. Uniform marriage and divorce laws.

10. An equitable and constitutional employers' liability act.

11. Court review of Postoffice Department decisions.

12. Prohibition of child labor in mines, workshops and factories.

13. Legislation basing suffrage only upon intelligence and ability to read and write the English language.

14. Preservation of the mineral and forest resources of the country and improvement of the highways and water ways.

Shop for the Blind.

Helen Keller has opened at Manchester, Mass., the first of what she expects will be a chain of shops for the sale of the handicraft of blind workers. The display includes fine products of the loom and various house furnishings.

Nelson Downs Gans.

At San Francisco Joe Gans, the negro who so long had held the lightweight championship, was beaten in seventeen rounds by "Battling" Nelson.

JULY

0264

L 903

Are You Regular?

If you are not, it is a sign of disease, a sign of some hidden female trouble, that may be undermining and weakening your constitution, and laying up for you much future suffering.

Many thousands of weak, irregular, suffering women have, in the past 50 years, been greatly benefited or cured by the use of that well-known, successful, purely vegetable, female tonic and curative remedy

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

Apple G. Barnes, of Alto, Tex., writes: "I caught cold, which made me irregular and gave me pains in my shoulders and sides. For almost 2 weeks I could not lift a chair. Cardui brought me all right again; I have no more pains and am in very good health."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 34

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE.

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 11, Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 12:05p.m
No. 3, Western Express 8:06 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:21 p. m

The Old Proverb

That "It takes nine tailors to make a man" may possibly mean that it takes nine trials to find the right tailor.

You can save eight trials by coming here first. At this time in the year we can do considerably better by you than later. Not better in style, fabric, fit or finish—that's impossible—but better in price. For Example:—

Suits from $18.00 up.

Pants from $4.00 up

ED MAY,

TAILOR,

Butler, Ind.

PATENTS

and TRADE-MARKS promptly obtained in all countries, or no fee. We obtain PATENTS THAT PAY, advertise them thoroughly, at our expense, and help you to success.

Send model, photo or sketch for FREE report on patentability. 10 years' practice. SURPASSING REFERENCES. For free Guide Book on Profitable Patents write to 503-505 Seventh Street, WASHINGTON, D. C.

D. SWIFT & CO.

The St. Joe News.

One Year - -	$1.00
Six Month - -	50c
Three Months - -	25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Editorially.

The people who rejoiced at the smashing of the machine of Boss Cox of Cincinnati a year or so ago are not going to weep over what happened to Co'. Jim Guffey of Pennsylvania.

A Massachusetts man has made tomatoes and potatoes grow on the same vine. Now the man who likes catsup on his Saratoga chips can have a snap.

Connecticut has begun a crusade against snakes. It seems almost superfluous to suggest that excellent snake chasers can be obtained in the prohibition south.

The people may sneer to their heart's content, but the wide-awake American will continue to use slang till the cows come home or the clouds roll by. Slang phrases will frequently save the utterance of a dozen words: and as the average American is a hustler and hasn't much time to waste, everything goes and slang holds it's grip. It would be hard to trace the origin of many of our slang expressions, but it is safe to say that the majority found birth on the stage. A comedian says something which strikes the audience as "good" and henceforth that expression has a great "run".

Dull Times.

Should one attempt to analyze the circumstances or combination of circumstances which make, or are supposed to make, that condition of business called "dull times," he would soon find that his was a difficult task. It is safe to say that no man has analyzed this peculiar condition of business, although all men have tried to. The discoverer of the causes of dull times will be closely related to the man who establishes a universal and acceptable tariff, or who forever settles the international standard of money.

Shakespeare once said, "Nothing is either good or bad but thinking makes it so." The principle still holds good. What we think, whether it be so or not, is commercially so. If we think times are good, times almost always are good. If we think times are bad, times are invariably bad. If we think we are sick, the chances are that we are sick. If we think we are well, then we are well.

No man can think his arm off or think it on again, nor a mental scientist cure incurable diseases, but thought working from the individual into the collective is responsible for nearly every condition of trade where opinions differ as to origin. The unfortunate tariff, and the unavoidable election, the yet-to-be free trade, and the political condition of districts or of many districts, all operate as excuses for business depression.

No man can think a thing that is not so is so and make it so, but he can make some one else think it is so, and when a thing may not be so, and when it exists only in the mind the thought makes it or kills it—as thought would have it. For example: Mr. A. tells Mr. B. that times are hard. Mr. B. tells Mr. C. that times are worse. Mr. C. tells Mr. D. that times are worst. When enough men have told and retold this, times are what they were not, and what they ought not to be. Ninety-nine men out of a hundred think times are hard because somebody told them so. They know no other reason. When enough people talk hard times, times really become hard, and the men who created the condition have the satisfaction of living in a state of their own making.

It Can't Be Beat.

The best of all teachers is experience C. M. Harden, of Silver City, North Carolina, says: "I find Electric Bitters does all that's claimed for it. For Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles it can't be beat. I have tried it and find it almost excellent medicine." Mr. Harden is right; it's the best of all medicines, also for weakness, lame back, and all run down conditions. Best too for chills and malaria. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

The Wheat Joint-worm.

This insect seems to have appeared in unusual numbers this season in the southeastern counties of this state, and according to a large number of letters which have been received at this office, has done much damage to the wheat crop, cutting down the yield in some instances to almost nothing.

This insect belongs to the family Chalcididae, one of the families of parasitic Hymenoptera, which are generally classed as beneficial, but this species is only about one eighth of an inch in length. Color black, with the joints of the legs and feet yellow. Professor F. M. Webster of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., says of its life history: "The insect may be found throughout the year in its various stages of development in wheat stems. It lives over winter as a larva or grub in cells formed in the stems prior to the ripening of the grain, the adult emerging therefrom in April or May, according to to latitude, or sometimes after the young grain has thrown up stems and several joints have become exposed.

The female, using her slender pointed ovipositor, places her eggs in the walls of the stem, reaching their maximum growth by the time the straw becomes fully hardened and ripe. Wintering in the larval state, they pass a short pupal stage and emerge as adults in the spring."

The effect on the straw is to distort it into various shapes, and at threshing time the infested parts become hard and dry and break up into small pieces which are difficult to separate from the wheat. Many farmers are anxious to know whether these insects will injure the grain in the bin, but there is no cause for uneasiness on this account as they work only in the stem, thereby causing the kernels to become small and shrunken.

Natural Enemies.

Like most of our injurious species, this one has a number of parasitic species which feed upon it, and which serve to hold it in check. This will doubtless prove to be the case in this instance, so farmers should not hesitate to continue to sow wheat. But there are some which should be practiced where possible, such as burning the stubble, where the fields have not been seeded to grass or clover. Using the straw for bedding for stack and piling the manure for sometime until it has become well heated will have a tendency to develope the insects prematurely. Rotation of crops and using plenty of quick acting fertilizer are some of the measures indicated.

Preventive Measures

This insect, in its larval form, may be quite easily mistaken for the Wheat Saw-fly Borer (Cephus pygmaeus Linn.) which belongs to a different family, and whose life history is quite different from Isosoma tritici.

J. Troop,
Horticulturist and Etomologist

Neuralgia Pains

Are the result of an abnormal condition of the more prominent nerve branches, caused by congestion, irritation, or disease. If you want to relieve the pain try Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. They often relieve when everything else fails. They leave no disagreeable after-effects. Just a pleasurable sense of relief. Try them.

"I have neuralgia headache right over my eyes, and I am really afraid that my eyes will burst. I also have neuralgia pain around my heart. I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills recently and find they relieve these troubles quickly. I seldom find it necessary to take more than two tablets for complete relief."
MRS. KATHERINE BARTON
1117 Valley St. Carthage, Mo.

"I have awful spells of neuralgia and have doctored a great deal without getting much benefit. For the last two years I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and they always relieve me. I have been so bad with neuralgia that I sometimes thought I would go crazy. Sometimes it is necessary to take two of them, but never more and they are sure to relieve me." MRS. FERRIER,
2434 Lynn St., Lincoln, Neb.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and we authorize him to return the price of first package (only) if it fails to benefit you.
Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

TWO LITTLE TALKS.

First; To The Public.

You will notice that the merchants have been reasonably liberal with advertising space this week. Right now is the time to buy merchandise at great reductions in price and the merchants at home have as good bargains to offer as can be obtained anywhere. You should never lose faith in the local merchant. It may be that his stock is not so large as that of a large city store but it is the exception rather than the rule if he fails to supply you. Staple articles of clothing and household utility can be purchased as reasonably at home as abroad, and there is a sense of satisfaction in knowing that you have patronized a home industry. Let us all be loyal to the home merchants, and we are sure to find them as reasonable as those of our neighboring cities.

Second; To The Merchants.

You want the trade of your home people; then you must get up and after it. The chief reason in most cases why people buy of mail order houses or go to the larger cities to purchase their supplies is simply because these outside institutions let the people know by means of circulars and newspaper columns, what they have to sell and just how much it costs. You cannot blame a woman for reading the mail order catalogue with its attractive illustrations and prices. We are here to co-operate with you in securing the home trade. The time to advertise is when you want more business. When your business shall have grown so large that you are satisfied with it, then we cannot reasonably ask you to advertise. The only sure enough business man is the one who secures business—the rest are clerks. Let us help you.

A Letter.

The following is a reproduction of a letter from Vera Copp and Laura Woodcox, who are now located at the Battle Creek Sanitarium. This letter will no doubt be of interest to their many friends at this place.

Battle Creek, Mich.
July 23rd, 1908.

Dear Friend:-

As you requested us to write and we are now off duty, will try and do so. We had a nice trip and had no trouble whatever in reaching the sanitarium. The first thing we did on reaching here, after being shown to our room was to prepare for a class in hydrotherpathy or massages. This class lasted from 4:30 to 6:30. Then we went to supper and immediately after supper was a class in anatomy which lasted until 8:00 o'clock thus keeping us busy. The next morning we were put on duty at 7:00 o'clock in East Hall (one of the nurse's homes). We are on duty eight hours a day except on Sabbath, (Saturday). We have two classes a day on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Last Sunday passed almost without our knowledge of it being Sunday. Everybody worked just like on a week day. We had to attend their Sabbath school Saturday morning having no opportunity to attend Sunday services. The sanitarium is a beautiful place. There are over 1200 people in the main building and 800 in the three homes. We room in West Hall on third story. It is just opposite the sanitarium and the college building to the left. We have made many friends while here thus making our stay more pleasant. There is no national distinction in the sanitarium. We have come in contact with more different nationalities than we would ever have expected. There are German, Swiss, Dutch, Japs, Chinese, Mexicans and last but not least, negroes.

We enjoy our work quite well but it is very hard work. We must be in our room by 10:30. There are ten students in our hydrotherpathy class and about thirty-one (twenty-four girls and seven boys, one negro) in our anatomy class. We enjoy the hydrotherpathy class really the best for it is entirely new. In our Tuesday's class we gave four different massages to patients which proved very interesting. We won't attempt to describe any part of the building but will only say that it is a grand structure thro'out and to do it justice one must see it. There are two large swimming pools, an in-door and out-door. Every evening at sun down they have a march in the gymnasium lasting twenty minutes. We don't like the food. There is hardly an article of ordinary diet. They use no pepper, and lemons instead of vinegar. We are very tired of fruit for we have it three times a day. Every Thursday morning there are services in the dining-room by one of the Salvation Army. Promptly at 9:00 o'clock we must leave our work and go. Of course, this is in East Hall.

There is a band or orchestra concert every evening in the parlor or drive so we have plenty of amusement when we are off duty. The city is a very pretty place, about like Ft. Wayne. It is now nearly class time and as our letter is already quite lengthy will close with best regards to all our friends.

VERA & LAURA.

WANTED--A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $4.50 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at 1/2 the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES $4.80 A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 cash with order at $4.80.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of the specially-prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump. Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of the special introductory price quoted above, or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Notice to Farmers.

Anyone having hay ropes, wire ropes or cables needing splicing. Can get same done, or any other ropes spliced by phoning No. 10 or by writing to the News Office.

LEIGHTY & CURIE.

GENERAL ITEMS

The National G. A. R. Encampment will be held in Toledo, August 31 to September 3.

Garrett has completed arrangements for a big firemen's tournament at that place on August 27.

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S.

The Republicans of the Twelfth Indiana Congressional district will meet at Auburn, August 21, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress.

According to a law passed by the last Ohio legislature, every county in state must provide a hospital properly equipped for the treatment of tubercular diseases. These buildings must be erected by January 1, 1909.

Kil So Quah or Roanoke, the oldest indian squaw living and a granddaughter of Little Turtle, is to be honored by a new order of Red Men to be instituted at Wabash, August 5. The lodge will take the name of Kil-So-Quah.

According to reports from Defiance county line, cholera has broken out among the hogs on two different farms and did considerable damage. The two farmers whose herds are afflicted are E. E. Hartman and Walter Tomlinson. A careful quarantine is being kept over the diseased hogs in the hope of keeping the disease confined to its present location. Every effort is being made to stamp out the infection before it spreads farther.—News.

Best the World Affords.

"It gives me unbounded pleasure to recommend Bucklen's Arnica Salve," says J. W. Jenkins, of Chapel Hill, N. C. "I am convinced it's the best salve the world affords. It cured a felon on my thumb, and it never fails to heal every sore, burn or wound to which it is applied." 25c at H. Milliman's drug store.

Undertaking a Specialty.

Elza Kinsey takes charge of all funerals. Calls answered day or night Prices reasonable. Satisfaction guaranteed.

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

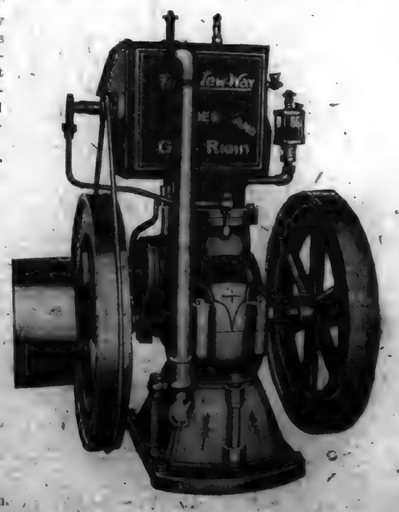
Phone No. Office 37-2 Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



So Simple Your Boy Can Run It.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken.

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind,
Exclusive Agent.

JULY

0265

L 903

AUGUST CLEARANCE SALE

Commencing SATURDAY, AUG. 1, and Closing

SATURDAY AUGUST 15.

We have put off our Mid-Summer Sale until now in order that those people who were waiting for their Harvest returns might be able to secure some of the good things in the merchandise line. We are going to make it worth your while for the waiting. Look over this bill and come. The goods are from our regular stock. No remnants or short lengths bought especially for bait.

Domestics

We are enabled to offer you cottons at the lowest price in years and from the present outlook the lowest prices for sometime to come.

9-4 full bleached sheeting worth 35c Sale price per yard 24c

8-4 full bleached sheeting worth 30c Sale price per yard 22c

Full yard wide bleached sheeting worth 12c now at 8½c

Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 8c now at 6c

Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 9c now at 7c

Good yard wide unbleached muslin Sale price per yard 5c

All our apron check ginghams Sale price per yard 6c

A big lot fancy ginghams, dress styles Sale price per yard 12c

Shirt Waists.

A big reduction on these waists, fine sheer cloth with Val Lace and insertion finely made in latest styles.

$1 25 waists now for ..... $ 98

2 00 and 2 25 waists $1 59

$1 50 and 1.75 waists for $1 29

Jap silk waists at big reduction.

All Our Prints

50 new pieces just in @ ..... 5c per yard.

Oxfords

All new up-to-date footwear, three months yet of oxford season. Sizes somewhat broken.

Men's $3.50 patent and tan oxfords Sale price $2.79

Men's $3.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price $2.48

Men's $2.50 patent oxfords Sale price $2.19

Boy's $2.50 patent oxfords Sale price $2.19

Ladies $3.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price $2.48

Ladies $2.50 patent and tan oxfords Sale price $2.19

Ladies $2.00 patent and tan oxfords Sale price $1.79

Misses and childrens patent and tan oxfords at reduced prices.

Ladies, Misses and Children's white canvas slippers, 69 to 98c per pair.

All dress shoes discounted 10 per cent.

Special 25 pairs childrens $1.00 slippers at ..... 49c.

Skirts = = Jackets.

All our Spring Jackets & Skirts 1-4 off.

Hats.

$3.00 Stiff hats, black or brown $2.48

$2.50 Stiff hats black or brown $1.98

$2.00 stiff and soft hats Sale price $1.69

$1.50 soft hats Sale price $1.29

$1.25 soft hats Sale price 98c

$1.00 straw hats Sale price 75c

$.50 straw hats Sale price 40c

Ladies Shirt Waists.

All new stock. Not a last year's waist in the lot. You can't miss the opportunity to buy some of them.

$1.25 and $1.50 lawn waists Sale price 98c

$1.75 and $2.00 lawn waists $1.29

$2.25 and $2 50 lawn waists $1.69

$3.00 and $3.25 silk waists $2.48

$4.50 and $5.00 silk waists $3.48

Overalls.

85ct. overalls during Sale 75c

60ct. overalls during Sale 55c

50ct. overalls during Sale 45c

DRESS SHIRTS:

$1 25 dress shirts @ 98c

50c shirts @ 45c

All 50c work shirts @ 43c.

1 00 shirts @ 90c

Special lot @ 35, 69c.

Gents Furnishings

25ct. hose, plain and fancy Sale price per pair 22c

15ct. hose, plain and fancy Sale price per pair 13c

Linen Collars Sale price each 13c

50ct. ties During sale 45c

25ct. ties going at 22c

GENT'S Summer Underwear.

$1.75 union suits Sale price $1.48

$1.50 union suits Sale price $1.29

$1.00 union suits Sale price 90c

50 ct. shirts and drawers Sale price 45c

25 ct. shirts and drawers Sale price 23c

Odd shirts and drawers Sale price, each ..... 19 & 35

Boy's 25 ct. shirts and drawers 20c

You are now fully enjoying the harvest time, pleased with the rich returns. It means that the farmer is going to be able to make many purchases for the comfort of himself and family. Come to our sale, rich in savings on good merchandise.

OUR BARGAINS WILL CERTAINLY INTEREST YOU.

THE BIG FOUR STORE,
ST. JOE IND.

Local Items.

Harry Milliman and John Simanton with their wives took a day's outing at Hamilton Lake, last Wednesday.

Mr. Humphrey of South Bend was in town Thursday, taking subscriptions for a new county and state atlas to be published by the Rand, McNally Co., of Chicago.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

Editor Yeiser and daughter Lileth of Avilla were callers in town Wednesday.

The St. Joe base ball club will go to Hicksville Thursday and play in the forenoon at the races against the Hicksville team. A large crowd will accompany them.

Mrs. Frank Dolph of South Bend came Wednesday evening to visit her parents and to assist in the work during the sickness of her brother, Elmer.

The Imported Hackney Stallion, New Fashion is now owned by Wm. Watson, who lives three miles southwest of Spencerville. He will stand the entire week, except Saturdays, at the owners barn, when he will be at the Moffett Feed barn at Auburn.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Last Tuesday afternoon some small boys were playing catch on the Lutheran church lawn and accidentally threw the ball into the large window in the north end. One of the youngsters paid a dollar and the balance have not done their part. The boys should pay it and no doubt it will take a man from Wayne to replace the section broken, as it is a particular job.

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

Miss Lora Hullapent several days last week with friends in Ft. Wayne.

Franc Rhodenbaugh has been sick with malarial and intermittent fever.

Mrs. W. R Coburn after spending a week with relatives and friends in this locality, returned to her home in Ft. Wayne, Sunday evening.

J. D. Leighty was at Mt. Clemens Mich. taking treatment for rheumatism.

Hattie Ferguson of Auburn visited with her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Milliman a couple of days last week.

Mr. Phillips a student at Yale, whose parents live near Maysville, was in town Thursday trying to sell a lecture course for the coming winter.

JULY

U266

L 903

The Popular Pulpit

RANK AND WIN PLACIDITY.

By Rev. N. M'Gee Waters.

The parable of the talents—Matt. xxv. 14-30.

The question of rank has been the perpetual heartache of human society. The Orient has solved the puzzle of caste. The West has solved it by democracy.

The West with its democracy has a part of the truth. A man's chance in life must not be determined by where he was born or by his inheritance, but by his personal worth. Every man must have a full chance to be all the man there is in him to be.

But the East, with its clumsy caste system, also has a part of the truth. Inequality is a fact among men. When the West, as it has sometimes done, interpreted democracy to mean equality among all men, it has fallen into grievous error. Equally in opportunity, variety in ability is God's law.

Jesus spoke the truth. There is the five-talent man. Homer saw him and named him Ulysses—there was found none who could bend his bow. Scotland found him at the plow and his name was Burns. In New England he was born in a cabin on the frontier of Puritan civilization. He walked straight to the Senate. In our age he directs the fleets of commerce and organizes corporations.

There is the man to whom God has intrusted two talents. We know him better. He lives in our block. His name is legion. He is the average man. He has a chance in the world. For of him is humanity principally made up. He makes up the armies that fight. He makes up the force of men that till soil, hold the levers of commerce, bear the burdens of trade, fill the churches, crowd the schools, build the homes of men where the great children are to be born and will make up the vast multitude in heaven. God has a great need of him, and, as Lincoln said, "God best loves the common people because He has made so many of them."

There stands sullen and despairing the man to whom God has given but a single talent. I have met him in college. He traded all his patrimony to get there—he would be a scholar. Now the tragedy begins. Tries he ever so hard, he is always at the bottom of his class. He goes into a profession and he is a failure in the eyes of men. In business he never gets ahead and constantly the temptation is with him not to use the talent he has. And yet somehow he must not fail in his place. The heroes have done almost all they can for the world; the future welfare of the world as in the past hangs on the one and two talented men doing their best.

That is a photograph of the world, and note, Jesus drew it—I did not. He saw and called attention to the fact of inequality in this world. Moreover, he gave no hint of condemning it; he proposed no leveling. There is no such thing as equality in capacity between man and man. No law of larger liberty, no economic or socialistic scheme, no state of lawless anarchy can ever make men equal—God made them otherwise, and unequal they will be to the end.

Christ says the station in life is not the real difference in men, but the way they fill their station. Reward is based on faithfulness. You are paid, not for what you do, but how you do.

This truth is the one needed in our time. The truth of the parable is with your talent be content. Use it well and God will pay thee full wage. The ten-talent man can have no higher crown. In his small church the country minister may work miracles. In your handicraft you may do great things. Getting up is not getting on. The coming man is the becoming one. Here lies the hope for the man of mediocrity or one talent. Greatness depends on service. All service ranks the same with God. With Him there is neither last nor first.

THE HEAVENLY VISION.

By Henry F. Cope.

"I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision."—Acts, xxvi, 19.

He who has fully followed his ideas may have missed all other prizes in that pursuit, yet he has found happiness and riches that could have become his in no other way. Here is the secret of satisfaction, here is high success in any life, that one shall have followed fully his ideals, shall have kept the best steadily before him.

Heavenly visions come to all. They may not come with the rushing of angels' wings, nor with strange and mysterious signs and appearances. Perhaps some of the old time visions of great missions and of heights of character are described in terms of the supernatural only because they seem so much above the plane of the normal, average experience.

None is poorer than he who has never known high aspiration, who has never lifted his eyes to see the glory set before him. After all, the measure of any life is the extent to which such visions of great possibilities and lofty tasks has entered into the being and dominated the deeds.

There is nothing like this to make a man strong to endure, to make him despise the paltry prizes that seem so attractive to eyes blind to the greater glory. This is the food that angels envy, food that has sustained the soul through long days in the deserts, through weariness, toil, disappointments, fears, forsakings, losses and loneliness. They are able to despise the cross and to endure the shame who have seen the glory set before every worthy life, and leading on every high path of service or of sacrifice. No man or woman ever attained anything without this; nothing is impossible to those who cherish this light and heed this call.

Livingstone, Lincoln, Garibaldi, Florence Nightingale would have failed without the vision. In the rewards of wage or fame there would be no power to bear them up, on the contrary their daily experiences were enough to turn them from the chosen path, but for the lofty confidence that they were doing the one work for them, but for the inspiration of the ideal before them.

And this is any man's religion, to follow his ideal, to seek to be the best that day by day he knows, to do the highest duty that any lofty desire indicates, to take the path that leads up in love, and service, and purity of living. The religious life is the life that moves up into its higher self, and so ever finds new heights before it.

The great question for every man in religion is, not so much whether he will obey the ten commandments, not so much whether he will bend to the dictate of church or preacher, but whether he will be obedient to the inner vision, of the voice from heaven that speaks in his own heart and bids him forsake his dull ways of self-content and rise to higher living, to sacrificial service.

That vision calls us to paths of pain, that vision, if you but heed and seek to obey, makes tremendous demands of you. It is not the easy, heedless following of an emotional, romantic love for glory; it is the thorny path of the cross, the way of burden bearing; it is so hard as to be heroic.

The thing that is eating like a canker into our hearts, and robbing us of our power, and stealing our possibilities is our love of ease, our hatred of the things that are hard; we refuse to obey the heavenly vision because to do so would be to endure hardness, to forsake our soft and pleasant ways. So seeking ease we lose life.

Our days are filled with a dull discontent, not because we do not possess the things of this life, but because we have missed its greatest prize, the joy of following growing ideals. There is nothing we need to cherish more, to guard more closely than this, the visions that stir to greatness, the passion for perfection, the hope of high living and serving.

LAW AND GRACE.

By Rev. R. W. Dale, D. D., LL. D.

Text.—"For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1:17.

Grace came by Jesus Christ. You think that by an eternal law you must suffer for your sins. The Christian Gospel declares that Christ suffered for them. His relations to us are of a kind which made it possible for Him, as it was possible for no one else. He suffered for them, and instead of your suffering whenever you remember them He brings remission of sins, He breaks, He dissolves the iron links which bind men to their sins, He releases them from the sense of guilt, He gives them cheerfulness and buoyancy again. "As far as the east is from the west, so far does He remove our transgressions from us." From that inner consciousness of guilt Christ gives us perfect deliverance.

Grace came by Jesus Christ. He does not say "live righteously, and God will be at peace with you," but "God is at peace with you, therefore live righteously." He finds us in our sin. Whenever He really finds us we are conscious of our sin, and so we are ready in our strong belief in that form of law which is familiar to us to say, "God can be no friend of mine as yet; I must amend my ways, I must break off my evil habits, I must master my evil passions, I must become pure, devout, earnest about religion, and then God will be at peace with me." That is law. What Christ says is, "God is already at peace with you, is already your friend. He will not wait till you have amended your ways before He dismisses the remembrance of your sin. He dismisses it at once and will help you to mend your ways, will help you to break off evil habits, will help you to master evil passions, will help you to become pure, devout, and earnest about religion." That is grace. People do not see the glory of it, do not see what it means. They think that Christ only came to make some things plainer to the world than they were before. It never occurred to them that it would not have been worth while for the eternal Word of God to become flesh in order to do that. He came to reveal what man had not known before, cannot know apart from Him. "Do this and live," as some one has said, is the voice of the law; "live and do this" is the voice of grace and the voice of Christ. Grace comes, grants us to begin with more than man had ever hoped for by perfect obedience and grace, tells man that by an obedience he would never have been capable of before, he is to retain this great wealth and constantly to augment it. And so in a higher region grace and law blend The law is not made void—it is established; the righteousness that law demands grace renders possible; and so man is glorified forever in the eternal glory of God.

Smiles of The Day

Sure He Could.

The art photographer had visited the farm.

"I want to make an exhaustive study of this particular bit of landscape," he said, "and would like to have your hired man retain his present position on the fence there. Can he sit still?"

"For days at a time," replied the farmer.

Much the Same.

"As near as I can figure it out," said the mere man, "heaven must be a place where it is always summer."

"Yes," rejoined the sweet young thing, "and doubtless the proportion of men to women there will be about the same as it is at the summer resorts."

Rather Scarce.

Wedderly—I say, old chap, why don't you pick out some good woman and enter into a matrimonial partnership?

Singleton—What I want in that line is a silent partner, and I don't believe it is possible to find one.

At the Grand Canyon.

She—What a magnificent, sublime wealth of scenic grandeur!

He—Yes; but doocid poor judgment, I should say, to have it away out here.

Where the Fault Lies.

"But," protested the wayward son, "you should make allowance for the follies of youth."

"Huh!" growled the old man. "If it wasn't for the allowance you get there would be less folly."

Why He Didn't Sleep.

"Well, no," said Brightly, who had shared his bed with McFidgett. "I must admit I didn't sleep well last night."

"That's too bad, old man," replied McFidgett. "I assure you I slept like a top."

"Quite so. When a top sleeps it's continually turning around."—Philadelphia Press.

Chance of Her Life.

Judge—Do you swear that you will tell the truth, the whole truth, and—

Miss Sweet—Oh, how lovely! Shall I really be allowed to talk all the afternoon if I want to?

Real Unkind.

Reggy—I'm studying French, doncher know. I cawn't—aw—speak the language yet, but I can—aw—think in it.

Kitty—As that is more than you can do in English, allow me to congratulate you.

Small Boy's Theory.

"I wonder why the bride is crying?" remarked one of the guests at the wedding. "Can it be because she is leaving home?"

"No, I guess it ain't that," answered the bride's small brother. "She's in love with the fellow she married and I guess she's crying 'cause she feels sorry for him."

Could Watch Strollers.

Helen—Such a delightful chaperon for the summer. Such a far-seeing old lady, you know.

Harry—Far-seeing? Then she would never do for a summer chaperon.

Unidentified.

Man at Phone—Hello! Hello! Who is this?

Voice (from other end of line)—How do I know? Look yourself up and see.

As Amended.

"I can marry any man I choose," boasted the fair but freckled summer girl.

"Always provided your choice is willing," amended summer girl No. 2.

Different.

"Did he propose to you last night?"

"No."

"But I heard you say, 'This is so sudden!'"

"He was paying some money he owed me."—Houston Post.

The Darwinian Theory.

Count De Bree—I would like to show you my family tree.

Miss Gottrox—Oh, please do! I've never seen a cocoanut tree!

A Pleasure Not to Be Missed.

A teacher of a certain school received the following note explaining the absence of one of her pupils the day before:

"Pleze excoose Henry for absents yesterday. Him an' me got a chance of a ride to a funeral in a charrige, an' I let him stay to home as he had never rode in a charrige an' never went to a funeral, nor had many other pleasures. So pleze excoose."—Sacred Heart Review.

Had Him Cornered.

Hilow—Do you know how much money there is in this country per capita?

Milow—About $33, I believe.

Hilow—Have you got your share?

Milow—Sure.

Hilow—That's good. Lend me five for a few days, will you?

How About Uncle?

"Well, Georgie, you've been fishing with your uncle, have you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Your uncle told us he caught a dozen big fellows. Can't you tell us how many you caught?"

No response from Georgie.

"But you haven't lost your tongue, have you? How many did you catch?"

"I haven't lost my tongue, sir, but papa's sittin' just over there and he always punishes me for lying!"—Yonkers Statesman.

She Is a Genius.

Horace—That Bunsby girl is a genius.

Evelyn—Which one?

Horace—Mary Jane.

Evelyn—In what way?

Horace—See how her name figures on the program of graduating exercises. Here it is: "Marye Jeanne De Bunnesbie.

Enough to Think About.

"When do you think the Panama canal will be finished?"

"Now, what's the use," rejoined Farmer Corntossel, "of tryin' to take my mind off this job of ditchin' I've laid out on my own little patch of land?"—Washington Star.

Why They Were Clean.

Mother—Why, Bobbie, how clean your hands are!

Bobbie—Aren't they! But you ought to have seen 'em before I helped Bridget make the bread!—Life.

Dirt Cheap.

Farmer Wayback—Gosh! Cabinets, fifty cents a dozen. Guess I'll buy one to put seeds in.

Accomplished.

Loraine—I think I would rather fence with Evelyn than with anyone I know.

Marion—Yes?

Loraine—Yes, she can give you all the gossip of the neighborhood and make it interesting with the foils at the same time.

Quite Different.

Dickson—I wonder if I shall ever be rich enough to own a steam yacht?

Wickson—Um! That isn't my ambition.

Dickson—What is?

Wickson—I want to be rich enough after I own one to run it for a few weeks each season.

A Test.

Annabel—But do you think he loves her?

Arthur—Sure. He saw her out in the back yard beating carpets with her hair tied up in a towel, and he still wants to marry her.

His Success.

"Your friend Little tells me he's got his wife pretty thoroughly trained now."

"Yes, he's got her trained so that he can make her do pretty nearly anything she wants to do."—Philadelphia Press.

Got Rattled.

Tired Thomas—After givin' me sumthin' t' eat, dat ole farmer asked me t' turn de grindstone fer him.

Lazy Lewis—Wot did youse do?

Tired Thomas—Nawthon'. I wus so rattled I didn't know which way to turn.

Going a Gale.

"Yes," said the Kansas farmer, "one of them thar actor folks came through here and eloped with my daughter in an automobile."

"And did you pursue them?" asked the lightning rod man.

"Yes, on the old gray mule."

"Him! Hopeless chase, eh?"

"No, stranger. Providence sent along a cyclone, picked up me and the old gray mule and landed us right in front of the automobile. Before they could get away I had them."

No Cause for Complaint.

"I went fishing yesterday," remarked the obese passenger.

"Have any luck?" queried the drummer.

"Sure," answered the o. p. "I didn't get drowned or lose any of my bait."

What It Would Say.

Sentimental Young Lady—Ah, professor! what would this old oak say if it could talk?

Professor—It would say, "I am an elm."—Filegende Blaetter.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Misses' Blouse.

The blouse that allows effective use of the fashionable buttons or embroidered discs as trimming is one certain to be in demand just now, and here is a model that is admirably well adapted to the treatment. In the illustration it is made of pongee with trimming of applique and chemisette of all-over lace while the wide tucks at the shoulders are trimmed with buttons, but in place of buttons embroidered discs would be handsome and equally smart, while the blouse itself is suited to almost all seasonable materials.

PATTERN NO. 5983.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5983.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Girl's Dress.

Simple little frocks made with straight full skirts are among the most practical and the most desirable of the warm weather season. This one is pretty and attractive and can be made from almost any really childish material, the linens, batistes, dimities and the like of the present season, and also challis, cashmere and similar lightweight wools. In the illustration, however, dotted batiste is trimmed with embroidery.

PATTERN NO. 0012.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 0012.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

UNFAMILIAR FACTS.

The song of the bird was originally a cry of alarm.

Red-haired persons are usually impulsive and outspoken.

Watchmakers' oil is from the jawbone of the porpoise.

Pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust.

The Lusitania has 49 clocks on board, all controlled by a master clock in the chart house.

CUTICURA CURED FOUR.

Southern Woman Suffered with Itching, Burning Rash—Three Little Babies Had Skin Troubles.

"My baby had a running sore on his neck and nothing that I did for it took effect until I used Cuticura. My face was nearly full of tetter or some singular skin disease. It would itch and burn so that I could hardly stand it. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment cured me. Two years after it broke out on my hands and wrist. Sometimes I would go nearly crazy, for it itched so badly. I went back to my old stand-by, that had never failed me—one set of Cuticura Remedies did the work. One set also cured my uncle's baby, whose head was a cake of sores, and another baby who was in the same fix. Mrs. Lillie Wilcher, 770 Eleventh St., Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1907."

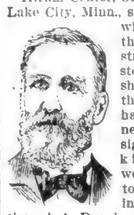
2,400 Babies in Twenty-Five Years.

When Dr. J. W. Carmichael assisted at the birth of an eleven-pound boy to-day he announced that this infant was the twenty-four hundredth at whose arrival he had officiated. Dr. Carmichael is also a minister, and he has frequently served at the wedding of a couple and later at the birth of their children. Once he carried it so far as the baptism.

The first of the 2,400 was a relative of Henry W. Grady. When the boy grew up Dr. Carmichael married him—Atlanta Cor. New York Sun.

A TERRIBLE CONDITION.

Tortured by Sharp Twinges, Shooting Pains and Dizziness.



Hiram Center, 518 South Oak street, Lake City, Minn., says: "I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not straighten up after stooping without sharp pains shooting through my back. I had dizzy spells, was nervous and my eyesight affected. The kidney secretions were irregular and too frequent. I was in a terrible condition, but Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Ins and Outs.

"What's that noise?" asked the visitor in the apartment house.

"Probably some one in the dentist's apartments on the floor below getting a tooth out."

"But this seemed to come from the floor above."

"Ah, then it's probably the Popleys' baby getting a tooth in."—Philadelphia Press.

Do Your Clothes Look Yellow?

If so, use Red Cross Ball Blue. It will make them white as snow. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

AN INSECT TRAGEDY.

The Nest the Mother Butterfly Builds for Her Young.

There is something really pathetic in the way a mother butterfly builds a nest for her children. In the first place, the little home where the eggs are deposited represents a great deal of sacrifice, for it is lined with several layers of down plucked from the mother's own soft body. The eggs having been laid carefully upon this luxurious, pretty couch, are protected by an equally pretty coverlet made of the same material.

These butterfly bedclothes are often arranged with an intricacy that is quite curious and perplexing. Sometimes a bed is made so that each separate delicate hair stands upright, thus giving the entire nest the appearance of a little brush of downy fur. Then again the eggs are laid spirally round a tiny branch, and, as the covering follows their course, the effect resembles the bushy tail of a fox, only the nest is more beautiful than the brush of the finest fox that ever roamed over country.

The building of this downy nest is the latest earthly labor of the mother butterfly, for by the time it is completed her own delicate body is denuded of its natural covering and there is nothing left for her to do but die, a sacrifice which she promptly and heroically makes in the interest of the coming butterfly generation.

HEALTH AND INCOME.

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts, which I did, making this food a large part of at least two meals a day.

"To-day I am free from brain-fag, dyspepsia and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

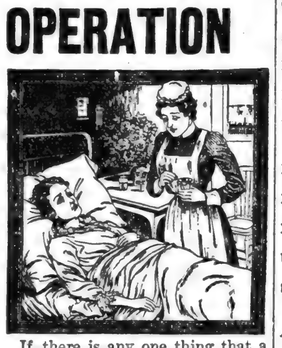
Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

JULY

0267

L 903

A SURGICAL OPERATION



If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

To Ladies Only.—The wish to be beautiful is predominant in every woman, and none can say she does not care whether she is beautiful or not. Dr. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier elicits a clear, transparent complexion, free from Tan, Freckles, or Moth Patches, and so closely imitating nature as to defy detection. It has the highest medical testimony as well as professional celebrities, and on its own merits it has become one of the largest and a popular specialty in the trade. FERD. T. HOPKINS, Sole Proprietor, 37 Great Jones Street, New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe.

Uncle Allen.

"Lots of politicians," remarked Uncle Allen Sparks, "turn up their noses at the vice presidency when they lack a million miles of being in smelling distance of it."—Chicago Tribune.

You Can Get Allen's Foot-Ease FREE

Write to-day to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for a FREE sample of Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder to shake into your shoes. It cures tired, sweating, hot, swollen, aching feet. It makes new or tight shoes easy. A certain cure for Corns and Bunions. All Druggists and Shoe Stores sell it. 25c.

The per capita circulation of the United States is exceeded by only one other country of importance, and that is France.

Clear, white clothes are a sign that the housekeeper uses Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Canadians regard the settlers from the United States as the most desirable of all the immigrants coming into that country.

CASTORIA

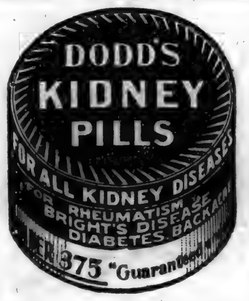
For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

A Rabbit and a Whistle.

Did you know that a short, sharp whistle from the mouth would stop a rabbit? It surely does. Next time you see little Molly Cottontail leap from her burrow and make off don't shoot; just whistle. Whether from fear or curiosity I cannot tell, but she will stop still in her tracks. An antelope has been known to do likewise. An African hunter once said that the elephant is the most timid of all animals and can be frightened into a cold sweat by a mysterious noise.—New York Press.



SO SHORT IS TIME.

So short the time, so much to do,
So frail this tenement of clay,
That some rude wind may shake the reed,
And scatter all life's seeds away.
How many resolutions made,
That fade like clouds in summer skies;
How many hopes so strong and brave,
That never to their summit rise?
How many steps to Calvary's height,
Fall backward from the mountain side,
When fright from shadow of the cross
Will quickly weaken our flesh and pride?
How many struggling wrecks we see,
A friendly hand we oft' can give;
How many sorrows, sins and shames,
In broken hearts that feign would live?
Be quick, the light is passing now;
Then gather up the flowers cast
Upon your path, where'er you turn,
For aye their sweetness will not last,
So brief the day, so long the night;
Thus, catch the sunshine while you may,
A word, a thought, a deed may make
Another happy, who can say?
The time is ripe, we live but now,
The hours go on swallow's wings;
Then do some good each minute here,
Tho' it should be but little things.
—Rixford J. Lincoln.

Lifted Shadows

No finer man than young Donald Carmicanel could have been found between Land's End and John o' Groats. He was what the Irish would have called "a broth av a bhoy," the Scotch, "a braw laddie;" the English, "a strapping young fellow."

Six feet three in his socks, broad in proportion, lithe and clean-limbed, straight as a lance, he went far to merit the description. And he was as handsome as he was big. His face was large and open, no single feature marring the harmony of the whole. Many a bonnie lassie's heart beat faster when Donald Carmichael went by.

But there was a shadow on young Donald's life, against which his gifts of face and physique went for naught.

He was a stammerer. His affliction was not of that mild form, commonly met with, which is capable of being controlled, and is accounted no great disadvantage. The malady had visited him in its most virulent form.

He was able to form a sentence only with the greatest difficulty, after repeated attempts. Even this was beyond him upon frequent occasions. The smallest experience outside the routine of his restricted life reduced him to absolute incoherence.

And Donald was shy, sensitive and proud. His disability spoiled his life. It made him a confirmed recluse, hating society, hugging solitude. And that is why we find him in this lonely lighthouse on the northeast coast of Scotland. That is why he had adopted a calling which appealed only to men such as old Tammas, who was predestined for the work, his father, grandfather and great-grandfather having been keepers before him.

To-night Donald was strangely restless. A peculiar mood was upon him; he was fanciful, imaginative, apprehensive. He had an uneasy sense of impending calamity. Anything might happen on a night like this!

What was that? A cry of distress, or only the shriek of the wind? Donald looked with straining eyes out into the brooding night. Surely that was a schooner? He seemed to descry it struggling through the storm, reeling and tottering, like a wounded elk with merciless dogs at its haunches.

Then a sudden impact of water driven by the fierce wind against the windows of the lighthouse made vision impossible. When the ensuing lull occurred nothing was visible on the face of the deep, so Donald concluded that the laboring schooner had been a figment of his imagination.

Toward dawn the storm abated in fury, and a more comfortable state of mind came to the watcher. He looked toward the distant horizon with the pall of cloud changed from black to a sullen gray, developing by imperceptible gradations into a fixed luminous purple. Then he extinguished the lights.

His eyes, roving once more over the limitless expanse of ocean, suddenly altered their direction and looked sheer down at the rugged rocks which constituted the base of the lighthouse.

What he saw there brought swift expression to his eyes—of alarm, astonishment, incredulity, startled awe. Prone on the rocks, a few bare inches' purchase from the lapping water, was a human form. Donald concentrated his vision, but was unable to tell whether it was man or woman, boy or girl; nor dared he hazard a guess whether the poor soul was alive or dead.

He quickly roused old Tammas, and together they descended to the rocks below. Both stood for a brief moment inactive, silently regarding the body which had escaped from the clutches of the sea.

'Twas a maiden in the first access of young womanhood—of some eighteen or nineteen summers may be. She was very beautiful to look upon.

Was that the pallid hue of death on her cheek? No; she still breathed. A half-sob escaped from Donald's throat—his heart was very tender.

"Puir bit lassie!" said Tammas. "Some puir mither will greet sair the nicht. Help me wi' her, Donal'. Puir bit lassie!"

Her waist was encircled by a life-belt—though insensible, she was still clasping it. They gently disengaged her fingers and bore her to the one bedroom of the tower. Donald tumbled the belongings of himself and Tammas to the storeroom below. For three long days they fought for the girl's life. No woman could have been more tender than were these two rough men. Strange emotions welled up in Donald's breast, and ere long the labor for him had become one of love.

With joy they watched the color stealing covertly into the face of their patient, and on the fourth day their work was completed. The crisis was past, the danger gone; the girl was saved.

It was 3 o'clock one boisterous afternoon when she opened her eyes and for the first time was able intelligently to appraise her surroundings. She looked around her, marveling greatly. Then she remembered the storm, the wreck, her struggle with the waves. So she had been rescued; by whose hands she did not know.

Then Donald came.

He stopped sort on the threshold. If the girl had been desirable before, what was she now, her face lighted up by beautiful eyes, smiles trembling on her lips, her whole self sweet and appealing.

Donald walked to the bedside. A torrent of words rushed to his lips. Then—he remembered his terrible affliction; he had forgotten it for the moment. The words were unuttered; his lips closed like a vise. Oh, she must not know—she must not know! He could not bear it. Heaven help him to keep his secret from her!

Intuition told the girl that Donald was her rescuer. She did not speak, but suddenly a rich red color flooded her cheeks, and with an impulsive gesture she seized his hand and pressed it to her lips.

He snatched his hand away and rushed from the room.

Presently old Tammas shambled in. Donald had sent him in to hear the girl's story and learn her behests. Tammas was with her half an hour or more. When he came out of the bedroom there was a look of perplexity on his face.

"Puir bit lassie!" he soliloquized. "I'll keep her secret, gin I can, bit I sair misdoot my abeelity. The limmer's got thochts o' Donald an' disna want him tae knaw. She na minds me knawin'—I dinna coont. But fine I'm o' the opeenion Donal' will no' be owre lang findin' oot the truth."

DONALD WAS STRANGELY RESTLESS.

Later in the afternoon, however, Tammas had food for further reflection.

"Weel, that cowes a'. Fust, I maun keep bit lassie's secret, an' noo I maun keep Donal's."

He scratched his pate in perplexity. Then a sudden thought struck him, causing him to chuckle long and loudly.

"Michty, they'll keep yin anither's secrets."

During ensuing days the lighthouse was a different place to Donald. The presence of the girl seemed to have shed a tranquil sweetness over everything. Even the storerooms and kitchen were different. There was an intangible atmosphere about them which awed him, and caused him to tread softly.

A new land was opening out before his gaze, beautiful and enchanting. A beckoning finger bade him enter it. But he held back; to him it was a forbidden land. Was he always to abide under the shadow of his hateful affliction?

Meanwhile, there was one thing about the girl which puzzled him sorely. This was her absolute avoidance of him. Albeit he had registered a vow always to keep at a distance from her, he had scarce thought that circumstances would so aptly fall in with his desires. He marveled often.

The girl, too, was puzzled, and many were the wistful glances which she cast in Donald's direction. She would not have him by her side, and yet—yet—why did he stay away!

* * * * * *

"Donal', Donal', the pains i' the sma' o' my back ha' a' gane awa', an' I ken we'll sune ha' a gey muckle o' bonnie weather. Mon, tak' this glass an' look it owre alang thae shore. The laddies are aye pittin' a boat oot to sea, or I'm a senner."

Donald clapped the glass to his eyes, and an involuntary groan escaped his lips. His worst fears were realized. He watched the advancing boat like one fascinated. Tammas stumbled down the stairs to put a few things together.

Suddenly Donald heard a footstep on the stair, lighter than that of Tammas, and, turning, he saw the girl, who now had made a place forever in his life and memory.

He looked at her hungrily, curiously conscious of every detail about her—her slim, supple figure, sweet face, gleaming eyes, and wealth of beautiful brown hair. Never had she appeared fairer, more desirable to him, than at this moment.

And the boat was coming which would bear her away. Henceforth their ways might lie widely apart. Perhance his eyes would never more behold her.

He could not bear the thought. In a moment he had forgotten everything save his great love. He was by the girl's side, holding both her hands, looking into her eyes (which held an expression he could not fathom), pouring forth his burning passion.

At length he paused, a choking sensation in his throat. The girl made no answer. Whence came that look in her eyes? He had seen it before in a seagull lying behind a boulder with a broken wing.

He looked at her, amazed. Then the pain in her eyes was blotted out by blinding tears. She drew from her bosom a scrap of paper and a pencil, and, hastily writing a few words, thrust the paper into Donald's hand.

He read in a haze:

"Poor Greta is deaf and dumb, and, alas! cannot understand your words."

A lump rose in Donald's throat. But soon a great joy surged over him. Underneath the simple message he inscribed these words: "Donald loves you!" and gave back the paper to the girl.

A burning blush leapt into her cheeks. She shyly raised her sweet eyes, and in their limpid depth Donald saw the light of heaven shining.

The shadow had lifted. A love had come to them both, requiring neither speech nor language to express it.

At this moment a shock of red hair appeared above the plane of the lighthouse floor. Old Tammas took in the situation, and shook his head sorrowfully.

"I'm no' wanted here," he said, and forthwith descended to the storeroom.
—Pearson's Weekly.

MAGIC MIRRORS.

Peculiar Effects in Some of the Polished Bronze Reflectors.

Now and then mirrors of a curious kind are seen in Europe. They are called "magic mirrors" and are of Japanese origin, made not of glass silvered, but of cast bronze, polished on the face and bearing on the back raised patterns, inscriptions, symbolical designs, crests or pictures. When exposed to a bright beam of light from the sun or from an electric lamp they reflect in the light from their polished face the image of the pattern on their backs.

This is a purely optical property and has of course nothing in common with the fortune telling magic crystals of the astrologer or the alleged magic mirrors of necromancy, yet it long puzzled the scientific optician and even now is little known or believed. The researches of various scientific men have established the fact that the phenomenon is due to very minute differences of curvature in the polished face, differences so minute that they do not affect the ordinary use of the mirror as a looking glass and that can be detected only by delicate optical tests.

The only remaining mystery has been as to how these delicate differences of curvature were produced in exact correspondensce to the pattern on the back. The makers themselves are often in ignorance of the magic property and do not know which of their mirrors possess it and which do not. The mirrors are cast in molds and afterward polished by hand, and it is held by scientific men that the difference of curvature is caused by the metal's yielding unequally under that pressure of the tools used in scraping and polishing, the thin parts naturally bending more than the thick. This accounts for the mirrors' becoming magic.—Chicago News.

PERUVIAN WOMEN'S HEADGEAR.

Lima's Beautiful Belles Have Acquired the Habit—The Manta.

As the visitors from the American fleet went about in Lima one change, national in character, impressed itself upon them immediately, says the New York Sun. Every writer on Peru has commented on the fact that the headdress of the women, worn universally, is the black manta. It is said that it is a relic that has come down from the Incas when they put on mourning for their great chief, Atahualpa. Rich and poor have worn that headdress on the street for centuries. It was an established institution.

Well, it is going. About one-half of the women, some of them in good circumstances evidently, wore mantas on the streets, but as for the rest—well, a man has no business to write about women's hats. All that this man can say is that he never saw more dazzling specimens of flower gardens than those bobbing around over the graceful drapery with which the Peruvian women adorn themselves.

Thus does fashion war successfully upon established custom. The Peruvian woman loves a beautiful hat just as much as any other woman on earth. Moreover, what is said about her surpassing beauty is true. Given great beauty and the love of a hat on the part of a woman—what chance has a black manta got? The manta has got to go and is going. Truly this is a world of change and there are those who will say it is one of decay, but let no one breathe that in a fashionable millinery shop in Lima.

When a lonely rich man reaches fifty, the people never look at him without wondering who will get his money.

Don't expect the preacher to "make good" for the entire congregation.

Legal Information

The United States Circuit Court for Ohio in Wall Paper Company v. Louis Voight & Sons Company, 148 Federal Reporter, 939, denies the right of the wall paper trust to recover from a wall paper dealer for goods bought by the dealer from various members of the wall paper combine.

Connecticut has a law giving any railroad company which, acting under authority of the laws of the State, shall have acquired more than three-fourths of the capital stock of any other railroad, and which cannot agree with the holders of the outstanding stock for the purchase of the same, the right to have such stock appraised and surrendered to it on payment of the appraised value. The validity of this statute is upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States in Offield v. New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, 27 Supreme Court Reporter, 72. As sustaining authority is cited the case of Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 116 U. S. 685, 17 Supreme Court Reporter, 718.

The distinction between the rights of a parent and a stranger to induce a wife to leave her husband is pointed out by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Mutter v. Knibbs, 79 Northeastern Reporter, 762. A stranger may disprove any intent on his part to cause a separation in advising a wife to leave her husband, and show that his advice was honestly given. But the rights of a parent are much greater. He may give his daughter such advice and bring such motives of persuasion to bear on her as he fairly and honestly considers to be called for by her best interests, and is not liable to the daughter's husband in damages for her desertion resulting therefrom unless he has been actuated by malice or ill will.

An ingenious marriage contract not to be performed until the death of the young lady's mother, presumably to avoid any disagreeable interference by the mother-in-law with the connubial bliss of the wedded pair, is revealed in the case of Bailey v. Brown, 88 Pacific Reporter, 518. Judge McLaughlin, of the California Court of Appeals, who filed a concurring opinion in the case, intimates that a breach of such contract did not constitute a cause of action. He asked the question, "How could a contract to marry exist when the promiser might never be under an obligation to marry the promisee, and vice versa?" and continued: "If this good mother should live to a very ripe old age, as mothers sometimes do, no human could tell what might happen. Either of the parties might be waiting for the other, harp in hand, beyond this vale of tears, or both might pine away and die before this promise of future connubial bliss could ripen into a cause of action enforceable in earthly courts."

WOMEN IN OFFICIAL LIFE.

Results of Elections in Bohemia and Norway—Swedish Policewomen.

The progress of women in official life in Europe is slow, but it cannot be doubted that progress is being made.

Within the last few weeks women appeared for the first time as candidates for election to the Bohemian Diet. It had been demonstrated as a logical proposition that if they fulfilled the other requirements their sex was no bar to their election.

So far their candidacy stands merely as a demonstration. Two women received votes of some importance. One, Marie Jumore, who ran in the district of Hopenmouth, had 144 votes, while the man who won had 592. In Prague the social democrats made a woman, Miss Macheva, their candidate. She polled about 20 per cent of the total vote.

The woman suffragists of Norway were disappointed at the outcome of the local election in Christiana. In all the other parts of the country they elected important delegations to the commercial councils. In the capital only five women were chosen in a total of eighty-four city councillors. There is an active agitation going on all over the country to bring the women—and men—voters of Christiana to a different frame of mind.

Of advances made where the suffrage was not involved, the appointment of three women policemen in Stockholm is an instance. The authorities have determined to experiment with them. They are to have salaries of 1,500 kronen, or about $390 a year, to begin with.

England also has just named her first woman school physician. She is Miss Sophy B. Jackson, M. D., and she has been appointed in the borough of Croydon.

Where Total Eclipses are Rare.

It is a fact well known to astronomers that the average number of total and partial eclipses in any one year is four; that the maximum is seven and the minimum two. Where only two occur they are always both of the sun. There are a great many more eclipses of the sun in the course of a year or a hundred years than there are of the moon. This fact, notwithstanding, however, London, the metropolis of the world, seems to be a place where such obstructions to the sun's light seldom occur.

The most natural man in a play is the villain.

A man usually deserves as much as he will stand.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna

Cleanses the System Effectually; Dispels Colds and Headaches due to Constipation; Acts naturally, acts truly as a Laxative.

Best for Men, Women and Children—Young and Old.

To get its Beneficial Effects Always buy the Genuine which has the full name of the Company

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

by whom it is manufactured, printed on the front of every package.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS, one size only, regular price 50¢ per bottle.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Texas Pan-Handle Farm Lands

Come to our Chicago Office and go with us on Special Train

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH

To examine our FARM LANDS, equal to any in CENTRAL STATES. Our Prices are so LOW and TERMS so very REASONABLE you will buy.

LOCATORS LAND COMPANY

646 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

DAISY FLY KILLER Placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies; neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Absolutely harmless; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. All dealers or sent prepaid for 25c. Harold Somers, 149 DeKalb ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO-NIGHT Cascarets BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP 10c 25c. 50c.

Handsome Picture of a Negro Angel; sixteen by twenty; a work of art; copyrighted. Sample by mail eighteen cents. Dashboard lineholder holds lines perfectly; secured in an instant; boon to everyone who drives a horse; Sample 25 cts. Egg separator separates the yellow from the white; does not break the yolk; Every household needs one; Sample 12 cents postpaid; Agents getting rich.
Southern Photograph & Novelty Co.,
Letohatchee, Ala.

Wanted Agents in every community to help us sell our Panhandle Texas lands which adjoin improved farms. Level, fertile, no stones, sand or alkali. Price $10 to $17 per acre. We operate farms and furnish tenants. Write for circular. Farmers' Colonization Company, 1215 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

WIDOWS' PENSIONS under NEW LAW obtained by JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C.

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 31—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

The government of Spain has just started in to foster its agricultural industry by sending touring lecturers over the country.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

JULY

0268
L 903

Special Attractive Features
OF THE
AUGUST CLEARANCE SALE
at the BIG FOUR STORE.

A continued list of good things that are to be offered at our sale in connection with the wonderful bargains already announced on another page.

TRUNKS and SUIT CASES.

An opportunity to buy one of these desirable articles for that trip this fall. Students going away to college—now is your time to buy a trunk or suit case.

34in wall trunk, a $9 00 value for only	$7.48
32in trunk, a $7 50 value for only	$6.00
30in trunk, a $6 50 value for	$5.48
28in trunk, a $5 00 value for	$3.98
24 and 26 in. suit cases, $2 00 values for	$1.29
26 in genuine leather suit case $6 00 value for	$4.98
Ladies Reed suit case $3 50 value for	$2.98

5 styles of suit cases to select from. BUY NOW.

Wash goods at 1-2 price.

ALL OUR WASH DRESS GOODS CONSISTING OF DIMITIES, BATISTES, LAWNS, AT JUST HALF PRICE. NOT A PIECE RESERVED.

Men's Elastic seam drilling drawers, the coolest, most sensible underdrawers made. You will never wear anything else when you try them. 50c. value for 43c.

Salt

The salt that is all salt and will not harden in the barrel.....$1.10 per bbl.
Rock Salt for stock.

Dress Goods.

One of the seasons best opportunities to buy a dress pattern at a low cost.

All our 50c. dress goods Sale price	43c
All our 75c. dress goods Sale price	67c
All our $1 00 dress goods Sale price	89c
All our $1 25 dress goods Sale price	98c

GROCERIES.

We never miss giving our customers more than full value for their money in our Grocery Department.

For this sale we are going to give you $2.00 worth for $1.00. Everything pure and fresh. Don't miss this.

21b. Gran. sugar	worth 12c	for	6c
1lb. good bulk coffee	20c	for	10c
4lb. best Jap rice	worth 40c	for	20c
2lb. lump starch	worth 10c	for	5c
1lb. can Bak. powder	30c	for	15c
½lb. best ground pepper	20c	for	10c
2 Bars Laundry soap	10c	for	5c
½lb. best Japan tea	30c	for	15c
1 Box tooth picks	worth 5c	for	3c
1 sack of salt	worth 5c	for	2c
1lb. corn starch	worth 10c	for	5c
3 nutmegs	worth 3c	for	1c
1 market basket	worth 5c	for	5c
		$2 00	$1 00

Remember this basket of groceries worth $2 00 will go at this sale for only $1 00.

WABASH CORNERS.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

Rev. Heininger spent Friday night at George Wade's.

Gene White, wife and three children, were Sunday guests of Will Lucas and wife.

Rev. Lilly, of Montpelier, Ohio, spent Saturday night with P. A. Shurtz and family.

Mrs. Hullie Rummell and children, spent part of last week with Will Lucas and wife.

Dan Knisley, wife and children, and Mrs. Bert Pierson of Scipio, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Rachel Knisley.

Little Waneta Pervines is on the sick list.

The White reunion will be held at the home of J. B. White, in St. Joe on Wednesday, Sept. 9th.

Mrs. John Sturgis, of Sturgis, Mich., and John Ulms and family, were Sunday guests at Emanuel Ulms.

Rodger Tryon returned to his home at this place Sunday evening, after a weeks visit with his mother at Newville.

Hazel, Lois, Hejen and Roscoe Stafford, of Garrett, Lizzie Pervines, of Auburn, and Neva Andress of St. Joe, were Sunday guests at Wm. Pervines'.

FAIRVIEW

Lawrence Brown was the guest of Harry Seibert Sunday.

Edward Bassetts' spent Sunday evening with Lankey Morrs'.

Mr. Colman, wife and grandaughter called on Ruben Kochs' Sunday.

Oma Coye returned home Friday from Helmer where she has been working.

Mrs. Frank May and son took Sunday dinner with her mother, Mrs. William Krise.

Mr. Oliver Markins, wife and daughters of Ft. Wayne and Maud Book of Garrett, were the guests of H. F. Houser a few days last week.

SPENCERVILLE
R. F. D. No. 1.

Mrs. Henry Walter is on the sick list with rheumatism. She has been afflicted for some time.

Charles Starr of Harlan, died the latter part of the week, of neuralgia of the heart. Funeral Monday.

Arthur Walter who had been attending school at Terre Haute and came home sick, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goldsmith of Hursh, went to Ft. Wayne, Saturday, to visit relatives, returning Sunday.

Mrs. Dwyer and children went to Streator, Ill. to visit relatives, some of whom are very sick. She will be gone several weeks.

Mrs. Emma Stump, wife of Rev. Adam Stump of York, Pa., visited relatives in this vicinity last week. Rev. Stump has been preaching in York for the past eighteen years.

The Misses Marguerite and Bertha Jenkins of Guthrie, Iowa, visited their aunt Mrs. Frank Horn, last week. They drove to Hicksville last Friday and visited in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hull.

4 %
INTEREST

Ask about it. A splendid Savings Proposition.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid
$50,000

Security to Depositors
$100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.
3 per cent Interest paid on Deposits, if left two months.
Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner David S. Ober
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher G. West

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Coburn's Corners

Harry Driver of Hall's Corners visited with Sam Hadsell and wife. Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Headley and Mrs. Elizabeth Gee of Newville spent Friday with Laney Gees'.

Steve McKinley and family of Georgetown were Sunday visitors at the home of J. M. Milliman.

W. F. Maxwell and wife took dinner with the latters parents, Daniel Oberholtzer and wife. Sunday.

Mrs. Effie Schoolmaster and two children of Fremont, Michigan, came last week and expect to spend a few weeks visiting relatives.

Rev. Brown will preach at the Corners next Lord Day. The morning services will at 11:00 a. m. and the evening services at 8:00 p. m.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

Bert Cole and wife, who have been at Thompsonville, Mich., came Saturday noon and expect to remain for sometime visiting relatives and friends

Mrs. Henry Funk, mother of Nick Funk, died at her nome east of the Corners, Tuesday morning. The funeral will be held Thursday forenoon at 10:00.

Irvin Hadsell was called home Saturday evening as it was thought Mrs. Hadsell was going to have the typhoid fever. The latest report indicates that her condition is much improved and that she will get along alright.

The Sunday School of this place will attend the picnic at Scipio, next Saturday.

H. A. Coburn and family took dinner with Mr. George Wade and family Sunday.

Mr. Barnhill and family of Paulding, Ohio spent Saturday and Sunday with Nicolas Funk and family.

W. F. Maxwell and son, Merritt were in Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee and daughter, Mildred were guests of Avery Zimmerman and family of near Butler Sunday. Miss Myrtal Zimmerman of Fostoria, Ohio accompanied them home for a few days visit.

Mrs. War Coburn of Ft. Wayne visited with Matie Gee a few days last week.

Miss Agnes Cunn of Evansville, Ill. arrived Tuesday for a weeks visit with her cousin, Pluma Hamilton

County Line News.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY's.

Buy our stationary,

Wm. Watson attended to business in Auburn Saturday.

Raleigh R. Wyatt and wife went to Auburn Saturday afternoon.

Solomon Goldsmith and wife were Auburn visitors Saturday.

W. T. Wyatt and wife attended the Concord picnic Saturday.

Quarterly meeting services at Rehobeth Saturday and Sunday were well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lige and Mrs. Dave Heitz and Mrs. Jim Armstrong, of Butler Center, attended quarterly meeting Sunday. The quartette took dinner with Enos French and family.

Miss Minnie Kester is assisting in the culinary department at the home of Clay Rinehold.

Mrs. John Weaver and Mrs. Music attended church at Rehobeth Sunday.

W. F. Wyatt and Sam Steward and wife took dinner with R. E. Chomey and wife Sunday.

C. Stuckey and family entertained a large number of friends and relatives Sunday. There were 50, more or less, present.

Albert Sanders was looking after his interests on the county line Sunday evening.

Theron Foltz returned from a two weeks visit with his sisters, Mrs. George Frederick and Mrs. Clyde Frederick, of Big Rapids, Mich.

Jacob Grim and family and Dan Gratz spent Sunday with William Watson.

Mrs. Clyde Frederick came back with her brother Theran from Big Rapids, Mich., for a short visit with her parents.

William Foltz and family spent Sunday with Sam Foltz and family.

Ezra Foltz and wife, of Auburn, spent Saturday and Sunday with the former's brother, Sam Foltz and family.

Rev. Boxell will preach his farewell sermon at Rehobeth Sunday morning, Aug. 9th.

Rev. Jackson, of Bern, preached at Rehobeth Sunday morning and evening.

Andy Sponhour, Ruby and Hobort Stivice spent Sunday afternoon with Grandpa Huffman and wife of St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Sponhour will attend the camp meeting at Hamilton, Aug. 4th to 16th. Others contemplate attending.

Marie and Lena Conner were on the sick list the past week.

R. U. Bowser and family spent Sunday with O. A. Conner and family.

The stork and Dr. Shook, of Spencerville, left a fine 8½ pound baby boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Rinehold last Friday noon. Mother and child doing fine. Father somewhat frustrated, but will recover in due time. Grand parents all show signs of broad, deep smiles and refuse to admit they are any older.

Rev. Boxell, Rev. J. Jackson, Miss Nellie Stafford and O. Bowers took dinner with E. J. Armstrong and family Sunday.

Ralph Furnish and family spent Sunday with Mr. Furnish's parents.

The St. Joe News will publish an extra large paper this week. Great preparations are being made.

E. Freeman and family spent Sunday with Lem Farver and family.

Inez Bishop of Auburn, is spending a few days with A. E. Sponhour and family.

Frank Simanton and wife returned to Auburn after a few weeks visit with the formers parents, Milton Simanton and wife.

Ruby and Hobart Stevice of Ft. Wayne are spending a few days with A. E. Sponhour and family.

Agnes Rinehold was on the sick list a few days the past week.

Vince Squlers lost a valuable two yr. old colt, last week, in rather an unusual manner, it seems the animal in some way got its fore foot in the low fork of an apple tree, breaking its leg and almost tearing it from the body. The colt had to be killed.

Clyde Maurer and Chas. H. Bartels are building fence on the old Maurer farm.

Mrs. John Koble is on the sick list.

Just Rceeived.

Car Load Wabash Portland Cement.
Consignment of Gasoline Vapor Stoves.

I Keep on Hands

Hydrated Ground Lime
Stoves and Ranges Cooking Utensils
Steel Goods of all kinds.

All Kinds of Roofing:

Best quality Red Cedar Shingles
Gravel Roofing Asbestos, Rubber, Felt and Galvanized Roofing.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT
Linseed, Automobile and Lubricating Oils. Gasoline, Etc.

GLASS, SASH AND DOORS.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

Mrs. Geo. McNutt and son Lemon spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Samuel Gage and family of Ashley.

C. W. Bartels and wife spent Sunday with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hustin of Garrett.

C. W. Bartels and family, C. H. Bartels and family, Clyde Maurer, Roy Nugen, John Weaver, Ada Weaver and Miss Music of Penn., spent Tuesday with P. P. Lochner and family.

Clare Wastler is working for Clay Rinehold.

R. U. Bowser and George Lloyd have purchased the S. H. Maurer Implement store at Spencerville, and will take possession in the near future.

Grace Sponhour, the 6 year old daughter of A. E. Sponhour, had her thumb on the left hand severely crushed last Friday morning. It seems that she with the other children were playing with an old Champion binder truck. They were taking play auto rides down a grade which leads to the barn. In some way the motorman ran the car too close to the corn crib and struck one of the posts on which it rests. Catching the little the little one's thumb between the car and the post. The thumb will be badly disfigured.

For a change why not go to KAGEY's and try a glass of Liquid Force.

Andrew Patterson and son, King of Hicksville were in town Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Patterson and daughter, Helen, returned Saturday, from their outing at Winona Lake.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY's.

Mae Openlander of Sherwood, Ohio came Saturday evening, remaining with her parents over Sunday and until Monday noon.

S. W. Tustison took the Monday noon train for Wawasee to spend a part of the week.

Sam White of Ft. Wayne spent Sunday with his father at this place.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. M. T. Bishop, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. C. A. Woodcox went to Garrett Saturday to stay for a week with her parents.

George Milliman and family spent Sunday at the home of his parents in Coburntown.

Mrs. Sturges came Saturday from her home in Sturges, Mich. to visit her brother, Harlow Ulm

Mr. William and Mrs. Ed Leighty attended the funeral of Charley Starr at Maysville, Monday afternoon

Mr and Mrs. Kirkpatrick of Ft. Wayne were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Price over Sunday, returning home Monday noon.

Mrs. S. W. Tustison and daughter, Margaret, left Monday noon for Tiffin Ohio, to visit with Rev. and Mrs. Johnson.

Wm Leighty and wife, Ed Leighty wife and daughter and Mrs. S. Openlander enjoyed a Sunday dinner at the country home of Mr. Mack Leighty.

Dale Walter who is employed in the Enterprise restaurant at Ft. Wayne spent a few days during the past week at home. He returned to his work Monday.

The Bluffton Banner states that M. E. Olds was overcome with the heat Tuesday afternoon of last week and was not able to be down town at his place of business. On Monday he ran from his store to his home that he might close the windows before a storm. He was very much heated and felt the result of the sprint next day. On his homeward trip Tuesday noon, the heat was intense and he grew ill being compelled to stop several times on the way. In the afternoon he was better but not able to be down town.

Harry Milliman
The Druggist

Handles a full and well selected line of
Drugs and Patent Medicines.

Rubber Goods
Special prices on Syringes, Atomizers, Douches, Sprays, Hot Water Bottles.

Toilet and Fancy Goods.

Large Assortment
Of Sponges, Chamois Skins, Trusses, Supporters and Shoulder Braces.

Confectionary and Perfumes.

Spectacles.

A large line of these has just been received and are now ready for sale. Come in and see them.
GOOD GOODS AT REASONABLE PRICES.

JULY

U269
L 903

Spencerville News

A Department of THE ST. JOE NEWS for Spencerville People.

Keep Clean.

Kirks Jap Rose Soap 10c per cake or 3 for..25c
Johnston's Palm Olive Soap 10c cake, 3 for..25c

We have a nice new assortment of

PERFUMES,
TOILET WATERS,
TALCUM POWDERS,
SOAPS, ETC.

AT

BOWMAN'S DRUG STORE

Local Briefs

A large line of shoes just received at ERICK & Co.

Josephine Carnes is visiting friends and relatives at Hicksville, Ohio, this week.

The Hart's Boy Band took dinner at the home of Hubert Shook, last Sunday.

James Value moved from Harlan to this place last week and is now occupying Ben Baltz's house.

George Kimes was taken seriously ill at his home Saturday night. Sunday his son Harry, was called to his bed side.

Maggie Gessinger of Hicksville, who has been visiting her aunt, went from here to Ft. Wayne to visit friends for a few days.

George Henderson attended the the races at Hicksville last week and as his substitute was sick his brother Will, of Auburn carried the mail.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennard of Ft. Wayne are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Martin Davis, this week. They are looking for a suitable place to locate, as they are tired of the noise and confusion of the city.

Little Pearl Rectenwall, who has been visiting her brother Clyde, returned to her home at Maumee, Ohio, Monday, Mrs. Clyde Rectenwall accompanied her, and will remain a few days to visit there and at Toledo, O.

Sarah Myres is visiting in Ft. Wayne, this week.

Frank Butler, wife and mother visited friends in St. Joe Sunday.

Mrs. May Sothern of Wabash, is the guest of Mrs. Porte Baker, this week.

Beams & Co., superintended the funeral of Mrs. Paller of near Maurer's church, Sunday.

Cornelia Coburn of Ft. Wayne, is visiting in the home of S. H. Maurer, this week.

Call and see our new line of dry goods. ERICK & Co.

Mrs. Ed Beams has returned home from her visit with her sister at Holgate, Ohio.

Deloss Steward who has been working for Guy Strong near Bear creek, has returned home.

Beams & Co. laid a new floor in their store building last week, which is a great improvement.

Mrs. Metcalf, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Paul Baster, is expected home the last of this week.

Mrs. Hallie Rummel and two daughters are visiting the formers sister, Mrs. Calvin Brown of Ft. Wayne, this week.

Remember we will open the clock at 5 p. m. next Saturday, on account of the picnic. ERICK & Co.

The Quarterly Meeting of the M. E. church will be held at Wesley Chapel next Saturday and Sunday. So there will be no preaching here at this place Sunday morning.

Raymond Roads has been on the sick list this week.

William Bertsfield from Pennsylvania is visiting friends and relatives here this week.

Don't forget the picnic at Henderson's grove Saturday. Come and have a good time.

We will pay 9c. a pound for old hens, 12c. per pound for chicks and 4½c. for old roosters this week. Special price. ERICK & Co.

It was reported that George Wilson had rebroken his limb but his many friends will be glad to know it was a mistake and the doctor thinks he can be up in two weeks

Will Erick has been making some improvements on his store property, such as, cementing the cellar, putting down a new well and remodeling the upstairs, getting it ready to move into this fall

The six year old daughter of James Value is very ill of Spinal Meningitis and Miss Nellie Snider of Hope hospital Ft. Wayne has been called to nurse her. Miss Snider will be remembered as the nurse who took care of L. W. Stewards family during their siege of typhoid fever a year ago.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

SPENCERVILLE
R. F. D. No. 1.

Ima Scholes of St. Joe, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. E. H. Horn.

Isaac Grill has sold sixty-one acres of his father's old farm to John Webb.

Mr. and Mrs Charley Krick moved back south of the Wise school house on the farm Willie Smith purchased of Anna Boger, a part of the old Getz farm.

E. L. Dilley and daughter, Mrs. Frank Horn, visited John Dilley and wife, last Wednesday. The Misses Margaret and Bertha Jenkins accompanied them.

James Campbell, who was a resident in Allen Co., for sixty years, died last Thursday at Ft. Wayne at his daughter's Mrs. Landis of 925 Saville St. He had been there for the past two years. He was a sufferer of dropsy. Aged 83 years.

A Good Time

For all at the Lutheran Sunday School Picnic, Saturday, August 8.

A large crowd is expected to enjoy the picnic at Spencerville next Saturday. The forenoon's program will consist of speeches and songs. There will be no literary program in the afternoon as the time will be taken up with various sports and amusements. Base ball will be a special feature This arrangement will give every one a good opportunity to visit their friends.

A big dinner will be served at noon and refreshments will be on the ground all through the day. F. R. Bowman, Erick & Co., and Beams & Co. desire to annouce that their stores will be closed from 11:30 to 2:00 Saturday, on account of the picnic. Everybody come.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and
Dandruff Cure.

Dealer in
EDISON PHONOGRAPHS,
RECORDS & SUPPLIES.

The phonograph is today recognized as a pleasing and useful instrument to have in any home. It speaks, sings, and plays music, imitating the human voice and musical instruments with perfect accuracy. Come in and hear it. The August records are now on sale.

A FULL LINE OF CIGARS.

FRED THOMAS
THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing
and
All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing
and
Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Surprised Wife.

Mrs. Frank Beams, who has been making an extended visit with her sister at Walkerville, Michigan, returned home last week. While she was away her husband set about to arrange a little surprise for her when she returned. He built an addition to the kitchen and made the place more convenient by piping the water into it. A cement walk was built in front and at the side of the dwelling. When Mrs. Beams returned she hardly knew her own home.

Improving Schoolhouses.

Trustee Provines is making necessary repairs on the schoolhouses of Concord township, getting them ready for use this September. All the rooms in the country districts are receiving a fresh coat of paper and at Coburn's Corners the school room has been reseated. At Spencerville all the rooms in the building will be calcimined and redecorated. Will Allen has the contract for doing this work.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

Child Injured.

Two weeks ago last Thursday Mrs. Drover and two children and little niece started for Streator, Ill. to visit her parents and other near relatives who are quite sick. A sister has cancer and a brother has tuberculosis. Her sister lives in Danville. After visiting her they came back to their old home at Streator where besides the parents a sister lives, she has a little son about the age of Mrs. Droyer's twelve year old son. The boys were up town and thought they would take a ride on a switch engine down to the coal yards. They did not wait untill the engine stopped but jumped and Artie Droyer fell and the engine struck his head. On Friday a telephone message was received that he was very bad. Mr. Drover took the noon train at St Joe Saturday, to go to his family.

Why James Lee Got Well

Everybody in Zanesville, O., knows Mrs. Mary Lee, of rural route 8. She writes: "My husband, James Lee, firmly believes he owes his life to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery. We tried it, and its use has restored him to perfect health." Dr. King's New Discovery is the King of throat and lung remedies. For coughs and colds it has no equal. The first dose gives relief. Try it. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Beams & Co.

It is our desire to give our customers good goods at right prices. Our stock of general merchandise comprises dry goods, groceries and shoes and represents as good a class of stock as is usually found.

Handsome Presents Given Away.

Just now we are giving valuable presents to our cash customers. A conpon is given with every cash purchase and when they amount to $25 you can exchange them for handsome and useful articles of table ware which are now on display in our store. Call and see these beautiful presents.

The Harvest Time

is proving to be a delightful one on account of the excellent crops. Our farmer friends have no hard times story to tell us and are now ready to spend money for the necessities of life. We want a fair chance with you and will always endeavor to treat you fairly and courteously. Come to Spencerville and call at our store.

Spencerville, Indiana.

JULY

0270

L 903

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Best Staple AND Fancy Groceries

By the best we mean everything that is good. When you buy from us—staple or fancy—you get the best. Whether you phone your order, send the children, or come personally, your order receives the same careful attention, and you get the best we have. There is some satisfaction in that—don't you think?

Fresh Fruits.

BANANAS
ORANGES
LEMONS
APPLES
CELERY
THIS WEEK

Baked Goods.

Wholesome foodstuffs in the bakery line. Try a loaf of the bread we make; superior in quality, delicious in lightness and palatable enough to make a meal on at any time.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Local News Items

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

Rozy Ulm went to Ft. Wayne, Monday, to remain a couple of days.

New air-tight tanks insure clean gasoline at Milliman's Drug Store.

Chas, Krise and mother of Fairview were guests in the home of J. C. Hull, Sunday.

Mrs Merritt Barney and daughter spent Monday with her parents in Hicksville.

Miss Beulah Koch of Albion Ind, spending a few days with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Koch.

A new cement walk was built in front of the Jacob Sechler residence on East Main St., last week. John Betz did the work.

Best quality of Gasoline at Milliman's Drug Store.

Athalia and Fannie Dill of Pierceton, Ind. are spending a week with their aunt, Mrs. C. R. Price

Frances and Catherine Skilling of Baltimore Md., are visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Christ Curie and other relatives here.

Mrs. Dolph who has been assisting to the care of her brother, Elmer Hart for the past two weeks returned to her home at South Bend, Tuesday.

Dale Widney who has been in the northwest during the past two years; returned home Saturday night.

The date of the stock sale which was announced to be held on the H. M. Widney farm, August 14th., has been postponed one week, until August 21st.

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davison. of No. 379 Gifford Ave., San Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy, for headache, biliousness and torpor of the bowels and liver is so pronounced that I am promted to say a word in its favor, for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

Political Announcements.

EDITOR NEWS:—

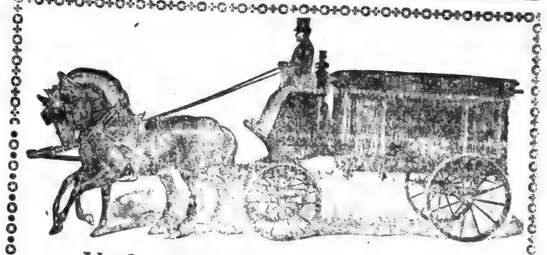
Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.



Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also urnish one elegant cab for Fall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable.

Beams & Baker.

Chas. F. Kagey

Restaurant & Grocery

THURSDAY

Hot Coffee and Lunch
Short Orders & Steak

Ice Cream
Sodas & Soft Drinks

Fresh Fruits, Celery, Vegetables, Olives.

Always welcome at Kagey's Restaurant

Local Items.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Mrs. Ralph Mason and two children of Chicago Junction, O., are here visiting with friends this week.

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S

J. W. Sherer accompanied a party of land seekers on an excursion from Ft. Wayne to Texas, leaving Tuesday. They will visit the Panhandle of Texas returning in about ten days

Chas. Eckhart of Auburn, has contributed more than one thousand dollars to the campaign fund of the Prohibition party and is the next largest contributor to the party fund in Indiana.

A number from this way attended the races at Hicksville, Thursday and Friday of last week. The racing events were good, as the entries included some first class horses and the weather was ideal for the best racing.

Miss Cornelia Coburn of Ft. Wayne, was in St. Joe, Monday. She is now taking an extended vacation from her work as dressmaker in the city and will spend the time visiting with relatives and friends at Spenceryille and Coburn's Corners

The ladies of the Lutheran church will serve dinner and supper in the basement of the church Thursday, August 6th A general invitation is extended to the public

Old papers at NEWS office.

George Milliman spent Sunday at Cold Springs, Hamilton Lake.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

Cel Bowen of Ft. Wayne, spent Sunday night with friends at this place, leaving early Monday morning on his regular commercial trip in the East.

George Milliman, News Agent has been awarded three cash prizes by The Curtis Publishing Company for window displays of The Ladies Home Journal

Clarence Widney of Oklahoma, a son of Chas. Widney, came Saturday and will spend a week visiting relatives at this place. It has been twenty-two years since he was here.

At the Quarterly Conference of the M. P. church, Chas. O. Krise was elected delegate to the next Annual Conference, which meets Aug. 19th near Kokomo, Ind. He will have to secure another pastor for the St. Joe circuit. Since the present pastor has positively refused to serve a charge next year. He wants at least one year without a charge.

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, of West Franklin Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

John Engle and wife were visitors in the home of John Sechler, Sunday.

Laf. Bailey and wife of Auburn, called on his parents, Sunday afternoon

Mrs. Barbara Simanton of Auburn after spending a few days at the lake came to this place Tuesday.

B. F. Walter, who has been selected to succeed Newton Perry as deputy rural route carrier made his first circuit Monday morning.

Mrs. Blanche Leighty accompanied by her cousins, Margaret and Bertha Jenkins from Guthrie Center, Iowa, leave this evening for Niagara Falls and will be gone until the end of the week.

FOR SALE—A business and residence property at a bargain. See S. S. Widney.

Madge Hart of Auburn, came Tuesday to visit a few days with relatives and friends.

Leatha and Mamie White daughters of Martin White, of Orland, Indiana, visited the fore part of the week with Mrs Gill and Ida Woodcox.

Roscoe Sechler and lady friend Miss Myrtle Boyl, of Butler and Wills Miller, of Adrian Mich. spent Sunday with Frank Kinsey and wife.

Someone who seems to need roasting ears has stolen about two bushels of Mr. Henry Abel's sweet corn. They also damaged many of the ears by opening them.

CLOSING OUT SALE ON DISHES.

You are aware that we have handled a fine line of dishes for a number of years, but we have decided to close out our stock and are bound to get rid of these dishes at startling reductions in prices.

From Now Until SATURDAY, AUGUST 15.

ALL FANCY AND CHINA DISHES AT ONE FOURTH OFF.
Our full line of Plain White Ironstone Chinaware at ONE-HALF Price.

This includes everything we have in this line; TUREENS, DEEP DISHES, BUTTER PLATES, SAUCERS, PICKLE DISHES, SUGAR BOWLS, ETC. COME EARLY AND GET YOUR CHOICE.

Sol Barney, GENERAL MERCHANDISE, DRY GOODS & GROCERIES.

0271
L 903

AUGUST

AUGUST

U272
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 5, 1908. NO. 32

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building. This roof is lightning proof.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,
Roofer & Tinner.

EXPENDITURES AND TAX LEVIES FOR THE YEAR 1908.

The Trustee of Concord Township, DeKalb County, proposes for the yearly expenditures and tax levies by the Advisory Board at its annual meeting, to be held at the schoolhouse of School District No. 10, on the 1st. day of September, 1908, commencing at one o'clock, P. M, the following estimates and amounts for said year:

1. Township expenditures, $1,500, and Township tax, 15 cents on the hundred dollars.
2. Local Tuition expenditures $3,300, and tax, 35 cents on the hundred dollars.
3. Special School Tax expenditures, $1,000, and tax, 10 cents on the hundred dollars.
4. Road Tax expenditures, $3,000, and tax, 30 cents on the hundred dollars.
5. Additional Road Tax expenditures, $1,000, and tax, 10 cents on the hundred dollars.
7. Poor expenditures for preceding year $142.84, and tax, 1 cent on the hundred dollars.

Total expenditures, $9,942.84, and total tax, 101 cents on the hundred dollars.

The taxables of the above named township are as follows:—

Total valuation of Lands and Improvements	$ 688 140
Total Valuation of Personal Property	198 730
Valuation of Rail Roads, Express Companies, Palace Car Companies, Telegraph Lines, Telephone Lines, etc, (Estimated from Last Year's Tax Duplicate.)	360 415
Total	$1247 285
Amount of Credit on account of Mortgage Exemption,	$ 3 550
Net Taxable Property of Township	$ 121 135

Number of Polls, 252

Signed, J. A. Provines,
Dated Aug. 1st. 1908 Trustee.

Chas. Bleeks of Goshen, spent a few days with his parents, Wm. Bleeks and family, at this place.

Already Accepted.

The superintendent of the Coburn Corners Sunday School informs us that he has invited twenty-three schools to attend the picnic August 15th. Out of this number thirteen have already reported. Ten have accepted the invitation and will be present, two have not yet decided and one has voted not to come. The following have accepted:—Wesley Chapel, Scipio, Newville U. B., Newville Christian, St. Joe Christian, St. Joe Methodist, Norris Chapel, Concord, Springfield Center, Coburn's Corners.

It is expected by the time the remaining schools have reported that the list will have increased to at least fifteen schools. This certainly indicates that there will be a large crowd in attendance.

Gold Medal Contest.

The News is responsible for an error in the Chastine Johnson advertisement last week. The date of the contest to be held in the M. P. Church at St. Joe is Saturday, August 15 instead of August 12.

Arm Broken.

Letha Kain, the ten year old daughter of Mr. Kain of Newville township, had both bones in her fore arm broken in jumping from a wagon, last Friday. Dr. Lake was called to dress the broken member and reports that the child is getting along nicely.

Receives Certificate.

Elza Kinsey who has been at Indianapolis at different periods during the last fourteen months taking instruction in embalming has received a certificate which makes him a liscensed embalmer. He took the examination in May, his grades being sufficient to give him this license to practice embalming under the laws of the state of Indiana.

314 West Second St. AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $8.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

Enjoyed Lecture.

A large and appreciative audience met at the Christian church, Sunday afternoon, to welcome Prof. Coburn of St. Louis, Mo. Who gave his lecture "Mothers Songs". He impressed his audience with the importance of the parental and home, training of the child especially in its young life before it is sent out under the influence of the public teacher. He said that the right kind of music and song had much to do with moulding and shaping the character of the child. He entertained his hearers with many beautiful lullabyes and songs such as are within the reach of every mother. He spoke of the effects of these songs on the child and upon their lives as they grow older, showing how that their early training would always follow them, touching their lives now and then. We cannot instill too much of the beautiful into the lives of the young. The most difficult, the most delicate and the most important training of the child consists in the development of higher emotions and feelings of the soul from which springs all that is purest and best in life. If the mother has the best interests of her child at heart she will have an open and attentive ear, a loving and sympathetic heart and an intelligent mind to perceive the needs of her little ones; to soothe, caress and supply. Prof. Coburn's lecture was full of high ideals for training of children and should be given the careful attention and study of all who are interested in children.

Mr. Coburn is well known among the people of this vicinity. At present he holds a position at the head of the music department of the St. Louis schools. This position is regarded as one of the best of its kind in the United States. His experience as instructor and supervisor of the musical education of children has been extended and he is able to give much valuable information as to the best songs for children to hear and sing at different periods in their growth. Mr. Coburn not only tells what the songs are but sings them to his audience as well, interpreting the psychological effect on the child's mind.

Wm. Jackson

Wm. Sherman Jackson was born July 29, 1869, in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Ind. On August 4th, 1894, he was married to Isadore Keller who preceeded him to the Spirit world on June 18th, 1896. Since that time he made his home with his mother, untill after her departure when he then made his home with his two brothers Charles and Hollis. Since the spring of 1907, he has been ailing and it was plain to be seen by close observers that he was rapidly hastening to the tomb; but he held out with a remarkable degree of persistency till on August 1st. 1908, at 9:30 A. M. he departed this life at the age of 39 years and 2 days. On the morning of his departure he assured his brother Charles that he was prepared to depart and be with Christ, so that we have good reasons to believe that the happy moment came, when after long and earnest prayers for his salvation he accepted Christ as his personal Savior. Father, mother, one brother and his companion preceeded him to the Spirit World. While his three brothers Charles, Hollis and Calvin B. are left to mourn his departure. The funeral was held Monday forenoon in the Methodist Church at St. Joe. The house was filled with friends and relatives. Rev. Heininger gave the funeral sermon. The interment was made in Riverside Cemetery. Beams and Baker, undertakers.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

Next Sunday at 10:00 a. m. is my last appointment at the Concord church. A full statement for the year will be made. Preaching at St. Joe at 7:30 p. m.

S. Heininger, Pastor.

Base Ball Thursday.

Next Thursday forenoon at ten oclock the center of the community's interest will be the St. Joe Base Ball Park. Here a battle royal will be waged between the fast team from Hicksville, Ohio and the local nine. The Ohio boys have been fortunate enough to secure one game from St. Joe by the close score of 3 to 2. Thursday, August 6, they will attempt to get the second one. If they do, it will be through some of the most spectacular playing that has ever been seen in these parts. St Joe does not intend to be beaten and means to give the Buckeyes a chance to play a third game to decide which is the better team.

No one, whether he be farmer friend or town supporter, should miss seeing this game. St. Joe has been playing good ball this season, winning all the games played with the exception of two. It costs money to run a ball team and the association is in need of funds. Now is the time to help when you are sure to see a fine exhibition of the popular game.

Those who live out of town should come in at 10 o'clock and see this game and remain for the Battalion program in the afternoon and evening. Take a whole day of recreation. The boys in blue will be interested in this modern day struggle, although balls will not fly so thick and fast nor blood flow so freely as on battle fields of other days. St. Joe people should turn out in large numbers and help the boys along. A hearty lot of "rooters" is desired to make the game interesting. Everybody talk about this game as it promises to be the base ball event of the season at St. Joe. Admission, 15 cts, ladies 10 cts. children 5 cts.

Quietly Married

Chas. Benjamin and Miss Jessie Wade were quietly married at the home of Rev. J. A. Brown Tuesday afternoon. They will leave for a trip in the East, spending a week visiting relatives and sight seeing. They expect to spend some time with Mr. Benjamin's father. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin are both highly respected young people, and the best wishes of their many friends go with them for a long and prosperous life.

Runaway Accident.

Earl Sowers and sister Ada, accompanied by Margie Parker met with a runaway accident near the home of Wilson Beaber in the Coburns Corners neighborhood Wednesday evening of last week. The horse was frightened at some object along the roadside and turned around upsetting the buggy and throwing out the occupants. The vehicle was dragged a considerable distance and almost demolished. None of the three young people were seriously hurt aside from bruises.

A Good Application

A small boy came into the house one afternoon and asked his mother if they could play store. "Yes, said the mother, but you must remember the baby is asleep. Play store if you like but play gently." "All right, mother, said the little fellow, we'll pretend we don't advertise."—Ex.

Successful Picnic.

The following is an account of the Concord S. S. Picnic which came in too late for last week's publication.

The Sunday School picnic at Concord was a success financially and socially. The proceeds amounted to $173.00. The attendance was large and the ladies furnished a fine warm dinner, for which they received $58.00. The School thanks all for their patronage and for the liberal donation for the dinner. About 1000 people were in the grove, and all seemed to enjoy a grand social time. The Coburn's Corners band were present to furnish music for the occasion. They make a fine appearance with their 17 instruments. They kept the woods ringing with music to cheer the audience. The hearer could think of nothing but pleasure.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Obituaries..

The following obituary is clipped from the Grand Rapids Daily News. Mrs. Kimes is a sister of P. A. Shurts and Mrs. Emma Woodcox of St. Joe and having been a resident of this township she will be remembered by many of the older citizens.

Mrs. Samantha Kimes.

Mrs. Samantha Kimes, aged 65 years widow of J. H. Kimes, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Cook, 221 North Lafayette street, Tuesday forenoon, July 28. Mrs. Kimes was thrown from a street car, striking on her back, while in Chicago at the time of the World's fair, 1893. This caused slow paralysis of the spine.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kimes were born near Ashland, Ohio, but in their early childhood their parents moved to Indiana, where the friendship and attachment of the young couple developed into wedlock. In 1866, with four little daughters, the youngest born while Mr. Kimes was away serving in the army under General Thomas, they moved into Michigan and made a home in Newaygo county. In 1881, to afford the children better school privileges, they moved to Ypsilanti and later to Ann Arbor, and in 1894 they moved to Grand Rapids. Besides four brothers and two sisters, Mrs. Kimes is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Early Cook of Cacnovia, Mrs. C. G. Bohnet of Bay City, Mrs. Harry Cook of Grand Rapids, and one son Byron C. Kimes, also of this city.

Services will be held at the residence of the daughter at 221 North Lafayette street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in the Valley City cemetery. The Rev. E. H. Barnes, pastor of the Lyon Street Church of Christ, will preach the sermon and Mr. Peter Quartel will sing.

Squires.

Leonard the son of Archie and Gertrude Squires, suffered a relapse of cholera infantum and died at their home, two miles north of St. Joe, Thursday August 30. The child was born May 10, 1906, and was 2 years, 2 months, 20 days of age. The services were held at the Spencerville Lutheran church, Saturday forenoon, Aug. 1st. Rev. Dressel officiating. Burial in the Spencerville cemetery. Elza Kinsey funeral director.

THURSDAY'S ATTRACTIONS.

Two more special events have been added to the list of attractions that have already been announced for Thursday at St. Joe. A subscription paper has been passed among the citizens and money raised sufficient to secure the Coburn Corners Band for the entire day. They will play in the forenoon for the ball game, give concerts during the day and one at night. The other attraction will be a second ball game in the afternoon at four o'clock between St. Joe and the Auburn teams. Admission, 5, 10, and 15 cents.

INSURANCE..

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO—

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are yo uinterested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

The Laurel Ranges.

SOMETHING NEW
AND SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Two Flue Construction.

Can use 6 lids without heating Reservoir or oven. Can use by heating the Reservoir only, or by heating the Reservoir and Oven.

Guaranteed to Save 1-3 Fuel.

COME IN AND LET US DEMONSTRATE THE STOVE TO YOU. ON EXHIBITION AT OUR STORE.

H. V. Kinsey & Son.

AUGUST

U273
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 AUGUST 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	•	•	•	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 5th. F. M. 11th. L. Q. 18th. N. M. 26th.

A DOUBLE MURDER

EMIL JABAS AND WIFE FOUND DEAD IN THEIR HOME.

SMALL BONES OF NECK BROKEN

Dead Many Hours Before Found—No Motive for the Crime and No Clue.

Evidence pointing almost conclusively to double murder, perpetrated perhaps in an attempt at robbery, developed in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Jabas, an aged and well-to-do couple whose lifeless bodies were found Tuesday evening in their home at 1221 East Lewis street, in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Coroner Kesler says that the post-mortem examination disclosed that the hyoid bone in the neck of both husband and wife had been fractured, indicating strangulation by the hands of unknown persons who seized the aged victims about the throat and choked them to death. The coroner is firmly of the opinion that the case is one of foul play, and the police are now at work upon this theory. If the officers have discovered any clue to the perpetrators of the crime they are keeping the fact carefully guarded. Dr. Kesler has also ordered an analysis of the contents of the stomach of both the husband and wife made by Dr. B. W. Rhamy.

Examination of the bodies at first did not disclose external marks of foul play, and there seemed to be no evidence of poisoning in the cases, while the theory that both husband and wife had been stricken by heart disease seemed equally untenable. When the coroner made an examination of the bodies at the Peltier undertaking rooms, however, his suspicions were at once aroused by the conditions present in the neck of Mr. Jabas, and a moment later similar conditions were observed in the neck of the wife. The region of the "Adam's apple" in each case seemed engorged and swollen slightly, and the structure of the neck at this point was much more movable than is usual in health.

Then came the sensational discovery that confirmed earlier suspicions. The hyoid bone, a delicate structure in the throat, was found to be fractured in each case, indicating that both the aged man and his wife had felt about the neck the fiendish clutch of a desperate hand that had choked out life in each case.

Despite the fact that force had been exercised sufficient to fracture the hyoid bone in each case, there were surprisingly few external marks upon the necks of the aged couple. In the case of Mrs. Jabas there were some traces of violence on the neck in marks which were beginning to discolor slightly when the surgeons took up their work, though they were not pronounced enough to be noticed without close examination.

Killed in Auto Accident.

G. Winthrop Sands, a step-son of W. K. Vanderbilt, was killed in a frightful automobile accident which occurred just outside the grounds of Mr. Vanderbilt's beautiful country seat, the Chateau St. Louis de Poissy, twenty miles from Paris, France. Mr. Sands was riding with the chauffeur when the automobile, which was spinning along at a very high speed, left the road and struck a tree with terrific force. The car was overturned, and Mr. Sands and the chauffeur were pinned under the wreckage. The gasoline tank at once caught fire.

Fire at Jeffersonville, Ohio.

A special from Jeffersonville, Ohio, says that fire, which started from an unknown cause in a vacant room in the business section for a time threatened the entire town. A block of six business buildings were burned. The loss was about $25,000.

Bank Teller Short.

There was a sensation in financial circles in Racine, Wis., when it became known that John Schulte, paying teller of the First National Bank, was short $15,000 in his accounts and had disappeared.

Instantly Killed by Train.

Ed Overlease, residing near Vandalia, Ill., was instantly killed by a freight train. He failed to hear the whistle, and the train was upon him before he saw it.

Two Children Die in Fire.

In a fire that destroyed the dwelling of James Jarasky, a short distance south of the city limits of Cleveland, Ohio, two children were burned to death.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

A CONDENSED RECORD OF THE EVENTS OF SEVEN DAYS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

MAN SLAIN BY LIGHTNING.

Wife Is Made Unconscious and Five Children Shocked.

George Burchard, 44 years old, a wealthy farmer of Orchard Place, Ill., was instantly killed, his wife, Ureine, 35 years old, was rendered unconscious, and their five children suffered shocks, at noon the other day when their home, a small two-story frame house, was struck by lightning during a local storm which covered only an area of about a mile. The storm was remarkable in that there was but one flash of lightning. The home was in the center of the area to which the disturbance was confined. Burchard was sitting in a chair with his back against the wall of the dining room, and his wife was sitting on a low stairway leading from the dining room to a summer kitchen. The children were playing on the floor of the dining room. The lightning struck a brick chimney and followed along a gilded molding of the wall against which the farmer was leaning. The bolt knocked Burchard to the floor, killing him instantly. Mrs. Burchard also was thrown to the floor, but the children suffered only a slight shock, despite the fact that they were sitting only a few feet from their father and mother.

DREAM OF DEATH TRUE.

Aged Man Drops Dead at Time Predicted Fifty Days Before.

Fifty days ago, while en route to Oakland City from Clinton, Ind., where he had been on a visit to his daughter, Chas. J. Whitten, one of the pioneers of Gibson county, said to his son: "Mother (his wife, who died several years ago) came after me last night. I asked her if she wanted me to go with her now, and she said she would come to take me in fifty days." The son tried to dissuade his father from placing any belief in his dream, but he refused to be shaken in the thought that he would die in fifty days. The fiftieth day after the dream Mr. Whitten fell dead at his home in Oakland City. He was on the street Saturday afternoon and talked with his acquaintances of the time he would die, the premonition of his death being strong. Death was due to heart failure. Mr. Whitten was 77 years old. He was one of the laborers who operated the first self-raking harvester in Gibson county.

STARVING IN FLOODED DISTRICT

People Along Red River in Louisiana Are Forced to Eat Raw Corn.

Alderman John Shattuck of Lake Charles, La., returned from a tour of the flooded district along the Red river and declared the conditions there are pitiable. Practically every vestige of anything with which to sustain life has been swept away and in numerous instances the people are facing starvation. Some of them, he declares, are forced to eat fodder, ears of raw corn, or anything they can pick up that will furnish the least nourishment. To add to the distress the sanitary conditions, owing to rotting vegetation, are serious.

EAST PELTED WITH PEACHES.

Delaware, Maryland and Georgia Have Record-Breaking Crop.

The East need not fear a lack of peaches this year. Delaware has started to send part of its record-breaking crop. According to estimates 3,500 cars will be required to move the crop. Fruit from the Maryland orchards is also arriving in New York in considerable quantities. Georgia's peach season is now at its height, and the more recent receipts have shown a great improvement in quality. The city is flooded with them, for they are not only in the shops, but are being sold from wagons, pushcarts and baskets.

DIVES FROM ST. LOUIS BRIDGE.

Swimming Instructor Plunges 100 Feet Into Mississippi River.

To prove an assertion he had made, C. W. Fisher, a St. Louis swimming instructor, successfully dived from the middle span of Eads bridge to the muddy waters of the Mississippi river, a distance of 100 feet.

Stock Increase Rumored.

The report that the Standard Oil Company is about to announce an increase of $500,000,000 in its capital stock was received with great interest in New York financial district. Similar rumors have been circulated several times in the past few years, particularly in the West, but generally they have been met with denials by the Standard Oil interests.

Shot for His Confession.

Walter Goodwin, a farmer who at the last term of the County Court in Hopkinsville, Ky., gave the names of seven men who with himself composed a "Night Rider" squadron at Center Furnace, was shot and wounded from ambush while returning home. Until recently he had been under the protection of the militia.

Platinum Price Slumps.

The price of platinum has taken a big decline, being now quoted at $20 an ounce, just half of the price of a year ago, the decline being attributed to the business depression and the consequent falling off in the demand by jewelers, dentists and manufacturers of electrical and photographic supplies.

Many Drown in Typhoon.

A typhoon struck Hongkong the other night, causing unusually high seas to run. A number of Chinese were drowned.

Robbed of $1,900 on Trolley.

After choking Joseph A. Vaughn, a bank runner, and robbing him of $1,900 on a Philadelphia trolley car, a man whose identity is unknown dashed through the car, and, leaping to the street, made his escape.

Island Hero to Retire.

Lieut. Russell J. Hazzard, who assisted Gen. Funston in capturing Aguinaldo and who caught the deserter who is supposed to have killed Gen. Lawton, has arrived in this country, seeking retirement because of broken health.

FOIL AN UPRISING IN PORTUGAL

Officers of Army Involved in Plot of Republicans Against Throne.

The Portuguese government, according to the newspapers of Lisbon, has discovered and frustrated a widespread republican plot for an uprising scheduled for the anniversary of the abortive revolt of July 28, which was suppressed by ex-Premier Franco. This announcement follows a large number of mysterious arrests made within a few weeks. Alfonso Costa and Bernardino Machado, the republican leaders, are among those under suspicion. They have not been taken into custody, but are kept under sharp police surveillance. Portuguese officials are reticent regarding the matter. Senhor Magro, the chief of police, will say nothing except that there was a conspiracy afoot and that many men are implicated, including officers of the army. El Mundo says the sergeants of the Sixteenth regiment are involved and that there has been a systematic propaganda among the other regiments quartered in Lisbon. The colonels of all the regiments located in the capital were summoned before the minister of war and informed by him that they would be held responsible for the loyalty of their men. Ball cartridges have been served out to the members of the municipal guard. The Diario Popular, the official organ of the government, says the authorities have taken the measures necessary for the suppression of any resolutionary outbreak.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MAN A COINER.

Superintendent Arrested in Arkansas on Charge of Counterfeiting.

Dr. L. W. Blanchard, a leader in social, political and religious affairs in Fayetteville, Ark., for fifteen yeas, and J. C. Wilcoxson were bound over to the federal grand jury on a charge of counterfeiting. At the hearing before United States Commissioner Nathan B. Williams Wilcoxson turned State's evidence and testified that Dr. Blanchard, although the superintendent of a large Sunday school, had been a counterfeiter for fifteen years. Wilcoxson says he became associated with Dr. Blanchard in making spurious money about five months ago, but never knowingly passed any of it. The men were arrested at Huntsville. Secret service men say that the counterfeiting plant is at Hilltop, in Boone county, equipped to turn out dimes, quarters, halves and dollars.

OKLAHOMA LAND IS OPENED.

Government Restriction Removed from Nine Million Acres.

July 26, at midnight, the law removing the government restrictions on 9,000,000 acres of Indian lands in eastern Oklahoma went into effect. Every one is striving to get the first chance at the property. The removal means that 9,000,000 of the 20,000,000 acres of Indian land in forty counties of eastern Oklahoma, which was formerly Indian territory, becomes salable. For a month agents of real estate companies have been rounding up the Indian and negro allottees. One buyer has been entertaining a number of Indians and negroes in Muskogee, providing them with everything they desired, the only conditions imposed being that they do not leave their rooms or allow any one to enter.

ODD FISHING FINE HOLDS.

Ex-Mayor and Policeman Appeal, but in Vain.

Former Mayor Edgar A. Weimer and former Police Sergeant L. D. Brandt, both of Lebanon, Pa., must pay fines of $75 and $50, respectively, for violation of the State fish laws, the Superior Court having dismissed their appeals from the judgment of Alderman L. A. Gerberich of Lebanon. James W. Criswell, chief of State wardens, charged Weimer and Brandt with placing an obstruction in a stream, thereby preventing the migration of fish. The suit arose over the removal of thousands of catfish from the waters of one of Lebanon city's supply dams on South mountains, on the occasion of the water being drawn from the dam, which was to be cleaned.

C. P. Shea Is Given Six Months.

Cornelius P. Shea, former international president of the teamsters' union, was sentenced to six months in the Boston house of correction for not supporting his wife and two children. He appealed from the sentence and was held in $500 for the Superior Court.

Two Girls Drown at Cleveland.

Rose Morgan, 23 years old, and Nellie Smith, 20 years old, were drowned off the west breakwater at Cleveland. Miss Morgan lost her balance, while the two were dangling their feet in the water, and in falling, drew Miss Smith into the lake with her.

Mills Reopen with Large Force.

The American Rolling Mills Company of Zanesville and Middleport, Ohio, started its local plant with a force of 200 men, working in eight hour shifts. Nearly 100 more men will be employed within a week. The plant has been closed since last November.

Naptha Explosion Kills One.

By an explosion of naphtha in the plant of the Northeastern Expanded Metal Company in Canton, Ohio, Aloise Krollevich, 36 years old, was burned to a crisp, and Michael Detmer and W. J. Doyle were badly burned.

Health Gone; Commits Suicide.

A general breakdown in health led Thomas L. Redton, former city attorney, to blow out his brains in Lead, S. D. He was 60 years old and a Civil War veteran. He came from Sheridan county, Nebraska, where he was formerly prosecuting attorney.

Quick Retrial Ordered.

President Roosevelt has directed the Attorney General immediately to take steps for the retrial of the Standard Oil case, declaring there is absolutely no question as to the guilt of the defendant company.

BOLT KILLS THREE SOLDIERS.

Pennsylvania Camp of Militiamen at Gettysburg Thrown Into Panic.

Three troopers killed, at least two score injured seriously and the entire camp thrown into the wildest panic are results of a terrific electrical storm which passed over the Pennsylvania National Guard encampment at Gettysburg. One bolt of lightning killed the guardsmen and was responsible for most of the injuries, although many were hurt by the blowing down of tents and the wild wind. It is feared a number of the injured can not survive. The body of one of the men killed was cut in twain by the lightning, while many were mutilated seriously. When the storm swept down upon the camp there were hundreds of visitors present. Scores of men and women sought shelter in the Young Men's Christian Association tent. This immense sheet of canvas was tossed like a toy balloon in a gale of wind, but strangely enough not one person is said to have been injured.

CEMETERY THIEF A DOG.

Flowers and Flags Taken Away While Detectives Watched.

The mystery that has surrounded the continuous thefts of flowers, bouquets and flags from famous Woodlawn cemetery, Boston, has been solved. For a month three detectives have been working on the series of thefts that have extended over a year. After working three weeks on unavailing clews, the detectives started a day and night guard over the cemetery. Their quest proved successful the other night when a black spaniel was seen to sneak over to a grave, grab a bunch of flowers in his mouth and run away. He came back in ten minutes and stole a flag from a veteran's grave. This time the dog was followed. He is owned by an Italian, who admitted that the dog had been bringing home things of this sort for a year, but the owner insisted he didn't know where they came from.

25 MEN DROWN IN ALPS TUNNEL

Drill Through Wall Separating Them from Subterranean River.

There was a frightful accident early the other morning in the Loetschberg tunnel, in the Barnese Alps, which resulted in the deaths of twenty-five workmen. The men were drilling inside the tunnel. Without warning their tools pierced the wall that separated them from a subterranean river or lake, the existence of which was not known. The wall gave way with a crash and a torrent of water and mud rushed into the tunnel and filled it. All of the workmen were drowned. They were Italians. Fortunately, owing to the early hour, only comparatively few men had entered the tunnel. The disaster occurred 2,400 yards from the northern entrance. It is believed that the men tapped the Kander river, which flows through the mountains above the tunnel.

ENGLISH PERIL FOR CASTRO.

Manager of Big British Companies Withdrawn from Venezuela.

A new peril threatens President Castro of Venezuela, this time from England, according to a report, said to emanate from reliable quarters. George Williams, manager of the English match and salt companies, has been withdrawn from Venezuela by order, apparently, of the British foreign office. This action is taken to indicate that Great Britain has determined to press the claims of her citizens against Venezuela, with a demand, first, for arbitration, and, later, by more forceful action if necessary.

WIRELESS MESSAGE 3,000 MILES.

Point Loma Station Establishes World's Record.

By picking up the flagship Connecticut of the battleship fleet nearly 3,000 miles away the Point Loma navy wireless station established a new world's record for long distance communication. The former record was made about a year ago when the Point Loma station got into communication with the flagship Connecticut, then off the coast of Cuba 2,600 miles away.

Farmers to Hold Crop.

That the farmers' union of Mississippi has decided to hold cotton off the market is proved by many indications, although the meetings are secret and the members give out nothing for publication that has not been censored.

Island Ruined by Flood.

Near Antioch, Cal., 200 feet of the San Joaquin river levee gave way and Jersey island, comprising 4,000 acres, including 300 acres of celery, was flooded. The property loss is estimated at $5,000,000.

Murder Mystery Solved.

The murder of a girl in a New York park and the slaying of a woman in New Jersey has been virtually solved, the first by confession of a policeman, the second by the admission of the victim's relative.

Three Die in Arkansas Wreck.

Three persons were killed and three others injured between Goodland and Hugo, when Frisco passenger train No. 6 was derailed. None of the passengers was hurt.

Only One Railway Magnate.

The elimination of George J. Gould from the railway magnates and the substitution of E. H. Harriman is believed by Wall street to be at hand, with the one-man domination of great systems.

Hisgen and Graves Named.

The Independence party in Chicago nominated Hisgen for President and Graves for Vice President. Mention of Bryan's name by a Kansas delegate caused a riot and the delegate was ejected from the hall.

Scope Tradmore to Apologize.

Dutch residents of Curacao, West Indies, enraged by the antagonistic attitude of President Castro, attacked the Venezuelan consulate and forced the slanderer of the island people to apologize in public.

ORDERS A RETRIAL OF STANDARD OIL CASE

President Directs Attorney General to Start Preparations at Once.

TO BAR TECHNICAL ESCAPE.

He Declares There Is No Question of Guilt or of Exceptional Gravity of the Offense.

President Roosevelt from Oyster Bay has announced in unmistakable terms the determination of the administration to proceed with the prosecution of the Standard Oil case, despite the decision adverse to the government handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The decision, the President thinks, in no way affects the merits of the case, and he makes known his decision to cause the action to be brought again before the courts in such shape, if possible, as to prevent technicalities interfering with a decision based upon the actual issues involved.

The statement in the matter, made public by Secretary Loeb, follows:

The President has directed the Attorney General immediately to take steps for the retrial of the Standard Oil case. The reversal of the decision of the lower court does not in any shape or way touch the merits of the case, except in so far as the size of the fine is concerned. There is absolutely no question of the guilt of of the defendants or of the exceptionally grave character of the offense.

The President would regard it as a gross miscarriage of justice if through any technicalities of any kind the defendant escaped the punishment which would have unquestionably been meted out to any weaker defendant who had been guilty of such offense. The President will do everything in his power to avert or prevent such miscarriage of justice. With this purpose in view the President has directed the Attorney General to bring into consultation Frank B. Kellogg in the matter and to do everything possible to bring the offenders to justice.

Grosscup's Answer to President.

Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago is one of the three judges constituting the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, sitting in Chicago, which delivered the judgment in the Standard Oil case. When shown the statement from Oyster Bay relative to the decision, he wrote the following:

There is no more reason why I should take notice of the comment of Mr. Roosevelt than I would of any private citizen, for the office that he fills and the office that the judges of the Court of Appeals fill are entirely independent, though coordinate, branches of the government.

The Santa Fe road is locating large numbers of German fruit growers along its line in Oklahoma.

Railroads can accept nothing but money in payment for transportation, according to a decision by Federal Judge Kohlsaat.

Railroads centering in Chicago are rapidly installing telephones to take the place of telegraph service in the operation of trains.

Charlemagne Tower, the retiring American ambassador to Germany, presented his letters of recall to the emperor at Potsdam, and David J. Hill arrived next day with credentials as the new ambassador.

The Canadian government has decided to confine the coastwise trade on the Pacific coast of Canada to British vessels hereafter, thus excluding a large number of American ships which have engaged in that trade.

Four Indians were killed and three captured in a battle between Mexican troops and Yaqui Indians in the Bacatate mountains. The troops in that vicinity are pursuing three separate bands of the Indians.

At Parma the Agrarian Labor League has proclaimed a general strike. On the 20th the attempt was made to close the shops and the troops were called out to drive the strikers back. The leaders of the league were arrested.

Wilbur Wright, the American aeronaut, has announced that his new machine will be ready within a month or six weeks for the trial in France. He will make one or two private trials before admitting the public to witness the tests.

A number of delegates from French chambers of commerce are at Warsaw, Russian Poland, to enter into direct relations with a syndicate of Polish merchants with the view of supplying French goods for the Russian goods now under boycott in Poland. The French visitors were received with enthusiasm.

All Europe has been laughing at the outcome of the long-controverted claim made by M. Lemoine of Paris that he had a formula for making diamonds. When the time came for Lemoine to make good his promise to produce a diamond, as demanded by the court on behalf of the man who had advanced money on the alleged secret, Lemoine did not appear. He had run away. Thereupon the judge made public the formula, which had been placed in his possession, which proved to be nothing more than already was known about the effects of the electric furnace upon particles of carbon.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

The Weekly Review of Chicago Trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

An extending use of money in investments and buoyant security markets reflects the better tone which now characterizes improving business conditions. Crop reports continue to be uniformly encouraging, and sustained profitable returns impart a more cheering outlook for the industries.

Further recovery is made clear by wider demands for finished products, additions to active capacity and hands employed. There is also a further sign of strength in the volume of payments through the banks, the daily average being now 9 per cent above that during June.

It is notable at this time that new demands in the leading productive lines come forward more freely, and there is a disposition to increase furnace and steel outputs, while there is also favorable consideration given to plans for heavy construction.

A large number of factories run closer to their capacity, especially in rails, wire, farm implements, furniture and footwear. Much building work is now hurried, and there are more mercantile structures and extensions contemplated, thus strengthening the demand for future consumption of lumber, quarry products, plumbing materials and structural iron.

The markets for the principal raw materials maintain the recently noted recuperation, and the improved absorption of supplies imparts a healthier tone to commitments.

Weather conditions proved exceptionally helpful in leading retail lines, and at no time hitherto have stocks of summer merchandise been so satisfactorily reduced.

Bank clearings, $218,318,636, are 5.1 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 35, against 30 last week and 29 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 8, against 10 last week and 3 in 1907.

NEW YORK.

Good crop reports, the advance of the season and growth in confidence as to the trade outlook are reflected in reports of moderate enlargement of future buying at a few large centers, notably in the West and Southwest. Industrial lines, too, have been benefited by evidences of revival in demand and the number of idle operatives has been reduced as a whole. Still the progress making is of a very conservative kind, curtailment of industry is still a marked feature and small orders for immediate shipment largely make up the volume of business doing by jobbers. Retail trade is fair as a whole, being stimulated by price reduction sales, though complaint of stocks not moving rapidly come from some cities, and collections show little if any improvement. Best reports come from the central West, Northwest and Southwest and the excellent outlook for the cotton crop makes for a better tone of advices from the South.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending July 23 number 263, against 258 last week, 155 in the like week of 1907, 171 in 1906, 197 in 1905, and 174 in 1904. Canadian failures for the same period number 24, against 27 last week and 24 in this week last year.—Bradstreet's Report.

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.85; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.65; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.65; wheat, No. 2, 90c to 91c; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, standard, 52c to 53c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 79c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $12.00; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 21c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 19c; potatoes, new, per bushel, 73c to 80c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.25; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $6.85; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 87c to 89c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 59c to 60c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.25; hogs, $4.00 to $6.72; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 89c to 91c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, No. 2, 52c to 54c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.25; hogs, $4.00 to $6.95; sheep, $3.00 to $3.75; wheat, No. 2, 90c to 91c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 59c to 60c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.40; hogs, $4.00 to $6.70; sheep, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 92c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 79c to 81c; oats, No. 3 white, 65c to 66c; rye, No. 2, 74c to 75c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.13 to $1.15; corn, No. 3, 77c to 81c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 81c to 82c; barley, No. 2, 69c to 70c; pork, mess, $15.25.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $7.00; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.00; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.50.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $7.10; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2 red, 98c to 99c; corn, No. 2, 82c to 83c; oats, natural white, 63c to 66c; butter, creamery, 20c to 23c; eggs, western, 18c to 21c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 90c to 91c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 77c to 79c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 57c to 58c; rye, No. 2, 73c to 74c; clover seed, $7.90.

Nome Clean-Up, $2,500,000.

The first report of the annual spring output of the Nome gold workings places the total at $2,500,000.

AUGUST

U 274
L 903

TAFT AT CINCINNATI VOICES HIS POLICIES

Republican Candidate Is Notified of Nomination at House of His Brother.

OHIO CITY OBSERVES GALA DAY.

In Speech of Acceptance Ohioan Declares He Would Continue Roosevelt Policies if Elected.

Cincinnati on Tuesday threw itself headlong into the work of helping Senator William Warner notify William Howard Taft that the Republican party had nominated him for the presidency of the United States. And, standing on a flag-draped platform in front of the old colonial portico of his brother's home, William H. Taft accepted the nomination. The quaint old residence of Charles P. Taft—once in the outlying residence section of the city, but now almost swallowed up by the big business buildings that have surrounded it—was the center of a demonstration unequaled in Cincinnati's history.

The nominee delivered a speech of acceptance in which he nailed the Roosevelt colors to his masthead and said that they were the main strength of the Republican party in the eyes of the people. He praised the standards set by President Roosevelt and followed this praise with an outline of what he thought a "Taft" administration should be.

"The chief function of the next administration, in my judgment," said Mr. Taft near the opening of his speech, "is distinct from and a progressive development of that which has been performed by President Roosevelt. The chief function of the next administration is to complete and perfect the machinery by which these new standards may be maintained and by which the lawbreakers may be promptly restrained and punished, but which shall operate with sufficient accuracy and dispatch to interfere with legitimate business as little as possible."

Points from Taft's Speech.

"The man who formulated the expression of the popular conscience was Theodore Roosevelt. He laid down the doctrine that rich violators of the law should be as amenable to restraint and punishment as the offender without wealth and influence."

"In this work Mr. Roosevelt has had the sympathy and support of the Republican party, and its chief hope of success must rest on the confidence the people have in the sincerity of the party's declaration in its platform that it intends to continue his policies."

"It is necessary to devise some means of classifying and insuring federal supervision of such corporations as have the power and temptation to effect restraints of interstate trade and monopolies."

"The combination of large capital in plants to manufacture goods with the greatest economy is just as necessary as the assembling of the parts of a machine to the manufacture of what formerly was made by hand. The government should not interfere with the one any more than the other."

"Unlawful trusts should be restrained with all the efficiency of injunctive process and the persons engaged in them should be punished with all the severity of criminal prosecution."

"The (Democratic) proposal to supervise the business of corporations in such a way as to fix the price of commodities and compel their sale at such price is as absurd and socialistic a plank as was ever inserted in a Democratic political platform."

"Our position is clear and unequivocal. We are anxious to prevent even an appearance of injustice to labor in issuing injunctions, not in the spirit of favoritism to any set of our fellow citizens, but in the interest of justice to all."

THE PEACH IS NOW KING.

This Year's Crop One of the Largest in Our History.

The peach is now the king of the fruit world and will continue an undisputed reign for the next three months,

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

when he will make way for the apple. All the Southern States are now shipping their peaches North in hitherto unheard-of quantities.

Georgia takes first rank as a peach-growing State. This great State has now 8,000,000 peach trees in bearing. The crop from these trees will aggregate more than 5,600 carloads. Perhaps no better idea may be conveyed as to the size of this year's chop than by comparing it with the crop of last year, that was considered a fair average crop, when the shipments aggregated only 1,600 cars, as against the 5,600 cars this year.

It is not alone by the stupendous size of the crop that the Georgia peach commands such attention this year, but also by its excellent quality. Not only has the weather been just right for their proper growth and ripening, but the trees are also free from disease.

North Jersey, which for so long held a front rank as a producing region for peaches, has lost its claim because of diseased trees. The South Jersey crop is always very uncertain, but this year is much better and bigger than the average.

Delaware has an unprecedentedly large crop. Not during the last twenty-five years has there been anything like it. The crop will reach over 2,000,000 baskets of eighteen quarts, or a little more than half bushel each. This would make about 3,000 carloads.

Sixty per cent of the crop will be sold at the orchards. For the first time in two years the Baltimore canneries have started up, and they are buying the peaches from the orchards of Delaware and Maryland in enormous quantities. They are making a specialty of buying them only where they may be shipped into the canneries by water, as the railroads are taking advantage of the opportunity and charging very high rates for such perishable freight as peaches.

Girls Healthier than Boys.

From the examination of children under the new child labor law in the District of Columbia since June 30, out of 1,600 children so tested as to their physical condition, at the age of 16 or less, it appears that 75 boys were rejected and only 2 girls. At the same time a census bureau bulletin shows that women and girls generally live healthier lives. But wherever the labor of women approximates to that of men, as in Italy and Ireland, the death rate of women rises. The death rate for both men and women is less per thousand than in 1890.

Another George Republic.

William R. George, founder of the famous boys' republic at Freeville, N. Y., and who recently organized similar institutions in various parts of the country, announces that the next location for one of the republics will be Pittsburg.

President Van Hise Honored.

President Charles R. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin has been selected by President Roosevelt as a member of the Committee of Conservation of Natural Resources.

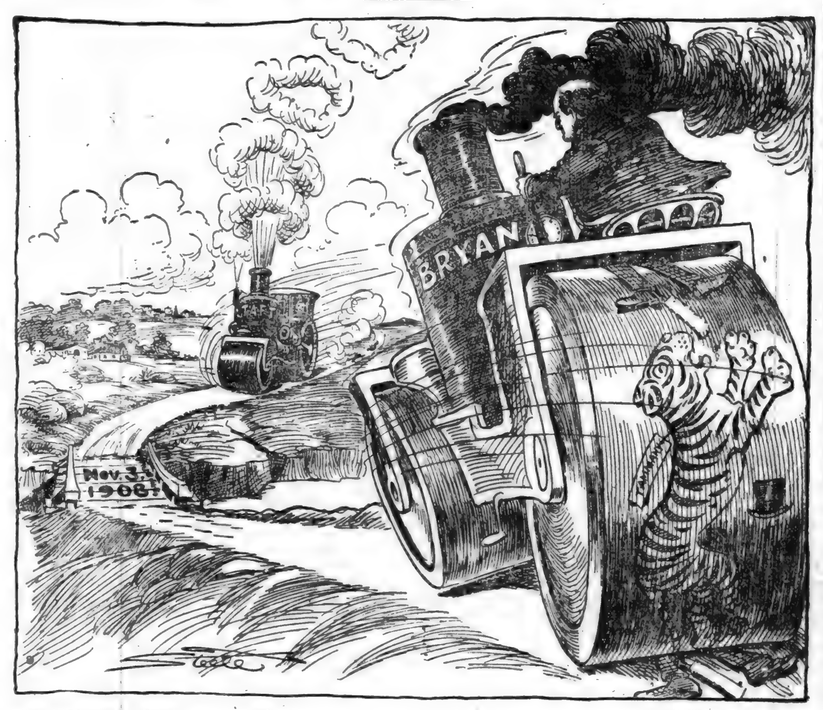
City to Aid of Babies.

During the recent terrific heat wave the mortality of babies rose frightfully in all the larger cities, and in Chicago the City Council appropriated $10,000 for the purpose of employing 100 doctors to disseminate information about the cause and prevention of intestinal diseases among infants.

W. K. Vanderbilt added another classic stake to his long list of victories when his bay colt, Seasick II., won the President of the Republic cup, valued at $20,000, at Maisons Lafitte. The race was at one mile, four and one-half furlongs.

The report of the special committee in favor of establishing compulsory trade

NOW FOR THE REAL "STEAM ROLLER" CAMPAIGN.



—Rocky Mountain News.

HOME OF CHARLES P. TAFT IN CINCINNATI.

schools in New York City has been adopted by the board. These will be in reality workshops where boys over 12 will have to take practical lessons in some trade. Chairman Coudert of the committee argued that such a course was a good thing for the boy, "whether his father is a semi-millionaire or a mechanic." He added: "There is a public sentiment in favor of this industrial training, and if you don't move with it it will move without you."

Signs of prosperity—dollar marks.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Frank Depew, of Auburn, broke his arm while cranking an automobile.

The city of Warsaw has $30,000 in the treasury and will reduce the tax levy.

LaGrange veterans of the G. A. R. are placing government headstones on all the unmarked soldiers' graves in LaGrange County.

Bonnie Kent, a little girl near Nappanee, was killed last week when a derrick contrivance used in stacking hay fell upon her.

A telegram has been received from Dr. Helen Knable, of the laboratory of the State chemist at Indianapolis, saying that the dog which recently bit seven or eight persons in Evansville, was suffering from rabies of the most pronounced type. Three of the victims will leave at once for the Pasteur Institute, Chicago.

Kittie Smith, of South Whitley, the girl without arms, intends to again enter Taylor University at Upland next year in order to equip herself as financial secretary of a commission that will attempt to raise sufficient funds to establish a home for crippled children. The buildings and grounds are to be located on the outskirts of Chicago.

The most sensible horse of record was found in Bloomington, when the family animal of Samuel Johnson became sick with colic, and of its own accord made its way to the veterinary eight blocks away. Dr. Sweesy heard a noise in his yard, and he found the Johnson horse reeling in pain. He treated the animal and sent it home.

John Lewis, farm laborer, near Owensville, in preparing to dose his "chiggers," used a sponge saturated with carbolic acid instead of the "chigger lotion, and he applied the acid with great vigor to his legs. Then he emitted a howl and broke for the watertrough in the barnyard, where he cooled the affected parts until other remedies could be applied to the burns.

Allen Brooker, 15 years old, an expert swimmer, while bathing in the Ohio river at Jeffersonville, was seized with cramps and drowned. Ollie Jenkins made an effort to save him and barely escaped with his own life. Chester Long, 14 years old, son of John Long, of Louisville, Ky., while visiting his grandfather in Jeffersonville, went swimming below the city and was drowned.

The Indiana University has constructed at the experimental station in Michigan City several concrete pools for the use of blind fish, which are found in the caves here. There are already a number of blind fish exposed to the light, and breeding in the light will be tried, to see if eyes will not develop. As the fish are brought from the underground waters there is no place for eyes.

John Richhart, of Warsaw, aged 65 years and blind from birth, has just received a prize of $350 from a magazine in a contest for new subscribers and sales of the publication. John Richhart has for several years supported his brother, Nelson Richhart, aged 75, and his sister, Susan Richhart, 73 years old, both blind from birth and residents of Warsaw, by selling the magazine.

When Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Stein, of Terre Haute, discovered a few minutes after they had been married, that friends were at the railway station to give them a "send-off," they got an automobile and went to Clinton, where they caught the train. Their friends discovered the move and took an interurban car, reaching Clinton ahead of the automobile. When the Stein party arrived, Mrs. Stein was so excited over seeing her friends that in alighting from the machine she fell into a mud puddle and was splattered with the dirty water. The train pulling in at that moment, she had a novel attire for a "going-away gown." Mr. Stein, in lifting her from the puddle, also got himself well daubed with mud.

Estimates of population, based on five persons to a family, were once regarded as reliable, but a census of the thirteen rural routes leading out from the Columbus postoffice shows that this kind of estimate will not do any more. On these thirteen routes 1,378 families live, with a total population of 5,303 people. This shows that the average family is composed of 3.8 persons. The largest families are found on route No. 5. The total population on this route is 410 and the total number of families is 84, making an average of 4.8 persons to the family. The smallest families are to be found on route No. 10, where 96 families, making a total of 329 persons, only shows an average of 3.4 persons to the family. This showing is regarded all the more remarkable in view of the fact that every family counted is that of a farmer, and farmers are generally supposed to have larger families than residents of cities and towns.

While the proprietor was sitting not more than ten feet away, a nervy thief entered the Tilman restaurant at Wabash, opened the safe door and got away with about $200. There is no clue.

John Shirrell, a mute, 71 years old, while hunting, stepped on the track of the Wabash railway near Covington, and he was struck by a train, losing his left leg below the knee, while his right foot was crushed. Both were amputated. He may recover.

Huntington wants the Government to erect a postoffice building in that city.

William Sabig, aged 55, a well-known citizen, died at Evansville of lockjaw caused by running a rusty nail into his foot.

John Linebach, a farmer, living near Island, while feeding a brood sow, was attacked by the brute and two of his fingers bitten and may have to be amputated.

Alexander Phillips, of Crystal, captured a rattlesnake fifteen years old, as shown by the rattles, one rattle for each year of life. He has the reptile on exhibition.

John Allcorn, farmer, sueing his neighbor, William Riley, for $2,000 for alienation of his wife's affections, was by a jury in Princeton awarded one cent. He will appeal.

Because a setting hen was due to come off the nest on the day set for the trial of Jane Guy, charged with assaulting Myrtle and Ella Cox at Pierceton, the case was postponed.

Ava Bush, 11-year-old son of Adolph Bush, of Shelbyville, ran a hoe handle down his throat while showing some boys how to walk on stilts and hold the handle between his teeth.

A large barn on the farm of Peter Henry Bottorff, farmer and preacher, eight miles east of Jeffersonville, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin. The loss is several hundred dollars.

The livery stables of Wolfenberger Bros., at Walkerton, burned recently and eight horses perished in the flames. A warehouse adjoining also burned, and the total loss is $5,000, with little insurance. The blaze is supposed to have been of incendiary origin.

Lloyd W. Wood, of Elkhart, known in Angola when a boy going to school at Silver Lake, in 1892, ran a piece of a lamp chimney into his right foot. Last week he went to Dr. Short, of Elkhart, who picked out a piece of glass as big as a half penny. He had carried the glass sixteen years.

A dog owned by John N. Beeson, a mile south of Columbia City, went mad recently and attacked Mrs. Beeson, who took refuge in the house. Later the vicious animal was killed by a Columbia City man who chanced to be driving past the home and heard Mrs. Beeson's cries for assistance.

Samuel Johnson, of Poe, is declared to be a deserter from the United States navy and officers are after him. Young Johnson, who was serving as an ordinary seaman on the gunboat Eagle, was granted a furlough which expired several weeks ago, and he did not return. He had served but one year of the four for which he enlisted.

Here is a State Board of Health joke: Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the board, received from William Harrison, coroner of Howard County, a statistical notice of the death of a Howard County resident. The blank form for such reports leaves space for comments. The following was the comment of the Howard County coroner: "Died without the aid of a physician."

The management of the Fairmount Fair Association will add an entirely unprecedented feature to the attractions of the fair this year. This will be a series of athletic events for amateurs, consisting of 100-yard and 200-yard dashes, 440-yard and 880-yard runs, high jump and pole vault. The events will be limited to residents of Grant County, who are not over 21 years old.

Col. William A. Oliphant, of Petersburg, has entered into a contract with the E. & T. H. railroad whereby the railroad will equip six hundred miles of its right-of-way with an indestructible fence post invented by Mr. Oliphant. The railroad has been conducting a test of the post for more than a year, and as a result has bought the right to manufacture the post from the inventor. The post has a concrete base on which is anchored, by means of an iron appliance, a wooden post treated with creosote. The new post is said to withstand the weather with no signs of deterioration.

Occupying a conspicuous place on a wall in the clothing store of Marcus Phillipson at Warsaw is a hand-painted sign by James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, and which sign is highly prized by the owner. The lettering was done in 1872, when Mr. Riley spent several weeks in Warsaw doing similar work. This particular sign was placed aside and for ten years reposed among the rubbish in the basement. At last it was found by Mr. Phillipson, who gave it a place on the wall of his store. Mr. Riley was in Warsaw about a year or so ago and stepping into the Phillipson store he noticed the sign and commented upon his work of other days.

James A. Isgrigg, one of the oldest lumber dealers in Indianapolis, died last week at his home on North Senate avenue. He was born near Cincinnati in 1830, and was in business in Indianapolis for many years.

J. K. McGregor, of Oakland City has a fig tree laden with fruit. The tree is five years old and until last winter was protected during the severe weather. Despite the exposure it bore fruit. The figs are as large and well developed as the Southern product.

ALL RUN DOWN.

Miss Della Stroebe, who had Completely Lost Her Health, Found Relief from Pe-ru-na at Once.

Read What She Says:

MISS DELLA STROEBE, 710 Richmond St., Appleton, Wis., writes: "For several years I was in a run-down condition, and I could find no relief from doctors and medicines. I could not enjoy my meals, and could not sleep at night. I had heavy, dark circles about the eyes.

"My friends were much alarmed. I was advised to give Peruna a trial, and to my joy I began to improve with the first bottle. After taking six bottles I felt completely cured. I cannot say too much for Peruna as a medicine for women in a run-down condition."

Pe-ru-na Did Wonders.

Mrs. Judge J. F. Boyer, 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., says that she became run down, could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit. Peruna did wonders for her, and she thanks Peruna for new life and strength.

They Won the Pool.

It was certainly reprehensible, though one can not but smile at the bold trick played one night by half a dozen men in Paris. These individuals rang at the door of a private house, and before the servant could announce their arrival the leader had donned an official scarf and introduced himself as a police commissioner, seized about $1,000 which was lying on the table as stakes in a game of poker, saying he would not trouble the host and his guests to call at the office that evening, but would be obliged if they would do so the next morning. The "commissioner," with his escort, politely departed. When the players dutifully called at the office the next day, their visit created visible surprise, and they learned, to their disgust, that this police commissioner of the night before had tricked them and their $1,000 had been carried off by a gang of thieves. So much for playing poker and having an uneasy conscience!—Boston Herald.

IT SEEMED INCURABLE.

Body Raw with Eczema—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless—Cuticura Remedies Cured Him.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous, and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hedge, Cambiewell Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."

How to Keep Water Cold.

"Having tried it, I recommend the following mode of keeping ice water for a long time a common pitcher," says a writer in Woman's Home Companion. "Place between two sheets of thick brown paper a layer of cotton batting about half an inch in thickness; fasten the ends of the paper and batting together, forming a circle, then sew or paste a crown over one end, making a box the shape of a stovepipe hat minus the rim. Place this over an ordinary pitcher filled with ice water, making it deep enough to rest on the table so as to exclude the air, and you will be astonished to see the length of time that the ice will keep and the water remain cold after all the ice has melted."

Red Cross Ball Blue

Should be in every home. Ask your grocer for it. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Squelching a Disturber.

"Aw, go chase yerse'f!" bellowed a sarcastic boy in the gallery.

Prof. McGoozle, who was delivering a scholarly lecture under the auspices of the Society of Social Uplifters on "The Flexibility of Our Mother Tongue," stopped short and glared at the youthful offender.

"Apart from the rudeness of the interruption," he said, in cold, cutting, distinct accents, "and its total irrelevancy to the matter under discussion, I wish to ask the thoughtless person who uttered that hasty and ill-considered exclamation how a normally constructed and homogeneous human being can possibly chase himself!"

Having thus completely crushed the presumptuous juvenile, Prof. McGoozle resumed his lecture with a perceptible note of triumph in his voice.

FITS St. Vitus' Dance and Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, LL., 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa

List of Microbes Grows.

The list of microbes continues to grow steadily. That of whooping cough must now be added to the list. Dr. H. Albrecht of the Wilhelm Hospital the other night spoke on the subject before the Vienna Medical Society, declaring that he had discovered the specific agent that caused the complaint. There had for some time been a suspicion that a kind of bacillus was at the bottom, but Dr. Albrecht felt himself able to assert that the whooping cough bacillus was identical with that of influenza. The doctor was able also to give a number of interesting details of his experiments and their results, which seem to be on parallel lines with work done by Drs. Bordet and Gengon of the Brussels Pasteur Institute.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

AUGUST

U275
L 903

Easy Confinement

If you have cause to fear the pains of childbirth, remember that they are due to weakness, or disease, of the womanly organs, and that healthy women do not suffer, like weak ones.

The specific, medicinal, vegetable ingredients, of which that famous, female medicine and womanly tonic

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

is composed, will build up the womanly organs to a healthy state and thus prevent needless suffering.

"Before my confinement," writes Mrs. Rose Schubarth, of Monument, Colo., "I had such bearing-down pains I didn't know what to do. Cardui quickly relieved me. Some months later I had a fine 12-lb. baby, was sick only thirty minutes, and did not even have a doctor."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 35

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:

THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No 11, Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 12:05p.m
No. 3, Western Express 8:06 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:21 p. m

The Old Proverb

That "It takes nine tailors to make a man" may possibly mean that it takes nine trials to find the right tailor.

You can save eight trials by coming here first. At this time in the year we can do considerably better by you than later. Not better in style, fabric, fit or finish—that's impossible—but better in price. For Example:—

Suits from $18.00 up.

Pants from $4.00 up

ED MAY,

TAILOR,

Butler, Ind.

PATENTS

and TRADE-MARKS promptly obtained in all countries, or no fee. We obtain PATENTS THAT PAY, advertise them thoroughly, at our expense, and help you to success.

Send model, photo or sketch for FREE report on patentability. 20 years' practice. SURPASSING REFERENCES. For free Guide Book on Profitable Patents write to 503-505 Seventh Street, WASHINGTON, D. C.

D. SWIFT & CO.

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Editorially.

One of the best and brightsetthings we can give, is kind words. They have well been likened to the bright flowers of earth's existence. Use them everywhere, but especially around the fireside; they will make a paradise out of a hovel. Nothing can heal a wounded heart, or cheer a crushed spirit like kind words. Let us not be so careful how we use them, for they are the greatest blessing earth can give.

The way to build up a community is for every person in it, who can, to put some money into industries that give the people employment, and push the industries to success. Industries that last all the year round are the best, but those that last part of the year are better than none. The most valuable power on earth is human power, and when it is not employed it is not only lost but it also consumes part of what others earn. Work creates wealth; work sets money in motion; work pays debts; work is the vital power in prosperity, and that city, that community, and that nation whose people are idle, are poor, and poor in proportion to the number that work and the time theywork. Heaven's greatest earthly blessing to any people is to give them honest, remunerative work.

Harvest Time.

A farmer friend in conversation with us remarked that crops were much better than the average this year and taking it all in all, as good as they ever were in this part of the country. We met him in the early morning as he was looking with satisfaction out over a twelve acre field dotted with numerous shocks of harvested oats. Over in one corner of this large field was a luxuriant growth of corn while in the opposite corner potatoes were ripening in the early morning sun. This farmer is pleased with his crops and happy in the harvest time. He ought to be happy. The harvested crop is the reward of the labor which the farmer has put forth and there is eminent satisfaction in feeling that this labor has been amply rewarded.

The successful farmer has much to contend with if he would succeed in getting at least fair returns for his work. In the spring there are the frost and ample showers which prevent the early planting and sowing of the fields. After the crop has begun to grow and struggles upward into the sunlight, many enemies set about to destroy or blight its growth. The weeds must be exterminated in order that they may not rob the soil of the nourishment which it contains for the growing plant; countless insects and worms ravage the tender plant, these must be guarded against and in many cases destroyed; drouths may come and the plant is blighted from a lack of moisture, or wet weather may so saturate the ground with water that the plant either drowns or decays. All these things the farmers has to contend with, and he must use every means to encourage the plant in order that it may mature for the harvest time.

That farmer who does his work most thoroughly and carefully is the one who has the most joy in the reaping. When the crop is harvested he is satisfied not only because the crop is good, but more because he knows his duty was performed in the planting and care of it. There are successful farmers and those who are not successful, but it is safe to say that the successful one is happy.

And now dear town and city friendf, what does this harvest time mean to you? It means that food supplies are going to be plenty; that the necessaries of life, meat, bread stuffs and canned goods can be secured in abundance and at more reasonable prices, On this account the harvest time should be a happy one for you. Yes, we are all glad that wheat, oats, barley and rye have been harvested in abundance, and pleased with the prospect for plenty of corn; fruit and potatoes. Surely we all have much for which to be thankful in this the glorious harvest time.

For Sore Feet

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasion," writes Mr. W. Stone, of East Portland, Maine. It is the proper thing too for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman drug store. 25c.

Attention Readers

This is the second issue of the St. Joe News to be put out by the new publishers. You will quickly notice that the paper has been enlarged from five to six columns and will continue to run in this way. This is only the first of many improvements toward making the News an up-to-date weekly newspaper.

The St. Joe News has enjoyed a liberal patronage and is in a prosperous condition. Its circulation however should be greatly increased as every family in Concord township ought to receive this paper weekly. Previous to this time one man has looked after the office, done all the work and edited the paper. Now there are two of us, each with different qualifications. The managerial duties have been divided and all is now ready to give the people of this community the best newspaper they have ever had.

What is needed now is the support of the people of the community. We are not begging for it since we do not need to beg. Your attention is being called to your home paper and what is being made of it. We have known the most of you all our lives and have every reason to believe that you are an appreciative people, therefore you will be willing to assist, in the promotion of anything that is for the good of the home interests. The sole mission of the News is to promote the social and industrial life of the home people. You ought then, to be interested and we are very confident of a hearty response to our efforts in your behalf.

If you are already a subscriber, can you not influence at least one of your friends to take the paper for the coming year? If you are not a subscriber we want you to be one. It is not necessary at this time to tell you all that we are aiming to do, but we want you to enjoy with us the progress which the News is certain to make.

The subscription price is the same as heretofore, $1.00 if paid in advance. We would be pleased to have you call at the office and enter your subscription but if you are unable to do so soon, your remittance by mail will be promtly cared for.

We have representatives in every neigborhood who look after correspondence and items. They will also take your subscription. The names of our correspondents are as follows: Spencerville, Jennie Stewart; Spencerville R. F. D. No. 1, Mrs. E. H. Horn; Spencerville R. F. D. No. 2, Fern Wearley; Newville, Jessie Headley; Coburn's Corners, (north) Roy Maxwell, (south) Edith Abel; Fairview, Ethel Houser; Concord, Mrs. Merritt Baker; Wabash Corners, Mrs. Angelia Wolff; County Line, Raleigh Wyatt.

All items of interest and suitable for publication should be handed to the representative in your locality.

Send us your subscription this week, to-day is the best time, in order that you may receive next week's issue.

School Revenues.

The following is the apportionment of the school revenues as made by auditor Shook for the local school corporations.

Concord Township—School children, 330; common school, $577.60; congressional, $969; local taxation, $1422.25; liquor license, $29.23. Total $2,038 77.

Newwille Township—School children, 171; common schools, $419.02; congressional85.92; local taxation, $355.86; liquor license, $15.15. Total $795.02

Jackson Township—School children, 375; common school, $320.85; congressional, $11.01; local taxation, $1,299 96; liquor license, $33.21. Total $1,665-03.

St. Joe—School children, 126; common school, $387.12; congressional, $370 local taxation, $523.29; liquor license, $11.16. Total $3925.27.

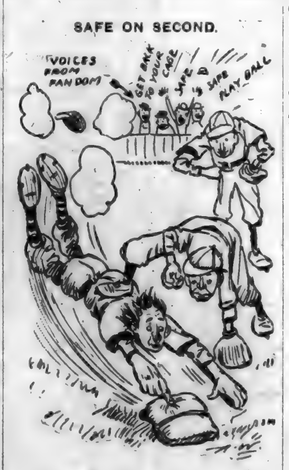
St. Joe Defeated.

The St. Joe ball team went to Hicksville Thursday forenoon in a crippled condition, being compelled to use some substitutes in place of the regulars. They were able however to make it interesting for the Ohio folks who played a nice clean game, excepting the "tenth man" who was bothered with poor eyesight or irrational judgment. The game was not a slow one, far from that it was a hot one. Old Sol was largely to blame for this however.

The score resulted 3 to 2 in favor of Hicksville. St. Joe secured their runs in the opening inning and did not succeed in scoring afterward. Hicksville scored once in the second inning and pushed two more runners across the home plate in the fourth. This ended the scoring on either side. Dean held down the center for Hix and pitched a very effective game. Hull did the twirling for St. Joe and Blackburn did the backstopping.

The Hicksville team comes to St. Joe, Thursday, August 6, and it is expected that there will be a warmly contested game at Athletic park. The game will be called at 10:00 A. M.

SAFE ON SECOND.



Barto stirring up the dust in the seventh

Mrs. Ed Leighty and Mrs. Wm. Leighty were at Auburn last Thursday.

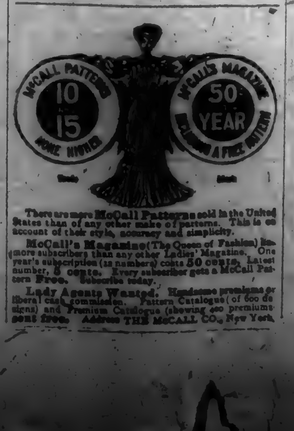
Ralph Cole and wife of Garrett visited over Sunday with Simeon Winetand and wife.

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefor leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work."
MRS. MAY SCOTT, English, Ind.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.
Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind



There are more McCall Patterns sold in the United States than of any other make of pattern. This is on account of their style, accuracy and simplicity.

McCall's Magazine (The Queen of Fashion) has more subscribers than any other Ladies' Magazine. One year's subscription (in numbers) costs 50 cents. Latest number, 5 cents. Every subscriber gets a McCall Pattern Free. Subscribe today.

Lady Agents Wanted. Handsome premiums or liberal cash commission. Pattern Catalogue (of 600 designs) and Premium Catalogue (showing 400 premiums) sent free. Address THE McCALL CO., New York.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1 to profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. To close out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES $4.80 A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 cash with order ($4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump. Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Teachers Association.

The annual De Kalb county Teachers Institute will be held in Auburn Aug. 24-28. The instructors engaged are all high class and the Institute promises to be one of the best ever held in the county. The names of the lecturers are Dr. A. B. Bun Van Ormer, of Ursinus college, Collegeville, Pa., who will have as his subject "Pedagogy," with its relating subjects; Prof. William E. Smyser, of Delaware, O., who will have charge of the work in literature. John Urey, one of the resident teachers will have charge of the music during the week.

Besides the regular daily workers who will be expected to entertain more or less in the evenings, it has been arranged whereby Fitch B. Cooper, impersonator, reader and musician, will be present on Wednesday evening that a rare treat in this line may be given the teachers, who will have become weary more or less by this time. Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley will deliver a lecture some time during the week, the subject to be announced later.

GENERAL ITEMS

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

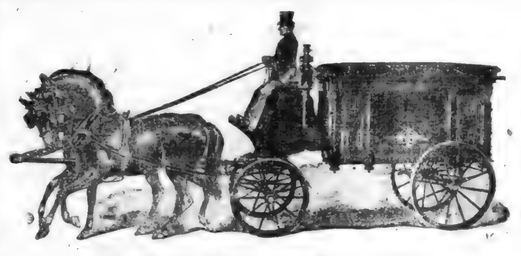
Fred Jenkins, son of county clerk Jenkins and well known in this locality has joined the United States Navy.

Auburn now has a new ball park located south of the Vandalia railroad. The old park will be plated and converted into building lots.

Prof. Roper who has been superintendent of the Waterloo schools for a number of years, moved to his new home in LaPorte county, Saturday.

The congregation of the Church of Christ at Garrett have engaged the services of Rev. O. L. Hull as pastor for at least two years more. The church is greatly satisfied with the work he has done.

The Independence Party or Hearst League held their convention at Chicago, last week, and nominated Thomas L. Hisgen for president and John Temple Graves for vice president. The latter candidate was a prominent speaker in one of our lecture courses at this place.



Undertaking a Specialty.

Eliza Kinsey takes charge of all funerals. Calls answered day or night Prices reasonable. Satisfaction guaranteed.

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

Phone No. Office 37-2, Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.

SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken.

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.

Exclusive Agent.

AUGUST

U276

L903

4 1908 CONTESTS AND RECITALS 4

BY STUDENTS OF CHASTINE JOHNSTON, ORIGINATOR AND DIRECTOR OF THE JOHNSTON SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

St. Joe M. P. Church, August 15. 3rd. Gold Medal Contest. Prizes in each grade

Auburn Coliseum SEPT. 12 $10 and Grade Prizes.

Butler M. E. Church, September 4.

Newville Christian Church, September 5. Engaged by church people for benefit of church.

ALL 8:15 P. M. STANDARD TIME. ADMISSION 25c.

Miss Jessie Headley, graduate '08, organ, St. Joe.

Miss Esther Hallabaugh, 07, piano.

Bessie D. Hart, gold medal '06, will participate.

Miss Gladys Smith, one of the most promising young soprano soloists in DeKalb County, and a feature last year; will appear in a short opera group and a new song by Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Johnston will open and close each program, using about four pieces in all.

Programs will all be materially different and of one and one-half to two hours' duration. All grades and many styles of music included, especially arranged to entertain and please all lovers of music; not merely a few.

Severest classical types are purposely avoided. There is an abundance of melodious, high grade music, even among works of Chopin, Beethoven, etc. Classical music is all right, if played right. The notes themselves are merely dots on paper. The player and rendition are everything. The notes right is not half right, a mere beginning. Touch, technique, expression, position, pedal, tempo, mannerisms, etc., are more than the notes; but neglected by many and is the reason their playing is not appreciated more.

Artistic finish and fine details is our aim. We consider a year only a reasonable time to prepare a piece for public performance. Real pianists, like Paderewski, Carreno, etc., take three to five years or more in preparing their solos. Not an ordinary student's recital by any means. Some pieces in preparation two years and only those who have memorized and perfected their pieces at least thirty days in advance are permitted to appear.

Doubters of the ultimate results of this method are especially asked to come and to investigate the historical facts mentioned. Proof is what counts.

Students can be teached after school begins who could not be accepted during the summer.

Mr. Johnston will play a new Organ Fantasia at St. Joe, and will repeat the "Holy City" Fantasia at Auburn and Butler, by request.

He does not pretend to do finished playing with about forty-five lessons per week.

At Auburn we will present, we believe, the youngest pianiste who ever appeared in public in DeKalb County.

We don't want your money unless you are completely satisfied. If not pleased, we want you to ask for it back and you will get it.

THE JOHNSTON SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

A new, original idea and so successful where understood that Mr. Johnston is compelled to refuse more than twenty-five students per year, for lack of time; has three active teachers as students this year, has several assistants, and has sent surplus students to no less than six different teachers.

Not a conservatory, though one may be organized later, but a system of musical education, equal a conservatory, at home. No catch penny scheme, no tricks; strict business, high ideals, strict requirements. We believe many misunderstand us and our intentions, but hope none will be so unjust as to condemn our methods and work until they hear us and do understand.

We want you to come, see, hear, investigate and ask questions; the more the better.

We expect it will be several years before our work will be rightly understood. But we are here to stay and educated people who want the best are the ones we wish to interest.

Mr. Johnston's charges for lessons are more than double that of any competitor in his home territory and he has been offered more than he asks to take some students, refused for lack of time. Some engage him as much as two years in advance. Some refuse all others and do not take lessons because they cannot get him, waiting for an opening. Some refuse several teachers at their own home and drive six to eight miles for lessons. Some present students have attended city conservatories 25 to 100 miles from home. Names and full proof of any of the above points on request. Merely an indication of what those people think of the work where they do understand it.

THERE IS A REASON.

It can be seen and heard in these contest recitals.

Pianists desiring advanced instruction especially urged to attend and compare them with any.

By an entirely new system of teaching beginners to read music, invented by Mr. Johnston and used only by himself and assistants, both cleffs are introduced at the first lesson and are read equally easy from the first. A piece is given the first or second lesson, both cleffs, and is usually played and understood at the sixth lesson. A term or more is required by the usual method of teaching by letter.

We teach notes and reading first; letters later. Just as possible as wireless telegraphy or automobiles when understood.

Some people will neither believe nor investigate. If you don't believe it, ask for proof, we will be glad to give all you want. If you don't give us a chance to prove it, we can't help it if you refuse to believe it.

We have been able to make good players of students given up as failures by several teachers and the parents—First prize winners in their grades. Ask for names and proof.

Students on these programs are not an exceptional or picked class, but what similar training will do with any average class.

There is much talent in DeKalb County. All it needs is training to produce artists. Maybe you are one.

TEACHERS.

We have no animosity toward any teacher and desire acquaintance.

We never did and never will belittle any teacher or their work and only ask the same in return.

We do not believe in personal soliciting and it is nothing less than downright stealing to attempt to get students away from any other teacher.

We believe in advertising, giving people a chance to see and hear our work and then if it is not good enough to make them want the same we want to make it so.

Having to refuse an average of more than twenty-five students per year is conclusive proof to us that soliciting is not necessary. We make no personal calls except on request and only in Auburn, as we intend to make Auburn our home and business center in years to come.

Auburn students and those who come there for lessons will be given preference.

Parts of unsolicited newspaper notices. We wish to deserve what we get or we don't want them.

ST. JOE NEWS.

The Gold Medal Contest given by Chastine Johnston in the M. P. Church Saturday evening was largely attended and standing room was at a premium. The entertainment began promptly at 8 o'clock and was listened to attentively from start to finish. The manner in which the students acquitted themselves reflects credit to Mr. Johnston. Etc.

ANOTHER.

The pupils acquitted themselves in fine manner. Miss Esther Hallabaugh, the first graduate of the Johnston School of Music, was the winner of the Gold Medal. The solo by Miss Smith was a composition by Mr. Johnston, both words and music. Finger Puzzles on the organ by Mr. Johnston was excellent, as was also his playing on the piano. He makes a practice of memorizing. His pupils are required to memorize and they show by their playing that it is a good thing for them. Well may Mr. Johnston be proud of his class, as even the youngest pupils show remarkable progress. With this year he has organized what will be known as the Johnston School of Music with a regular graded conservatory course and when a pupil passes through these grades he receives a diploma.

AUBURN COURIER.

Music lovers had an opportunity of hearing an excellent musical program at the Coliseum Friday evening, when the students of Chastine Johnston competed in a prize contest. The program covered a wide range of selections, from the slow dreamy waltz to the rapid scales and arpeggios of Wenzel (Pessard) to the trills and mordents of Chopin. Mr. Johnston appeared on the program in the last group and handled the instrument like a master. There is no doubt as to the professor's ability as a composer and teacher, etc.

Numbers by Chastine Johnston and Esther Hallabaugh demonstrated the fact that there is no necessity to go to large musical centers for artists, etc.

COLISEUM PACKED.

With sweet strains of music at Johnston's musical contest Friday night.

The musical contest given by Chastine Johnston at the Coliseum Friday night was well attended but not so well as it deserved. As is always the experience Friday night is not the best for any entertainment. The program was unique inasmuch as it presented such a variety of grades. From the beginner grade one to the most classical, that is the story in short.

The program was opened by Mr. Johnston with Prelude in C sharp minor. (Rachmanioff.) He also played four very difficult classical selections at the close. His performance was heartily applauded. He is master of the piano and is recognized as being one of the most skillful executants of classical music our city has had. His class is fortunate in having such a scholared teacher.

The only deviation from solo work on the piano was a vocal solo by Miss Gladys Smith, of Newville, entitled "Remembrance." This solo was rendered by her at St. Joe a week earlier without the author's identity being known. It made a hit. The author was the class teacher, Mr. Johnston. Miss Smith has a voice full of promise. Three numbers on the program were written by Mr. Johnston. Many complimentary remarks are heard about this musical event. It was a success, etc.

BUTLER RECORD.

Chastine Johnston, of St. Joe, who gave a musical recital at the Christian Church at Butler recently, and whose students showed remarkable training, has an advertisement in the St. Joe News that has the right kind of principle in it. He says: Satisfactory progress or quit is my motto. There is no use wasting time and money if students will not work. I like to help earnest students and those who work will be rewarded in unexpected ways in addition to contest prizes, etc. I want to do all I can and would rather teach an earnest student for nothing than a lazy one at any price.

FORT WAYNE JOURNAL-GAZETTE.

RECITAL A GRAND SUCCESS.

Chastine Johnston's Students' Recital at Auburn Well Attended and Fine Program Rendered.

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 7.—The students' recital of Chastine Johnston's students was held at the Coliseum last night and in point of attendance and excellence of program was a grand success, etc.

The closing group by Mr. Johnston himself proved him master of the piano and especially pleasing was his rendition of "The Holy City."

BUTLER, DEKALB COUNTY, HERALD.

LAST RECITAL OF 1907—AN ELEGANT TREAT.

Prof. Chastine Johnston, of St. Joe, Ind., has the thanks of the music loving people of Butler for the wonderful program rendered at the Christian Church last Saturday evening. The program, consisting of popular music and many of the most classical selections written for piano, was rendered in faultless style, beautiful expression and artistic execution characterizing the numbers throughout. Some of Prof. Johnston's pupils were so small that piano playing seemed to be out of the question, but owing to the splendid training they had received they were equal to the occasion, and afforded the large audience a rich conception of musical talent developed under a master hand. Prof. Johnston is himself a fine performer on the piano. With no vain affectations, he gives a grand interpretation of the masters and come up fully to the expectations of a critical people. His work has proven eminently satisfactory to his large classes and his concerts always draw more largely after their first introduction. We would be pleased to have him visit Butler again in the near future, and we have no doubt that his efforts would be more fully appreciated and his reward more commensurate with the high talent employed.

SOME PRIVATE OPINIONS NOT EXPECTED.

I learned more than I ever did in a term of lessons.—A Student.

It was the grandest thing I ever heard—A Music Teacher.

The "Holy City" Fantasia was the finest piece of music I ever heard.—A Graduate of Valparaiso Conservatory.

I have attended several college music school commencements and never heard anything to compare with it.—A High School Principal.

I never heard such playing. I didn't believe it possible to attain such perfection.—A Newspaper Reporter.

We were all surprised and we will be surprised if the house is not packed if you have another contest.—An Auburn Newspaper Reporter.

Names not published, but any or all will be given anyone on request.

Last year one man came from Fort Wayne and four from Bryan, Ohio, to attend the Butler Recital, having heard Mr. Johnston previously and knowing about what to expect. Some came more than twenty miles to St. Joe and Auburn and one made this remark, after a two-hour program: "I could have listened all night. I never heard anything like it."

We aim to give a program that will make you want to come again, whatever the distance.

We give exactly what we advertise, sometimes more, never less.

PROGRAM NOTES.

An innovation will be instituted this year in the form of program notes giving the key, number of pages and principle points of each piece, so that those not familiar with the pieces can know about what to expect and we hope thereby enjoy the rendition more. We have often wished for some such notes.

OBJECT OF CONTESTS.

The proceeds goes to a fund to provide prizes for students—not to private use.

FOR STUDENTS.

They give unequaled training in the fine points of preparation for public playing, experience in playing under trying conditions, the goal of the average student's ambition and so hard to obtain, incentive to study and practice beyond valuation in mere dollars and cents, reward for good work and a spirit of rivalry that brings out the best in anyone.

FOR PARENTS.

A chance to know what their own and other children can do and compare results, without which no one can justly judge progress. Age should always be considered. It is not reasonable to expect a child of twelve to learn as rapidly or play with the judgment of fifteen years in the same grade.

No parent can do anything that will help, encourage and stimulate their children to study and practice like taking them to hear or having them take part in students' recitals or contests. Not merely ours, but others as well.

We believe many do not imagine the good it does or will do. They are worth more than ten times the cost or ten times the same amount spent for lessons.

FOR ALL STUDENTS AND FRIENDS.

A chance to hear the playing of other teachers and their students.

There is always something good to be learned, even from players of equal or less ability than their own.

We urge our students to attend every other teacher's recitals they can, if they have to go ten miles.

We will go that far anytime and consider the time well spent.

We wish more teachers would give more recitals. They are a great good.

All students learn more by imitation from hearing others than all other was combined, usually unconsciously. It is a fact. Did you ever think of it?

Musical progress is governed, the same as our conversation, by our surroundings. What we hear and more than many are willing to admit. Few indeed are they who are original and a low ideal or poor model produces like results. Few indeed are they who raise above their surroundings.

These Contests and Recitals are not an experiment. They are a constantly increasing success of no small proportions, planned years ahead and prepared like a program of professionals.

We intend to make them the finest series of concerts ever given in this part of the State, the equal of which cannot be heard outside the large cities, better each year and each one as perfect as years of preparation can make them.

To our knowledge no person has ever gone away from one dissatisfied or even half satisfied; but completely satisfied and pleased. Glad they came.

A SOLO FOR THE LEFT HAND ALONE.

We do not believe a solo for the left hand alone, has ever been played in public in DeKalb County, though they are used by several noted pianists.

The possibilities of left hand development are hard to believe until seen and heard and then many can hardly credit their own eyes and ears.

Scales, arpeggios, octaves, trills, heavy chords, etc., at a speed that most players think only possible with the right hand, is something not often heard and we believe we are safe in saying that there are few in DeKalb County who ever hear a left hand solo. It is something you don't get a chance to hear but about once in a lifetime.

If you never heard one, that alone will be worth going many miles.

Mr. Johnston's Left Hand.
Length of fingers 2½, 3¼, 3½, and 3⅓ inches
Measure your fingers.

He stands 6 feet and 3 inches without shoes. In addition to the split finger and enlarged and almost stiff thumb joint, easily seen above, two scars 1 and 1½ inches adorns it.

There is nothing small about it either in length or difficulty and it would be an impossibility for a listener to believe that one hand could do it without actually seeing it done. The work of two hands being done with the usually weak left hand, not merely a slow tune with a simple accompaniment while some notes are held with the pedal; but for example, one part of this one has a continuous trill or tremolo while at the same time an independent melody is played with other fingers on either side of the trill; not merely on one side.

Most pianists find it extremely difficult and many impossible to play a melody on one side of a trill with the right hand. Ask a few and convince yourself. Mr. Johnston is not only able to do this without apparent difficulty with the left hand, but can also do it easily with both hands at once. The opening prelude will have such a passage.

The stupenduous difficulty of bringing the melody out clearly by first one finger and then another from among a maze of notes with the shading, expression and volume of two ordinary hands can only be appreciated and understood by those who have tried it and only partially by advanced players.

If this is not all we claim for it, we want you to ask for your money back and you will get it. It will not be used in public except at these recitals. Requests or money offers to play it at other places either before or afterward will be refused.

It covers almost the entire keyboard of a piano exactly as an ordinary two handed piece does.

It has been played in private for students and for others and here are a few remarks heard, that we considered honest, spontaneous expressions: "It don't seem possible."—"I wouldn't believe it without seeing it done."—"I never knew there was anything of that sort in print."—"Well now! Who could have constructed such a thing as that?"—"I guess I'll practice a while before I do that."

Mr. Johnston is not left-handed.

A LIFE DREAM.

Words of Mr. Johnston's New Song, Which Will Be Used for the First Time at These Recitals.

1. Along through life we go,
Some drifting careless as the sands beside the sea
No thought of care they know,
As though today were all, tomorrow not to be,
A failure in life's work.
The book of life has often told the tale:
Dreams are naught if the tasks they shirk,
To dream only means but to fail.

Chorus.

Many the time that the dream is but seeming,
Leaving no fruit of so short a life,
Just the thought, what it might have been.
Sometimes it reaches beyond all our dreaming
And like a beacon in the night, from day to day
Is what it should have been.

2. Almost alone it seems
Another climbs the ladder leading on to fame;
By thought and toil not dreams,
Each day adds to the work that leaves an honored name
The dreams of life come true,
The goal of life is sought and justly won
And at last with no more to do,
A great, noble, good work is done.

SPECIAL OFFER.

At Auburn Mr. Johnston will give a silver dollar to the person (anyone in the audience) who suggests the best title (to be decided by judges) for an unpublished piece of instrumental music. (An unusual, peculiar or specially attractive and easily remembered title desired.) Title (one only by each person) to be written plainly in ink on one side of a slip of white paper exactly one inch wide by three inches long and name on opposite side of same paper. These will be taken up by collectors at 8:15 Standard time and none will be accepted after that time. Decision will be announced when other prizes are awarded and credit given as may be arranged.

The piece is of a lively, rapid, brilliant style with peculiar combinations and a very loud ending.

Easy money for some one. Maybe you.

FREE.

Any piano or organ music student in DeKalb County who presents the following blank, filled out plainly and in full, will be admitted free to any one Contest Recital if accompanied by one other person paying full price, 25 cents, or for 10 cents if alone.

Extra copies of this will be mailed postpaid on receipt of address, if not already on our list of 1,400 names.

Full Name. .....

Town. .....Street No or R. F. D. No. .....

Name of Teacher during 1908. .....

Not Good at Newville.

Tell your friends who like music.

Don't fail to attend the Recital nearest your home.

Each program worth twice what we charge, as an entertainment.

IF YOU MISS THIS CONTEST YOU WILL MISS THE BEST ONE EVER HELD IN

ST. JOE.

AUGUST 15.

We will give you more entertainment for your money than you can get at a CIRCUS.

COME and SEE.

Auburn date changed to Sept. 12.

AUGUST

L 903

0277

The Popular Pulpit

PAID AT GOD'S EXPENSE.

By George Clark Peck, D. D.

Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things which be God's.—Luke xx. 25.

Not to pay Paul by robbing Peter, nor yet to pay Peter by robbing Paul, but to discharge with fidelity both obligations—such is the eternal sanity of Christ's gospel. Commercial prudence advises us to pay whichever creditor presses most harshly, whether Peter or Paul. Jesus commands us to pay both.

The last thing that religion does for a man is to relieve him from any just obligation whatsoever. Rather, religion declares the sanctity of all duty; calls each disciple to royal citizenship in two worlds. I have heard of a lad who pilfered a few pennies in order that he might swell the missionary total of his Sunday-school class. And there have been ages in which such was the prevailing style of religious loyalty. Men ran away from all manner of human duties in order that they might fulfill the divine behest. The world was full of children of the Almighty who believed that they could discharge their full debt to heaven only by pouring contempt upon the sacred things of earth. In a host of sometimes naive fashions people used to pay Paul by robbing Peter.

I scarcely need to affirm that modern sentiment has swung to the opposite custom. In this day men commonly pay Peter by robbing Paul. They are still at the business of robbing, but with a change in the victim. If the former generation shortened its business hours and sometimes its commercial honor in the interest of prayers, the present generation inclines to shorten its prayers for the sake of devotion to business. In the words of the scripture, Caesar is paid at the expense of God.

Faithfulness is not an arc of a circle. It is rather a whole circle. No man is quit of his obligations to the butcher by paying his grocer's bill. Nor can we meet God's claim by being merely generous in spirit, tolerant toward sinners and good natured in the domestic circle. Commercial uprightness is no better substitute for neglect of God than a one-sided cultivation of God is an excuse for crooked business dealings. To be truly Christian is to endeavor to meet all just claims, to pay Paul without robbing Peter, to render unto Caesar all his due tribute, yet not to fail of the part due God.

The financial secretary of a certain society made a practice of carrying the society's books down to his place of business. And he earned his special salary as secretary during those hours in which he was supposed to be earning the salary paid him by his business employers. I doubt if he were guilty of any intentional dishonor, but I have never understood how one man can earn two salaries at the same time and for the same time; how he can justly rob Peter to pay Paul. But the world is full of men and women who thus earn double salaries. Some of them steal a man's time to earn God's wages; but a vaster throng of them are taking God's time to earn men's wages. Paul must be paid, hence they rob Peter in order to pay him. What a pity that a man should spend so much time making his fortune that he should have no time left to make his soul!

THE WORTH WHILE WAY.

By Henry F. Cope.

"I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith."—II Tim. iv, 7.

It is a splendid thing, at the end of life, to be as certain of having done the right thing all along as you were confident of intention to do it at the beginning. Seldom is life's review as satisfactory as its prospect was inspiring. Long before its end we begin to see ways in which we might have done better, and to us all there must often come the grave question: What are the things most worth striving for in life? It is a heedless life that never asks: Am I seeking the prizes really worth the gaining?

Every purposeful life gains some prize; the puzzling question is as to which are the most desirable—the permanently valuable. Popular opinion points to riches and honors; but experience warns of the price to be paid for them. It would be folly to pretend that they go always to the most worthy. You do not have to look far at any time to find the microscopic man with the magnificent fortune. Often the richest man is the poorest kind of a man. At any rate it is certain that you cannot pursue that prize with singleness of purpose without the sacrifice of almost every other desirable thing.

Then, cries conscience, choose character; make that your end. But a man stops to count the cost. While it is not true that one cannot be rich both in character and in cash, the instances are sufficiently few to make them look more like exceptions than rules. Piety is not established by poverty, neither does it insure against it. They who seek character regard adversity and prosperity, ignominy and honors but as incidents on the way, the goal alone is to them essential. One world of thought brands as a failure the life that leaves no legacy of things, while yet another is equally sure that success is to be measured by treasures of the soul alone. Who will show us the right way?

A concrete answer comes from one of the world's wisest and best. Paul, mighty in manhood, died poor and in prison; but he died endorsing the course that had such an end. In review he saw that the way had been right. He might have taken many other ways. So potent a personality would have found prosperity in any of them. But he deliberately chose the way of service for spiritual things; he accepted the hardships, loss, privations, prisons and death, and rejected the possibilities of easy wealth and fame. At the end, having tasted all the bitterness of the way, he commends it to his young friend Timothy. The path of service for humanity, the fight against sin and wrong, the stewardship of faith and truth and right, these, says he, are the worth while things in life.

But was Paul right? Is any life patterned after his Master's, any life that counts the inner joys, the glories of service, the rewards of character as supreme, and so misses the treasures for which the many strive, a success?

Let history answer. Is it fame we seek; there were a thousand famous, mighty, successful men in imperial Rome when Paul, from his prison, wrote these words. Well might they have despised the poor prisoner had they even heard of him. Yet who today remembers the name of one of these great ones? And who is there has not heard of and honored that poor, condemned prisoner? Even much more is all this true concerning the lowly man of Nazareth.

Let our own hearts answer. Is it riches we seek; what is all prosperity without peace of heart? Can money ever buy comfort, content, or sympathy? Money is to be measured by its earning power, the interest accruing in happiness and usefulness. The worth of the things you hold in your hand depends on the riches of your heart. Think you not this world would be the better place and life the wealthier for us all if all were seeking the things unseen, truth and right and holiness, love and service, seeking to see their God and to serve their fellows? That would not mean a race of mystics; it would mean more manhood, less mammon; more wealth and fewer fortunes. Deep in all our hearts we know this is the best way; its toilsome path alone gives peace; its intangible prizes alone are permanent; its supreme reward is character, the soul, the one asset we can carry from this world and the one legacy which it is safe to leave to others.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't mistake resolution for reform.

Don't look as though religion disagreed with you.

Don't forget that kindness is the sign of divine kinship.

Don't try to knit the souls of men together with soft solder.

Don't expect profit in the friendship that knows no investment of self.

Don't deal sharply with others if you would not cut your own soul.

Don't expect great things of others unless you set a worthy example.

Don't raise up barriers if you would do good to those who need it most.

Don't waste any time wondering whether the Lord knows what you do.

Don't talk about religion in your heart if it is not visible in your home.

Don't continually raise your standards so high that you cannot live up to them.

Don't die with your hands so full of earth that you cannot extend them heavenward.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Self-mastery is half of all morality.

Life without difficulties is but death.

Many a man who acts smart is made to smart for it.

It takes a tender heart to do the really hard things.

You never have to dun a man who owes you a grudge.

Everybody expects everybody else to set good examples.

Hard words seldom make an impression on soft people.

Women who talk most usually mean what they don't say.

The desired haven is not reached by sailing before the wind.

The experience a man buys is always delivered a little too late.

The only harmless fools are those in the hands of the undertaker.

Many are willing to be soundly pious so long as piety is all sound.

Instead of regretting yesterday get busy and do something to-day.

No man has said Amen to his prayers until he gets busy answering them.

Some men get out of practice because they spend all their time preaching.

Bad times often come as a result of too much living for good times only.

Cynicism is the atrophy that comes from refusing to realize our own ideals.

When misery is at hand there isn't much pleasure in remembering former joys.

He who never said a harsh word of anyone failed in his duty to everyone.

The problems of any day are the indications of the keenness of its conscience.

You should remove the junk from your own back yard before worrying about the old tin cans in your neighbor's.

Smiles of the Day

Always a Debtor.

As a pleasant-faced woman passed the corner Harris touched his hat to her and remarked to his companion:

"Ah, my boy, I owe a great deal to that woman."

"Your mother?" was the query.

"No; my landlady."

A Sure Sign.

Visitor (entering office)—Are you the head of the firm?

The Only Occupant (sharply)—What's your business with him?

Visitor (convinced)—Ah, I see you aren't.

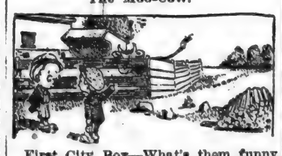
Glad Tidings.

"My wife had a pleasant surprise for me when I got home last evening."

"Had an especially dainty dinner ready for you?"

"No. Told me she was going away for about three weeks."

The Moo-Cow.



First City Boy—What's them funny things on the cow's head?

Second City Boy—Gee, but you're the dumbest boy I ever saw! Why, they're his horns. Them's what he blows when he makes that funny "moo" noise.

A Kick.

Employe—Here, my pay envelope isn't as bulky as usual.

Cashier (nervous)—I am sure I put in the correct amount.

Employe—Right. But it's all in one bill. Can you give me change for it?

Not Much Doing.

"My poor man," exclaimed the housewife, as she handed out a wedge of cherry pie, "why don't you go forth and labor?"

"I can't find nothing in my line, mum," replied the weary wayfarer.

"And what was your last position?"

"Oh, it was very responsible, mum. I was official grass cutter for a polar expedition."

Put to a Different Use.

Maude—I wonder why that man cuts the pages of the magazine with his finger.

Clara—Perhaps he is saving his knife to eat pie with.

Horrible.

"Have you a smoke nuisance in your town?"

"In our town? It is usually on our front gallery! The young man who is calling on my daughter is a cigarette smoker."—Houston Post.

Good Climber.

"Want to take the role of Romeo, eh?" said the big manager. "Been on the boards long?"

"Never was on them in my life, boss," replied the applicant.

"Well, why do you think you could take the role of Romeo?"

"Well, I'll tell you, boss. I used to be a lineman and I can shin up the balcony in a jiffy."

Rather Mean of Her.

For two hours she had been trying to get him to enter a sensible conversation.

"Sweetest," he chirped in nonsensical tones, "you remind me of the flowers—you are so sweet."

"And you, my dear boy," she hastened, "remind me of the forest."

"And why, Miss Wose?"

"Because you are so dense."

The Greatest Loss.

Mrs. Oldpop—Oh, John, our daughter has eloped with the chauffeur!

Oldpop—Hmm! Too bad! He was the best chauffeur I ever had!

Asbestos Currency Needed.

Meanman—It seems a shame, after slaving for it all these years, to think that I can't take a blessed sovereign with me.

Grabbe—My dear sir, what would be the use? It would only melt.—The Bystander.

A Cold Deal.

Bearitt—By the way, don't you own some stock in the ice trust?

Lambleigh—I did own some, but they froze me out.

Slippery.

Patience—I see dainty Indian muslins are made from fibers of the banana tree.

Patrice—They ought to be easy to slip on.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Truth Comes Out.

She (at the piano)—What do you think of my voice?

He—Do you want my candid opinion?

She—Certainly.

He—Well, you have a splendid singing voice for talking, but a poor talking voice for singing.

What He Learned.

"Johnnie!"

"Yes, pop."

"Did you learn anything in school today?"

"Yes, sir. I learned that Tommy Tate has the mumps and that teacher is going to whip me if I throw spit-balls any more."—Yonkers Statesman.

Two of a Kind.

"Yes," said Major Bragg, "I've been in many engagements in my time, but I never lost my head!"

"How odd!" exclaimed the summer girl. "Now, I've been in many engagements, too, and never lost my heart."—Philadelphia Press.

Fortunate Man.

The Hobo—Say, mister, would youse mind stakin' a pore man wot ain't got no home t' a few pennies?

Enpeck—Got no home? Say, old chap, you are playing in great luck. Why, you can stay out all night any old time you want to.

Proof Positive.

Stella—So you and Tom are engaged! Are you sure you really and truly love him?

Mabel—Love him! Why, I never took one of his presents back to find out what it cost!

Days vs. Nights.

"I suppose," said the literary young man, "you have read 'The Last Days of Pompeii'?"

"No, I haven't," admitted the girl from the back township, "but I've read nearly all of 'The Arabian Nights.'"

Her Essay.

"And who carried off the honors at the graduating exercises?"

"Geraldine, easily. She had a portable stove brought in, and cooked a steak in full view of the audience."

Should Please the Chickens.

"Give me a short menu for a chicken dinner."

"That's easily done. Puree of oats, cracked corn, and pulverized oyster shells."

Truthful Cholly.

"Cholly, have you ever loved before?"

"My dear girl, I will be honest with you. I have been engaged so many times that my ex-fiancees have perfected an organization and adopted a yell."

Very Nautical.

He (on shipboard)—The captain of this ship was only married two months when his wife ran away from him.

She—How odd. He took her for a mate, but she was a skipper.

Nothing Doing.

Mamma—Well, Edith, how did you like the kindergarten?

Edith—I didn't like it a bit. The teacher put me on a chair and told me to sit there for the present. And I sat and sat and she never gave me the present.—Chicago News.

Always Capsizing.

Rodrick—Jib's yacht capsized again. Why, it must be top-heavy. What's it called?

Van Albert—Cupid.

Rodrick—Cupid, eh? Well, he ought to call it "Lovers' Quarrel."

Van Albert—Why so?

Rodrick—Because it soon blows over.

Accounting for It.

Mrs. Sharp—The wife of that millionaire from the Wild West has such a washed-out look.

Mrs. Gossip—You know, my dear, she was a laundress before he struck oil.—Baltimore American.

Reaching the Music.

"I suppose, Pat, since your late employer was a millionaire, he had a grand funeral."

"Faith an' he did not. He had only wan hearse like the rist of us."—Brooklyn Life.

Brief but Pointed.

"We have put you down on the program for a short talk on spelling reform," said the chairman of the entertainment committee.

"Well," replied the home-grown orator, "I can give you my idea of spelling reform in one sentence. Just leave 'me' off the 'program.' See?"

Poor Man!

Pearl—It was a fashionable wedding. Three columns were given over to a description of the bride.

Ruby—Gracious! And did the bridegroom attract much attention?

Pearl—A little. He was mentioned as "among those present."

Week of a Candidate.

"You had just been nominated by your party for mayor the last time I was here," said the drummer. "How did you come out?"

"Didn't git no chance t' come out at all," growled the village grocer. "When th' votes wus counted they discovered I wusn't in it."

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Loose Fitting Coat.

The loose-fitting coat is unquestionably a favorite one of the season, and this model that is cut in one with the sleeves is graceful, becoming and smart. There is, nevertheless, very little labor involved in the making and there is a choice allowed of loose sleeves or those that are gathered into cuffs. It can be utilized both for the entire costume and for the separate wrap that will be so extensively worn, both for the spring and the summer, and can be trimmed with soutache as illustrated, with applique or with banding, or, if made of linen or some similar material, can be embroidered on the edges.

PATTERN NO. 5943.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5943.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Dressing Jacket.

Such a pretty little dressing jacket as this one cannot fail to find its welcome. It is dainty and attractive, it is absolutely simple and it is peculiarly well adapted to the incoming season. In the illustration it is made of white batiste trimmed with embroidery, but it would be charming if the material chosen were flowered lawn, cross-barred dimity or anything similar, and if something a little handsomer is wanted, Japanese silks will be found desirable.

PATTERN NO. 6003.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly.

Order Coupon.

No. 6003.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

FACTS WORTH KNOWING.

The wife in Abyssinia always owns the house and contents.

Worry is one of the most fruitful causes of consumption.

In proportion to its size, the beetle is stronger than 100 horses.

The orange tree is said to produce about 20,000 oranges during its life.

Living expenses in New York have been increased by 11 per cent in one year.

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with when no longer needed as the best of remedies, when required, are to assist nature and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna

manufactured by the

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. ONLY

SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS

one size only, regular price 50¢ per Bottle

The Marble and the Pencil.

The marble trick is as old as the days of Aristotle. Cross the middle and fore fingers and roll a marble between them. The marble will feel like two, because it is being felt in an unaccustomed way. If a pencil is drawn between the crossed fingers the one pencil will feel like parallel bars. The same illusion may be worked by placing the pencil between the lips and then moving the under lip to one side, causing the pencil to feel like two. More curious than any of these is the one where the forefinger is crossed over the little finger behind the other two and then applied to the end of the nose. Not only can you feel two noses, but one of them seems to be about an inch longer than the other. This last sensation is caused by the fact that we do not ordinarily feel the edge of any object with these two fingers at the same time unless the part felt with the little finger projects beyond the part felt by the forefinger.—St. Louis Republic.

The Wise Men.

"After all, it's the wise man who can change his opinion."

"But the wisest men simply can't do it."

"Why not?"

"Because they've been dead for years."—Catholic Standard and Times.

What a Poultry Man Says About 20-Mule Team Borax.

"As I am in the poultry business, I had ten white chicks to wash and prepare for a show. I used '20 Mule Team' Soap for washing the birds, and I can say from years of experience, washing white birds, never before have I found a soap or Borax that cleaned my birds so fine and easy. I had a great deal of comment on my birds being so white." J. A. Dinwiddie, New Market, Tenn. All dealers, ½, 1 and 5 lb. cartons. Sample and booklet 5c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

Millionaire Remembers the Past.

For mending the broken arm of a boy in humble life, the Aberdeen Infirmary at Aberdeen, Scotland, has received $175,000. The boy patient has since become Lord Mountstephen, millionaire banker and railroad president, who emigrated to Canada as a young man, and there built up his great fortune.

Lord Mountstephen has never forgotten the kind treatment he received at Aberdeen, and has sent the infirmary a check for $50,000, making a total of $175,000 in donations to this institution.

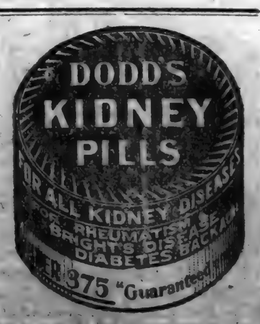
The Canadian baron's other big donations include $2,500,000 to King Edward's Hospital fund and $1,300,000 for a hospital at Montreal. He has distributed nearly $3,000,000 among his relations.

All Up-to-Date Housekeepers

Use Red Cross Ball Blue. It makes the clothes clean and sweet as when new. All Grocers.

Must Pension Themselves.

Domestic servants in Germany come under the law that obliges all persons below a certain income to provide for their old age. The postoffice issues cards and stamps, and one of these stamps must be dated and affixed to the card every Monday. Sometimes the employers buy the cards and stamps and show them at the postoffice each month. Sometimes they expect the servant to pay half the money required. Women who go out by the day get their stamps at the house they work in on Mondays. If a girl marries she may cease to insure and may have a sum of money toward her outfit. In that case she will receive no old age pension. But if she goes on with her insurance she will have from 15 to 20 marks ($3 to $4) a month from the state after the age of 70.



AUGUST

0278
L 903

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death.

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured.

"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

A Bare Possibility.

In his diary, which is incorporated in the "Life and Letters of Sir Richard Claverhouse Jebb," the great Greek scholar recorded a flash of his own wit which is of a most appealing variety.

At a dinner at Cambridge Sir Richard, then Mr. Jebb, took in a young woman, who got through the first course with little conversation. Suddenly she startled him by saying, in the most unprovoked way, while she was still dining with apparent good appetite:

"Professor Jebb, do you think women ever die of a broken heart?"

"Perhaps other organs may have something to do with it," he proffered, in reply.

Four English girls have been arrested near Manchester for poking fun at an aged spinster's curls.

Texas Pan-Handle Farm Lands

Come to our Chicago Office and go with us on Special Train

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH

To examine our FARM LANDS, equal to any in CENTRAL STATES. Our Prices are as LOW and TERMS as very REASONABLE you will buy.

LOCATORS LAND COMPANY

646 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Wanted Agents in every community to help us sell our Panhandle Texas lands which adjoin improved farms. Level, fertile, no stones, sand or alkali. Price $10 to $17 per acre. We operate farms and furnish tenants. Write for circular. Farmers' Colonization Company, 1216 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

If afflicted with sore Eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY. All rights reserved

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

They had reached the highway. Constable was thinking that he would have journeyed across the world to study a laboring monster, like Pelee in his present stress, but the idea of the girl being in the shadow of danger took all the relish from the work.

"I should prefer to hear you discuss the treachery of volcanoes outside of the fire zone," she said, shivering. "It's like listening to ghost stories in a haunted house."

"I'll tell you the best way out of it," he declared. "I don't say that Pelee is about to rise and rend Saint Pierre, but I want to take you all out to sea for a few days. The Madame will behave her prettiest with you on board."

"I can't imagine anything finer, but you know mother is not a graceful sailor."

"Unfortunately, any effort of mine to prevail upon her might spoil matters," Constable said.

"Oh, I don't think that,' she replied; "but it will be something of a conquest for any one to shake her trust in Pelee. Still, I'll do what I can."

"And I'll begin work to-night upon Uncle Joey. By the way, Miss Stansbury," he added in a lowered voice, "don't you think that if I chose to stay here in Saint Pierre, your mother might consent more willingly to try a few days on the Madame? You know Pelee is more than ever interesting to me now."

"That would be entirely unthinkable," she replied hastily.

Pelee rumbled again, and the girl's fingers tightened upon his arm. The heavy wooden shutters of the plantation house rattled in the windless night; the ground upon which they stood seemed to wince at the monster's pain. The man was conscious of the fragrance of roses and magnolia blooms above the acrid taint of the air. It was as if, through some strange freak of the atmosphere, a pressure was exerted upon the flowers, forcing a sudden expulsion of perfume. The young moon was a yellow, formless blotch in the fouled sky. A sigh like the whimpering of a sick child was audible from the servants' cabins behind the big house.

"You'll plead with your mother to-night?" he whispered, as they walked back.

Mrs. Stansbury was on the porch. Her nicely modulated voice, as she spoke to her daughter, struck Constable with a cold force. The women went indoors. Breen and Uncle Joey were in conversation. Constable drew his chair to the north end of the porch, and faced the mountain—a vast black beast couchant under the dim stars. Since he had gazed in that direction from the ship the night before, the whole purpose of his life had changed. Then he had asked no sweeter favor of the Fates than to be permitted to observe the giant's struggle to contain the fury of his fluids. Now his thoughts were magnetized by a new substance—the substance of fear. Self, the tribune of all his reckonings heretofore, had been lifted from his brain, as a familiar volume is lifted from its case.

"I knew it," he muttered. "I knew it five years ago—that I should come back here some day, look upon that girl, and become a raver like other men. To think that I could stay away from her a year at a time!"

He regarded the double chain of lights out in the harbor—the Madame pulling at her moorings among the lesser craft, like a lustrous empress in the midst of dusky maid-servants. Between the black mountain and the illumined ship stretched a battle. It was his own particular battle. His name was called from the lists. To win was to run away. The old mastering complication was his at last. Yesterday a splendid contribution to the imperfect records of seismology, such as was now within his grasp, was identified with his highest ambition. To-day the safety of the woman towered above it, as the dome of St. Peter's above the head of a tourist. He was afraid of Pelee. Breen drew over to him and sat down upon the railing.

"What's on your mind, Peter?"

"A mountain," said Constable.

Rain did not fall in the night, and Constable was abroad with the dawn, regarding the white world and the source of the phenomenon, with the sketchy tints of earliest morning upon the huge eastern slope. He had slept little, and that with his face turned to the north. He would scarcely close his eyes before a cortege of volcanoes would pass before him, as in a dream—all the destroyers of history, each with a vivid individuality, like the types of faces of all nations—the story of each, and the smear it had made of men and the works of men.

Most of them had given warning. Pelee was warning now. His warning was written upon the veins of every leaf, painted upon the curve of every blade of grass, sheeted evenly white upon the tiles of every roof. Gray dust blown by steam from the bursting quarries of the mountain, clogging the gutters of the city, and the throats of men! It was a moving white cloud in the rivers, a chalky shading that marked the highest reach of the harbor tide. It settled in the hair of the children, and complicated the toil of the bees in the nectar-cups of the roses. With league-long cerements, and in a voice that caused to tremble his dwarfed cohorts, the hills and mornes, great Pelee had proclaimed his warning in the night.

Constable was standing in the garden. "Good old Vulcan, to wait for her!" he murmured. "Sit tight for another day, and keep a stiff bridle-arm—for one more day!"

"It isn't really ash, you know," he found himself saying at breakfast, "but rock ground as fine as neat and shot out by steam through Pelee's valves."

"How intensely graphic!" Mrs. Stansbury observed.

"It's a graphic morning," said Breen, "and Peter is virile from a night of meditation. I believe he has made a covenant with the mountain."

Constable had met the eyes of the daughter, and found no hope there. He had taken his uncle apart and charged him to labor for the cause of flight.

"Ursula," the planter began gravely, addressing Mrs. Stansbury, "Peter has asked us to spend a few days with him in the Caribbean, on board the Madame. I confess that I don't like the way Pelee is acting, and the heat is telling on us all. The prospect of a refreshing breath of the Trades is a mighty pleasant one to me. Doesn't it sound so to you?"

"As a specialist in volcanoes, I should think Mr. Constable would find it impossible to leave at such a time," the elder woman answered smoothly. "The mountain needs his doctor more than ever now."

"I have not yet attained unto such a scientific passion that I can forget my friends entirely," Constable said earnestly.

"For my part," the girl hastened to say, "Mr. Constable's invitation is immensely alluring."

Mrs. Stansbury's eyelids contracted ever so little, and she lingered upon the words of her ultimatum, as if there were a tang of pleasure in the utterance. "The Panther arrives day after to-morrow morning, with the New York mail. I would not under any condition think of leaving Saint Pierre before receiving Mr. Stansbury's letters."

Constable stared at the face of the daughter. He read there terror of the mountain, and pity for himself. He arose, not daring to trust himself to speak again. Breen found him in his room a few minutes later.

"Peter," he said softly, "has it ever occurred to you that the map of Europe and the history of France might greatly have been altered if our beloved Josephine had been gifted with a will like that?"

CHAPTER IV.

In the Rue de Rivoli there was a little stone fruit shop. The street was short, narrow, crooked and ill paved—a cleft in Saint Pierre's terrace work. Just across from the vault-like entrance to the shop, the white, scarred cliff arose to another flight of the city. Between the shop and the living rooms behind there was a little court, shaded by mango-trees. Dwarfed banana shrubs flourished in the shade of the mangoes, and singing birds were caged in the lower foliage. Since the sun could find no entrance, the shop was dark as a cave, and as cool. One window, if an aperture like the clean wound of a thirteen-inch gun could be called a window, opened to the north; and from it, by the grace of a crook in the Rue de Rivoli, might be seen the mighty caliber-ed cone of Pelee.

Pere Rabeaut's fruit was very good, and some of it was very cheap. The service was much as you made it, for if you were known you were permitted to help yourself. In this world there was no one of station too lofty to go to Pierre Rabeaut's; you would meet no one there to whom it was not a privilege to say "Bon jour."

"Come and see my birds," the crafty Rabeaut would say, if he approved of you.

"Where do you live?" you might ask, being a stranger.

"In the coolest hovel of Saint Pierre," was the invariable answer.

And presently, if you were truly alive, you would find yourself in the little stone shop, listening to the birds. In due course Soronia would appear in the shadowy doorway and it would seem that the bird songs were hushed as she crossed the court.

If the little stone shop were transplanted in New York, artists would find it and have difficulty in getting in and out, for the crowd o' nights. Thither Constable and Breen made their way on this burning morning which Mrs. Stansbury darkened with her decision. The pair sat down in the cherished coolness, Constable at the little window, so that he could look at the mountain.

"Breen, I dare not leave them here for forty-eight hours, until the Panther comes," Constable said.

"Do you really think Pelee can't hold out that long?"

Constale shook his head impatiently. "I'm not a monomaniac—at least, not yet, Breen," he said, and his voice suggested the world of pent savagery in his brain. "The ways of volcanoes are past the provisions of men. I do not say that Pelee will blow his head off this week, or this millennium. I say I'm afraid for this girl. I say there are vaults of explosives in that monster, the smallest of which could make this city look like a leper's corpse upon the beach. I say that the internal fires are burning high; that they are already fingering the vital cap; that Pelee sprung a leak last night, and that the same force which lifted this cheerful archipelago from the depths of the sea is pressing against the leak at this instant. I say that Vesuvius warned before he broke; that Krakatoa warned and then struck; that down the ages these safety valves scattered over the face of earth have trembled before giving way. Pelee is trembling now, and there is a woman here whose safety is—important to me. She is two miles away this moment, and I am as powerless as a man in a street fight, with his lady's arms about him. What shall I do?"

"Peter, there is a short cut," Breen said.

"Tell me!" Constable urged.

"Are you sedious and strong-souled?"

"Try me."

At this juncture Soronia entered the shop from the little court of the song birds, filling the eyes of the Americans. A dark, ardent, alluring face; flesh like dull gold, made wonderful by the faintest tints of ripe fruit; eyes that could melt and burn and laugh; a fragile figure, but radiantly abloom, and as worthily draped as a young palm in a vine richly blossoming. Such, vaguely, was Soronia. She made one think of a strange, regal flower, an experiment of Nature, wrought in the most sumptuous shadow of a tropic garden. She was gone. Breen's face bore a drained look.

"An orchid?" he whispered. "Will the visitation be repeated? Do I wake or sleep?"

"Old Pere Rabeaut married a French woman," Constable observed.

"Some Daphne of the islands, she must have been, since Pere Rabeaut does not seem designed to father a sunrise," Breen added, his eyes lost in the shadows of the court, from whence the bird songs came.

Pere Rabeaut was a worthy soldier of France, I have heard," said Constable. "I have never seen the mother, but every year I have seen Soronia—for a moment like this. She was but a child when I came first—five years ago—but a radiant child even then."

"Five years ago," Breen mused. "Five years ago I had not ceased to paint. I should have put her on canvas."

There was a moment of silence, then Constable said in a low voice, "I must go back. Tell me the shorter way."

"Peter, you are a man, and she a woman. Forgive me, but I know what has sprung into your heart in the past twenty-four hours from the seeds that have been there five years. Tell her—tell her all about those five years and the one day—what they have meant to you, and your dream of the future. If you tell her mightily enough, she will follow you to the Madame, and cast no longing look behind! I shall stay here for an hour or two."

Constable left the shop. He was very miserable, full of undirected wrath. Never in his life before had there been a time when a stiff shoulder, dollars, an athletic mind, or all three, had failed entirely to move an obstacle in his way. Here he was ground by impotence absolute. The suggestion of Breen entailed such a deep and vital thing that he dared not think of it, here in the glaring day, with the panting crowd about him. It was against the very structure of his mind to act precipitately in this, of all matters, most delicate. It is true that he meant now to win Lara Stansbury, if such a stately citadel lay within range of a man of his caliber; but he had vouchsafed to strike only after a flawless investment were laid.

Breen did not return for luncheon, and the name of Pelee was not heard. In his room, afterward, Constable fell asleep, with his face to the north. He awoke out of a horrid dream, in which black fingers were tightening, like a garrote, upon his throat. It was the ash and sulphur fumes again. Pelee was obscured by the fresh fog. Instantly, upon awakening, the old thoughts and dreads resumed their hateful swing in his brain. The sight of the Madame, lying out in the harbor, her needle-boom pointed like a black, fleshless finger across the smoky sunset, whipped him again to the sense of action which had no means of expression. Thoughts of the night—the locked doors, the still halls, the wail of children from the native cabins, sleeplessness without hope, vigilance without meaning, and this new master-romance shining far and bright and alone, like a brave star above wind-hurled clouds—out of these were moulded thoughts of little mercy, as the shadows grew long upon the whitening lawn.

Pelee's moods were variable that afternoon. The twilight brought ease again, and with the old freshness of evening came a glad hour of reaction. There was a rippling wave of merriment from the darky quarters, and a score of children went blithely forth to bathe in the sea. Never before was the volatile tropic soul so imperiously evidenced—simple hearts which glow at little things, whose swift tragedies come and go like blighting winds, which slay but leave no wound.

Constable was ashamed for the moment. Throughout the day his eyes had fixed in stubborn gloom upon a cataclysm. Up the stairway, airily as laughter, came a bright melody from the piano. He was thrilled, and held, and his mind was stirred with tenderness. She was like her island people, quick to enter the groves of serenity when the black cloud had blown by. Could Breen be right? he thought. The suggestion appealed to him now in a new high-light. Were there not some words which had never yet found the ears of woman from the lips of man—some key to instant supremacy in the undiscovered country of a lovely woman's nature?

(To be continued.)

Men's Maids.

"Men's maids, yes," said an employment agent. "There are more of them than of men's men or valets. Visit the fashionable hotels of California, Florida, the Riviera, Egypt, and as you pass open bedroom doors of a morning or an afternoon, what do you see? Maids changing the studs in evening shirts, pressing trousers with patent alcohol irons, brushing coats and putting fresh laces in boots. The average well-to-do couple—the couple that can afford the best winter and summer resorts—travel with a maid, but not with a maid and a valet, for, after all, a valet is very expensive, and his duties occupy only a few hours a day, and a maid can get through all of them just as well as not. So the average lady's maid is a man's maid as well—maid to the wife, valet to the husband. She likes her latter duties. They are, you see, simple and easy, and they draw forth the most generous tips."—New York Press.

Use No Hook.

You manly breast, O maid, on which you lean,
Though it may harbor nothing base or mean,
Ah, lean upon it lightly, for who knows
What frail cigars may nestle there unseen.
—Puck.

Ambiguous.

"I would like to see more moving verse from your pen," said the admirer.

"Do you mean something pathetic," asked the poet, "or something about springtime moves?" — Kansas City Times.

For Its Very Own.

There's one thing that seems to me funny,
When the state of a bank becomes runny,
You're supposed to go back
And sit down. It's a fact
They get mad if you ask for your money.
—Lippincott's.

Hats that Improve with Age.

"A silk hat, like wine, improves with age," said a clubman. "The oftener you have it ironed the sleeker and more brilliant it becomes. It costs a good deal at the outset, but in the end it is the cheapest hat to wear. It lasts, you see, so long, and to iron it costs so little. Some folks think the topper very perishable. If it gets soaked with rain, if some one sits on it and crushes it into an accordion, they think it must be thrown away the same as if it were a derby. But not at all. A silk hat can be taken apart and put together again like a watch, and if it gets crushed nothing is easier than to melt off the silk, straighten out the frame and then put on the silk again. In England, the home of this hat, I have known men to wear the same topper for ten or twelve years. And the oftener the old hat is ironed the brighter and finer it shines. Its luster increases with time and friction like the luster of good antique furniture."—Los Angeles Times.

Side Lights on History.

Scott was writing the "Lay of the Last Minstrel."

"After which," he muttered, with a grim smile, "with your kind permission, ladies and gentlemen, the gifted vocalist, Herr Spuytentuyfel, will sing the pathetic ballad, entitled 'Mamma, Your Little Darling Is Too Full to Eat Any More!'"

For well he knew that there would be still later minstrels with other lays.

SAVED AT THE CRISIS.

Delay Meant Death from Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Herman Smith, 901 Broad street, Athens, Ga., says: "Kidney disease started with slight irregularity and weakness and developed into dangerous dropsy. I became weak and languid and could do no housework. My back ached terribly. I had bearing down pains and my limbs bloated to twice their normal size. Doctors did not help and I was fast drifting into the hopeless stages. I used Doan's Kidney Pills at the critical moment and they really saved my life."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Technique of Home Making.

"Cook, sweep, dust and sew, these four words will never make a happy home," writes the editor in Woman's Home Companion. "They do not make sympathy, and love, and ambition, and faith; but they go a long way toward making room for these things. The average bride has a trunkful of ideals, and maybe two trunkfuls of clothes. Her cook book—if she has one and the leaves are cut at all—opens easily to 'fudge.' But unless she has mastered enough pages of this book to get three meals a day, without exhausting her own body and soul, and her husband's, too, she will have little time for clothes and none at all for ideals. She finds herself involved in the mastery of the merest technical details. In spite of her best endeavors, her husband loses his enthusiasm for badly cooked food poorly served. Perhaps she tells him that he couldn't do it so well himself, and then he tells her about what he can do—perhaps it's soldering a joint or adding up a column of figures or drawing a straight line between two given points—but anyhow he can do it, because it is his business and he has perfected himself in it, and if she—and then the Cook and Sweep and Dust and Sew fling wide the doors of that house, and Sympathy and Love and Ambition and Faith make their escape."

But Never Call Him Early.

He—Funny thing about your sex. Call a woman "a bird" and she's pleased. But call her a hen or an old crow and she gets angry.

She—Nothing exclusively feminine about that. Call a man "a sad dog" and he feels good. But call him "a miserable cur"—the same thing—and he'll knock your head off.—Boston Transcript.

WONDERED WHY.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After a while I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and to-day I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

FOR SUN

BLEMISHES

As well as for the preservation and purification of the skin no other skin soap so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as Cuticura. For eczemas, rashes, inflammations, chafings, sunburn, wind irritations, bites and stings of insects, lameness and soreness incidental to outdoor sports, for the care of the hair and scalp, for sanative, antiseptic cleansing, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura are unrivaled.

Guaranteed absolutely pure, and may be used from the hour of birth.

Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5, Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; India, B. K. Paul, Calcutta; China, Hong Kong Drug Co., Japan, Maruya, Ltd., Tokio; Russia, Ferreia, Moscow; So. Africa, Lennon, Ltd., Cape Town, etc.; U. S. A., Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Post Free, Cuticura Booklet on the Skin.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Sweet Mixed Pickles

That firm, crisp quality and delicious flavor is what you get when you insist on Libby's Mixed Pickles at your dealers. They are always the finest and never disappoint. It's the same with Libby's Sweet Gherkins and Sweet Midgets. Ask for them.

Libby's Olives

The cultivation of centuries marks the olive groves of Spain as the world's best. Libby's Olives are imported from the oldest and most famous of these groves. The result is a rare product, delightfully appetizing. Try one bottle and you'll buy more and never be without them.

Libby's Preserves

Pure, ripe fruit and pure sugar in equal parts, cooked just right and timed to the second, in Libby's Great White Kitchen, is the secret of the extreme superiority of Libby's Preserves. There's none as good at any price.

Grocers and delicatessen stores carry all of Libby's Food Products. They are warranted the best to both you and the dealer

Write for free booklet—"How to Make Good Things to Eat."

Insist on Libby's at your dealer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago.

Get your Letter Paper and Envelopes printed at this office. We can give you the

EAGLE LINEN PAPER and ENVELOPES

It is fine and will suit you. Try it.

TO-NIGHT Cascarets BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER NEW WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP 10c 25c 50c Boxes

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS under NEW LAW obtained by JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C.

AUGUST

0279
L 903

Special Attractive Features

OF THE

AUGUST CLEARANCE SALE

at the BIG FOUR STORE.

Continues Until August 15. Bargains in Every Line.

Domestics.

We are enabled to offer you cottons at the lowest price in years and from the present outlook the lowest prices for sometime to come.

9-4 full bleached sheeting worth 35c Sale price per yard	24c
8-4 full bleached sheeting worth 30c Sale price	22c
Full yard wide bleached sheeting worth 12c now at	8½c
Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 8c now at	6c
Full yard wide unbleached muslin worth 9c now at	7c
Good yard wide unbleached muslin Sale price per yard	5c
All our apron check ginghams Sale price per yard	6c
A big lot fancy ginghams, dress styles Sale price per yard	12c

Ladies Shirt Waists.

All new stock. Not a last year's waist in the lot. You can't miss the opportunity to buy some of them.

$1 25 and $1 50 lawn waists Sale price	98c
$1 75 and $2 00 lawn waists	$1.29
$2 25 and $2 50 lawn waists at	$1.69
$3 00 and $3 25 silk waists for	$2.48
$4 50 and $5 00 silk waists	$3.48

Dress Goods.

One of the seasons best opportunities to buy a dress pattern at a low cost.

All our 50c. dress goods Sale price	43c
All our 75c. dress goods Sale price	67c
All our $1 00 dress goods Sale price	89c
All our $1 25 dress goods Sale price	98c

GROCERIES.

We never miss giving our customers more than full value for their money in our Grocery Department.

For this sale we are going to give you $2.00 worth for $1.00. Everything pure and fresh. Don't miss this.

21b. Gran. sugar worth 12c for	6c
1lb. good bulk coffee 20c for	10c
4lb. best Jap rice worth 40c for	20c
2lb. lump starch worth 10c for	5c
1lb. can Bak. powder 30c for	15c
½lb. best ground pepper 20c for	10c
2 Bars Laundry soap 10c for	5c
½lb. best Japan tea 30c for	15c
1 Box tooth picks worth 5c for	3c
1 sack of salt worth 5c for	2c
1lb. corn starch worth 10c for	5c
3 nutmegs worth 3c for	1c
1 market basket worth 5c for	5c
	$2 00 $1 00

Remember this basket of groceries worth $2 00 will go at this sale for only $1 00.

Mrs. Mose Perry is quite sick.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY'S.

Miss Ethel Soule, of Auburn, is visiting with W. F. Maxwell and family this week.

Lee Wilmot and wife of Garrett visited over Sunday with the former's parents, Arthur Wilmot and family.

Arthur Wilmot and W. F. Maxwell spent Sunday with Samuel Emery and family of near Fremont, Ind.

J. N. Scholes and family are visiting with his parents and other relatives. Mr. Scholes has a thirty day vacation and will spend a large part of it among the lakes in Steuben county.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

FAIRVIEW

Edward Bassetts' took Sunday dinner with Gay Hay's.

Lankey Morrs' spent Sunday evening with H. F. Housers'.

Erma Houser and Myrtle Platter called on Mrs. Lina Knight, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Albert Ginther of Ft. Wayne, visited a few days last week, with her mother, Mrs. Alda Brown.

Why not buy your gasoline at Milliman's Drug Store?

Norman Rolland and family of this place; Miss Ida Ollinger of Canton, Ohio; the Misses Pearl Rolland and Lida Shoup and gentlemen friends all of Garrett, spent Sunday at the river.

Buy our stationary.

NEWVILLE

Al Briggs had a new well put down, last week.

Earl Kincade has joined the navy and left one day last week.

The U. B. Aid Society meet with Mrs. George Oberlin, Wednesday.

Harry Weaver had the misfortune to lose one of his horses, last week.

Howard Benninghoff, who is going to school at Angola, was home over Sunday.

Letha Enzor is spending a couple of week with her sister, Mrs. Elmer Oberlin of Hamilton.

Martha Nichols, who has been visiting her mother returned Saturday to her work in Chicago.

Mrs. James Sechler and son Argel, of Butler, attended morning services at the Christian church, Sunday.

Ellis Hill, who has been working for his uncle at Silver Lake this summer, returned home, Wednesday.

Gladys Lawson of Russelvania Ohio, came Saturday to visit a few days with her friend, Princess Thomas.

Little Carmin Blair fell out of bed, last Tuesday night, which resulted in a fracture of her shoulder blade.

Frank Bechtol of Chicago Junction, spent Monday and Tuesday of last week, with John Whitehurst and family.

Five dollars and thirty-five cents was cleared at the ice cream festival held Thursday evening by Class C of the U. B. Sunday school.

Thursday evening as Willie Benninghoff was coming into town his horse stumbled and fell breaking the thills and throwing him out of the buggy, bruising him up some but nothing serious.

Mrs. K. D. Peterson and children and Mrs. Guy Saylor left Friday morning for the west. Mrs. Peterson goes to Great Falls, Montana, where she joins Mr. Peterson, who has been there for sometime, while Mrs. Saylor goes to Anaconda, Montana, where she joins Mr. Saylor.

Friday, while the thrashers were at Frank Easterday's thrashing a spark from the engine flew over on the barn catching it on fire. This caused quite an excitement, but the men had the fire put out before it done much damage.

CONCORD

Jacob Musser, wife and daughters of Ricksville spent Sunday evening with Henry Baker and family.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

The proceeds from the picnic amounted to $37.27 cents.

Mable Baker left Wednesday for a visit with her husband at Defiance.

Frank Fulk, son and daughter of Auburn, spent Sunday afternoon at this place.

John George and family spent Sunday with John Kruse and wife, east of Auburn.

John Fetters lost a horse last Thursday.

Abe Culbertson and wife and Mrs. Henry Baker attended the Herrick reunion held in the Dills' grove, Thursday. They report about thirty present and a fine time.

Just Received.

Car Load Wabash Portland Cement.

Consignment of Gasoline Vapor Stoves.

I Keep on Hands

Hydrated Ground Lime

Stoves and Ranges Cooking Utensils

Steel Goods of all kinds.

All Kinds of Roofing:

Best quality Red Cedar Shingles

Gravel Roofing Asbestos, Rubber, Felt and Galvanized Roofing.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT

Linseed, Automobile and Lubricating Oils. Gasoline, Etc.

GLASS, SASH AND DOORS.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

COBURN'S CORNERS PICNIC

At Hamilton's Grove, Saturday, August 15. Big Program. A Large Crowd Expected.

The Coburn's Corners Sunday School under the supervision of their superintendent, Clyde Hart is making large preparations for the picnic to be held at the Hamilton grove, Saturday, August 15th. This will be the picnic event of the season. Everyone knows the beauty of the Hamilton grove. Its location along the river makes an ideal spot for pleasure and furnisnes a ready means for the watering of horses. The Coburn's Corners people are noted far and wide as excellent entertainers and everybody is certain to have something to keep them happy that day. A special program, speaking, singing, music by the band, boating on the river, a ball game, a big dinner, ice cream and other refreshments will be some of the good things of the day. Since everybody is going to be there it will be the opportunity of your life to renew old acquaintances, and make new friends. Watch for further announcements and tell your friends now and often that you are going to Coburn's Corners picnic, August 15th.

STATE OF INDIANA, } S. S.
DEKALB COUNTY }

Notice is hereby given that a petition will be presented to the board of Commissioners of the County of DeKalb, in the State of Indiana, at the September Term, 1908 of said Board, asking for the location of a new public highway along the line between Jackson and Concord Townships in said County and State, on the following route towit:

Commencing in the center of the public highway at the north west corner of section nineteen (19,) in township thirty three (33) north of range fourteen (14) east, in said county, thence south on the west line of said section to the center of the public highway at the south west corner of said section nineteen (19) and there to end.

Said proposed highway will affect lands owned by Maletus A. High, Samuel M. High, Lorenzo D. Nelson, Charles R. Morr, Carrie B. Morr, Rosa High and Malvina Nelson.

Said highway being on the west line of said section 19 and on the east line of section twenty-four (24) in Jackson township, said DeKalb County, State of Indiana, and shall be 30 feet wide.

Witness my hand and seal this 28th day of July, 1908.

EMERY A. SHOOK,
Auditor DeKalb Co. Ind.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 82.

St. Joe, Indiana.

SPENCERVILLE R F D NO 2.

Clarence Davis is on the sick list.

Ray Zimmerman spent Monday with his uncle, Chas. Gibbons.

John Benninghoff, wife and son visited with relatives at Hicksville, Thursday.

Goldie Miller and Walter Ensign of Lost Creek spent Sunday with relatives of this vicinity.

Wm. Emrick and grandchildren of Huntertown, spent Saturday with his daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Wearley.

The Misses Fae Maning of Hicksville and Ethel Powell of Napoleon, O spent a couple of days with Eva Miller.

Clarence Beery and Fred Walker returned to Ft. Wayne, Sunday.

Clint Wearley and wife attended the races at Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

John Koch, wife and children spent Sunday with her parents, John Webb and family.

Mrs. Margaret Koch returned home from a visit at Pauiding, accompanied by Mrs. Hannah Waters.

Martin Wagner, wife and son of near Auburn spent Sunday with her parents, Wm. Davis and family.

A. F. Heyman and wife of Spencerville, spent Sunday with her parents, John Benninghoff and family.

Otta Gruber of Hicksville and Vernie Swaidner and wife spent Sunday with Wm. Miller and family.

Mrs. Clara Clark and daughter Avis, returned to their home at Garrett, Monday, after visiting with her parents for some time.

The Misses Maggie and Winnie Koegler of LaOtto are here visiting their grandparents, Wm. Rhoads and family and other relatives.

Silas Gratz, wife and daughter Hazel, of near Hurshtown and Wm. Wearley of Woodburn spent Sunday with Clint Wearley and family.

4 %

INTEREST

Ask about it. A splendid Savings Proposition.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.

Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid $50,000

Security to Depositors $100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.

3 per cent Interest paid on Deposits, if left two months.

Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner David S. Oyler
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher C. West

WABASH CORNERS.

Ray Herrick made a trip to Hicksville, Thursday.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY'S.

Orange Herrick and wife, spent Saturday in Auburn.

George Wade and wife attended the picnic at Scipio, last Saturday.

Tony Souders of Leo spent Sunday in the family of Sherman Rickett.

F. E. Roads and wife spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives at LaOtto.

Olga Fisk, of Waterloo, visited with Sherman Ricket and family, last week.

Dennis Burley and son Don, attended the races at Hicksville, Friday.

F. E. Rhoads and wife spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives at LaOtto.

Mrs. Rebecca Pinkstaff of Illinois, was the guest of G. C. Lucas and wife, last week.

Mrs. Anna Rickett and daughters May and Bessie and Olga Fisk spent Saturday at Robison Park.

Blanche Wineland, of St. Joe was the guest of George Pervines and family Wednesday night.

Dennis Burley, left Saturday for Coldwater, Mich., to spend a few days with John and Jim Maurer and their families.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Mike Costlo and wife of near Cedarville, ate dinner with Emanuel Ulm and wife, Sunday.

John Bowman and family of Spencerville, spent Sunday with Gene White and family.

Coburn's Corners

J. F. Greenwald, of Butler, visited at L. Gee's, Friday

For a change why not go to KAGEY'S and try a glass of Liquid Force.

Frank Brace of Garrett, spent a few days last week in this neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hamilton took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Abel Sunday.

Ralph Patterson and Foraker Ferrel took supper with Ross Abel and wife Saturday evening.

Little Glen Hart had the misfortune to run a rusty nail through his foot one day last week.

Miss Edna Zeamer, who accompanied Clara Shull home from the Scipio picnic, will spend the week.

A number of people from the Corners drove to St. Joe Sunday afternoon to hear the lecture on "Mothers Songs".

Miss Agnes Dunn who has been visiting her cousin Pluma Hamilton left Wednesday for a visit relatives in Mich.

Some theives stole two fly nets and a rawhidewhip which belonged to Cormie and Vernon Kelley while they were attending services at the Corners Sunday evening.

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

Handles a full and well selected line of

Drugs and Patent Medicines.

Rubber Goods

Special prices on Syringes, Atomizers, Douches, Sprays, Hot Water Bottles.

Toilet and Fancy Goods.

Large Assortment

Of Sponges, Chamois Skins, Trusses, Supporters and Shoulder Braces.

Confectionary and Perfumes.

Spectacles.

A large line of these has just been received and are now ready for sale. Come in and see them.

GOOD GOODS AT REASONABLE PRICES.

AUGUST

L 903

U280

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, AUG. 12, 1908. NO. 33

A Pleasant Reunion.

Many Old Soldiers at St. Joe Thursday. A Large Crowd of People here All Day.

Thursday was a gala day in St. Joe The soldiers reunion brought many war veterans and friends to the town. The two base ball attractions and the band concerts aided materially in enlarging the crowd. During the forenoon, old soldiers registered and in clusters about the street recounted deeds and incidents of the war time. At ten o'clock the base ball teams of Hicksville and St. Joe met on the west end grounds in a ten inning battle. Hicksville coming off the field victors, with a score of 3 to 2.

The Battalion program began at 1:30 in the Widney opera house, with commander O. H. Widney in charge. Rev. Erick of Spencerville, offered a prayer after which the chairman presented Hon. C. C. Gilhams of Elkhart, congressional candidate on the Republican ticket, who gave an interesting address. His theme touched upon how that in the period of the rebellion the young men and middle aged had a duty to perform and that in this crisis they arose to the call and performed their duty well. They are veterans today but it is with pride that they look upon the heritage which has been handed down to posterity. Their deeds of valor and self sacrifice have reared for them a monument more lofty than any stone and one from which the processes of time will not erase the engraving; not a marble slab raised to lofty heights but a nation preserved in its entirety for the enjoyment of those who should come after them. Over this nation floats "Old Glory" typical of American liberties. The flag which woman created and man preserved. The Almighty had a purpose with those who are now veterans and in their working of this purpose they have taught the younger generations noble lessons of patriotism. Now that the nation has been so well preserved the burden belongs to us as younger yet patriotic citizens to conduct the nation on safely down through the ages.

Following this speech Mr. Widney introduced Hon. Cyrus W. Cline of Angola, democratic candidate for Congress, who addressed the audience in a well pointed speech. In his preliminary remarks he stated that when a small boy he remembered seeing the boys in the worn blue returning home from the battle field. The scene impressed him as a boy and as he grew older their deeds and valorous actions has engrossed a large part of his life. He dwelt upon the position which the veterans of today occupy in the history of this country and what they stood for. A hurried glance at the colonial history of our country showed that out of a homogenous number of colonial people had grown a mighty united force for liberty and self government. As time went on and the country became sectionally divided, many good and honest minds tried to compromise the matter, but in 1861 the great Civil War came as all contests come on account of a compromise with evil. A dominant party headed by the great and mighty Lincoln rose in their might and extermintated within our borders the growing evil of servitude and restored the nation in its entirety. The example of the United States has influenced other nations to free their slaves and to give their people a constitutional form of government until in the end, "liberty will cover the earth as the waters cover the deep". Mr. Cline showed that the United States government was great because it stood for principles which the people demand. He also made clear how that Washington and Lincoln were great not because of their individuality but because embodied in their lives and service to the people was the principle of liberty. Reforms of any kind do not come from politician, individual statesmen or pulpit, but do come from the people and the pew. Luther and Wesley became great because they advocated principles that the people stood for. Alexander Campbell was great because he heralded a new religion demanded by thinking people. And so our boys in blue are beloved and reverenced because they were willing to do all in their power to preserve home and native land where there could be a continuance of the spirit of freedom. For this we as younger people out to be grateful to a very marked degree.

As the hour was not late Rev. Erick was unexpectedly called by the chairman and he gave a few brief but interesting remarks. Following this talk the meeting closed and the Battalion held its business meeting. By motion and second it was unanimously decided to change the name of the organization from "DeKalb County Battalion" to the "DeKalb County Veteran's Association". Comrade D. N. Wite, Butler, was elected lieutenant colonel: J. C. Dohner, Butler, major; F. C. Waterman, Waterloo, adjuant; F. W. Willis, Waterloo, quartermaster.

The evening camp fire began at an early hour so that those going west might catch the 8:42 train. The session was begun with music by the Coburn's Corners Band. The audience then sang a few old time war songs led by a mixed quartette, Misses Emma White and Lora Hull, Messrs H. M. Widney and C. A. Woodcox. The address of the evening was given by Chaplain J. A. Brown and was greatly enjoyed by those present. "Righteouness exalteth a nation" was the theme of his talk. He showed how that nations rise and fall but the principles of God go on forever, and that righteouness must so fasten itself on the heart of a nation so that wrong may be put down or the nation will not continue.

The camp fire proper consisted of anecdotes and war experiences by Gabriel Miller of Butler; F. W. Willis of Waterloo; Comrade Johnson, Nebraska; and E. B. Crouse, Hicksville, Ohio.

The quartette sang and the meeting was adjourned.

The following is a list of the veterans who enrolled during the day:

ST. JOE.

O. H. Widney, H. J. Abel, J. D. Leighty, Malon Baker, Florence Buchanan, Isaac Meese, Sam George, C. W. Freeburn, Chas. Widney, John Y. Davis, Benj. Hamilton, G. W. Wade, H. H. Meeks, Drayton Loomis, W. M. Abel, and G. W. Trostle.

BUTLER.

Robert Cochran, Solomon Hose, Gabrill Miller, Job Warford, A. C. Huffman, Fred Ginder, John Miller, D. N. Welte, Enos W. Chapman, J. W. Hamilton and L. Gibson.

WATERLOO.

F. C. Waterman, Henry Luce, A. Richle, F. W. Willis and Park Seibert

HICKSVILLE OHIO.

Wm. Monroe, G. W. Palmer, T. A. Horn, J. M. Collins, Emanuel Kyle, L. C. Palmer, Jacob Oswalt, E. B. Crouse, A. Robertson, J. Palmer, T. L. Armstrong, Walter Palmer, E. W. Erick.

George Neff, Wm. Benton and Jos. Richley of Garret; Joseph Spitler, J. A. Provines, and E. M. Erick, from Spencerville; Wm. Johnson, James Provines and Fredrick Morr, Auburn; Wm. Deams of Edgerton; George W. Walter, Grabill; J. C. Cunnings and Safare Snider; Harlan; John Lowe, Hamilton; Joshua R. Lonsberry, Elkhart; Thomas Palmer, Laketon.

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building. This roof is lightning proof.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,

Roofer & Tinner.

314 West Second St. AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,

Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

Brothers Meet

On August 1st. a meeting of four brothers took place at J. S. Miller's, near Bailey, Michigan. U. J., J. W., P. A., and G. T. Shurts, met for the first time in 55 years. They were separated by the death of their father in 1853 and were scattered among strangers until grown up. U. J. and J. W. enlisted in the war of 1860 the other boys being too young to enlist. There were three sisters and the death of the oldest at Grand Rapids called the family together. All but one sister was present at the funeral. J. S. Miller is the only living uncle of the family and will be remembered by many as Jud Miller near Spencerville. He went to the army in 1860 and lost his hearing from the concussion of cannonading, could only converse with him by writing. Uncle Jud and wife prepared a fine dinner for the brothers and a pleasant time was spent on his farm. The uncle enjoyed the company of his nephews hugely. He declared it made him 18 years younger to meet them at his home.

Choked to Death

Thursday afternoon the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Woodcox, choked while eating an apple. A portion of the fruit lodged in the throat and before a physician could arrive the child was dead. Early in the spring Mrs. Bowen, grandmother of the little one choked to death in the same house.

OBITUARY.

Alfred T. Woodcox, son of Edward and Lulu Woodcox was born near St. Joe, Ind., July 11th. 1907. Departed this life at the home of his grandfather Ballard T. Bowen, August, 6th. 1908. Age 1 year and 26 days. Although Alfred was allowed to remain here but a short time he gave every promise of a bright and intelligent childhood.

He developed at an exceptionally early age a habit of self dependence and it was the common remark of friends and neighbors that they had never seen a child that helped himself as little Alfred did. This together with a quiet loving disposition had endeared him to his parents and relatives and makes their loss seem uncommonly sad. But what may seem to be our loss is surely his gain for he has only missed a life filled with a few joys and many dissapointments for a life which is all joy with Jesus.

He leaves to mourn his departure father and mother together with many friends.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank the friends who so kindly assisted us during our bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Woodcox.

Business College.

Many DeKalb County people owe their present position and standing in life to the training received in the International Business College of Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Twenty years of continued success has brought this school to rank among the highest of its class in the United States. Ft. Wayne is a great city, almost at your door, and many opportunities are to be had, if you possess a first-class Business Education.

Write for our large handsome catalogue.

Grove Meeting

The five Christian churches, Harlan, St. Joe, Milford, Coburn's Corners and Newville held a successful meeting in the Hamilton grove, Sunday. This meeting occurred as the result of a friendly contest which had taken place among the Sunday Schools of Harlan, St. Joe and Milford, in which all three strove to secure the largest membership. The losing side was to entertain the two who were more successful. Milford came out victorious and St. Joe, second. Harlan the losing school, planned a spiritual treat for the other two and invited Coburn's Corners and Newville to take part with the others.

The day was ideal in every way and a large crowd were present to enjoy the good things. The Sunday School session of the morning was very interesting. Immediately following the lesson, preaching services began. Rev. Couch, pastor of the Harlan and Milford churches addressed the audience on "The Power of the Primitive Church." His hearers were greatly pleased with the manner in which he handled the theme and all felt that they had enjoyed a spiritual feast.

After the dinner and pleasant social time, the audience reassembled and participated in the communion service The sermon of the afternoon was preached by Rev. J. A. Brown, pastor of the St. Joe and Coburn's Corners churches. He gave a masterful address on the necessity of a rational belief in God and his son, the Christ, and his hearers were delighted with the power of his message. The music was in charge of Fred Thomas, pastor of the Newville church and he was ably assisted by Nellie Blackburn and Fuchsia Hadsell.

So great was the interest manifest in this meeting, it was decided to form a permanent organization. This was done and the meetings will be held annually on the first Sunday in August. The next one will be at St. Joe.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. - Albert Egly, Cashier.

David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Lecture and Music.

Alfred L. Moudy, the gifted temperance lecturer, will speak on the Lutheran church lawn next Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Mr. Moudy has been making a tour of northeastern Indiana lecturing on "The Great Reform." Every where he has won the applause of the people. He enjoys a wide reputation as a public speaker. He is a fluent talker and an orator of excellent ability. The music will be furnished by the "Hoosier Quartette" of Auburn.

W. C. T. U. Convention

The DeKalb County W. C. T. U. convention will be held in Auburn Tuesday August 25th. Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, state vice president and also state lecturer will be in attendance. Mrs. Stanley will be with the St. Joe union, August 26th., holding a parlor meeting in the afternoon and giving a lecture in the evening. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Don't forget the solo for the left hand alone at the contest at the M. P. church, Saturday night. That alone will be worth the admission fee. It has 1757 notes by actual count and is played in three minutes.

Birthday Party.

A pleasant birthday party was held in the beautiful grove near the home of John Acton, Wednesday, August 5. The event celebrated the anniversary of the birthdays of R. G. Coburn and his sister, Caroline Murphy. Their birthdays both come on August 8th, but on account of other local gatherings on that day the celebration was held earlier Mr. Coburn is eighty-three and his sister is seventy-two years of age. The former lives with his son Alvy, on the home farm and and the latter stays with her daughter, Mrs. John Acton. Thirty-four relatives and friends were present to enjoy the good things of the day, last Wednesday. They were Henry Murphy and family; Mrs. Roy Byers of Knightstown; John Acton and family; Bessie Acton, Mt. Vernon, Ohio; Mrs. Walter Straw, Chas. Murphy, wife and two daughters, also Miss Clara Zimmerman of near Auburn; Albert Monroe and wife of Hicksville, Ohio; Mrs. Effie Schoolmaster and children of Fremont Center, Michigan; Alvy Coburn, wife and son, Mrs. R. H. Conine and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hart. A general good time was had by all present. A bountiful basket dinner was furnished at the noon hour. The children romped and played and slid down hill on the long, smooth grass, while the older folks visited.

Bring Your LAUNDRY
TO
Milliman's Barber Shop
He sends every Wednesday to Hicksville.

The Laurel Ranges.

SOMETHING NEW
AND SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Two Flue Construction.

Can use 6 lids without heating Reservoir or oven. Can use by heating the Reservoir only, or by heating the Reservoir and Oven.

Guaranteed to Save 1-3 Fuel.

COME IN AND LET US DEMONSTRATE THE STOVE TO YOU. ON EXHIBITION AT OUR STORE.

H. V. Kinsey & Son.

AUGUST

L 903

U 281

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 AUGUST 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	•	•	•	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 5th. F. M. 11th. L. Q. 18th. N. M. 26th.

PAST AND PRESENT

AS IT COMES TO US FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Telegraphic Information Gathered by the Few for the Enlightenment of the Many.

Canada's Great Strike.

A dispatch from Winnipeg, Man., says: Trade unionism in Canada has given its defy to the Canadian Pacific railway. Without any untoward incident or ostentatious show, the mechanics and kindred workmen quit work and all shops, big and little on this great system are idle. It is estimated that twelve thousand men went out, the largest number being 2,200 in Montreal and 1,500 in Winnipeg. Two thousand men left work between Fort William and Vancouver. Even old workmen in line for pensions went home, and it seems to be the most complete tie-up in the history of railroad shops in Canada. It was decided not to appoint pickets at present. It is known, however, that the company has several hundred old country mechanics in "cold storage," who will be brought to the scene of action at once.

Zeppelin's Air Ship Wrecked.

Echterdinger special: A dramatic end came to Count Zeppelin's long awaited endurance flight in his monster dirigible balloon and now the proud airship which was cutting rapidly through the air and outdistancing pursuing automobiles, lies in an open field near here a twisted mass of wreckage. A chapter of accidents occasioned by bad moods of the air and the failure of mechanical appliances combined was responsible for the untimely end of the balloon, the flights of which have held the attention of the world, and foreblasting the ambitions of its inventor, Count Zeppelin.

Gov. Cummins a Candidate for Senator

Governor Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, has announced himself as a candidate to succeed Senator Allison, deceased, in the United States Senate. The Governor, in paying a tribute to his late political adversary's services to Iowa, and to the country at large, frankly declared his ambition to be elected to the Senate by the Legislature of his State. He also announced that "someone will be appointed at once to occupy Senator Allison's seat for the remaining months of his unexpired term."

Growth of Knights of Pythias.

At the meeting of the Supreme Lodge of K. of P., held at Boston, Mass., the supreme chancellor reported that the membership of the order had increased from 650,239 on December 31, 1905, to 671,162 in 1906, and 698,532 at the end of 1907. The gain for the first six months of 1908 he placed at 14,000. The average gain in membership during the last ten years has been 20,187, but the last year exceeded this average by 7,189.

Will Wheat Soar to the Dollar?

Will wheat go to the dollar mark? This is the question which the farmer as well as the miller is asking himself at this time. Looking at it from one side, in the face of the recent jumps, it would seem that the farmer would do well to hold off for the dollar, but to quote a farmer who was talking wheat recently, "the market is pretty uncertain, and when you think you've got it you haven't got it, and there you are."

Brush Fires Still Burning.

The destructive forest fires in the Big Elk river valley have now burned past the region of the towns, Fernie, B. C., is destroyed, but Michel, Hosmer and Cranbrook are now out of the danger zone. The flames are still devastating the timber region of the valley beyond the settlements. These bush fires may last a month, or until rain falls.

Well Known Man Dead.

One of the most widely known and best liked men in Fort Wayne, Ind., passed away recently in the person of Frank J. Gruber, the cigar manufacturer, who died of heart failure, brought on by asthma and dysentery.

County Commissioner Not Guilty.

John McGregor was declared not guilty by a jury which had heard the case in which he was charged with accepting a bribe as a member of the board of commissioners of Marion County, Indiana.

Winfield Scott Smith Dead.

Winfield Scott Smith, known to educators throughout the country as a publisher of school text books, died at South Haven, Mich.

THE STORY OF THE WORLD

HONEYMOON ENDS IN DEATH.

Husband Shoots Bride and Self Before Her Parents.

Grover Willoughby, 21 years old, wound up a honeymoon of less than a week in Lebanon, Mo., by murdering his wife, 17 years old, before her mother's eyes. Then he shot himself through the heart and fell by the side of his bride. The cause of the tragedy was the opposition which the parents of the bride made to the match and which finally resulted in a suit being filed by Mrs. Willoughby seeking the annulment of the marriage. The notice of suit aroused Willoughby's anger to such a point that he did not ask a word of explanation, but opened fire the moment he came into the presence of his wife and her mother. The match had been opposed by the parents of the bride because of the extreme youth of the girl. Her name before marriage was Nora Longus. Her father, it is said, was most seriously opposed to the match and made his opposition the base of severe censure of his son-in-law after the young man took the girl before a justice of the peace, where they were married upon Willoughby's representation that she was 18 years of age. Willoughby was an employe of the St. Louis and San Francisco railway. He had been paying court to the young woman for a long time.

G. A. R. TO BUILD WARSHIP.

Popular Subscription Movement Started by Civil War Veterans.

A movement to raise money by popular subscription to build a mammoth United States battleship has been inaugurated by Owen Gray Post, G. A. R., at Larue, Ohio. The only request to be made of the national government, according to the resolution adopted by the post, is that the battleship shall bear the name "Grand Army of the Republic," as a memorial to the veterans of the Civil War. It is expected that every Grand Army post in the country will take up the movement. Contributions of $1 or more are to be received from all citizens, subscriptions being in charge of the commander of each local post, and by him to be forwarded to the department commander of the G. A. R., who will send all contributions to the Secretary of War.

HARVEST HANDS PLENTIFUL.

For First Time in Years Kansas Has Workers Enough in Fields.

Kansas actually has enough harvest hands, for once. This surprising announcement by Director T. B. Gereow of the State employment bureau in Topeka, Kan., reveals that for the first time in many years such a condition prevails. Instead of crying "more and more," as usual, Mr. Gereow has said "enough" to his Kansas City and Chicago agencies. "I can account for it," said Mr. Gereow, "from the fact that lots of people are out of work. Men who wanted jobs are lying in wait for the harvest, and in lots of wheat counties harvesters were on hand several days before the wheat was ready to cut."

KIDNAPS HIS LEPER WIFE.

Flees to Mexico with Ill Helpmeet Rather than Be Parted.

Determined not to be separated from his wife, who is a leper and has been confined at the county hospital in Los Angeles, Cal., Brig. Gen. David K. Wardwell, retired, veteran of two wars, stole her out of the institution and hurried her across the Mexican border, where he declares he will live with her until death separates them. No attempt will be made to bring them back, as the officials say both threatened to end their lives if forced to live apart.

Kentuckians Punish Blacks.

Being unable to secure the real murderer of a white man a mob in Russellville, Ky., lynched four negroes whose only offense had been to express sympathy for the slayer. The negroes who were lynched were members of a lodge, and at a meeting recently, it is said, they approved of the killing of James Cunningham, a white farmer, by his negro tenant, Rufus Browder.

$1,500,000 Fire in Chicago.

Fire broke out in the center of Chicago's great grain district the other afternoon, burning to the ground two mammoth elevators, the Burlington freight depot, 100 freight cars, and for a time threatened to wipe out all the buildings in the territory bounded by State, Canal, Seventeenth and Twelfth streets. The loss is about $1,500,000.

Mrs. Gunness Poison Victim.

In Laporte, Ind., Coroner Mack announced that Dr. Walter Haines of Chicago, who analyzed the stomach of Andrew Helgelein of Aberdeen, S. D., last victim of Mrs. Belle Gunness, finding strychnine and arsenic in fatal doses, has also found in the stomachs of Mrs. Gunness and two of the children arsenic and strychnine in quantities sufficient to have caused death.

Oklahoma Lid Law Defective?

It is stated on good authority that the saloons throughout Oklahoma will reopen as the result of the finding of a flaw in the prohibition law.

Officer Kills Fleeing Man.

After an exciting three-mile chase in an automobile John Duffy, a paroled prisoner, was shot and killed by Marshal Cadwallader of De Soto, Mo. He fled when the marshal attempted to arrest him for violating his parole.

Turks May Return Home.

Proclamations announcing general amnesty to political fugitives from Turkey have been posted in New York and hailed with joy. Many thousands of exiles are expected to return to their native land.

FARMAN IN THREE FLIGHTS.

Flies 800 Yards Straight Ahead in Aeroplane at Brighton Beach.

Henri Farman made three successful flights in his aeroplane at the Brighton Beach race course, New York. Each flight was straight ahead, but soon Mr. Farman hopes to display the machine's capacity to turn around. On his first flight he covered about two-thirds of the distance at a height of never more than six feet. The second flight was a little longer, and on the third he traversed the entire distance, about 800 yards. The weather was ideal for the exhibition, and the aeroplane skimmed along like a swallow. The spectators, who included several local aeronauts, were most enthusiastic. A novel preliminary to the flights was the loosing of about twenty-five toy balloons, so that Farman might judge of the wind currents.

FIRE IS CARELESSLY STARTED.

Boy Lights Match and Causes Explosion of Gas Plant.

Anton Pellowski struck a match while hunting a leak in a gas tank in the purifying building of the Winona Gas Company in Winona, Minn., at midnight. A terrific explosion followed, setting fire to the building and causing heavy damage. The city was left without gas light and it may be days before service is resumed. The explosion was heard for blocks around and frantic people rushed out of their homes to find the huge building in flames. The four walls of the structure were blown out, and the roof was shattered to splinters. The fire was extinguished after a hard fight in gas fumes. Three men were injured, one perhaps fatally. Pellowski, the boy who struck the match, was burned on the hands and face.

NEW MURDER AT LAPORTE, IND.

Body of Well Dressed Man Found with Gun Shot Wounds.

A murder mystery developed near Laporte, Ind., Monday with the finding of the body of a well-dressed man about 40 years of age buried under a pile of rails about one-half mile east of Rolling Prairie, at a point near the Murdock street car line and the Lake Shore road. The man had been shot in the head with a shotgun and his body dragged to the place of concealment. His murderers had stripped him of any evidence as to identification.

Church Aids Pastor's Wooing.

A story from Atlantic City that a delegation from the First Baptist church there is to invade La Crosse, Wis., to persuade the fiancee of Rev. John Wellington Hoag to consent to marry him at once surprised members of the church in the Wisconsin town, as they did not know their pastor was engaged.

Charlotte Walker Divorced.

Charlotte Walker, an actress, was granted a divorce from her husband, Dr. John B. Haden of Galveston, whom she married about twelve years ago. Charlotte Walker is the only child of the late Col. James Walker, a distinguished Confederate soldier, and is leading woman for James K. Hackett.

Boy Shoots Sister Fatally.

A 15-year-old son of Frank Burdick accidentally shot and killed his 19-year-old sister at the home of their parents in Rensselaer, opposite Albany, N. Y. The boy was playing with a shotgun when he suddenly pulled the trigger, the contents lodging in his sister's neck. She died almost instantly.

Noted Pickpocket Killed.

James Ryan, one of the most noted pickpockets of the country, was killed by a tram car of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company at Pratt City, Ala. He was serving a five-years' sentence for robbery. He was arrested in Mobile duing the visit of President Roosevelt four years ago.

State's Revenues Cut Down.

According to the State auditor's report there are 468 fewer saloons in Ohio than there were Jan. 1 last. This reduces the State's revenues since Jan. 1 $397,207. It is believed, however, that the revenue this year and the $1,000 Aiken tax will amount to about $5,000,000.

Nineteen Cars Demolished.

The greatest of freight wrecks, involving the destruction of steel cars, occurred on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad near Meadowbrook, a Philadelphia suburb, when out of a coal train of twenty-eight cars nineteen were demolished, entailing a loss estimated at $100,000.

Governor Breaks Down.

Gov. John S. Little of Arkansas has been placed in a sanitarium in St. Joseph, Mo. He has been suffering from a nervous breakdown almost ever since his election, and it has developed into acute melancholia. His condition is not encouraging.

Allison of Iowa Dies.

Senator William B. Allison of Iowa is dead and Gov. Cummins announces his candidacy for the vacant seat.

Fight Thieves with Pistols.

Three burglars attempted to rob the country home at Greenwich, Conn., of E. C. Converse, director in the United States Steel Corporation, but were driven off by Mr. Converse and a watchman after a battle with revolvers. The burglars drove up in an automobile.

Chicago's Hottest Day.

Chicago had on Monday its hottest day in seven years, the mercury reaching 96.4 degrees; four persons died of heat and two were in serious condition.

DIES TO SAVE SON'S LIFE.

New York Driver Drowns Rather than Imperil His Boy.

To few men does fate offer an opportunity for such heroism as she gave James Farrell, a driver, in New York. His body now lies in the front room of his home, and on the wall hangs the blue ribbon awarded him by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals May 1 last for being the most careful driver in New York. Farrell, who is 45 years old, was swimming with his 17-year-old son Arthur off the pier at the foot of West 52d street when he was overcome with weakness. His son swam to him and threw his arms around his father's neck to hold him up. The father, with the instinct of a drowning man, threw his hands around his son's neck, but realizing that he would drag the boy to the same death he was facing, he released his hold and sank. Young Farrell, on getting his breath, dived after his father, and Robert Graham, who was standing on the pier, jumped into the water fully clothed. Two young friends of the boy, who had gone swimming with the Farrells, also tried to rescue Mr. Farrell. After several attempts Graham brought the body to the surface.

DRIVER QUITS AFTER 45 YEARS.

Faithful Messenger Retired by Company on Half Pay.

Mahlin C. Robb, one of the most familiar figures in the business and financial district of Cincinnati, is missing from his route, and his kindly face, with neat white beard, is seen no more in the banks, subtreasury office, nor on the seat of the American Express Company's money wagon. Robb has been for more than forty-five years the money delivery messenger for the company in Cincinnati, and during this time there has been no loss to the company. He has handled more than $70,000,000,000 in money and bonds. Saturday was his last day, and on that day his great toe was crushed by a truck filled with silver falling on it. The company has retired him on half pay.

NURSE SAVES BOY'S LIFE.

Makes Lad Lie Still as Five Cars Pass Over Him.

Mrs. Ethel Willis, a nurse, saved the life of an unidentified boy in Superior, Wis. While waiting for a street car she saw the boy half a block away fall under a train. She saw that one car had passed over the boy without doing injury. But the lad began to crawl toward the rails and was nearing sure death when the woman commanded the half-dazed youth to lie still. All the while waving to the trainmen to stop, she kept commanding the boy to hug the earth, and after five cars had passed over him the train came to a stop, the boy being unhurt.

MAN KILLED IN $500,000 FIRE.

Plant of National Rendering Co. at Globe Station, Ill., Burns.

One man was killed and a loss of $500,000 occasioned by a fire which early Monday started in a plant of the National Rendering Company at Globe Station, near Lansing, Ill. The man whose life was lost is James McKeag, who lived in Hegewisch. He leaves a wife and two children in Ireland. One hundred and fifty men are employed by the rendering plant, but only McKeag, who was night watchman, was in the building when the fire broke out, supposedly from spontaneous combustion.

Hangs Himself to Flagpole.

Convinced that he had only a few more months to live because his health was failing, Ellsworth Nutt, 50 years old, ended his life in Atlantic City, N. J. Climbing the railing at the ocean end of the steel pier, he knotted the halyards of a flagpole and, tying a noose about his neck, jumped. His neck was broken. Nutt was married.

Rex Beach May Lose Sight.

Rex Beach, the novelist, who has just returned from a bear hunting trip in Alaska, is confined in a Seattle hospital under the care of an eye specialist with a serious attack of iritis, which, it is feared, may result in permanent loss of sight. The affection resulted from exposure while hunting in the Copper river country.

Tobacco War Still Raging.

Two acres of growing tobacco belonging to Hedrup Elslager, near Russellville, Ohio, was cut down with hoes by persons incensed because he was said to have pooled his 1907 crop and afterward sold it to outsiders. The barn on Fred Schatsman's farm, near Russellville, was burned the same night.

Two Drowned in Skiff.

Miss Elise Green, of Savannah, Ga., and Porter Parish, of Memphis, Tenn., were run down in a skiff about forty rods off the Chautauqua pier on Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., by the steamship Chadakoin and both were drowned.

Hazers Not Reinstated.

President Roosevelt says he has not approved the reinstatement of the dismissed West Point hazers.

Footpads Kill Motorman.

Frank L. Brown, a motorman, was murdered by one of four highwaymen at the end of the P street car line in Tacoma, Wash., and Conductor G. R. Windsor was robbed by the highwaymen of his watch and $15 in money.

Woman Patient Leaps to Death.

Mrs. Samuel Cane of Moundsville, W. Va., jumped from Mount Carmel hospital roof garden in Columbus, Ohio, and was killed. The woman had been at the hospital suffering from melancholia.

DEATH TAKES U. S. SENATOR W. B. ALLISON

Noted Statesman Succumbs to Attack of Heart Failure at His Home in Dubuque.

FIGURE IN IOWA POLITICAL WAR.

Public Career Covering More Than Three-Score Years Breaks All Records for Length.

United States Senator William B. Allison dropped dead at Dubuque, Iowa, Tuesday of heart failure. The senior senator's decease comes on the eve of his re-election to another term in the upper house, where he had been a leader for years. His death will perhaps throw Iowa politics into a turmoil again.

William Boyd Allison was born in Perry, Ohio, March 2, 1829. He passed his boyhood days on the farm, securing his preliminary education at the country schools, and graduating from the Western Reserve College in his native state. Senator Allison was admitted to the bar in 1850 and engaged in practice at Ashland, Ohio, where he was married in 1852 to Miss Anna Carter of Wooster, Ohio. He practiced law in Ohio until 1857, when he moved to Dubuque, Iowa. Here he entered politics. Two years after moving to the Hawkeye State he was a delegate to the Republican state convention.

SENATOR ALLISON.

Young Allison represented his congressional district at the Republican national convention at Chicago in 1860. It was in that year that he was appointed a member of the governor's staff and as such engaged in raising troops for the Civil War. He was elected to Congress in 1863, representing his district in the lower house at Washington until 1871. He retired to the practice of law in 1871, but tired of private life and in 1873 made a successful campaign for the United States senatorship from his adopted state. Senator Allison's term in the Senate would have expired the day after his eightieth year.

For more than three score years he was actively engaged in public work. He broke all records for mere length of service. On three occasions he declined a cabinet portfolio, Presidents Garfield, Harrison and McKinley each having tendered the place of secretary of the treasury to the distinguished Iowan in 1881, 1889 and 1897 respectively. He was in public life when Abraham Lincoln was assassinated, and he was a delegate to the famous convention at Chicago in 1800 which put Lincoln in nomination. Passing through the reconstruction time and following Grant through all his troubled administration, the Iowa senator, almost at the beginning of his career in the senate, began to acquire a reputation as a financier.

The local fame of Senator Allison as an expert on monetary matters was extended to international confines when in 1892 he was chairman of the American delegation of the international monetary conference at Brussels. It has been said that Senator Allison and Speaker Cannon know more of the actual mechanism of the American government than all the rest of Congress put together.

Women After a Lawmaker.

Representative Glenn, who recently introduced into the Georgia Legislature a bill to invalidate a marriage contract based upon false appearances of the woman due to the use of pads, stays, crimps, paints or other artificial devices, has asked the protection of the State owing to the large number of threatening letters he has received from women in all parts of the country. He says he takes it that the allegations must have some truth or the women would not be so angry.

Culebra Cut Now Half Done.

The Washington office of the Panama Canal Commission hears that the big cut for the canal at Culebra is about half completed, a total of near 47,000,000 cubic yards having been excavated. Of this, however, the American workers have dug only 16,445,426 yards. Chairman Goethals has reorganized the canal work so as to divide the whole into three geographical sections, in each of which the chief has charge of all classes of work

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Business activity gives further evidence of recuperation. The monthly total of payments through the banks again exceeds the billion dollar mark and commercial defaults this week have fallen below those reported a year ago, both in numbers and liabilities.

Production in leading industries steadily rises and preparations for increasing machinery and labor employed testify to the encouragement which manufacturers draw from the improving outlook.

Crop conditions generally maintain a high position. Harvesting extends northward earlier than was anticipated, results compare favorably with former years, and, together with the high prices current, the prospects are more decidedly favorable to investment of capital and trade.

New demands are notably stronger in pig iron, steel, lumber and other lines, although no contracts stand out conspicuously large.

Factory work reflects recovery in outputs of electric goods, wire, furniture and heavy machinery, and easier costs stimulate construction and new buildings. Permits during July for business structures and improvements very closely approach the high total value of July, 1907.

Mercantile collections throughout the central West have become desirably prompt. High temperatures here and at interior points stimulated absorption in the principal retail lines, and the July sales were successful in reducing merchandise stocks to a comfortable average. Wholesale operations begin their reaction from the midsummer quiet, and the advance arrivals of August buyers already is large.

The markets for grain, live stock and provisions remain fairly active, but the course of prices tended lower. The total movement of grain at this port, 6,972,557 bushels, compares with 5,748,864 bushels a year ago. Compared with 1907 there is increase in receipts of 34.7 per cent and decrease in shipments of 5.2 per cent. Live stock receipts were only 229,847 head, against 265,152 head last week and 249,518 head in 1907.

Bank clearings, $200,235,232, are 11.4 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907, which included two days of heavy August settlements. Money is quoted at 3¾ to 4½ per cent for choice commercial paper. Discounts have increased moderately in the aggregate, but currency shipments to move crops have become heavier.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 22, against 35 last week and 30 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 5, against 8 last week and 8 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Trade, crop and industrial reports show little change from last week, but general tendencies and certainly sentiment are in the direction of moderate improvement. Preparations for the opening of fall jobbing trade in the first week of August are making at all cities, buyers are gathering in large numbers and a full representation, with increased buying, is looked for.

In industry there are evidences of expansion in some lines and of contraction in others. Factories generally are running simply "on orders." In iron and steel, orders and production of finished lines are larger, but pig iron is easier.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending July 30 number 275, against 263 last week, 142 in the like week of 1907, 170 in 1906, 178 in 1905 and 179 in 1904. Canadian failures for the same period were 32, against 24 last week and 16 in this week last year.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.65; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.75; wheat, No. 2, 95c to 96c; corn, No. 2, 79c to 80c; oats, standard, 49c to 52c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $10.50; butter, choice creamery, 17c to 19c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes, new, per bushel, 73c to 80c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.25; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 87c to 89c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 59c to 60c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.40; hogs, $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, $3.00 to $4.45; wheat, No. 2, 94c to 95c; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2, 46c to 47c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.85; hogs, $4.00 to $7.20; sheep, $3.00 to $3.90; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 92c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 51c to 52c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.25; hogs, $4.00 to $6.75; sheep, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 92c to 93c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 70c to 71c; oats, No. 3 white, 61c to 62c; rye, No. 2, 65c to 67c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.13 to $1.15; corn, No. 3, 77c to 79c; oats, standard, 59c to 60c; rye, No. 1, 76c to 77c; barley, No. 2, 69c to 70c; pork, mess, $15.25.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.75; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.25; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.50.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.70; hogs, $3.50 to $7.15; sheep, $3.00 to $4.75; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.01 to $1.02; corn, No. 2, 85c to 86c; oats, natural white, 61c to 64c; butter, creamery, 19c to 21c; eggs, western, 17c to 19c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 91c to 93c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 78c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 46c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c; clover seed, October, $6.00.

AUGUST

U282
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

By WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Copyright, 1904, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY. All rights reserved

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

That instant, under the spell of soft music, Peter's Constable knelt as in a dream to drink at the fountains of inspiration. The dinner call aroused him. The music ceased, and he was again the faltering human lover. The path had been illumined only long enough to show him that there was a shorter way.

It seemed during dinner that Lara had something to say which the presence of the others forbade. Mrs. Stansbury went upstairs. Breen and the planter engaged in a smoky discussion of the literary peregrinations of one Herman Melville. The other two set out for the gardens.

"I have wanted to tell you since morning how sorry I am," she said quietly. "I want you to know that, in spite of mother's decision? I thank you for your kindness, and believe in your deeper knowledge of our danger."

"It's good of you to say that," he answered. "I never tried to persuade anybody to do anything before. I may take Pelee too seriously, but I can't help it, with you folks here."

She laughed. "And I thought that nothing short of an actual eruption could disturb your equanimity."

"Did you ever read 'The Story of the Gadsbys'?" he asked.

"Yes."

"There is a big fragment of truth back of that. Do you think I would have played upon your imagination and nerves, and made a mess of things, if I hadn't been afraid?"

"Afraid of the mountain? That's not like you. Are we about to see you down below in the city, warning the people, like Cassandra in the streets of Troy?"

"I have a dearer service—before going down into the city," he answered. It was as if Breen and the day's contemplation had made this moment inevitable. "That done, I could take up the work there with sleeves rolled up and bursting with anthems."

"What service?" she asked bravely, though the trend of his words was as black on white. She was startled, unready.

"To put you out of the range of Pelee's guns!" he said, with sudden vehemence.

She had scarcely divined that there lived a lover in this man. She felt futile beside him, and yet fused by his penetrating vitality. To her, it was the signal moment in which the woman discovers a giant besieger at her gates.

"They will hear you!" she found herself saying, in a half-stifled tone.

"Let them hear me. I want you to be safe. Pelee is no study to me now, but a grim warning—because you are here! I can't keep my eyes from the volcano, nor my thoughts from you. Don't you know—don't you know that you crept into the very heart of me—a bit of a girl, telling me how to live my life? Yesterday, when I found the mountain awake, all that I had ever done and thought and felt turned to nothing compared to your life. No matter what you think or say to me—I am afraid for you!"

The head bending toward her face seemed huge in the dark, and his lowered voice charged with power.

"But we will go to sea when the Panther comes," she said huskily.

"Lara!" The voice was from Mrs. Stansbury, in the upper window of the house—that calm, fateful voice.

"I must go!"

"Listen. I cannot bear to wait until the Panther comes!" he went on impetuously. "I want to put you safely ashore in Dominica this night—or Fort de France, or even on shipboard—and I will come back here. Do this for me, Lady!"

"Lara!" was called again.

"Yes, mother. * * * No, I could not go alone! There would never be a home here again. I must go to mother—oh, I cannot speak now!"

He stood alone in the dark. A lizard that had hearkened attentively, began to croak his comment to the mango trees.

CHAPTER V.

Sleeplessness ranged through Constable's brain again, and he gave the night to the old work of watching the mountain, and keeping the woman at hand. From time to time, before midnight, he heard the voice of Mrs. Stansbury. The girl was with her, but seemed to make no answer. The house was all his own. Through the lower hall to the music room; out to the veranda, the garden paths and drives; from the window that faced the north, in his own room, to the summit of the Morne d'Orange and the shadowy lawns; through ash-fog and windless moonlight—he trod the night away. The hours fell asleep in passing; the moon drowsed for ages in the cloud gardens; the stars dimmed, disappeared, and trembled forth again, as they had been. It seemed left entirely to him that time passed; he had to grapple with the minutes one by one, and fight each back into the past.

At the side of the great house to the north there was a trellis heavily burdened with lianas. Within, he found the orifice of an old cistern, partially covered by unfixed planking. He lifted the boards, and the moonlight shining through the foliage reflected in the water far below. A heavy wooden bar crossed the rim and was set stoutly in the masonry. Constable lit a match. His mind keenly grasped each detail. A rusty chain depended from the thick crosspiece. Slabs of stone from the side walls were scattered over the bottom of the cistern. He dropped several ignited matches into the chamber, and determined to examine the place more thoroughly by daylight. From the native cabins came the sound of a dog barking. A shutter clicked in one of the upper windows of the plantation house.

"There's be no doubt about it now," he thought grimly. "They'll proceed at once to shut me up for being mentally irreclaimable."

That was a parched but brilliant dawning. The blinding charge from the east changed the dew to steam before it touched the ground. The more delicate blossoms were withered in the hectic burning when the sun was but an hour high. Lara's face was ashen and darkly lined under the eyes. The night had been an evil one to her, evil with a struggle as yet unfinished.

"Peter, you're pulling yourself down," said Uncle Joey after breakfast. "Don't take Pelee quite so seriously. Go to bed for a day, or, better still, steam the Madame out for a day's run and get some rest under the breezy awnings."

"What sort of a graven image do you think your sister's boy is, uncle?" Constable inquired. "I'll get you folks out of the war zone, or stay here until Pelee is cool—or a billion tons lighter."

"But don't you overestimate the chance of an eruption, Peter?"

"I haven't finished my mathematical calculations, my dear relative. Holy nuptials and capitals of hell!—I've been all over this before. Take my word for it, and get set for a start when the mails come in to-morrow morning. You are all foolish virgins. I'm going down below to see how your city flourishes in this furnace of a day. Who is the smug authority on Les Colonies, who undertakes to tell Saint Pierre editorially that there is no danger?"

"M. Mondet is the editor."

"I should relish considerably the pleasure of calking up the throat of M. Mondet with several sheets of his political conspiracies. I believe I shall call upon him."

"We look up to Les Colonies here, Peter. Remember this is not Montana."

"The tropics have enervated you, uncle. You need to be born again."

The hottest morning Saint Pierre had known for years! The porteuses were gone from the highways. Rue Victor Hugo, the principal thoroughfare, was deserted at ten in the morning. Shop doors were closed, the street venders silent. Volcanic ash lay in all the crevices, and mingled with the turf. Behind the shut doors children wailed. The tough little mules, some in their panniers and with no one to lead them, hugged the east walls for shade. From the byways came faintly the smell of death. In the offices of Les Colonies Constable found a breath of coolness, for the outer air was admitted as little as possible. M. Mondet welcomed the caller. Constable explained his purpose, proffered a card, and apologized for his French.

M. Mondet was a tubby little man. His hands were white, soft, tapering, ringed. If you saw them alone, you would promptly uncover, as is customary in the proximity of a woman. M. Mondet did not forget his hands.

"Pelee has a bad look, monsieur," Constable began. "I believe you could clear the city of ten thousand people if you printed a vigorous warning against the mountain; if you ordered the natives to take no chances, but to flee, regardless of their coats, chickens, coals, coins, or their next city fathers. To be instrumental in saving the lives of ten thousand people is not a service given to all men, monsieur."

Constable spoke slowly, and was angered by the reply of the editor:

"But, my dear M. Constable, there is no danger—no danger, I assure you!"

"Sir, this is tragedy—black, rumbling, naked tragedy! I say there is need for a giant here, who would paint the possibilities of that monster in living fire. A man might die in the foulest gutter, cursed by the demons of drink and disease, but with a chant on his lips and 'vine leaves in his hair,' if the memory of such a service as may be yours were with him at the last!"

The French editor found himself looking into a lean, tanned face that flushed and paled in turn. Moreover, he was uneasy on account of a pair of lean, tanned hands which lay lightly and restlessly upon the knees of the man before him. These hands seemed to be the potent embodiments of hate and swiftness. The manner of their low leaping created the impression that their leashes were insecure, and the immaculate cravat of M. Mondet felt tight upon his throbbing throat.

"Perhaps it is well that you called," he said with haste, leading out his caller with the delicacy bred of the fear of dynamite.

Constable left, unsatisfied. The clock in the Hospital l'Militaire struck the hour of eleven. Constable slowly made his way to the water front and back to the Sugar Landing. His launch was still waiting there at the stone pier. He had sent out word to Captain Negley for steam to be kept up night and day. A small crowd was gathering on the shore, slightly to the north of the Sugar Landing. Constable hurried thither. A black woman had fallen, from the sun. Her burdens lay together on the burning sand—a tray of cakes from her head, a naked babe from her arms. Constable had the stricken creature placed in the launch and taken out to his ship for care, sending a native doctor after her. The negroes regarded him with curious adulation. The water front would know him when he came again.

"Oh, I say, friends of mine," he announced in French, "if any of you have sick wives or little ones, send them out to the ship yonder, and they will be cared for. No, it is not a hospital, where fees are charged—just a temporary refuge from the heat for the women and little ones. Tell your neighbors. Here is money to hire boats. I can crowd two hundred babes and mothers on board."

The thought of a breath of coolness turned his steps to Pere Rabeaut's little stone shop in the Rue de Rivoli. Light-headed from the heat, and the root of each hair prickling its individual warning, he ascended the terraces and sank down in the darkness at last, in his old seat under the round window. The shop was quite deserted. Moments passed, as he fanned himself with his limp straw hat. A large piece of cardboard lay upon the table. He turned it over idly. A pencil sketch adorned the side which had lain against the wood. The realisation was instantaneous that no common hand had wrought this work.

The figure was that of a grown girl—Soronia—and the attitude of expectancy brought out queerly the graceful and ardent lines of her figure. A wreath of blossoms was entwined in her hair, and an old French urn hung from her hand. The sketch seemed to be a series of happy after-thoughts, with not a line too much. As he studied it, with interest and curiosity, Constable became conscious of low voices in the court behind. He arose, with no idea of stealth, and stepped to the rear door.

Soronia and Hayden Breen were standing close together in the denser shade at the far end of the court. The song birds were stilled in the torrid noon. The girl's profile, a bewitching thing wrought of animated gold, was upturned to the eyes of Breen, and she was listening with soulful intent. Shy Soronia, mistress of the shadows, was called from her hiding place at last to hearken unto the whisperings of an American. Her heart seemed to wait upon his words.

A smile crept over the face of the watcher. His feelings were strange indeed. There was a nobility in the figure of Breen, standing there among the huge banana leaves! The watcher withdrew. The sketch upon the table reminded him that Soronia had revived the art, long-buried. Perhaps the vivid maiden had revived as well the lost youth of the world-jaded one. Constable departed.

The sky had become overcast. Pelee's cone was not visible from the streets. A sharp detonation cleaved the darkening air, and from the shut houses the answer issued, an answer partly stifled, but vibrant with fright—the quavering cries of age and childhood, sharp, low screams from the mothers, the sullen undertone of men. A subdued drumming came from the north now, completing the tossing currents of sound in the streets. All this was rubbed out instantaneously by a series of thunder crashes. A deluge of ash complicated the shroud of noonday, and the curse of sulphur pressed down. The highways filled magically with a crying, crouching, gray-lipped throng.

The American was running through the burned, poisoned air. A woman stretched out her hands to him as he passed. A mulatto youth fell in at his heels. Others followed. The white man was the sublimation of flight. Down the terraces to the Rue Victor Hugo the runners made their way, augmented as an avalanche gains weight and impetus. At the main thoroughfare, the seemingly maddened leader turned toward the Morne d'Orange, and staggered up the slope toward the plantation house.

(To be continued.)

TWICKENHAM.

Famous as the Abode of Many English Literary Giants.

The place to which the lover of English literature will sooner or later turn his steps is Twickenham. No other small town can boast of having been the residence and beloved abode of so many famous literary lights. With it are associated the immortal names of Pope, Horace Walpole, Swift, Gay, Lady Wortley Montagu, Gibson, Boswell, Johnson, Tennyson and Dickens. Surely this is enough to make any place doubly immortal! Twickenham was well nicknamed by Horace Walpole the Baiae, or Tivoli, of England, for it has truly been to London what Baiae was to ancient Rome—indeed, in a far higher degree. The big red brick house in Montpelier road where Alfred Tennyson lived for so many years of his earlier married life was the one in which many of his earlier poems were written. There his son Lionel, the second Lord Tennyson, was born, and there the author of "Idylls" entertained many of his literary friends and acquaintances. That house should surely be sacred to all lovers of English literature, which saw the dawn of "In Memoriam," which witnessed those delightful gatherings graced by Tennyson, Hallan and kindred spirits within its walls. It is to-day called "Tennyson House."—Westminster Gazette.

An Apt Comparison.

When Ab del Hakk was poor he was one day traveling across a weary plain, says the author of "Life in Morocco," and was very hungry. So he came to the house of the Widow Zaidah, who was also poor; but when he made known his want she set before him two hard-boiled eggs, all the food there was in her house.

Later, when Ab del Hakk lived in Marakesh and was very rich, Meludi, the lawyer, disliking him, persuaded the Widow Zaidah to sue him for the eggs; but not for the eggs alone, for they would have become two chickens, which in time would have so multiplied that the whole fortune of Ab del Hakk would not now pay for them. When the case came to trial the rich man was not in court.

"Why is the defendant not here?" demanded the judge.

"My lord," said his attorney, "he is gone to sow boiled beans."

"Boiled beans?"

"Boiled beans, my lord."

"Is he mad?"

"He is very wise, my lord."

"Thou mockest!"

"Surely, my lord, if hard-boiled eggs can be hatched, boiled beans will grow."

The suit was promptly dismissed, with costs to the plaintiff.

A Casual Blunder.

Doctor—Yes, madam, your two sons are getting on very nicely. The elder stood the operation for the removal of the appendix exceedingly well.

Mother—Oh, good gracious, doctor! That's the wrong one. He's the measly one. It's the other one that has appendicitis.—Baltimore American.

Trousers, in their present shape, were introduced into the British army in 1813, and tolerated as a legitimate portion of evening dress in 1816.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Within the past two months five suicides have occurred in Huntington County.

Mrs. Hulda Galbraith, 40 years old, living near Evansville, fell downstairs and died of her injuries.

Joseph Hedger, of Columbus, en route to Brown County, killed a rattlesnake with eight rattles and a button.

Fire destroyed the poultryhouse owned by R. W. Akins, of Carlisle, causing $4,000 loss, with limited insurance.

Miss Ethel Brookbank, of Jeffersonville, is recovering from blood poisoning, due to wearing new hose and new shoes.

Martin Wheeler, farmer near Nashville, while adjusting a mowing machine, caught his left hand in the machinery and it was cut off.

Clay Rutledge, 14 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rutledge, of Muncie, fell off a hay rack, fracturing both wrists in exactly the same manner and position.

W. G. Laye, city salesman for Bement & Seitz, wholesale grocers, of Evansville, has been missing for several days, and there is no explanation for his absence.

While near a cage containing several wolves belonging to a traveling show, Robert Rosella, of Bedford, 14 years old, was grabbed by one of the animals and his arm was frightfully bitten.

Masons of Greensboro recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the initiation of Quinton Hinshaw into Masonry. Among Masons present was Noble Butler, of Spiceland, fifty-five years a member.

The Rev. Turner Brasher has resigned the pastorate of the Park Memorial Presbyterian church in Evansville, and he will be assigned elsewhere at the coming meeting of the Vincennes Presbytery.

The youngest township trustee in Newton County is Algie Martin, of Morocco, aged 23 years. The town also has the only licensed female lawyer in the county, Mrs. R. O. Graves, wife of the prosecuting attorney.

A knife wielded by Albert Bayless cut a big gash in Cassius McCain's hand during a fight at Waldron. The trouble began on a west-bound interurban car, Bayless asserting that McCain owed him 50 cents.

The most valuable find reported in the Southern Indiana-Illinois pearl fisheries field this season was made by Fred Chapel in the Wabash river a short distance above Mt. Carmel, Ill. The pearl is valued at $1,000.

The Marion Knights of Pythias celebrated the recent acquisition of 148 new members by holding a picnic at Goldthwaite Park. Judge Frank J. Gass, of Muncie, grand chancellor-commander of the State, gave the chief address.

Billy Sunday, the evangelist, desired to cancel his January engagement in Elkhart because all the ministers were not in favor of the proposed meeting. A majority voted to hold him to the engagement, but at the last meeting of the Ministerial Association it was decided to release him.

Mrs. Mary McNally, of Lagro, who is more than 80 years of age, was the victim of a strange illness a few days ago. After dinner she lay down to enjoy a brief nap, and when she awakened she found herself unable to utter a word. It was twenty-four hours before she regained her power of speech.

W. R. Swett, of Crawfordsville, general manager of the newly organized Acme Match Company, which is soon to start a plant at Roanoke, Va., for the purpose of manufacturing matches by the Swett system, will soon establish two new match factories in the Northwest, one at Alberta, Canada, and the other at Baker City, Ore.

A remarkable demonstration followed the close of Sunday-school exercises at Mexico, Miami County, when Walter and Werner Hippolid, 7 and 9 years old, respectively, of the German Baptist Orphans' Home, sang a song in German, one in French and another in Spanish, after which they read the Twenty-third Psalm in German. The singing was exceptionally good. The boys also speak English fluently.

While visiting on the farm of a relative near Creal Springs, Ill., last week Thomas J. Cooper, of Princeton, witnessed the finding of an aged coin, which is believed to have been lost by Ponce de Leon in his search for the "fountain of youth." The coin is of silver, seemingly, and is somewhat larger than a United States silver dollar. It is believed to be an old Spanish coin, and the theory is advanced that it was lost by Ponce de Leon, who, it is thought, believed that Creal Springs was the perpetual youth fountain.

While a storm was raging, Williard Bell, a wealthy Kentucky farmer, opposite Madison, took refuge under a tree, and both he and his horses were killed by an electric bolt.

There is much mystery about the serious injuries received by Oren Fuller, who was found unconscious in the road near Hartford City. He is suffering with concussion of the brain. Fuller was driving home in his buggy and is unable to tell how he was injured.

Frank Veeck, near Degonia Springs, lost his home and contents by fire, involving a loss of $1,800, with partial insurance.

Roy Parkinson, a young Noble County farmer near High Lake, says he has killed twetny-three rattlesnakes this year.

Harry Bowles, of Dublin, in alighting from an interurban, fell in such a way as to severely injure himself, and he is confined to his home.

While shooting at a rat, Ralph Rollins, 12 years old, put a bullet through the neck of Cliff Frerichs, a boy of his own age. The wound may result fatally.

The stave factory company shipped four car loads of staves. One car went to Richmond, another to Dayton, O.; a third to Columbus, Ohio, and the fourth to Buffalo, N. Y.

The new Huntington County courthouse, the building of which began in April, 1904, will be ready for dedication early in September. It has been occupied since the first of the year.

Truly a wedding of spring and summer can be found in nature's domain in the yard of J. F. Conway, in Rushville, where an apple tree bearing ripe fruit is likewise in full bloom and has as many blossoms as were on the limb in the spring.

The Rev. J. R. Edwards, of Owensville, has officiated at the dedication of five new churches of the general Baptist denomination since January, going to Evansville, Washington, Vincennes, Decker, this State, and Campbell, Mo. He has also been called to Sims, Ill., and Essex, Mo.

Victor Smith, 17 years old, while driving to Alexandria in a two-horse wagon, had his wagon caught on the railway crossing and reduced to splinters by a Lake Erie & Western train. The boy was thrown to the side of the track and escaped with a few bruises. The horses also escaped injury.

Violeta Marie Bowen, the 16-year-old daughter of Joseph L. Bowen, Gorlaw, Ill., died at Warsaw, following an illness of only five minutes. A post mortem examination developed that the heart had been pierced by a minute piece of wire which physicians believe followed the course of the arteries until the heart was reached.

Because she has been compelled to move sixteen times in the seven years of her married life, and because her husband is so much the opposite the meaning of his name that he has not been able or inclined to provide, Mrs. Savilla F. Thrift has brought suit for divorce from Harmon Thrift, of the Majenica neighborhood near Huntington.

Old bee hunters in the vicinity of Morocco report more wild bees this season than at any time in their recollection. The bee trees, with one or two exceptions, were well stocked with honey. One bee hunter reports finding a tree in which was a swarm of genuine Italian bees. This tree was a large, hollow oak, out of which he obtained nearly four washtubfuls of honey.

Patoka river pearls have been brought to Oakland City jewelers and found to be of excellent quality; the most valuable one selling for $300. A few days ago some men were bathing in the river and mussels were found. Two pearls were found which netted $10 each. Since that time a number have been found and the industry promises to be profitable. The pearls are known as the Patoka.

Miss Mary Holland, the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Holland, of West Pullman, Ill., was fatally burned while crossing a field near the terminal yards at Hammond. She stepped into a burning peat bed, and her feet were burned to the bone before she could be rescued. Her injuries are frightful. The bed had burned to a depth of ten feet, but on its surface gave no sign of the mischief underneath. Naught but ashes were apparent. The police and fire department are flooding the bed with water. The bed is nearly two hundred feet in length.

Inviting the brothers in his lodge together around him, Joseph Sandlin, a charter member of the Red Men, at Advance, climbed into a coffin which he had made to his order, stretched himself out as he will lie when he is dead, crossed his hands over his breast, and bade them pass around and view him. Mr. Sandlin is a veteran of the Civil War, being a member of the Eleventh Indiana Infantry, and is eccentric. He is 68 years old. Mr. Sandlin made a coffin of the best yellow poplar, superior in workmanship and quality, and bought a lot in a cemetery, and he has placed a monument over the spot where he desires to be buried. He left the coffin in the care of the lodge, inside of which he placed written instructions as to funeral arrangements.

George Harvey, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie V. Cox, of Elwood, drank concentrated lye, and is so badly injured that his life is despaired of.

The saloon in Shelbyville owned by Roy and Earl Vanarsdall was entered by burglars and the cash register was robbed of $78.40. Entrance was effected by climbing to the roof and descending through the skylight. The burglar overlooked checks calling for $34 and a $5 bill.

SULTAN OF TURKEY TARGET FOR DAGGER

Stabbed in the Breast in His Palace and Saved from Death by Armor.

CAPTURE WOULD-BE SLAYER.

He Is a Minor Official and Gold Found on Him Indicates He Had Been Bribed to Commit Act.

Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey was stabbed in the breast at Constantinople by a minor palace official. Only the coat of mail which the Sultan always wears saved his life. This deflected the blow of the would-be assassin's knife, and rendered it practically harmless. The Sultan's assailant was seized at once by the guards which came at the ruler's call.

The Sultan's outcry as he grappled with the man aroused hundreds of palace attaches, and immediately the whole Yildiz Kiosk was in an uproar. Soldiers came clattering in and formed a strong guard around Abdul's private apartments. The commotion was unusual, even for the palace, which has been the scene of so many tragedies arising from attempts and fancied attempts against the Sultan's life. The would-be assassin apparently had been bribed to commit the act, as he had a large sum of gold in his pockets and his baggage was packed ready for flight.

ABDUL HAMID II., SULTAN OF TURKEY.

Abdul Hamid is said to be the most hated monarch in Europe, not even excepting the Czar of Russia, and during his long reign he has lived in continual dread of assassination. He is credited with the blotting out of many lives because of his constant fear of his own life. His victims have been principally members of his household, who for trivial offenses were made targets for the bullets from his beautifully jeweled revolver that he carries constantly on his person. Abdul has ruled over the people of the Turkish empire for more than thirty-two years, having come to the throne in 1876 after successfully deposing his brother, Mourad V.

Former attempts have been made on the life of Abdul Hamid, the most sensational being that of July 22, 1905, when unknown assassins threw a bomb at the red ruler as he was leaving the mosque where the celebration of Salamik had taken place. He escaped serious injury on that occasion, although thirty or forty people were killed. Again in October, 1906, when a report was spread that the Sultan was suffering from a serious illness, it was later learned that the real cause of his affliction was a bullet wound inflicted by one of his Turkish wives.

SINGER'S FINGERS BITTEN OFF.

Miss Emelie Gardner Has Encounter with Ferocious Beast in Dark.

Her left arm frightfully lacerated and two fingers of her right hand chewed off, Miss Emelie Gardner, an opera singer, is in a critical condition at the Coney Island Hospital as a result of being attacked by a huge bull terrier.

Miss Gardner has been spending the summer in her cottage at Seagate, Coney Island. Her housekeeper, Mrs. Bangman, is the owner of a big female dog, which she kept in the rear yard. Sunday, on account of the heat, Mrs. Bangman transferred the dog and her puppies to the pantry in the basement of the cottage.

At night Miss Gardner, who was alone in the house, entered the pantry. The room was dark, and as she closed the door the dog sprang upon her. Miss Gardner threw up her arms, but the teeth of the dog caught her left arm between the wrist and the elbow, crushing flesh and bones. As she struck at the brute with her right hand it snapped at the hand and severed the two first fingers.

ALL AROUND THE GLOBE.

The balloon "Hamburg," of the Hamburg Aeronautical Society, met with an accident while trying to effect a landing at Lubeck.

The Mexican government now claims to have caught the two chief instigators of the recent revolt in the northern section of the country.

Correspondence between the republics of Nicaragua and Guatemala has been made public in showing that the most strained relations exist between the two countries.

AUGUST

U283
L 903

Pressing Down Pains

are a sign of serious female complaint, that should have immediate attention.

If you begin in time, you can generally treat yourself at home, without the need of consulting a physician, by the regular use of Cardui, the well-known remedy for women's ills.

Composed of purely vegetable and perfectly harmless medicinal ingredients, being, besides, a gentle, non-intoxicating, strengthening tonic,

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

relieves all female complaints. "My wife," writes Mrs. A. Rodgers, of Hampden Sidney, Va., "was nothing but a walking skeleton, from female trouble. She suffered agonies with bearing-down pains, backache and headache. Doctors failed to relieve her, so she took Cardui, and is now entirely cured."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 26

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:

THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 41.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 12:05p.m
No. 3, Western Express 3:06 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:21 p..m

The Old Proverb

That "It takes nine tailors to make a man" may possibly mean that it takes nine trials to find the right tailor.

You can save eight trials by coming here first. At this time in the year we can do considerably better by you than later. Not better in style, fabric, fit or finish—that's impossible—but better in price. For Example:—

Suits from $18.00 up.

Pants from $4.00 up

ED MAY,

TAILOR,

utler, Ind.

PATENTS

and TRADE-MARKS promptly obtained in all countries, or no fee. We obtain PATENTS THAT PAY, advertise them properly, at our expense, and help you to success. Send model, photo or sketch for FREE report on patentability. 29 years' practice. SURPASSING REFERENCES. Our free Guide Book on Profitable Patents sent free.

503-505 Seventh Street, WASHINGTON, D. C.

D. SWIFT & Co

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Soldiers, True

During the past week it was our privilege to mingle with the boys in blue who had fought on the field and were wearied in the march. As they stood about on the streets in groups and recounted stories of field and camp their spirits revived and for a time they were really boys again. Such a reunion as was recently in our midst means much to those veterans of today, who realizing that they have performed a valorous duty now proudly enjoy the benefits of a free and united nation.

One cannot help but be impressed with the dignity of their service and the vast importance of the sacrifice which they were willing to make in order that their posterity might enjoy the blessings of liberty; and realizing how great was the service in our behalf, we as a younger generation have a duty to perform. An immense burden of responsibility rests with us, that of preserving a nation which was so nobly saved through the shedding of manhood's blood, and the tears and heart aches of mothers and sweethearts. Our fathers fought nobly for a principle which they believed to be right and we must preserve in righteousness what they accomplished or our national pride and power is certain to be humbled.

There is a great opportunity today to display even greater fortitude than was required to face the cannon's mouth. The cry all over our land is for moral courage to say "I will do what I honestly believe to be 'right'". The soldier of the present must fight this kind of a battle and to do so and come off victorious he must display great fortitude of character. It is pleasing to note that in recent years there has been more of a demand from all sources,—from the factory, railroad, municipal and state governments,—a demand for honesty and uprightness of character. In the home, the church, the school, in society and before social circles at the polls and in political organizations there is a cry for what is right. This indicates a healthy growth in the moral tone of our land. It reveals the stalwart character of the American citizen, manifesting that type of patriotism which not only desires to preserve the nation but also wishes to preserve the lives and character of its citizens. And so the true soldier of today is the man or the woman who is not afraid to display moral courage no matter what his position in life. The man who governs his course by what is right. The one who has the welfare of his fellowman so at heart that no selfish thoughts enter his mind. He manifests a courage which teaches men how to be charitable with their fellowmen. The courage that makes him do right in society or business. Those men or women who are fighting the moral battles of the present are indeed true soldiers and if they help to preserve the nation during the time in which they live they indeed are real soldiers and will be remembered as men of worth by those who come after them.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasion," writes Mr. W. Stone, of East Portland, Maine. It is the proper thing too, for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman drug store. 25c.

Editorially.

Our office is a sort of free congress. People of all ages, of each sex, of all political beliefs and religious creeds, come in to discuss their isms, argue questions, ask for information and seek consolation in their troubles. We do our best for them and they generally go out into the cold world feeling much refreshed. Come and see us—the "latch-string" is always out, chairs furnished and spittons improvised when necessary.

The place that gives a man his living is entitled to his best efforts to advance everything calculated to benefit the place and the community. No man has a right to live in a live town who seeks to enrich himself and not actively identify himself with its interests. To be classed as a drone, or chronic kicker and opposed to every measure believed to be for the good of the citizens is a stigma that should attach to no man in the corporation. The improvements necessary to be made and the manner of making them a monument to the enterprise and intelligence of the citizens is the duty each person owes to the place in which he lives. No man has a right to block legislation in his town simply because he is not benefited by the proposed improvements or perchance may have to pay a little toward it, for in the end it will no doubt have proven a wise proceeding. Let all join in any movement calculated to better our little city.

LEGAL NOTICE.

STATE OF INDIANA, DEKALB COUNTY } S. S.

Notice is hereby given that a petition will be presented to the board of Commissioners of the County of DeKalb, in the State of Indiana, at the September Term, 1908 of said Board, asking for the location of a new public highway along the line between Jackson and Concord Townships in said County and State, on the following route to-wit:

Commencing in the center of the public highway at the north west corner of section nineteen (19), in township thirty three (33) north of range fourteen (14) east, in said county, thence south on the west line or said section to the center of the public highway at the south west corner of said section nineteen (19) and there to end.

Said proposed highway will affect lands owned by Malcius A. High, Samuel M. High, Lorenzo D. Nelson, Charles R. Morr, Carrie R. Morr, Rhsa High and Malvina Nelson.

Said highway being on the west line of said section 19 and on the east line of section twenty-four (24) in Jackson township, said DeKalb County, State of Indiana, and shall be 30 feet wide.

Witness my hand and seal this 29th day of July, 1908.

EMERY A. SHOOK,
Auditor DeKalb Co. Ind.

Epilepsy, Fits

Convulsions, or Spasms and St. Vitus' Dance are Nervous Diseases. Most cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nervine will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over 2 years he still continued to have spells. I had almost given up in despair, but knowing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick headache, I concluded to try the Nervine. During June, 1906, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and I could see that he was improving, and he has not had a spell since August 23, 1906, and has taken no medicine since Jan.-07. I am writing the case just as it is hoping it will induce others to try it."
W. R. ALLISON, Mooresville, N. C.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

PATENTS

PROCURED AND DEFENDED. Send model, drawing or photo. Expert search and free report. Free advice, how to obtain patents, trade marks, copyrights, etc. IN ALL COUNTRIES. Business direct with Washington saves time, money and often the patent. Patent and Infringement Practice Exclusively. Write or come to us at 533 Ninth Street, opp. United States Patent Office, WASHINGTON, D. C.

CA·SNOW & Co

Interesting Games.

Those who attended the ball game Thursday forenoon were treated to a fine exhibition of base ball and in the afternoon witnessed five innings of a struggle between Auburn and St. Joe which promised to be even more exciting than the forenoon encounter, when rain put an end to the game.

At ten o'clock St. Joe lined up against Hicksville eager to win the game in order to even up the defeat received at Hicksville during the races. The game was hotly contested throughout while excitement raged high, and was prolonged into ten innings when Hicksville was able to get one score to the good.

The Buckeyes were winners of a second game by the same score as they secured the first, 3 to 2. Dean was in the box for Hicksville and pitched superb ball striking out seven of the St. Joe batsmen. Ed Hull was in the center for St. Joe and pitched a sensational game, striking out sixteen of the Hicksville batters, and with good support would have shut out the visiting team. Beside these strikeouts to his credit he had three putouts and one assist without an error.

Following is the score of the game.

HICKSVILLE

	R.	H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Ferris, cf.	1	1	1	0	0
Crowl, 2b.	0	0	1	3	2
Fritz, c.	1	1	9	0	0
Cornthwaite, lf.	0	0	1	0	0
Tracht, 1b.	0	0	11	0	0
Warfield, ss. ...	0	0	3	0	1
Jackson, rf.	1	0	1	0	0
Getrost, 3b	0	1	1	1	1
Dean, p.	0	1	2	2	1
Total.....	3	4	30	6	5

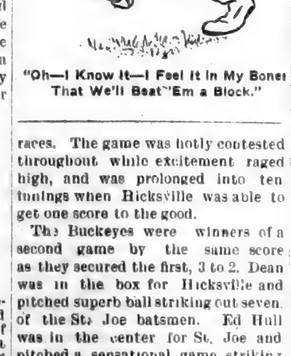
ST. JOE.

	R.	H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Hull, p.	0	1	3	1	0
Grant, 2b.	0	0	1	0	0
Dowling, c.	0	0	16	1	1
Abel, 1b.	0	0	5	1	2
Bishop, 3b.	0	1	1	1	2
Hartgrave ss.	0	0	0	1	2
Leighty rf.	1	1	0	0	0
Blackburn, lf.	0	1	3	0	0
Reasoner, cf.	0	0	1	0	1
Total.....	2	4	30	5	8

By innings—
Hicksville.....0 0 0 1 1 0 0 0 0 1—3
St. Joe.....0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 0—2

"Oh—I Know It—I Feel It In My Bones That We'll Beat 'Em a Block."

COMING.



"Oh, I Knew It, I Said Right Along They'd Beat Us."

The Auburn—St. Joe game had progressed but five innings when rain put an end to it. Neither side had been able to score. Both teams were playing excellent ball and this would very likely have been a better contest than was the forenoon game. Hull pitched again for St. Joe and in the five innings secured seven strikeouts. Palmer did the twirling for Auburn striking out five men.

GENERAL ITEMS

The democratic rally for DeKalb county will be held in Auburn, Sept. 5th. All the arrangements have not been perfected but prominent speakers will be there, such as Frank J. Hall, Thomas R. Marshall and M. B. Leary.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and learn the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with a one cent profit above factory cost. Our prices, Apply, Ohio, the direct.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We take second hand bicycles in exchange and usually have a number on hand taken in part payment for new Ranger bicycles, but prices ranging from $3 to $10 are quoted. These we clear out promptly at once. Write for our list.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES $4.80 A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY

The regular retail price of these tires is $9.50 per pair, but to introduce our tires we sell you a sample pair for $4.80 each. No orders for less than a pair.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting quality being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric under the tread. The regular price of these tires is $9.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them exactly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent on orders where customer will send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump. Tires to be returned at our expense if they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly responsible, as any bank in Chicago will tell you. Simply refer to any bank in Chicago and they are sure to tell you that we are worth many times the amount of money we ask for in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle or tires you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price, but send for a pair of the special introductory price quoted above, or write for our big free sundry catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices. Send no money but write for our liberal trial at once and learn our wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know our latest and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

J. L. MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

Last Wednesday, the Butler people unveiled the soldiers and sailors monument in the local cemetery. The ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd. Gilhams and Cline were the speakers of the day.

DeKalb county is exactly $1,300.17 to the good because of the new depository law that became effective January 1. The funds of the county have been deposited in the three Auburn banking institutions, Auburn State bank, Savings Loan & Trust Company and the City National bank. During the first six months ending June 30 the above sum has been paid the county as interest.

By virtue of a recent order of the postoffice department at Washington, defaced stamps are worthless. Even if a corner is torn off or the stamp is mutilated in any way whatever the letters will remain in the postoffice two weeks, and if not called for will be sent to the dead letter office. Another phrase in the order however, gives the individual permission to perforate the stamps. The object of the new order is to prevent the sending of anonymous letters or the theft or mutilation of private mail of any nature.

O. H. Downey, formerly of Butler, has traded his Noblesville Times for the Crawfordsville Review. The Review lately suspended publication, but Mr. Downey is doubtless able to revive the paper and put a lot of ginger into it. Success, Bro. Downey.

It is stated that after August, pensioners will pay no postage on their pension papers. By an act of congress passed last session each voucher which the pensioner is required to fill out and return in a "penalty envelope" which is to be returned to the pension agent without postage. As the August payments have already been sent out, this order will not go into effect until the November payments.

The county council met to consider the matter of appropriatiins for the construction of bridges throughout the county. One appropriation had been previously made but when bids were received for the construction of the same it was found that the amount allowed was wholly inadequate to effect their purpose. Monday of last week an additional sum to the extent of $810 was appropriated in the hope that this will augment the previous appropriation sufficiently.

Undertaking a Specialty.

Eliza Kinsey, who is a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Calls answered day or night. Prices reasonable. Satisfaction guaranteed.

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

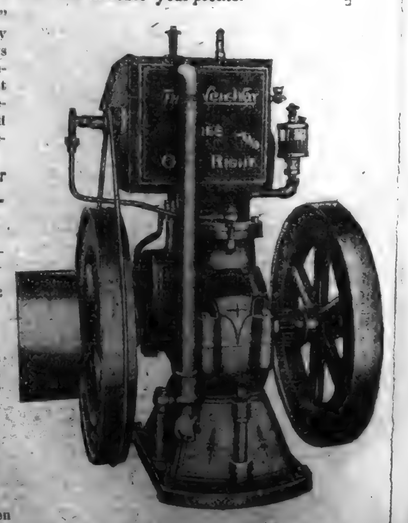
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



So Simple Your Boy Can Run It.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2-H.P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.

Exclusive Agent.

AUGUST

L 903

0284

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of THE ST. JOE NEWS For Spencerville People

Beef Iron and Wine.

This preparation contains 16 minims of tincture Citro Chloride of Iron in each fluid ounce, with their nutritive principles of prime fresh beef, in condition for absorption without effort on the part of the digestive organs. This is a valuable Chalybrate tonic and stimulant and is very widely employed in all conditions resulting from Impoverishment of the blood.

Large 16 ounce bottle for.....50c.

AT

BOWMAN'S DRUG STORE

Sidewalk Improvement.

A considerable amount of cement sidewalk has been laid this summer and the streets of Spencerville are presenting a decidedly improved appearance. A number of street crossings have been put in during the past few weeks, and more will be laid soon. A walk will be built all the way to the school building, work to begin on it immediately. A movement is on foot to extend this walk to the railroad depot. This would be of great convenience to the people walking to and from the depot.

Concord Teachers.

Trustee J. A. Provines of Concord township, has employed the following corps of teachers for this year: AustusKeating, principal high school, Spencerville, John Reinoehl, W. W. Fisher, George Beams, George E. Wilson, Loyd Goldsmith, Robert Uim, O. K. Shull and Miss Floy Weitl. He has not placed the teachers as yet and will not until shortly before the opening of the school term.

Failed to Appear.

Two ball games were scheduled for the picnic, last Saturday. The first between Spencerville and Harlan and the second between the local team and the Ft. Wayne Reds. The second game did not materialize however as the Ft. Wayne team failed to appear. Their excuse for the non-appearance was the absence of their pitcher and first baseman. The fault for the failure of this portion of the days program in no way lies with the committee on sports.

Locates Here.

S. S. Kimes, who is a graduate physician has located in the Markle building and will practice in this locality. Mr. Kimes is well known in this vicinity and no doubt will be able to gain considerable of a practice in this territory.

Broke Collar Bone.

Lewis Fisher, while riding on the handle bars of a bicycle which another boy was propelling, fell and fractured his collar bone. The injured boy is getting along nicely. Boys should be careful how they ride their bicycles up and down the streets lest more such accidents occur.

A Large Crowd.

The Lutheran picnic Saturday was largely attended. Eight schools were present but by far the larger part of the crowd came in individual conveyances. The forenoon consisted of a musical program given by the visiting schools and the Coburn's Corners Band. A sheepskin band was also on the grounds and pounded much excitement into the picnic day. The afternoon was turned over to the crowd and they were free to have a general good time. A portion witnessed the ball game between Harlan and Spencerville, but the greater number remained in the woods to visit. The ladies served dinner for twenty cents and were very busy throughout the dinner hour. The proceeds from all sources amounted to $276.00 and the amount cleared netted about $150.

Political Announcements.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER

CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

News Items

Little Pauline Fisher is visiting her Aunt, Mrs. Frank Butler.

Mr. Ritz Carnes of Chicago, is visiting Henry Carnes and family.

Howard Fales of Noris Chaple was the guest of his sister, Sunday.

Miss Frankie Baltz visited Saturday and Sunday with her sister and grandmother.

Miss Grace Walker, of Hicksville, was the guest of Josephine Carnes, Sunday.

Miss Jennie Porter and Mable Wyatt were the guests of Mrs. Sam Steward Sunday. Miss Porter will prolong her visit a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Craft and little daughetr, Naomi and Mrs. Isabelle Grush, of Auburn, were Sunday guests of Tom Murray and family.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We rre prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

Frank Steward of Garrett visited relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. Rectenwall returned from her visit at Toledo and Maumee, Sunday.

It is expected that George Wilson will be able to be about at the end of the week.

Mrs. Maude Swinehart of Hamilton, Illinois, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Markle.

Elias Zimmerman and wife of Auburn, were guests of Mrs. Rebecca Bowman, last week.

Mrs. Minnie McNabb and daughter of Auburn, were Sunday guests of F. R. Bowman and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Baker of Waterloo, and Dr. Carey and family of Ft. Wayne, were in town, Sunday.

Fay and Bessie Squires and Myrtal Beams, of Ft. Wayne, are visiting their grandmother Elizabeth Beams.

The Ladies Guild of the M. E. church will hold a business session, Thursday afternoon in the church at 2:00 o'clock.

Clara Keesler left Monday night for Huntertown, where she attended the wedding of her cousin, Miss Edith Dunten to Mr. Earnest Musel.

Little Fanny Value, who has been seriously ill with spinal trouble is recovering rapidly and the trained nurse left Saturday for Ft. Wayne.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Lutheran church will meet at the home of Mrs. Mable Erick, Wednesday at 1 o'clock.

I. N. Hursh of Watonga, Oklahoma, is expected here to visit friends and relatives soon. His son, Harry, expects to return with him and spend the winter.

Why James Lee Got Well

Everybody in Zanesville, O., knows Mrs. Mary Lee, of rural route 8. She writes: "My husband, James Lee, firmly believes he owes his life to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery. We tried it, and its use has restored him to perfect health." Dr. King's New Discovery is the King of throat and lung remedies. For coughs and colds it has no equal. The first dose gives relief. Try it. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free

Note books at THE NEWS office.

George Kimes has almost recovered from his recent illness.

Mr. Elery Kimes, of Ft. Wayne was in town Wednesday

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas visited Danial Roades at Egypt, Sunday.

Grace Fayles, of Hicksville, visited her sisters Lela and Ada Fales, Sunday.

The Lutheran church is to have a new coat of frescoeing and some new carpets.

Edward Cupp returned Saturday from Elkhart for a weeks visit with his parents.

Addison Kline and daughter Maud, of Garrett are visiting relatives and friends here.

A number of people from this place attended the Sherly picnic at Woodburn, Sunday.

Mrs. Lillie Shull and son, of Walkerville, Mich. are visiting friends and relatives here.

Miss Vona Smith of Hicksville, O., was the guest of A. F. Heyman and wife, last week.

Miss Fay Sherwood of Norris Chapel was the guest of Ethel Metcalf Saturday and Sunday.

The Spencerville Sunday school expects to have a picnic for the benefit of its own scholars.

Avis and Flossi Sechler of St. Joe are the guests of Mrs. Susie Sechler in S. H. Maurers home.

Harry Henderson, wife and little son, of Walkerville, Mich. are visiting friends and relatives here.

A merry party of young people from Hicksville and St. Joe spent Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carnes.

Miss Josie Carnes will accept a position with the E. P. Pigeon Wholesale Company of Ft. Wayne, next Monday.

Eva Bevington, Grace Walker and Grace Fales of Hicksville, were the guests of Josie Carnes several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Farver, of Auburn, and Charley Moor and wife called on their brother George Wilson Saturday.

The Spencerville Lutheran school will attend the Coburn's Corners picnic, Saturday.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davison, of No. 379 Gifford Ave., San Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy, for headache, biliousness and torpor of the bowels and liver is so pronounced that I am promted to say a word in its favor, for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

Dealer in EDISON PHONOGRAPHS, RECORDS & SUPPLIES.

The phonograph is today recognized as a pleasing and useful instrument to have in any home. It speaks, sings, and plays music, imitating the human voice and musical instruments with perfect accuracy. Come in and hear it. The August records are now on sale.

A FULL LINE OF CIGARS.

Beams & Co.

We are in business to supply your wants in general merchandise. Good seasonable goods suitable for the local trade.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience is that you come in and see what we have. Very likely you will come to town this afternoon or tonight or later. Be sure to glance our way, then follow the glance.

What is Wanted

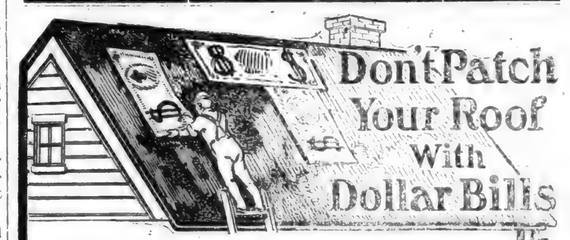
Spencerville, Indiana.



Every dollar spent for painting, contin... roof is a Money Patch that you can avoid ... which requires no coating or painting ...

J-M ASBESTOS ... is made of Asbestos, an indestruct... resists fire and is not affected by ... cost is the only cost. That is ... Roofing. Easily applied by anyone.

ASBESTOSIDE is an Asbestos ... the most economical, durable and ... known.

Ask for samples and prices.

H. W. JOHNS MANVILLE CO.

217 Clybourn St. Milwaukee, Wis.

7901

Secures Contracts

Frank Scholes was at Auburn Wednesday, and entered bids for the construction of bridges and abutments in the county. He was given the contract for building seven bridges and one abutment. Mr. Scholes bids were:

Draggoo bridge	$299.60
Buchananan bridge	354.60
Johnson bridg	408.70
Wilson bridge	333.00
Gratz bridge	572.00
Zerkle bridge	232.00
Rakestraw abutments	200.00

Yearly Meetings.

The annual meeting of the Churches of Christ of DeKalb county will be held at Butler, Sunday, August 23. This meeting had been previously set for Garrett, but on account of a dedicatory service at Butler it was thought best to hold the gathering there this year. The yearly meeting of the Churches of Christ of Defiance county, Ohio will occur at Milford the following Sunday, August 30. Chas. Reign Scoville of Chicago will be the principal speaker at both of these meetings.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable.

Beams & Baker.

AUGUST

U285
L 903

PAPERS BY THE PEOPLE

THE IDEAL LABOR UNION.

By Chancellor Day of Syracuse University.

There might be a union of great help to its membership and to business. I believe in labor organizations as I believe in corporations. But let it be a union upon principles of mutual benefit and helpfulness both to the laborer and to the manufacturer, both to the workingman and to the contractor.

Let it be for the purpose of securing to the employer the greatest proficiency, insisting upon only skilled mechanics for mechanics' pay. Let it consider the interests of the business and how to serve them. Let it compel its wage, not by excluding those who choose to work for less or to work when the union men will not work, but by furnishing the highest type of man and workman, so that business men will say: "If you want the most skilled and reliable mechanic or laborer, you must get them from the union. They will have no one in the union but a first-class man."

Let the union have clubrooms, and discuss thrift and temperance and home sanitation and ways and means of getting the home and furnishing it with books and periodicals for mental improvement, and spend some of the time in amusements and healthy games now spent in the saloons. Let the energy now being put into opposition to capital be used in self-improvement and furnishing a higher class of mechanic.

TRAINING THE FACULTIES FOR SUCCESS.

By John A. Howland.

Concentration of mind in harmonious relation with bodily activity is the greatest active force in civilization. There are human activities which are effective without concentration in the mind, but somewhere in the harnessing of this force some broad scheme has been evolved without which this aimless force in the individual would be wasted. Concentration of mind is not a faculty; it is an acquired ability to command the faculties of mind and of body, and for the best results this acquirement must insure a harmonious relation between brain and brawn. Advice to a man, "You must concentrate yourself in your work," is about as ineffective as to suggest to him that he grow four inches taller than he is. If he has come to maturity without learning concentration, he is not likely ever to appreciate the need sufficiently to undergo the training necessary to get it.

Concentration of the faculties not only is a safeguard against errors, but it is an assurance that when a move has been considered and determined upon the move will have all effectiveness and accomplish the maximum in results. There is no work in life where this attentiveness does not render assurance to the worker and to everyone interested in that work. This concentration is a visible evidence of dependableness in the man. It is evidence of the quality of brain which the worker possesses. It reflects the faculties which education and experience have developed harmoniously. Without this power of concentration every one of these faculties must prove a poor, broken reed instead of a lever that might move a world.

ENJOY BEAUTY WITHOUT ANALYZING IT.

By G. Santayana.

To feel beauty is a better thing than to understand how we come to feel it. To have imagination and taste, to love the best, to be carried by the contemplation of nature to a vivid faith in the ideal, all this is more, a great deal more, than any science can hope to be.

When a man tells you that beauty is the manifestation of God to the senses you wish you might understand him. Yet reflection might have shown you that the word of the Master was but the vague expression of His highly complex emotions. It is one of the attributes of God, one of the perfections which we contemplate in our ideas of him, that there is no opposition in His will and His vision between the impulses of His nature and the events of His life. This is what we commonly designate as omnipotence and creation.

In the contemplation of beauty our faculties of perception have the same perfection; it is, indeed, from the experience of beauty and happiness, from the occasional harmony between our nature and our environment that we draw our conception of the Divine life. There is, then, a real propriety in calling beauty a manifestation of God to the senses, since, in the region of sense, the perception of beauty exemplifies that adequacy and perfection which in general we objectify in an ideal of God.

PEOPLE, NOT THE BOSSES, RULE.

By Gov. Hughes of New York.

GOV. HUGHES.

You may say all you please of the cunning of political maneuvering and of the resources of chicanery. All schemes will prove as child's play if the people set out to deal with a real issue of popular government and the supremacy of the constitution of this State over race track gamblers. It is well that there should be organization to advance party principles. It is well that it should be effective; vigorous and skillful leadership is required. But it is the duty of an elected officer to serve the people and not any particular man, and no party leader has a right to assume the role of dictator, or so to violate the manhood of elected officials as to parade them before the people as subject to his domination.

THE CRICKET.

Oh, to be a cricket,
That's the thing!
To scurry in the grass
And to have one's fling!
And it's oh, to be a cricket
In the warm thistle-thicket
Where the sun-winds pass,
Winds a-wing,
And the bumble-bees hang humming.
Hum and swing,
And the honey-drops are coming!
It's to be a summer rover,
That can see a sweet and pick it
With the sting!
Never mind the sting!
And it's oh to be a cricket
In the clover!
A gay summer rover
In the warm thistle-thicket,
Where the honey-drops are coming,
Where the bumble-bees hang humming—
That's the thing!

Meeting the Question

Viola met the postman at the front door. He gave her two letters; one was addressed in Diana Colvert's absurdly angular hand, and was bulky, with a fortnight's accumulated effusion; the other bore her name in the familiar caligraphy of Eustace Vandiver, who had proposed to her quarterly for half a dozen years.

She went out and sat down on the veranda steps and broke the seal of the first one with eager fingers; Diana's letters were interesting, if rather voluminous. She consumed the first eight pages avidly, then suddenly the sheets fell from her hands and fluttered to the ground. The roses, the hollyhocks, the snapdragons, the violets and jessamine, nodding and drooping in the sun-warmed air, melted swiftly into a hideous rainbow of impossible color, the matutinal chirping of the birds grew harsh and mocking, the blue of the sky turned black. At last she stooped and gathered the letter into her trembling hands and went on with her reading.

The minister, their minister, going to be married and move to Cloverdale! Billy Colvert, Diana's brother, had had a letter from him, so there could be no mistake about it. And she—what a little simpleton she had been to waste her affections on someone who was going to wed another girl. Surely, in their intimate relations of the last year he must have guessed her mortifying secret; probably he was taking this very step to get clear of her. Burning tears sprang to Viola's eyes and dripped over her throbbing cheeks. But she dashed them away in fierce self-scorn, and read on to the end, her lips compressed, the blood scorching her temples.

There were his exact words, quoted from Billy's letter: "I am seriously considering making a change in my residence. I hope soon to marry the dearest girl in the world and bring her with me to Cloverdale. But, of course, it will rest with her whether I shall accept the call or not—that is a woman's prerogative, isn't it? However, let us see you in Brookwood whenever it suits your convenience to come, etc."

Viola folded up the closely written sheets and returned them to the envelope. Then she opened young Vandiver's letter with mechanical fingers and glanced wearily at his twenty-fifth declaration of love, accompanied by an impassioned plea to marry him and sail for Europe in June, whither he was going to complete his course at Heidelberg. Go abroad—away from it all—show him that she had not given her love unmasked, and that * * * She flung back her head with a quick accession of pride, and excitement a smile to her lips, a glow to her eyes. She would do it; yes, she would accept Eustace Vandiver and go with him to the ends of the earth if need be—anywhere away from this.

II.

She went to her room and sat down at her desk, but something seemed to dull her brain and numb her hands; she could not write a syllable. In despair she took her portfolio under her arm and returned to the veranda; the shade of the orchard beyond enticed her and she ran down the steps and

HE GAVE HER TWO LETTERS.

past the flower beds to the gate on the other side. Entering, she sought her favorite retreat in the fork of a gnarled old apple tree. A lazy breeze was blowing, stirring the leaves about her with a vague, musical rustle, and cooling the hot blood in her cheeks. She took up her pen and selected a sheet of note paper. A twig cracked sharply, and she sat up alert. The paper slipped from her fingers.

"Did I startle you?" inquired a deep voice under the apple tree.

"Not the least," said she, disposing herself with studied primness against the knotted limb at her back.

The minister vaulted the lower limb easily and picked out a comfortable seat opposite, tossing his hat on a network of branches.

Viola regarded him first with coldness, then with assumed indifference, finally with a friendly smile that was the hardest thing she had ever accomplished in her twenty-one years. But he must never, never guess—unless he had already done so. And if he had she must set to work to prove to him that he was altogether wrong!

"Viola," he began in his straightforward way, "I've come to you with a confession. I hope you are not going to—to disapprove?"

For a second the girl said nothing. He looked rather young for his age, she thought. He must be at least 28, but his black hair was full of waves, his eyes bright and clear, his face ruddy with health.

"I'm considering a somewhat important step," he went on musingly, his glance sweeping the sky, the ground, and settling at last upon her slightly flushed face, "and I want your—your advice."

"Mine?" she queried, a tiny furrow wrinkling the bridge of her nose. She crossed her hands at the back of her head and stared past him at the rows of apple trees in the distance.

The minister regarded her solemnly for a moment, opening his lips twice to speak, then closing them again uncertainly. A shadow drifted across his good-looking face. "Perhaps," he suggested with a downward inflection, "the affair does not interest you?"

Viola could not suppress a smile at the lugubrious countenance before her, and steadying her breath, she gazed straight into the minister's eyes. But only for a flash. Something in them that she could not altogether make out caused her to turn her head with a swift heartbeat.

"Of course, it interests me," she said with a rush of enthusiasm, recollecting her role, "I thought you were sure of that—always."

He straightened himself then, and with a gesture of determination broke precipitately into the subject. "It's about some one I love," he said, speaking rapidly, "someone, I want to be my wife."

Viola colored furiously; the leaves all about her quivered gently. But she pulled herself together and said in a very matter-of-fact tone:

"You want my advice about her? Well, then you will have to tell me something about her; her disposition, her hair, her eyes—everything, you know."

The minister contemplated her with a fatuous expression.

"Why—as to her disposition," he replied earnestly, "that is all that could be desired—perfect. Her eyes," he scrutinized her with surreptitious anxiety, "her eyes are splendidly, wondrously brown—" He paused. Viola listened movelessly. "Her hair is brown, too—and—most beautiful."

A queer silence followed his words. When Viola looked up she was pale, but valiant, and she seemed all at once thousands of miles away.

"She must be very, very lovely—this girl," she said, dreamily. "Do I know her?"

The minister looked somewhat inscrutable as he made reply:

"I am not sure—perhaps you do not."

She returned his gaze with absent eyes.

"Well?" he prompted with an enigmatic smile.

"Well, I really don't see what I'm to tell you except that I'm delighted to know you are so—so happy and that—that—" she bit her lips, "to congratulate you and——"

"But it is not time for congratulations," he interposed thoughtfully, "you don't understand."

"No," said she, shaking her head. "No, I'm afraid I do not."

"It's this way," he pursued eagerly, bending near to her, "I've been called to Cloverdale. I don't want to go without first finding out whether she will go with me." He reddened and broke off, keeping his hands locked to the limbs on which they were resting.

"The only thing," remarked Viola with sage eyes and a sinking heart, "is to tell her that truth and get it over quick." She caught her breath. "Maybe you have told her?" she suggested tentatively.

"Not just as I should like to."

"Then you will, at once? Put your fate to the test, as they say in tiresome love stories."

"Do you consider them tiresome?"

"Other people's."

"Then we'll not waste any more time discussing other people's." He bent farther, till his warm breath fanned the loose gold about her temples. "Viola," he said, "I love you. Will you be my wife?"

"Oh," she said, "I don't——"

"You don't love me!" with swiftly clouding eyes.

Viola met his look with a wonderful little smile breaking through the shadows of her face, "But—but my hair isn't brown at all," she said bewilderedingly, "and my eyes are unmistakably blue."

"And mine," laughed he, with his arms about her, "are color-blind. Shall I go to Cloverdale?"

"We mustn't think of it," she said.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

REFUSES TO GO TO CIRCUS.

Farmer Tells Why Excitement Is Too Costly for Him.

In riding along the highway I noticed that all the barns were covered with circus pictures and by and by, when I came along to where an old farmer was cutting weeds outside his gate, I asked:

"Well, uncle, I suppose you will go to the circus next week?"

"I couldn't do it," he solemnly replied, accompanied by several shakes of his head.

"Are you afraid that the elephants will break loose?"

"No. I'm afraid of myself."

"As to how?"

"Last fall," he said, as he straightened up to lean on the hoe handle. "I went cooning one night in that cornfield over there. The dog routed out a coon and the pesky varmint headed for a tree that stood where you see that stump. I had just finished building a $400 barn where you see that mess of timbers and boards. The dog follered the coon and I follered the dog. It was a big, fat coon and his pelt was wuth all of 40 cents."

"I see," said I, as he made a long pause.

"I never knew that I was an excitable man before, but they say they heard me holler two miles away. I meant to have that varmint. When he treed I ran for the ax. The old woman came out and yelled at me, but I chopped and whooped and whooped and chopped, and then the tree come crashin' down it smashed the barn as flat as a door nail and the coon got away. Am I goin' to the circus? Wall, I guess not! I'm going to root up weeds and hoe in the garden and be the quietest man in this hull state for the next year to come!"—Baltimore American.

Sly Old Commodore.

"When Commodore Vanderbilt was alive," says a New York Central official, "the board of directors of the New York Central used to find their work all cut out for them when they met. All they had to do was to ratify his plans and adjourn. Yet they had their uses. Occasionally a man would come to him with some scheme which he did not care to refuse outright.

"'My directors are a difficult body of men to handle,' he would say. 'I'll submit it to 'em, but I warn you that they are hard to manage.'

"The matter would be submitted to the board when it assembled and promptly rejected.

"'There,' the commodore would say when his visitor came to learn the result. 'I did the best I could, but I told you in advance that my directors were an obstinate lot.'"

Cool.

"Edith!" the old gentleman bawled from the head of the stairs, "You just ask your young man if he doesn't think it's near bedtime."

"Very well, pa," replied the dear girl in the parlor; then, after a pause, "Jack says yes, if you're sleepy, go on to bed, by all means."—Philadelphia Press.

An Unenthusiastic Host.

"Did you invite Mr. Bliggins to our house party?" asked Mr. Cumrox.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "I'm afraid he considers house parties stupid. He sent his regrets."

"He shows sense. I have a mind to send him my congratulations."—Washington Star.

Very few people reach forty without wishing they had been more careful with their health.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Misses' Semi-Princesse Dress.

This model, designed for young girls, is appropriate for a great many materials, but as illustrated is made of white lawn with trimming of Valenciennes lace.

PATTERN NO. 5978.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

5978.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Girl's Over-Dress.

Every variation of the guimpe dress is being worn by school girls and some very pretty and novel effects are shown. Here is one that is trimmed to give the princesse lines and which is charmingly attractive, while it is absolutely simple and youthful. As illustrated it is made of buff linen with trimming of brown, but it is appropriate for linen in all the prevailing colors, for cham-

PATTERN NO. 6021.

bray, the pretty printed wash fabrics and the like and also for the thinner dimities, lawns and batistes.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6021.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

LITTLE ABOUT EVERYTHING.

Italy leads the nations of the world in the matter of theaters.

A man's hair turns gray about five years earlier than a woman's.

For every ton of gold in circulation there are fifteen tons of silver.

The average length of life of the Icelander is a little over 61 years.

In the course of a month a caterpillar will eat food weighing 9,000 times the weight of its body.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna acts gently yet promptly on the bowels, cleanses the system effectually, assists one in overcoming habitual constipation permanently. To get its beneficial effects buy the genuine.

Manufactured by the
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SOLD BY LEADING DRUGGISTS—50¢ per BOTTLE

BATTLE OF LEXINGTON.

How the News of the Fight Was Received in Wall Street.

Israel Bessel came spurring into the Bowery road from Boston, April 23, 1775, breaking the quiet of a Sabbath morning by roaring startling news at every passing group of citizens; and as the congregations of Trinity and the Presbyterian Church issued from their noonday services he burst upon them with tidings that the battle of Lexington had been fought and won four days before, says Frederick T. Hill in Harper's. In an instant he was surrounded by an anxious throng eagerly clamoring for details, and Wall street was soon in a state of wild commotion, loyalists and patriots scattering to protect their families and property, each man suspecting and fearing the other, and all almost equally dismayed by the news. The patriots were the first to recover from the shock, however, and, headed by Isaac Sears and some of the boldest sons of liberty, a band of citizens hastily assembled, and taking possession of the City Hall seized 500 stand of arms deposited there for the troops, demanded and received the keys of the custom house, closed the building and virtually deposed the royal government.

From that moment all business was suspended in the city, and between April 24 and May 1, 1775, confusion reigned supreme. Then the ablest men in the community assumed control, and calling a mass meeting at the merchants' coffee house, which had practically became the seat of government, organized a provisional committee of 100 to administer the public business. By the orders of this committee the city was virtually placed under martial law, the shops and factories were closed, the streets were patrolled by improvised bands of militia, all available arms and ammunition were seized, crude preparations were made for resisting an attack, and many timorous loyalists closed their houses and sought safety at their country seats. Meanwhile some of the king's troops had been allowed to enter the city, the loyalist members of the committee feeling that their presence would insure order; but when they made an attempt to appropriate the spare arms deposited in their barracks, Marinus Willett forced an armed guard to surrender this booty, and the carts containing the weapons were triumphantly escorted by a great throng of citizens up Broadway, past the head of Wall street, to Abraham Van Dyke's ball alley at John street, where they were placed under lock and key.

Chiropodist—Yes; that's a corn, all right.

Col. Gore—What is a corn, anyhow?

Chiropodist—It's a thickening of the skin, usually caused by pressure. In other words, it is nature's protest against a tight shoe.

Col. Gore (getting hot under the collar)—Blank dash its protest! I haven't worn a tight shoe for two months, and that infernal corn knows it! Yank the dash blank thing out!

One Point Settled.

"And now, Cryptomeria," said the young man, still holding her hand, but with a note of anxiety in his voice, "where shall we go for our wedding journey?"

"Some quiet little place in the country, not far away, Gerald," she answered, "will suit me a great deal better than a long and expensive trip."

"We are going to be very happy, dear!" said Gerald, with a sigh of relief.

Cambridge, Mass., provides for privileges of study and travel one year in seven for the public school teachers. A teacher draws a part salary and has regular position on return.

The first English work on angling was "The Book of St. Albeen's," published in the fifteenth century.

AUGUST

0286
L 903

THE COME AND SEE SIGN

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and aboveboard."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs — without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told?

Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write?

Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted by women only, and are the letters kept strictly confidential?

Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents?

Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands of these women?

Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

Paxtine
TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 50 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

JOS. DUCHAC & CO.

FINE WISCONSIN FARM AND TIMBER LANDS $25.00

92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO

AGENTS WANTED To sell lots in new county seat town in Texas. Low price, easy terms, liberal commissions, free R. R. ticket and berth. Fine business openings. This vicinity produced fruit that took first prize at the World's Fair; best alfalfa land on earth; vegetables grow all winter. Superb climate, no better place for the home seeker or investor. Descriptive printed matter free. Write today. J. L. Scrutchen, 889 Monadnock Block, Chicago, Ill

Wanted Agents in every community to help us sell our Panhandle Texas lands which adjoin improved farms. Level, fertile, no stones, sand or alkali. Price $10 to $17 per acre. We operate farms and furnish assists. Write for circular. Farmers' Colonization Company, 1216 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

WIDOWS' PENSIONS under NEW LAW obtained by JOHN W. MORRIS, Washington, D. C.

The Popular Pulpit

SINS OF OMISSION.

By Rev. Adam Beeck.

Therefore do him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin. —James 4:17.

In the presence of such a text all sins separate themselves into two classes, like the sheep and the goats in the judgment, and sins of omission take the left hand, for they are worse. Few people realize the gravity of these sins. "See," said the young man who came running to Christ, "all these commandments have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet?" He never dreamed there were sins of omission.

It is not impossible to keep the ten commandments, at least in the letter. Thousands there are who do not worship false gods, who do not swear or break the Sabbath, who honor their parents and hold sacred the family relations, who would scorn to steal or lie, and if possessed of good health are not tempted to covet. But, having done this, have they fulfilled all righteousness?

When Jesus had a great truth to utter He made a parable and at the same time poured it full of vital truth, so that the truth would keep the parable alive and the parable embody truth for ages; just as the soul vitalizes the body and the body contains the soul. We have some of these parables as fresh and pertinent as if uttered for the hour. If we balance the emphasis of all the parables of Jesus the overwhelming weight rests on this very point—the seriousness and danger of sins of omission.

Everyone knows well the poor fellow with the one talent. His sin was a sin of omission. He neglected to improve his talent. Five expectant virgins were shut out from the wedding. What was their mistake? They took no oil with them. It was a sin of omission. In that scene of the judgment those who condemned were turned away because they failed to help their unfortunate fellows. This also was a sin of omission.

While sins of commission have slain their thousands, sins of omission have slain their tens of thousands. The study of misfortunes and evils always reveals the sin of omission as the underlying cause. If events could be reversed as easily as moving pictures may be we would in every case discover the place where an ounce of prevention would have outweighed a ton of cure.

We can measure the results of sins of commission, and we often are greatly impressed, but the sins of omission will not plead their case until we all stand before the Judge. There is no premonitory intimation, and the disclosures will be astounding. These seems one discoverable reason why the attainments of present civilization should not have been reached a thousand years sooner. We say "It takes time" to do things. In nine cases out of ten it is simply an excuse for our unwillingness to act promptly at the call of duty and according to the light we have.

There is nothing the matter with this world, except that it "knows to do good," but hesitates, deliberates and arrives too late by some circuitous route. We must teach our youth to harness knowledge, and doing the marvels of the present will be eclipsed by greater. We must swing the whole fabric of modern life from the negative basis in action, ethics and religion—the "Thou shalt not" regime of the past to the positive basis of life suggested in one test: "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

Certainly no man or institution can achieve greatness or endure for any length of time who knoweth to do good and doeth it not.

PIETY IN ACTION.

By Henry F. Cope.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." —Mass. 7: 16.

Fruit bearing is a vital process. We are learning to-day to express religion in terms of life, to measure it not by its power to repress but by its power to develop and express the best in man.

The test of any creed is not the antiquity of its authorities, but the vitality of its ideals, its power over the hearts and lives of men to make a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwells rightness.

This is the reason the old creeds pass away, because each new day sees a higher vision, catches larger glimpses of what man must be. Religion becomes democratic, it is the voice of the people crying out for the highest good. The spiritual in this world is the soul of humanity seeking after truth and fullness of life.

In our day religion passes from philosophy to practice. Once when religion was regarded as a package of truth contained in a special casket, the all important thing was to preserve that package unbroken. When we see religion as the soul of humanity seeking the eternally good that search forces us beyond old truths, beyond tracks made on yesterday's road, forces us to drop the garments of the past, the packages of ancient philosophies and press into to-day's truth.

Every true search for truth demands self-expression. If our vision is that of a new heaven and a new earth, we, if we are sincere, seek to have that new heaven and new earth at once, right here. No man possesses any ideal he does not seek to express and realize. No man has any religion he does not use.

Putting religion into practice becomes at once a much broader matter than doing things at a church, passing the plate or serving in the choir; it means bringing to prevail in human relations, in society, every principle, ideal, and hope that we cherish religiously; it means helping men to the perfections we may dream of the deity possessing, causing our dull earth to bloom with the glory of a long ago Eden and making the streets of our city to ring with the songs of children and shine with the glory of the new Jerusalem.

Religion is becoming intensely practical; it means brooms, bricks, asphalt, votes, primaries; it means honesty, square dealing; it means plain, clear, simple justice instead of maudlin charity; it means a fair wage instead of robbery condoned or palliated by the sop to Cerberus, the library or the hospital; it means that a man cannot express his religion in singing psalms on Sunday, then pack it away in cotton in the pious pigeonhole late on Sunday evening embalming it for a week so that he may, conscience free, go on his selfish way.

Modern religion will not lift up its voice in pious phrases while it grinds down the face of the poor, pays to shopgirl a wage that forces them to vice and to men such a pittance as prohibits their rising even in ambition above dull content with being parts of the money machine. In simplest terms possible, it means that a man will express his religion through his thorough going morality.

We greatly need to moralize our religion, to make it stand for the working out of right and right relations in every detail of life, for teaching us to live together, for bringing us all to social service and social efficiency.

Not less do we need to spiritualize our morality. We need that men shall be good not because they have been told it pays, not because fashion prescribes certain forms of conduct, not because ancient laws mark out the paths of moral rectitude, but because high ideals point out these paths with their clear shining, because one seeks goodness for the good of all.

Morality because "it pays" is immorality; it is refined, civilized selfishness. Morality with the spiritual ideal, the morality that somehow compele a man to lose in the great battle, if but the cause he loves may win, the passion that makes us give up our individual rights and likes for the right, the eternal right of all; this is what morality means when it is lighted with religion, prodigal world.

Work is always weariness when its goal is only wages.

It takes more than a home-made halo to make a hero.

Wisdom is in aging the head and keeping the heart youthful.

The best of all the churches is the temple in your own breast.

It's no use believing in angels in heaven if you cannot discover any here.

It often takes the barrenness of the desert to teach us to look up to the stars.

Morality because it pays to be moral is simply the immorality of civilized selfishness.

Every time you beat your neighbor you may be sure your adversary has beaten you.

The pessimist is the man who always goes straight for the chair with a pin on it.

It is a good deal easier to know the lives of all the saints than it is to show the life of one.

A man has no greater capacity of heaven than he has power to create heaven about him.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't expect too much of God.

Don't discount what is due from yourself.

Don't allow the rule of gold to displace the golden rule.

Don't resolve to go to heaven and then take the wrong train.

Don't think so much of yourself that you have no time to think of others.

Don't live that double life wherein the little good is killed by the little evil.

Don't try to find a way to men's hearts other than through your own heart.

Don't pride yourself on being a law-abiding citizen until you obey the laws of love.

Don't concern yourself with trivial things lest you miss your greatest opportunity.

Don't try to satisfy your conscience with the thought that an evil deed concerns only yourself.

given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

SHEPHERD CARVERS.

The Lonely Sheep Tenders of the California Sierras.

There are few lonelier lives in the world than those lived by shepherds in the high meadows of the California Sierras. All alone they follow their sheep, seeing no one for many months of the year but the sheep, their dogs and perhaps an occasional—a very occasional—traveler. Probably this solitude dries up the springs of speech, for they are said to be very silent when they do encounter any one.

One of these strange men is a Basque from the Pyrenees. A lean, dark visaged, ragged fellow, he is now and then overtaken by some wanderer in the mountains. Along the trail before him his sheep feed. His mongrel collie hangs at his heels. He may raise his stick in mute salutation; he may slouch by without a sign. Yet this uncouth being has one talent—he can carve. His amusement is carving quaint sheep buckles out of bone. Every herd has its bellwether, about whose neck hangs a bell. The bell depends from a leather collar, and it is the buckles of these collars that this old Basque shepherd and some of these other Sierra shepherds make in the course of their lonely days. Sometimes a buckle represents a summer's work, for some of them are very elaborate. Some are in the semblance of saints or angels, some have the monograms of the sheep owners or of the shepherds in curious designs. All are patiently cut, bit by bit, with the pocketknife of the shepherd.—Exchange.

Kids and Goats.

Dottie—O-ooh! What's this picture?

Tommy—That's Capt. Kidd an' his band o' piruts.

Dottie—An' which is Capt. Kidd?

Tommy—W'y, th' guy with th' goatee, o' course!—Cleveland Leader.

As Revised.

Sail on, sail on, O ship of state!
Portland cemented, strong and great!
Humanity need have no fears;
Thou'lt go uncracked through all the years,
With rocky sides imperforate!
—Chicago Tribune.

ALMOST A SHADOW.

Gained 20 lbs. on Grape-Nuts.

There's a wonderful difference between a food which merely tastes good and one which builds up strength and good healthy flesh.

It makes no difference how much we eat unless we can digest it. It is not really food to the system until it is absorbed. A Yorkstate woman says:

"I had been a sufferer for ten years with stomach and liver trouble, and had got so bad that the least bit of food such as I then knew, would give me untold misery for hours after eating.

"I lost flesh until I was almost a shadow of my original self and my friends were quite alarmed about me.

"First I dropped coffee and used Postum, then began to use Grape-Nuts, although I had little faith it would do me any good.

"But I continued to use the food and have gained twenty pounds in weight and I feel like another person in every way. I feel as if life had truly begun anew for me.

"I can eat anything I like now in moderation, suffer no ill effects, be on my feet from morning until night. Whereas a year ago they had to send me away from home for rest while others cleaned house for me, this spring I have been able to do it myself all alone.

"My breakfast is simply Grape-Nuts with cream and a cup of Postum, with sometimes an egg and a piece of toast, but generally only Grape-Nuts and Postum. And I can work until noon and not feel as tired as one hour's work would have made me a year ago." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Cigar Smoke.

The stale smell of cigar smoke is peculiarly unpleasant and peculiarly difficult to get rid of. It clings to the curtains and to most of the articles of furniture which present any sort of an absorbent surface. It is not so to the same extent with cigarettes or with pipes. In the case even of a single cigar books, papers and textiles reek of its stale flavor, and the room requires abundant airing before that flavor is completely eliminated. This effect, we are told, may be traced to the fact that a cigar produces pungent aromatic oils in greater abundance than a cigarette or a pipe. With the cigarette oils are probably burnt even if they are formed, while in the pipe they condense in the stem. In the cigar they seem to be chiefly discarded into the air. In the form of a cigar tobacco would appear to produce more oils than in the form of a cigarette or when burnt in a pipe.—London Lancet.

One of the Old School.

The stern faced old gentleman, who had been a school teacher in the '40s, selected a goose quill, deftly fashioned it into a pen, and wrote his letter on a single sheet of paper.

Then he sprinkled black sand over the written page.

Then he folded the sheet in the form of a rectangle.

After which he sealed it with a red wafer and directed it.

"I like the old way best," he said, "and it's mighty little the steel trust, the paper trust, and the mucilage trust get out of me."

But he had to use something modern, and with a frown he affixed a 2-cent postage stamp.

SHE COULD NOT WALK

For Months—Burning Humor on Ankles—Opiates Alone Brought Sleep—Eczema Yielded to Cuticura.

"I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema. Mrs. David Brown, Locke, Ark., May 18 and July 13, 1907."

Getting Close to Nature.

"Wrigley, what ever became of that little Miss Goodsole?"

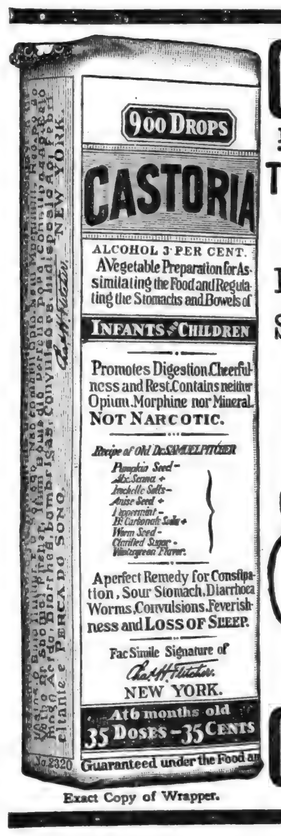
"She turned sociologist and married a tramp."

"Why, I heard her say once that you were her beau ideal of a man."

"Did you? Well, she passed me up for a hobo ideal of a man."

If you use ball blue, get Red Cross Ball Blue, the best ball blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Brazilian railroads in operation at the beginning of last year had a total length of 10,776 miles. In addition there were 1,902 miles under construction and 4,177 miles being surveyed or already approved, making the total mileage about 16,855 miles.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Curious Japanese Festival.

The spring festival of the Japanese is known as the Setsubun. This is the period when the winter first softens into spring. It is chiefly famous for the curious festival, the casting out of devils. On the eve of the Setsubun, a little after dark, the caster-out of devils rushes through the town, offering to exorcise all devils from the homes and call good fortune in. For a trifling fee he performs the rites that are needful to accomplish this. This consists of reciting a Buddhist prayer, shaking a shakujo, and scattering around the house in all four directions dried peas.

These peas are afterwards swept up, and when the first burst of spring thunder is heard they are cooked and eaten. No devil will ever trouble a house in which all these rites have been reverently performed.

In a Pinch, Use Allen's Foot-Ease.

A powder to shake into your shoes. It rests the feet. Cures Corns, Bunions, Swollen, Sore, Hot, Callous, Aching, Sweating feet and Ingrowing Nails. Allen's Foot-Ease makes new or tight shoes easy. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Necessary Formality.

Mrs. Ferguson—George, what do you have to do when you want to draw some money out of a bank?

Mr. Ferguson—You have to put some money in the bank beforehand. That's always been my experience.

Yellow Clothes Are Unsightly.

Keep them white with Red Cross Ball Blue. All grocers sell large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Only Then.

"Little boy, do you ever swear?"

"No, ma'am, 'ceptin' when it's nec'sary and I gotta do it."

"When is it necessary to swear?"

"W'en de empire calls ye out on two strikes an' a ball."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Watchmakers' oil is from the jawbone of the porpoise.

A Bad Break.

Wife—Why did you give that phonograph away just before we were married? Didn't you think I could use it?

Husband—My dear, I gave it away to keep peace. Don't you know that no house is big enough for two talking machines?

And at the last report he was still trying to square himself.—Detroit Free Press.

Horseflesh commands a lower price in Arizona than elsewhere.

TO-NIGHT Cascarets

BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER

"THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP"

10c 25c. 50c. All Druggists

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Texas Panhandle Farm Lands

Come to our Chicago Office and go with us on Special Train

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH

To examine our FARM LANDS, equal to any in CENTRAL STATES. Our Prices are so LOW and TERMS so very REASONABLE you will buy.

LOCATORS LAND COMPANY

646 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill

DAISY FLY KILLER

Placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies; neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Absolutely harmless; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. All dealers or sent prepaid for 25c. Harold Soper, 149 DeKalb ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

AUGUST

L 903

0287

WE'LL KEEP YOU AWAKE

Money Retunded to the first One who goes to sleep while the Program is in progress.

Even if you go to the circus and picnic, can you forget it? The warmest contest for the medal since the contests began. Some new players and good one too.

Come early for Good Seats

ST. JOE M. P. CHURCH, AUG. 15.

SATURDAY NIGHT, 8:15.

JUDGES: Miss Blanche Lochner
Miss Grace Smith
Mrs. W. G. Morr

CHASTINE JOHNSTON.

WABASH CORNERS.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY'S.

Will Lucas and wife spent Thursday in Ft. Wayne.

Abe Culberson and wife, of Concord were Sunday guests of Orange Herrick.

Sherman Wolf and wife, were the guests of Mitch Hanes and family near Auburn, last Sunday.

James Gibford and wife, of Auburn, were the guests of Dennis Burley and family, Thursday night.

The Misses Aletha and Mamie White, of Orland, Ind. spent Wednesday night, with Sherman Wolf and wife.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY'S.

Sherman and Jim Rickett, spent Sunday afternoon in Ft. Wayne.

Mrs. Anna Rickett, spent Sunday night with her sister, Ida Fisk and family of Waterloo.

Last week of the Big Four's mid-summer sale. Bigger bargains than ever.

Ella Gill, Ida Woodcox and son Homer, spent last Wednesday with the correspondent.

Mrs. Catherine Rummell, of Spencerville, was the guest of Will Lucas and wife, Thursday night.

Dennis Burley, wife, and granddaughter, called on Sherman Wolff and wife. Sunday evening.

Mrs. Estella Welch and baby of Auburn, and Mrs. Nels Thomas of St. Joe, spent Friday at Orange Herricks.

Olga Fisk returned to her home at Waterloo last Sunday, after a two weeks visit with Sherman Rickett and family.

CONCORD.

Mattie Sturgis and children of Butler are spending a few days with her sister Mrs. Frank Rhoads....Alice Carper returned to her home Saturday, after spending two weeks with her sister....Grover Morr spent Sunday afternoon at Auburn....Rev. Heininger preached his farewell sermon Sunday forenoon, which was well attended....Howard Krise, wife and son Paul spent Sunday with her parents Dan Morr and wife....John Brown, wife and sons spent Sunday with her mother Mrs. Delila Draggoo....Mary E. Baker and Mrs. Chas. Jackson spent Monday afternoon with grandma French. They report her as having suffered severely from a fall but is feeling better at present....Mrs. Mattie Anderson of Auburn spent several days this week with her mother Mrs. James Wyatt, returning home Thursday....Elmer Renz of Sherwood Ohio, was a visitor in our neighborhood this week. Merritt Baker, wife and son spent Sunday with Eugene Carper's....George Johnson and family spent Sunday with the formers parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnson....Little Flossie Keeler is reported on the sick list....Mirt Johnson spent Saturday and Sunday at the lake near Stroh, Ind., making the trip on his wheel....Dorcas Gill of Auburn is enjoying a pleasant visit on the farm with her cousins Jeanette and Gladys Howey....Mrs. Minnie Steffen and children of Auburn Junction, are spending a few days with her parents....A. L. Spurgeon, the operator at this place was at Butler, Sunday....Alfred Reasoner and wife visited Sunday with John George and family....Aaron Geisinger and family were at the lake, Saturday....Ora Calander and wife spent Sunday with Dennis Poorman and family....John George and Merritt Baker with their families were guests of Sam Morr and family Sunday evening....Dr. Neighswander and wife entertained Messrs Hadyes' and wives to Sunday dinner.

4 % INTEREST

Ask about it. A splendid Savings Proposition.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.

Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid $50,000

Security to Depositors $100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.

3 per cent Interest paid on Deposits, if left two months.

Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner David S. Ober
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher C. West

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH

LAST APPOINTMENT.

Sunday is my last day on this charge. Preaching at St. Joe at 10:15 A. M. and at Fairview at 7:30 P. M.

S. Heininger, Pastor.

Coburn's Corners.

Edith Abel spent Thursday with Ida Widney.

One of Olen Dermott's twin babies has been quite sick.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

Mrs. Walter Able spent a few days with her daughter's family, last week.

Mrs. George Trostel took dinner with W. F. Maxwell and family, Friday.

There will be preaching at the corners, next Lord's Day, both morning and evening.

Cornelia Coburn, of Ft. Wayne, is visiting with relatives in the neighborhood this week.

Rev. Brown and wife, were entertained to supper at the home of Will Hamilton, Monday evening.

The Sunday School at this place is raising money to purchase a blackboard and some new singing books.

Harry Hadsell of Hicksville spent Friday and Saturday of last week week with Sax Hadsell and family.

The Sunday School met at the church Monday night to make final arrangements for the picnic Saturday.

Nina Hadsell and daughters of Peru arrived Saturday, for an extended visit with friends and relatives in this vicinity.

Bradford Rainear of Auburn came Saturday to spend a few days at the home of Nelson Scholes as the playmate of Scott Scholes of Newark, Ohio.

A number of young people gathered at the home of H. A. Coburn, Sunday evening and enjoyed musical treat from his brother, Ezra, assisted by the Misses Blanche and Fuchsia Hadsell and Nellie Blackburn.

BAND CONCERT
SATURDAY NIGHT
EVERYBODY COME.

J. D. Leighty is at Mt. Clemens this week.

Ladies' white shirt waists 98cts. THE BIG 4 STORE.

For a change why not go to KAGEY'S and try a glass of Liquid Force.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

While dinner was being prepared at the home of Aaron Thomas, last Sunday, the summer kitchen caught fire, damaging the roof quite badly.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 32.

St. Joe, Indiana.

Merritt Hull came up from Ft. Wayne Sunday morning and spent the day with his parents.

Some rapid threshing was done on the farm of J. D. Smith, Thursday, when eighty bushels of wheat were threshed in forty minutes. Sherman Rickett's outfit did the work.

The following relatives were guests of Dr. J. H. Lake, Sunday: Mr. Lake's father and mother, his brothers Will and Charley with their wives and children, his brother Layton from Butler, and his brother Frank accompanied by Miss Cora Wrenn of Spencerville.

Mrs. Eliza D. Stewart, widely known among temperance workers of the United States and England as "Mother" Stewart, died at her home in Hicksville, Thursday night. She was born in Ohio ninety-two years ago, and during a greater part of her life time has been very active in her campaign against intoxicating liquors. During the Civil war, she gave her time, strength and means to the cause of saving the Union. She organized the first Woman's Temperance Union in Ohio, and has been active throughout her life as a lecturer and writer.

NEWVILLE.

H. W. Magginis went to Hamilton, Tuesday, to attend the camp meeting....The U. B. Sunday school of Hicksville held a picnic in the Wartenbee grove, Wednesday of last week, they were accompanied by the Boy Band of that place, who stopped on their way home and gave a short concert here....The people from this place, who have been spending a few days at Bethany Park, returned home Thursday....Several from this way attended the unveiling of the Soldiers Monument at Butler, Wednesday....Harry Dean of Auburn, spent a few days at this place, last week....Mrs. Huldah Roberts, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Arville Miller for a few weeks, returned to her home in Toledo Wednesday....G. F. DeLong and wife went to Hamilton, Thursday, where they expect to spend a few weeks....Ed Miller and wife of Hicksville visited at the home of H. T. Smith and Arvilla Miller, Thursday....Frank Culler and family of Logansport spent Thursday with Frank Terman and wife....Inez Magginis, who is attending school at Angola, came home Saturday to remain over Sunday with her folks at this place....While on her way to Auburn, last Monday, Mrs. Jerry Andrews lost her valise. A boy on a bicycle who met her picked it up and started for Hicksville, but fortunate for the telephone he was stopped, the valise was received but not until he had ramsacked the contents....Grace Headley, who is working at Peru, Indiana, is home on a two weeks vacation....Blanche Hadsell of Peru, spent the fore part of this week with Grace and Jessie Headley

SPENCERVILLE R F D NO 1.

Next Saturday the Overholtzer reunion will be held in Harlan at the home of Charles Hartzell.

Nelia Coburn and Hattie Shull of Ft. Wayne have been visiting Zona Horn during the past week.

Miss Fern Walter returned home from Terre Haute last Saturday morning where she had been attending school.

Mr. Dwyer returned home Saturday evening from Streator Ill. where his son Arlie was injured. He brought him home, the boy having gained more rapidly than was expected. His head struck the ground instead of being struck by the engine. His head was not cut but he had hemorrhages from the ears which may injure his hearing. Mrs Dwyer remained with her brother, who is very low with tuberculosis. Mr. Dwyer says the people here should be thankful they have such good crops. There will be but little corn and oats yields only from four to twenty five bushels per acre, in Ill.

Mrs. D. K. Horn visited at Ft. Wayne during the past week. Her brother Ed Shut the building contractor, had his limb badly hurt by falling a short distance and tearing the ligaments.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No 2.

The Misses Clara Keesler and Pluma Kimes and the Messrs DeVern Kelley of Toledo, Ohio, and Corma and Vernie Kelley attended a party at the home of Eva Miller, Thursday night. Ice cream and cake was served and a fine time reported.

Harvie Kimes Jr. has purchased a fine new carriage.

John King of Ft. Wayne is visiting with Wm. Hemrick and family.

Bina Zimmerman spent Sunday afternoon with Lena and Nellie Kelley.

Ray Baker and wife of Waterloo, took supper with Harvie Kimes Sr. and family.

W. S. Tyndall and children and Harvie Kimes attended the show at Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

W. S. Tyndall and family and G. M. Shutt and family spent Sunday with J. A. Provines' at Spencerville.

Mrs. Nettie Safford and children and Fae Manning of Hicksville attended the picnic at Spencerville.

Martin Wagner, wife and son Lawrence, of near Auburn, spent Sunday with her parents, Wm. Davis and family.

The Messrs DeVern Kelley of Toledo, and Corma and Vernie Kelley attended the picnic at Shinerys grove, Sunday.

Frank Emrick, wife and son, and Mrs. Manda Freece of Huntertown and Inez Rhoades spent Sunday with Greely Wearley and family.

Miss Vona Smith of Hicksville, and A. F. Heyman and wife of Spencerville took Sunday dinner with John Benninghoff and family.

A surprise party was given at the home of Wm. Miller, Monday evening it being his forty-eighth birthday. Those present were:- Wallace Miller and wife, Clint Wearley and wife, Vernie Swaidner and wife, David Sowers and wife, James McKinley, Calvin Sailors and wife, Henry Beery and wife, Daniel Oberholtzer and wife, B. Smith and wife and Edward Kinsey. The Misses Otta Gruber of Hicksville; Fern, Zenith, Crystal and Ithes Wearley, Eva Miller and Minnie Sowers. The Messrs. Vernie Kelley, Lee Swaidner, Ray Sowers, Vinton Miller, Delbert McKinley, Kenneth Miller, Samuel Wearley and Herman Miller and also Mrs. Rebecca Pinkstaff of Ill. Ice cream and cake was served.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

Handles a full and well selected line of

Drugs and Patent Medicines.

Rubber Goods

Special prices on Syringes, Atomizers, Douches, Sprays, Hot Water Bottles.

Toilet and Fancy Goods.

Large Assortment

Of Sponges, Chamois Skins, Trusses, Supporters and Shoulder Braces.

Confectionary and Perfumes.

Spectacles.

A large line of these has just been received and are now ready for sale. Come in and see them.

GOOD GOODS AT REASONABLE PRICES.

CLOSING OUT SALE ON DISHES.

You are aware that we have handled a fine line of dishes for a number of years, but we have decided to close out our stock and are bound to get rid of these dishes at startling reductions in prices.

From Now Until SATURDAY, AUGUST 15.

ALL FANCY AND CHINA DISHES AT ONE FOURTH OFF.

Our full line of Plain White Ironstone Chinaware at ONE-HALF Price.

This includes everything we have in this line; TUREENS, DEEP DISHES, BUTTER PLATES, SAUCERS, PICKLE DISHES, SUGAR BOWLS, ETC. COME EARLY AND GET YOUR CHOICE.

Sol Barney, GENERAL MERCHANDISE, DRY GOODS & GROCERIES.

AUGUST

L 903

0288

Supplement to the

St. Joe News

St. Joe, Ind. Wednesday, August 12 1908 Tustison & Leighty, Pub.

Local Items.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Hostetter of Ft. Wayne are visiting at Wm Randall's.

Mrs. Alice Warner was at Ft. Wayne attending the millinery opening this week.

Chas. Bishop and wife of Reading, Michigan, spent Thursday and a part of Friday at this place.

Leslie Meek and George Ridgway arrived, this week, at Sacramento, California, where they will board the U. S. ship, Maryland.

Glen Abel and Miss Agnes Michael of New Haven were here, Thursday.

S. P. Hendricks, wife and daughter Clara, of Fllmore, Missouri, visited with his brother, Emanuel and family during the past week.

Miss Inez Bishop of Auburn, visited Saturday and Sunday with her grandparents, Chas. Huffman and wife at this place.

Dr. J. H. Lake moved last week, from the residence he has been occupying on Widney avenue into the O. H Widney property on West Washington street.

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

J. B. Gibford and wife of Auburn were visitors of C. B. Leighty's, Thursday.

Alda Elson of Auburn, came to St. Joe, Friday, and remained over Sunday as the guest of Miss Helen Patterson.

The ladies of the Lutheran church were quite successful in serving meals Thursday. They served 246 during the day; 122 at noon and 124 at supper. They also gave the band boys their dinner.

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S.

Mrs. Samantha Hull of Auburn spent Thursday and Friday of last week with her son John and family at this place.

Mrs. Frank Baker entertained her sister, Mrs. R. W. Kircher and husband of North Manchester, Saturday and Sunday.

The DeKalb county jail was empty last week. The last inmate was released the Saturday before after serving a sixty day sentence.

THE PROGRAM

OF THE COBURN'S CORNERS PICNIC

Saturday Aug. 15

9:00 to 10:30 Marching and Seating of Schools.
10:30 to 12 Speaking and Singing by Schools.
12 to 1:30 DINNER
1:30 to 2:30 Band Concert

Afternoon Program

This will begin with a special program consisting of speeches, drills and singing. Following this will be athletic sports; Foot, Wheelbarrow, Potato, Sack, Women's and Old Men's Races. Tub and swimming races.

A great comical event and a band concert will close the day's doings.

Dinnr served by the Ladies Aid for 20 cents.

AT THE

Hamilton Grove

AUGUST

0289
L 903

Local Items.

Clean sweep of summer dress goods, 7 to 11 cts. per yard. THE BIG FOUR STORE.

D. J. Baker and sister, Mrs. Joe Hull, went to Newark, Ohio, Tuesday to attend the Baker family reunion.

The Aid Society of the Lutheran church will meet in the home of Mrs. Emma Bishop, Thursday at 2:00 P M.

Marion Smith and family of Auburn and Morte Foote and family of Harlan were visitors of S. S. Widney and mother, Thursday.

Harry Henderson and wife of Walkerville, Mich., are visiting this week with Mrs. Henderson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Curie.

Thomas Palmer of Laketon, visited his daughter, Mrs. Frank Baker, Thursday and Friday and while here attended the soldier's reunion.

A Mr. Shaw of Dupont, Ohio, was in town one day last week, looking for a business location. He has a stock of dry goods and shoes to get rid of.

The Chute & Butler piano is making for itself a strong reputation acquired wholly from the merits of its workmanship. Mr. Hadsell furnished one for use during the Coburn lecture at the Christian church, and also one at the grove meeting at the Hamilton grove, Sunday. Both instruments were finely finished and highly satisfactory.

Old papers at NEWS office.

That $1.00 grocery Bargain is a hummer. THE BIG FOUR STORE.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Price will go to Jacdson Mich., Fryday morning to visit friends and will return the following Tuesday.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

John W. Brown of Franklin township and Mrs. Mary M. McCague of Waterloo were married, Wednesday. Mr. Brown is the present republican county chairman.

Alva Perry and family, Ray Herrick and Claude Mason and wife spent last week at Hamilton Lake. Frank Walter is carrying the mail on R. F. D. No. 2 during the absence of Mr. Perry.

Were it not a travesty on the Bible we would be almost tempted to quote scripture to tell you that the summer is nearly gone and the harvest almost over and yet you have not repainted that buggy and fixed it up for the winter. Protect it with thorough painting and thus avoid the expense of a new rig next year. We are nicely located in the old Skating Rink and thoroughly equipped to handle your work in a strictly first class manner. Prices right and satisfaction guaranteed or no pay. Let us fit you out and make your heart glad for years to come.

O. A. WOODCOX.

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Best Staple AND Fancy Groceries

By the best we mean everything that is good. When you buy from us—staple or fancy—you get the best. Whether you phone your order, send the children, or come personally, your order receives the same careful attention, and you get the best we have. There is some satisfaction in that—don't you think?

Fresh Fruits.

BANANAS
ORANGES
LEMONS
APPLES
CELERY
THIS WEEK

Baked Goods.

Wholesome foodstuffs in the bakery line. Try a loaf of the bread we make; superior in quality, delicious in lightness and palatable enough to make a meal on at any time.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Wm. Curie

Buggies & Implements

A GOOD ONE

Bradley's Fertilizer is recognized as the best on the market and sustained a strong reputation during a period of twelve years. No experiment in using. A big shipment will be here

September 1st.

BIG DISCOUNT.

I have a few of the Oliver No. 11 Riding Plows and will close them out during the coming week at a big discount. Your opportunity to get a good plow.

Get ready for seeding time by purchasing a BUCKEYE DISC DRILL.

To assist in preparing the ground you need a STEEL LAND ROLLER.

COME AND SEE ONE.

BUGGIES
Defiance & Kiblinger.
HARNESS

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Chas. M. Smith, of West Franklin Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

FAIRVIEW

Russell Houser began working for Mark Esselnow Monday.

Tillie and Esther Knight spent Sunday with Mrs Aida Brown.

Miss Myrtal Platter spent last week with her grandparents at Auburn.

Mrs John Meyers and son of Fairfield Center are spending a few days at Peter Coyles.

Miss Ida Ollinger of Canton Ohio, who has been visiting with her sister Mrs. Norman Rowland has returned to her home.

Miss Ether Houser returned from Hunter town, Saturday. Her cousin Orville Houser, accompanied her home for a few day visit.

INSURANCE..

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

H. F. Houser was suprised last week by a visit from his nephew, Wesley McBride who has been in Washington for seven years.

AUGUST

L 903

0290

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 19, 1908. NO. 34

INSURANCE..

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

Beautiful Wedding.

The following clipping is an account of the wedding of Lee Hindman and Miss Nettie Smith which occured at Decatur, August 12th.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at 7:30 o'clock at the St. Mary's Catholic church, by the Rev. Theodore Wilkens, in which Mr. Lee Hindman and Miss Nettie Smith were the contracting parties.

It had long been planned to carry out the effect of a "rainbow wedding" and nature ever ready to lend her aid to her children, put herself in harmony with this event, and just as the bridal party—beautiful in its soft and dainty colored costumes—arrived at the church entrance, mother nature sent a few soft rain drops, and the warm, quick shafts of the sun beams falling there, cast a halo and dainty rainbow of promise over the whole scene.

The party was met by the ushers, Lawrence Smith and Oswald Weinhoff and following them came the flower girls, Little Germain Christen and Vesta Smith, two little blonde and brunette beauties, dressed alike in sheer French lawn frocks, with flounces of Mechlin lace, and carrying bride's roses and smilax. Miss Estella Smith, as maid of honor, followed next, and was gowned in pink silk aeolian. The bridesmaids and groomsmen then came. Miss Letta Lang, gowned in champaign colored messaline; Miss Jessie McLean, in light blue silk crepe; Miss Edna Crawford, in lavendar silk aeolian, and Miss Louise Hobrock, gowned in light green messaline, and the Messrs. Albine Smith, Don Hindman, of St. Joe; Frank Wemhoff and Herman Oetting, of Ft. Wayne. Last but not least in the bridal party, came the bride and groom. The bride always sweet and fair, looked especially charming today. She wore a dainty frock of white dotted silk chiffon over white satin. A bertha of chantilly lace characterized the waist, while the skirt was made with a long train. She wore a long tulle veil caught to her hair with a pom pom of white ostrich feathers, and carried orange blossoms and a white prayer book. The bride's attendants wore white moline hats and gloves to match their costumes, and carried nouquets of roses, white, pink and red. The groom and his attendants wore the usual black.

The bridal party entered the church and proceeded to the altar to the strains of Clayton's Grand March, rendered by Sister Aveline. At the altar they were met by Father Wilkens, who beautifully and impressively solemnized the wedding, using the ring ceremony. This was followed by nuptial high mass. During the service Miss Clara Terveer sang "Ave Marie," and Mrs. Louis Holthoue "O Salutaris." These ladies also gave a duet, rendering the beautiful "Sacred Heart Song."

After the ceremony the party went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christen, of West Monroe street, where at 12 o'clock a wedding luncheon was served to a company of relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Hindman left this afternoon for a trip to Detroit. They will return in about a week, and will then go to Jamestown, N. D., where the groom is engaged in the restaurant and bakery business.

Good gasoline at MILLIMAN'S DRUG STORE.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY'S.

A Real Picnic.

Last Saturday morning dawned cloudy and with indications of rain before the day had proceeded far. On this account many people were kept from attending the Coburn's Corners Sunday School picnic which was held in Hamilton's grove. Many did come however and enjoyed a genuine picnic festivity.

The first school to arrive was the St. Joe Christian. The St. Joe Methodist followed soon after this and Mr. Byron Widney, who brought the load has the credit of bringing fifty-eight on one wagon. The Springfield Center Lutheran school came almost ten miles and brought along a sheep skin band which furnished some rousing martial music. The Spencerville Lutheran school did not arrive until almost noon but they brought a large delegation and furnished some excellent music after the dinner hour. Other schools that attended were Concord, Wesley Chapel and North Scipio.

The forenoon program was very short consisting of songs by schools The audience then enjoyed dinner. The Ladies Aid had prepared an elaborate feast of good things and one could get all they could eat for 20 cts.

The afternoon program was of a varied nature. The literary program contained some special numbers, as drills, solos, recitations, etc. Following this were some athletic games and races. The News editors had issued a challenge to two farmer friends, Will Hamilton and Fred Hart for a horse shoe pitching contest, and if defeated in two out of three games would give each three months subscription to the St. Joe News. The farmers proved too much for the printers and won by capturing the first and third games. Following this event were a series of contests. The first a boy's race won by Paul Curie; the young married woman's race was won by Mrs. Merl Cole; Harry Hursh came out winner in the young men's foot race; Joseph Volkert proved the swiftest in his class and defeated his competitors Joseph Shull and Lucius Palmer of Hicksville by a clean ten feet; Ed Hull of Spencerville, succeeded in winning the stretch, running with a wheelbarrow in which there was a live toad.

It is not possible to give at this time a financial statement of the proceeds of the picnic. This part of it was successful however, as everybody was eating, drinking and making merry.

Those who came were glad they defied the elements in the morning and those who stayed at home have naught but vain regrets.

Mrs. Rush Passed Away.

Mrs. Rush, mother of Mrs. Florence Buchanan, and with whom she resided, died Sunday afternoon at 2:30. She was eighty-eight years of age and had been in feeble health for some time. The body was taken to Auburn Tuesday where the funeral was held in the Methodist church.

Woodcox--White.

Cadmir L. Woodcox and Emma M. White were wedded Saturday evening in the Lutheran parsonage at Auburn by Rev. S. E. Slater. The groom is the son of Mrs. Emma Woodcox of this place and the bride is the daughter of F. J. White. She has lived in the home of her uncle for a number of years assisting in the care of her grandmother, Mrs. Culbertson. Both Mr. and Mrs. Woodcox are well known in this vicinity and scores of friends extend the hand of congratulation and best wishes for a long and happy life. They will make their home at Garrett where Mr. Woodcox has a position as yard master with the B. & O. company.

Band Concert

The Coburn's Corners Farmer Band will give a concert on the streets again next Saturday evening. Large crowds are coming to town every Saturday evening to hear these concerts that are provided through the generosity of the business men. Come to town next Saturday night and mingle with the crowd.

See our advertisement for a list of seasonable spices—H. Milliman.

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S.

Gold Medal Contest.

The Third Annual Gold Medal Contest of the Johnston School of Music was held at the Methodist Church, Saturday night. The program was excellent throughout, proving to be the best of its kind ever given here. Twenty of Mr. Johnston's students played and each one had their music well committed and performed on the piano or organ in a most creditable way. The manner in which they acquited themselves speaks well for Mr. Johnston's system of instruction.

The gold medal was won by Miss Grace Shaner who played Donizette's Overture, rendering this difficult selection of ten pages in a very skillful manner The prize in grade two organ contestants was taken by Lenore Sherer. In grade two piano, Lloyd Coburn won the prize. In grade three Ethel Leighty was victor. Miss Jessie Headley of Newville was the organ graduate and received a diploma in a neat presentation speech from her teacher.

Mr. Johnston favored the audience with selections on the piano and organ. Gladys Smith of Newville, sang three selections which were well received. She sang under difficulty, having been under the care of a physician for more than a week with malaria fever. She has the honor of being the only vocal soloist on the Northern Indiana Log rolling Association program to be held in Auburn next Saturday. The judges were Blanche Lochner, Grace Smith and Mrs. G. W. Morr. Mr. Johnston and students will give three more concerts as follows: Butler M. E. Church, September 4; Newville Christian Church, September 5, and the Auburn Coliseum, September 12.

Mill Exchange

O. M. Coburn has purchased a half interest in the St. Joe Grist Mill. In connection with Sam Keesler he takes the two thirds interest owned by Frank Sechler and S. S. Widney. S. Keesler now owns one half of the property instead of one third as formerly.

Kicked by Horse.

Sunday evening at about six o clock Marguerite, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Tustison was kicked by a horse. The accident occurred at the barn of the child's grandfather. While Mr. Patterson was getting hay for the horse, the girl got behind the animal unexpectedly frightening it. From bruises it would seem that the horse struck the child on the shoulder and the bruise on the face was caused by striking the side of the barn. She was unconscious but a short time. No bones were broken except the tip of the shoulder bone. The physician was called to dress the bruises and the child will soon be alright again.

Change In Time.

The following change of time in the trains that stop at St. Joe went into effect on the Wabash R. R., Sunday. No. 11 going west formerly at 12:05 P. M. now goes at 11:34 A. M. No. 3 going west at 8:06 P. M. now goes at 7:58 P. M. The Toledo Accomodation and Mail now goes at 7:26 P. M. instead of 7:21 as formerly.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.
WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Reunions.

The Lake Family.

The Sixth Annual Reunion of the Lake family was held in Mr. Tyndall's grove, August 15th, 1908. The fore part of the day was spent in happy greetings and a good social time. At the noon hour about one-hundred twenty-five seated themselves around the long tables which were loaded with the finest and best of good things to eat. Blessing was invoked by Rev. E. W. Erick. After the dinner was over, the crowd was called together by the president. The business meeting was held, with the reading of the minutes and the election of officers. The election was as follows: J. N. Lake, president; W. O. Lake, secretary and treasure. Following the business meeting the crowd was entertained by recitations from Miss Jennie Steward and Evangeline Fisher. The balance of the time was spent in playing ball, swinging, boat riding and a general good time for everybody.

The Oberholtzer Family.

The Reunion was held last Saturday at the home of Charles Hartzell and wife at Harlan. Although the morning was cool and threatened rain as the noon hour arrived the skies cleared and all seemed brighter. While there was not quite as large a representation as usual, yet all seemed to enjoy the day together. A few words of kindly welcome and good cheer were given by Daniel Oberholtzer. All felt the freedom and welcome to this home gathering. Some faces that were present last year were missed from the circle this year. Three very long tables had been placed under canvas, and were spread with all the good things that one was capable of enjoying. After dinner was over a social time was indulged in. During the afternoon the families gathered and a few selections were sung, Edna Grubb presiding at the organ. Rev. Mohler then offered prayer. The business session followed the exercises of the day. The committee on nomination reported as follows:—President, Daniel Oberholtzer; vice-president, Ira Grubb; Secretary, R. H. Horn; Treasurer C. C. Grubb; Historian, Mrs. E. H. Horn. Those from a distance were Berne Grubb of LaFayette; James Keefer and family of Ossion, editor of Ossion News; Charles Snyder and family of Albion; Harmon Oberholtzer and wife of Edgerton and C. E. Horn and family of Ft. Wayne.

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building. This roof is lightning proof.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,
Roofer & Tinner.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Wm. Curie
Buggies & Implements

A GOOD ONE

Bradley's Fertilizer is recognized as the best on the market and sustained a strong reputation during a period of twelve years. No experiment in using. A big shipment will be here

September 1st.

BIG DISCOUNT.

I have a few of the Oliver No. 11 Riding Plows and will close them out during the coming week at a big discount. Your opportunity to get a good plow.

Get ready for seeding time by purchasing a BUCKEYE DISC DRILL.

To assist in preparing the ground you need a SEEL LAND ROLLER.

COE AND SEE ONE.

BUGGIES
Defiance & Kiblinger.
HARNESS

AUGUST

L 903

0291

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908			AUGUST			1908
Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	•	•	•	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 5th. F. M. 11th. L. Q. 18th. N. M. 26th.

PAST AND PRESENT

AS IT COMES TO US FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Telegraphic Information Gathered by the Few for the Enlightenment of the Many.

Touring Car Turned Somersault.

A remarkable escape from death was the good fortune of seven persons in a fifty horse-power Rambler touring car, running thirty-five miles an hour, on the Highland-Schererville road, on the way from Hammond to Cedar Lake, Ind. The car, driven by Tony Metzler, owner of the machine, broke an axle and turned a complete somersault. It was only because the car turned over in such a way as to span a ditch, throwing the occupants underneath, that they were not crushed to death. The turn in the road where the accident occurred is known to Chicagoans as a dangerous one. Farmers came to the relief of the autoists and obtained surgical attention, after which they were taken to Cedar Lake.

Big Fire in Parkersburg.

Fire in the West Virginia Veneer and Door Company factory destroyed it and the plant of the Parkersburg Ice Company, burned twelve residences, damaged the Baltimore & Ohio railroad bridge over the Ohio and for a time threatened the entire lower section of Parkersburg, W. Va. A change of wind saved the lower part of the town, the flames being brought under control. The loss will be inside of $150,000; insurance, $75,000.

Aged Wife Asks Separation.

Mrs. Julia Hamman, of North Webster, Ind., has begun suit in the Kosciusko Circuit Court for separate maintenance. Elias Hamman, a well known Kosciusko County farmer, being the defendant. She asks that she be given $10 a week. The complaint recites that the defendant has failed to contribute to her support. Mr. and Mrs. Elias Hamman have been married about fifty years. She is now about 80 years of age.

Fifty Autos Destroyed.

More than fifty automobiles and taxicabs were destroyed in a fire which consumed a one-story brick building at 1710-1718 Indiana avenue, Chicago, Ill., occupied by C. A. Coey Company, as a garage. The fire started with an explosion and spread so rapidly that the building was almost entirely destroyed before the arrival of the firemen. The total loss was estimated at $500,000.

Three Hurt in Wreck at Niles, Ohio.

Passenger train No. 36 on the Pennsylvania railroad from Ashtabula to Newcastle was wrecked at Niles, Ohio. The passengers escaped, but three trainmen were injured, none fatally. Men on a hand car passed a switch and did not have time to close it when the passenger train came along. The passenger train took the siding and ran into a freight train.

Aeroplane Does Wonderful Feats.

Wilbur Wright, of Dayton, Ohio, made a splendid flight with his aeroplane at Lemans, France, circling the field five times and remaining in the air six minutes and fifty-six and two-fifths seconds. The flight was undulating throughout, with the highest level ninety feet.

Nimrod Lands Forty-Pound Fish.

While fishing in Center Lake, in North Warsaw, Ind., Tony Osborn, Warsaw's veteran fisherman, landed a buffalo fish weighing forty-two pounds. This is the largest fish caught with hook and line in Kosciusko County in a score of years.

Rear Admiral Evans to Retire.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, lately in command of the Atlantic battleship fleet, will be placed on the retired list on August 18 next. He is now at Lake Mohonk, N. Y., on leave of absence.

Vast Damage to Tobacco.

Reports of a terrific hail and thunderstorm at Henderson, Ky., reveal damage of more than $100,000 in Henderson County. Sixty per cent. of the tobacco is believed to have been destroyed.

McCamma Hotel Burns.

The McCamma Hotel at Sullivan, Ind., was burned by a fire that started from two explosions, supposed to be due to kerosene. An unknown man perished. The loss is $15,000.

Unknown Mute Killed.

An unidentified man, aged 60 years, deaf and dumb, was killed by a Baltimore & Ohio train west of Ravenna, Ohio. "W. V." was tattooed on his right forearm.

FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH

FOUR CHILDREN DIE IN A FIRE.

Scenes of Panic at Gotham Tenement Blaze—Arson Is Charged.

Four children of one family dead and ten other persons seriously burned or injured is the record of a fierce blaze that swept through a crowded tenement in East 112th street, New York. Scores were carried down ladders from the blazing building by firemen and wild scenes of panic ensued as the scantily-clad tenants rushed to the street. The dead all were children of Vincenzo Sausto, janitor of the house, aged from 8 months to 10 years. Frank Sausto, son of the janitor, is dying from burns, and Sausto and his wife are both suffering from severe burns. There were 150 persons in the building. When the firemen arrived ladders were run up the sides of the building and thirty persons were rescued by means of them. Many would not wait for the ladders and, crazed with fear, leaped to the street below. The police declared the fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin, as a strong odor of kerosene was detected in the lower hall, where the blaze started. This fire is one of several fatal blazes that have recently terrorized that neighborhood. Two months ago thirteen persons were burned to death in a tenement house fire near by.

DYNAMITE A NEW I. C. BRIDGE.

Chicago Structure Damaged—Explosion Laid to Labor Troubles.

The new Illinois Central railroad bridge over the Calumet river at 133d street, Chicago, was partly wrecked by an explosion of dynamite at 2 a. m. the other day. The bridge was almost completed, but was not yet in service. Lieut. Moore of the East Side station started to work on the theory that labor troubles were responsible for the explosion. He was told by employes that fifty non-union men had worked recently on the bridge. The detonation was caused either by a bomb or a stick of dynamite to which a time fuse had been attached. The explosion wrecked a portion of the south end of the structure and threw three men who were sleeping in a shanty nearby from the beds. The men were employed as watchmen by the American Bridge Company in charge of the construction work. Policeman Stanier reported that he had seen three suspicious looking men loitering about the bridge the night before and had threatened to arrest them. They hurried away. Damage to the structure will not amount to more than $200.

WOMAN DIES OF HYDROPHOBIA.

Bitten by Cat and Deliberately Arranges Worldly Affairs.

Knowing that she was dying from hydrophobia, Mrs. Jane G. Turnbull of Baldwin, L. I., 52 years old, imitated the example of the late Dr. William H. Marsh, who fell a victim to the same malady last May, by arranging all her worldly affairs before the end came. She directed her husband to have her body cremated and the ashes taken to Scotland, her native country, for burial in a little graveyard next to a Sunday school she had attended when she was a child. About a month ago Mrs. Turnbull was fondling a cat which she had owned for years. The animal leaped at her throat, missed it and bit her in the nose. The cat gave indications of rabies. Mrs. Turnbull died in convulsions.

Two Lund Banks Close Doors.

Following the suicide of John G. Lund of Minneapolis, "the land man" and one-time millionaire, two banks, of which Mr. Lund was president, closed their doors in order that the accounts might be checked and the securities examined. The banks are the Robbinsdale State bank and the First National bank of Belle Plaine. It is declared by those in charge that the closing will be temporary.

Aero Line Is Incorporated.

The Aerial Navigation Company of Boston, to do a freight and passenger business by airship between Boston, New York and other points, has been incorporated at the statehouse in Boston, the capital stock being $50,000. The incorporators are named as H. H. Bond and C. H. Bond of Boston and James L. Bruce of Waltham.

Danish Explorer Is Lost.

Mylius Erichsen, the Danish explorer, met death in the far North. According to information in a telegram to the committee of the Denmark-Greenland expedition Erichsen and two companions who sailed with him from Copenhagen June 24, 1906, to the unexplored regions of the northeastern coast of Greenland, perished in a snowstorm.

Supposed Murderer of Boy Taken.

Yousof Hassaneman, an aged Turk, has been arrested in Chicago as the alleged murderer of Tuffa Shishein, the 12-year-old boy whose dismembered body was found in the river and the drainage canal.

Thaw Enters Bankruptcy.

Harry K. Thaw has entered bankruptcy at Pittsburg, and a move is seen to fight the heavy expenses of trial.

Low Water Bankrupts Boat Line.

Unable profitably to run its steamboats because of low water in the Ohio river, the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet Line, one of the largest transportation lines plying that river, has become insolvent and gone into a receiver's hands.

Eight Die in Steamer Wreck.

In the wreck of the steamer Premier on Lake Winnipeg eight lives were lost. The steamer, which ran aground on a reef near Warren's Landing, and immediately caught fire, is a total loss.

BARE PLOT TO ROB BIG STORES.

Pittsburg Employes and Mysterious Man Said to Have Taken $50,000.

An alleged conspiracy of employes of mercantile establishments to rob their employers and which it is said has already resulted in the theft of over $50,000 worth of goods from half a dozen firms in Pittsburg, has been unearthed and four arrests have been made, while others are expected to follow. E. B. Jenkins, William Lindsay and two other men whose names have not been given out, are under arrest, while sufficient confessions are said to have been made to warrant other arrests. Each of the men so far arrested was for at least six years a trusted employe of his firm and each works for a different concern. A mysterious man, whose identity has not been learned, is said to have been the head of the conspiracy to rob. Each day he would drive by the back doors of the stores where his confederates were employed and the goods they took were loaded into his covered wagon and hauled away. The men declare they do not know the mysterious man's name and could not identify him, as he never appeared twice in the same make-up. They say part of the time he wore a beard, sometimes was smooth shaven and once was disguised as a negro.

TO IMPROVE LOT OF FARMER.

Roosevelt Asks Four Experts to Make Inquiry and Report Results.

With a view to bringing about better social, sanitary and economic conditions on American farms, President Roosevelt has requested four experts on country life to make an investigation into the whole subject and to report to him with recommendations for improvements. The report, with any additional recommendations which the President himself may desire to make, will be incorporated in a message which he will send to Congress probably early next year. The men President Roosevelt has asked to act as an investigating committee are Prof. L. H. Bailey, of the New York College of Agriculture; Henry Wallace, of Wallace's Farmer, Des Moines, Ia.; President Kenyon L. Butterfield, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College; Gifford Pinchot, of the United States Forest Reserve, and Walter H. Page, editor of the World's Work, New York.

DROWNS ATTEMPTING TO SAVE.

Nebraska Boy Tries to Rescue Brother and Both Perish.

Two sons of David James of Minersville were drowned in the Missouri River near Nebraska City, Neb. Mr. James, with his wife and three sons, went to the river for a picnic and the boys went into the water for a swim. Elmer, 18 years old, got beyond his depth and his brother Charles, 20 years old, went to his aid. In the effort to rescue his brother, Charles was drawn under and they both drowned.

Tornado at Mandan, N. D.

A tornado struck Mandan, N. D., and damaged trees and buildings to the extent of $50,000. A boy was picked up by the wind and carried three blocks. He was seriously bruised. The roof of the Inter Ocean Hotel, a three-story structure, was loosened and crashed into the dining-room. The Lemars Hotel was unroofed. Houses were tipped over and many windows were shattered.

Six Prisoners Saw Bars; Flee.

Six prisoners confined at police headquarters in Kansas City, sawed the iron-barred windows of the cell and escaped. Only the timely arrival of the desk sergeant, who had been warned by one of the prisoners of the attempted delivery, prevented the escape of fifty other prisoners. All of the men were held on petty charges.

Two Dead by Plunge of Auto.

When an automobile plunged over a steep embankment on the Mitchaw road two and a half miles west of Sylvania, Ohio, Charles W. Pohlmann, a wealthy Cleveland importer and merchant tailor, and Father George Vahey, pastor of St. Columbkill's parish, Cleveland, were instantly killed beneath the car.

Engine Off Track; Three Killed.

Three persons were killed and four badly injured and a number of passengers bruised when an engine pulling a Frisco passenger train was derailed at Imboden, Ark. The engine dashed over a 12-foot embankment, pulling the mail, baggage and smoking cars with it.

Five Persons Are Killed.

Five persons were killed, three fatally injured and twenty-two others hurt, sixteen seriously, when two trolley cars crashed together head on between Sidney and Piqua, on one of the lines of the Western Ohio Traction Company.

Factory Falls, Burying 100.

During a hurricane a large factory in Szegedin, Hungary, collapsed and 100 workmen were buried in the ruins. Four corpses and fourteen persons severely hurt have been recovered from the debris. Seventy persons are still missing.

Panic in Pittsburg Fire.

Fire which started at 4 o'clock the other morning on the sixth floor of the Phipps power building, threatened a congested part of the business district, created a panic in several hotels and required the services of nearly the entire city force of fire fighters.

Thirteen Killed in a Mine.

Thirteen men are dead and eight injured as the result of an explosion of fire damp in the Dudweiler mine, five miles from Saarbruecken, Germany.

WOMAN FALLS 900 FEET.

Horrified Crowd Sees Aeronaut Drop When Parachute Rope Snaps.

Dropped through the air 900 feet when the rope attached to her parachute snapped, and caught in the branches of a tree thirty feet from the ground, where sure death awaited her had she landed, Mrs. Eva Jones, woman balloonist for a carnival company which was conducting a street fair in Abbotsford, Wis., is still alive. Hundreds of people came from Clark, Taylor and Marathon counties, and the feature of one day's entertainment was the balloon ascension. Mrs. Jones made the flight upward in the balloon and when almost 1,000 feet in the air swung herself loose from the basket to make her descent in the parachute. The crowd assembled below was horrified to see the woman shoot downward through the air. The rope on the parachute had snapped, and though the wind partially filled the silken bag, it was not sufficient to check the downward rush of the aeronaut's body. The crowd held its breath and turned away from the anticipated sight of seeing the woman dashed to pieces beyond recognition on the pavements. When about thirty feet from the ground the falling balloonist was caught in the branches of an ash tree which stopped the fall gradually. She was taken from the tree in an unconscious condition. An examination showed that Mrs. Jones was suffering from several broken ribs.

FATHER KILLS SON IN FIGHT.

Louis Scassle, 65, Cuts Throat of Antone, 35, with Razor.

In a struggle in which a razor and hatchet were wielded, Louis Scassle, 65 years old, killed his son Antone, 35 years old, in Chicago. The mother of the victim was the sole witness of the encounter, which is said to have been an outgrowth of a dispute which arose at an Italian celebration three weeks before. Shortly before midnight the son went to the Scassle home in Larrabee street and bitter words followed between the two men. The son is said to have drawn a razor and attempted to carve the old man, but the latter wrested the weapon away from him. The son then seized a hatchet and rushed at his father, and in the struggle Scassle, Sr., cut the young man's throat. Neighbors who heard the men scuffling notified the police, who hastened to the place and started to take the wounded man to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, but on the way he died. The father was later arrested. The police say he admits having killed his son, but claims he was defending himself and that the stabbing was accidental.

THREE COOKED TO DEATH.

Urn Containing Tons of Molten Metal Explodes.

Three men were cooked to death in St. Louis when an urn containing tons of molten metal exploded in the mills of the National Enameling and Stamping Company. The failure of a workman to perform one of his duties is said to have caused the accident. The dead are Michael Mulick, Michael Naicin and Joseph Kersey. With each process it was the duty of one of the men to apply the flux, sal-ammoniac, to the molten metal. The flux was not applied this time, and when Kersey thrust a sheet of iron into the urn the explosion caused the liquid to belch out over the workmen.

Cleveland's Car Fare Raised.

Five cent cash fare, with 3 cent tickets, may be put into operation by the Municipal Traction Company as the result of a caucus of the majority of the Cleveland city council with Mayor Johnson. This policy is said to be the result of a considerable deficit in the operation of the street car system on a straight 3 cent basis.

Old Woman Saves Homestead.

Wildwood, the historic old manor house built in 1800 at Ferguson, in St. Louis county, Mo., was saved from probable destruction by fire by its owner, Mrs. Ellen Lamotte, 92 years old, after she had prevented her grandson, Lamotte Coppinger, 10 years old, from being burned. The fire was caused from a lamp explosion.

Explosion Kills Eight Men.

Eight men were killed, nearly a score of others seriously injured and thousands of dollars' worth of property was damaged by the explosion of a boiler in the York, Pa., rolling mill. The mill had been closed for about a week, and forty men were engaged in making repairs to an engine.

Youth Drowns in Lake.

One boy was drowned, four girls were dragged senseless from the water, and a hundred persons were panic stricken as the result of the explosion of a gasoline tank on a small launch at Lake Hopatcong, N. J.

Mother Stewart Dies.

Mrs. Eliza Daniel Stewart, widely known among temperance workers of the United States and England as "Mother" Stewart, died at her home in Hicksville, Ohio.

Yaquis Massacre 14 Near Mine.

Attacking a small settlement near the Lampases mine in Sonora, Mexico, bloodthirsty Yaqui Indians have massacred fourteen persons of three families. The victims were shot with rifles, killed with knives or brained with clubs.

Death of Mrs. Louise C. Moulton.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton, one of the best known novelists and poets of today in New England, died at her home, 28 Rutland Square, Boston. She was 73 years of age.

W. J. BRYAN IS TOLD OF HIS NOMINATION.

Democratic Candidate Is Formally Notified at the Nebraska State Capital.

RAPS AT THE REPUBLICANS.

Says the Overshadowing Issue of the Campaign Is "Shall the People Rule?"

Lincoln (Neb.) correspondence:

With a salute of forty-six guns, one for each State, given at daybreak Wednesday, Lincoln began the Bryan notification program. The city was astir early and there were still a number of decorations being put in place while the visitors were arriving. The trolley cars to Fairview were crowded all the morning and the automobile people were doing an active business, but the larger number of the visitors remained in the city looking at the various points of interest and especially at the State capitol grounds where the notification ceremony was held.

It was 2 o'clock when Chairman Mack of the national committee introduced Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the notification committee, following prayer by the Rev. Father John F. Nugent of Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Clayton notified Mr. Bryan of his nomination in a seven-minute speech, at the conclusion of which he handed to the Democratic nominee the formal letter of notification signed by all the members of the committee. Mr. Bryan then replied and the ceremony was closed by a short speech by John W. Kern, the vice presidential nominee.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

Raps at Republicans.

Here are some of the raps given Republicans by Mr. Bryan in his speech of acceptance:

"Our platform declares that the overshadowing issue is, Shall the people rule? Shall the people control their own government and use that government for the protection of their rights, or shall the representatives of predatory wealth prey upon a defenseless public? This is the issue raised by the known abuses to which Mr. Taft refers."

"Why were these known abuses permitted to develop? Can Mr. Taft promise to be more strenuous in the prosecution of wrongdoers than the present executive? Does he need more Republicans in the House or a Speaker with more unlimited authority?"

"The Republican party * * * can not attack wrongdoing in high places without disgracing many of its prominent members and it, therefore, uses opiates instead of the surgeon's knife."

"For a generation the Republican party has drawn its campaign funds from the beneficiaries of special legislation. Privileges have been pledged and granted in return for money contributed to debauch elections. What can be expected when official authority is turned over to the representatives who first furnish the sinews of war and then reimburse themselves out of the pockets of the taxpayers?"

"Only those are worthy to be intrusted with leadership in a great cause who are willing to die for it!"

Now for Homemade Ice.

The Technical World Magazine has an article describing a new hand-power ice machine invented in France, which solves the problem of producing ice in small quantities in the home quickly and cheaply. The important feature is the cylinder in which the chemicals are sealed—the latter not requiring renewal, and lasting as long as the machine—and which revolving in water, produces the ice. It can also produce cold air. It is a double wall tin vessel, holding five gallons. The freezing process is brought about by the gradual automatic admission of carbonic acid into the hollow space between the walls and thence by a cross tube into the interior. The acid thus released from its reservoir suddenly expands and causes the lowering of the temperature.

Simple Tuberculosis Diagnosis.

Dr. Bourrille of Paris has established a very simple and practical method by means of which any one may diagnose a case of tuberculosis at a stage earlier than it is capable of being detected by the ordinary clinical methods. It is to measure the chest at extreme inspiration and at extreme expiration. If the difference is greater than 1 1-6 inches the disease has already gained a foothold. This was determined by examining in this way thousands of women and men who were seeking employment

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

A favorable official crop report, lighter commercial failures and an increased volume of payments through the banks are encouraging developments of the week. Importance attaches to liberal orders issued for rails, these indicating that railroad managers feel warranted in entering the markets for necessary supplies, which to some extent were withheld until financial conditions became suitably adjusted.

Trade generally is now seen to be moving forward steadily, although the recovery is yet slow, particularly in lines of heavy production affected by the long spell of hot weather.

New demands also disclose further extension in pig iron, wire, structural iron and lumber, and increasing specifications for early completion involve the employment of additional machinery and hands at car, forge and locomotive works. Distribution of mill and factory products adds to the freight tonnage moved by western roads, and more activity appears in lake transportation of the raw materials, the latter being heavier in ore, copper, lumber and various minor commodities.

Country merchants now attend the wholesale markets in much larger numbers and their operations stimulate the absorption of dry goods, men's furnishings, footwear, furniture and food products, aggregate bookings making a gratifying comparison with a year ago.

The tendency is to buy more freely for forward deliveries, interior stocks of merchandise being low and prices quoted for new goods having a firmer appearance. The clearances have been remarkably good in lightweight apparel, shoes, dress goods and millinery.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 21, against 22 last week and 26 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 4, against 5 last week and 7 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Trade, crop and industrial developments of the week are mainly favorable. The first of the fall merchants' excursions are reported by leading cities, thereby enlarging sales by jobbers and wholesalers. Industrial reports are generally of increased time run or enlarged output, and the leading crops have approached a week nearer harvest. There are, however, some features accompanying these developments deserving of note. There are statements from quite a few markets that early fall buying is hardly up to expectations and that caution and conservatism govern buyers' actions.

In the industries there is perceptibly more doing in iron and steel, hardware manufacturing, western coal mining and the lumber trade generally.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Aug. 6 number 205, against 275 last week, 157 in the like week of 1907, 137 in 1906, 166 in 1905 and 167 in 1904. Business failures in Canada for the same period number 19, which compares with 32 last week and 18 in the like week of 1907.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.75; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.80; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 94c to 95c; corn, No. 2, 79c to 80c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 78c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $10.50; butter, choice creamery, 17c to 21c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes, new, per bushel, 80c to 90c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $6.90; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 90c to 91c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 49c to 50c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.85; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 95c to 96c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, No. 2, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.00; hogs, $4.00 to $6.95; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 96c to 97c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.00; hogs, $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, $2.50 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2, 94c to 95c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 81c to 82c; oats, No. 3 white, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.15 to $1.18; corn, No 3, 79c to 80c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 77c to 78c; barley, No. 2, 71c to 72c; pork, mess, $15.25.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.85; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $6.80; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.20; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.02 to $1.03; corn, No. 2, 87c to 88c; oats, natural white, 61c to 64c; butter, creamery, 19c to 21c; eggs, western, 17c to 19c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 94c to 96c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 48c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; clover seed, October, $8.77.

Where the Winds Blow.

"Is this section prosperous?"

"You bet it is," answered the Kansas farmer. "I kin spread a net any time and snake a grand piano out of a cyclone."—Pittsburg Post.

Frenzied Finance.

Her Husband—I saved $900 to-day.

His Wife—How did you do it?

Her Husband—Smith offered to sell me his automobile for that sum, but I didn't have the money.

AUGUST

U292
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre
The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1904, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER VI.

Constable remembered turning into the driveway after his terrific exertion; remembered that the girl and her mother were standing upon the veranda; that the former stretched out her hand to help him and the elder woman released a cutting remark. Then a servant brought a chair, and billows of nausea surged over him. Just as his consciousness waned, and he was launching, chair and all, into space, Lara's voice reached him again. * * * Then he was in the hallway, through some miracle, and insisting most uncommonly that he was not to be taken into the library, but into the music room, because the windows there commanded the mountain.

He awoke to the interesting discovery that Miss Stansbury was fanning him. Presently she re-chilled a towel in the iced basin and folded it upon his forehead, now deliciously cool.

"It's mighty sweet of you to take care of me this way," he muttered gratefully. "How is Pelee? How long have I been here? The last I remember, I was lost in the hall, and you found me."

"You've been here about three hours, Mr. Constable. Pelee is quiet again, but the whole world is white outside—a perfect blizzard of ash has fallen! They say a terrible thing has happened at the extreme northern end of the city. The River Branch overflowed her banks, and ran with boiling mud from the volcano. Thirty people are reported killed and the Usine Guerin destroyed."

She thought he was considering the disaster in the silence which followed, but in reality he was battling with the old problem.

"Miss Stansbury," he said finally, "is there anything a man possessed of full faculties could do, say or bring about that would induce your mother to spend the night off-shore?"

She shook her head.

"You know that the Madame could be brought in for the mails to-morrow morning."

"I have taken the liberty to suggest that to mother," Lara replied. "She says that to-morrow will be time enough."

"Miss Stansbury, won't you put yourself in the care of Captain Negley to-night? I hope I'm wrong, but the Guerin disaster may be only a preliminary demonstration—like the operator experimenting to find if it is dark enough to start the main fireworks. You know, I would stay ashore, and Negley is a good old man of the sea."

"Don't you understand, Mr. Constable?" she said, in real distress for denying him so repeatedly. "Don't you see that such a thing would bring down a miserable scene upon our heads? Besides, I am not thinking of my own safety as such a paramount thing. I don't want to be one of Job's lone survivors. Mother and Uncle Joey and you must go—when I do."

The pale, searching face regarded her. Again he was silent. His lips were shut, his eyelids half-closed. * * * A swift intuition was borne to the woman. He was about to renew the siege. She was not ready, and shrank from being moved to a decision which she had not formed in the privacy of her own mind. The last two days of suffering had rendered her strangely responsive to his mental actions. His quest had filled her brain with wonders, but they were not yet coalesced—impulses and inspirations without unity, unbound as yet by judgment. She wanted to yield with grace, if it came to that, but not to be overthrown. His hand reached for hers, but she drew away.

"Miss Stansbury——"

"Please don't say it now!" she whispered swiftly, her words startling herself quite as much as the man. "These are such dreadful hours! We must think of the crisis—only of that—putting behind all that passed last night!"

"Until?" said Constable, sitting up.

"Oh, who can tell? One knows—Mr. Constable, isn't it wicked of you to muddle me this way?"

A smile from him had given her the saving turn. The tension was eased. Now, as he held out his hand to her, she was not slow to accept it, or to miss the meaning of the compact.

"Pelee will be beyond the sky line for us all pretty soon," he said cheerfully. "We'll be very good pals in the meantime. Please go to the window and see how our ogre is faring—the giant who thinks he's going to eat us when we're prime—'member the fairy story? By the way, Miss Stansbury, did you ever have a set of billiard balls cracking off caroms on your brain pan?"

"Yes, and ten-pins. Men don't know headache matters. * * * The north is clearer, sir. A little while ago it was all a seething mass of blacks and grays."

An exclamation broke from her lips, and Constable joined her at the window. A dozen birds had fallen to the lawn from the eaves. Most of them were dead from the tainted air. The sight brought the situation more forcibly than ever to her mind.

"I should think the birds would fly away!" she said pityingly.

"Perhaps the mother birds are waiting for mails to come in," suggested a voice behind them. Mrs. Stansbury was standing in the hall doorway.

A gracious rain cleared the air of early evening, and Constable settled himself for a further nap at the north window upstairs. He had not realised his exhaustion, and was astonished to find that it was midnight when he awoke. He was stronger, but a cyclonic headache still oppressed him. Glad though he was for the hours passed, still he was by no means unappreciative of the chances he had taken. A forlorn hope of saving the lady, even though a destroying eruption overtook them at the plantation house, had grown in his mind since the night before. To be caught asleep would render this chance a far one.

The Guerin disaster might be considered swoong the promises of a favorable issue, as well as a forerunner of chaos. The mountain's overflow into the River Blanch might have eased the pressure upon the craters. There was no authority nor precedent for such a hope. If Pelee's fuse were burning shorter and shorter toward a Krakatoan cataclysm, it was not for man to say what spark would shake the world. Still, Constable held the hope.

He turned on the lights in the room. A cablegram had been slipped under the door. It proved to be an answer to a message he had sent to Basse Terre in the morning, regarding the movements of the Panther.

"Str. Panther arrived and departed here on time," he read. There was strength in the word. The mail liner reasonably might be expected to call at Martinique with the dawn, according to schedule. The mails should be ready for distribution at nine.

"We'll have luncheon aboard the Madame to-morrow," Constable mused, "and while the blessed maiden is passing cake and pouring tea, the Madame will be running like a scared deer, to hitch herself to the solid old Horn, built of rock and sealed with icebergs!"

He shaded his eyes at the window, staring beyond the city into the ashen shroud—Pelee's flag of truce. "Grand old martyr," he murmured devoutly. "Hang on, hang on!"

There was a tap at the door, and Breen was admitted.

"I haven't seen much of you in the past three moons, miscalled days," said Constable.

"It is true. I have felt my own inconsequence in the presence of the big drama here. It is your drama, Peter. Then, I have found a place of many marvels."

"Pere Rabaut's?"

"None other. There is something like coolness in this thrice-burned isle. Also a maiden creature, half child, half woman, wholly wonderful."

"I have been glad to see you make the best of things. Of course one can never tell on a cruise where one is to encounter a series of business obligations—such as here."

"True again," Breen said gravely.

"I have been busy as that, but have accomplished nothing. Seriously, Breen, times are running close. Guerin's the first volley. To think I haven't been to the mountain; haven't taken a photograph or a note! My fellow researchers in things seismic will never forgive me for this. Breen, I thought I had a scientific mind—thought that even though I bulled in all else, I was a loyal geologist; but I have betrayed even that decent instinct. Another man would have had the women away to sea and be attending the mountain now; but here I am, a child with man's tools, gassing the night through, and she—across the hall—marked, for all I know, for Pelee's own! It's good to talk, though."

"There's only one way when words fail, Peter. If the mountain won't recede from the maiden, you must snatch up the maiden and make a get-away from the mountain."

"I'm not pirate enough, Breen," Constable replied wearily. "By the way, I'm sending some of the natives of the city—the women with babes—out to the Madame for cool air. There is no reason in the world why we shouldn't entertain our friends of the shop. Soronia is too rare a creature to be immolated by Pelee's bursting boilers. She and the Pere might just as well share the benefits. You see, the presence of others makes it possible. Attend to it, will you?"

"Good old Peter," Breen said softly; "but I don't think they would come. Who'd feed the little song birds?"

"Have her bring the birds along. They'll die there!"

"I had planned not to go to the little shop again, Peter."

Constable turned upon him abruptly. "Why?" said he.

"You see, Peter, she is such a rare little soul—asking so little and so ready to give her all for the promise of a man—think of it. I have found a good many playthings, pottering around this little sunshot planet—clear little films they are now, which stick in the brain and won't fade. Let me alone, Peter, and I'll wander back to reason presently. A very ugly album is a sinner's memory, and when it is quite full the sinner usually dies—sometimes off Brooklyn piers. The truth is, I found a shred of conscience developed under your culture and Pelee's heat; and so I refused another plaything, refused to crowd another film into that sullied album of mine. I lied, said I didn't understand that admiration meant anything to her—and went away. Not too late, I trust. She is a natural optimist, and slow to lose faith in mankind."

Constable believed that Soronia had found her first lover in Breen, and he pitied the heart so suddenly impassioned and so swiftly dethroned of its dream. He remembered the face of Soronia in the court shadows, and his pity lingered.

They talked until the Panther lights shone afar in the offing, misty with dawn and volcano fog; then parted for an hour's rest. Constable was the first below, and there was little joy with the coming of the day. The rumblings of the mountain were renewed. The great tower of ash shot up yesterday was still falling; the trees and shrubbery in the gardens were bent with the weight of white; indeed, many branches were broken. The dismal bellowing of cattle and the stamping of ponies were heard from the barns. It was only by keeping the doors and windows of the house tightly shut that living was bearable. The native who brought the copy of Les Colonies wore a thick wet rag over his nostrils, and had the appearance of having freshly emerged from a bin of cement. Constable and Breen were first in the breakfast room.

"This pudgy editor," Constable declared savagely, as he read the morning paper. "Yesterday I called upon him and in sweet modesty and limping French explained the proper policy for him to take. To-day he devotes a half-column of insufferable humor to my force of character and extreme views."

Constable translated Mondet's account of the Guerin disaster, and his assurances of the safety of Saint Pierre, so far as the mountain was concerned. "Oh, the flakiness of that French mind!" he exclaimed. "With a volcano in the pangs of dissolution, towering over the city, is apparently in dread of an earthquake! * * * 'Where on the island,' thus he inquires editorially, 'could a more secure place than Saint Pierre be found in the event of an earthquake visitation?'"

Constable crushed the paper in his hand. He glanced at his watch and then at the mountain, from a habit now graven deeply.

"The northern end of Saint Pierre is flooded out like an ant hill under a kettle boiling over," he capitulated thoughtfully. "The mountain is gathering for another demonstration. Let us flee with all dispatch to the craters of the volcano, to escape this hypothetical earthquake! M. Mondet certainly enthralls me. I must call upon him again. * * * Breen, is there any way to stimulate the distribution of the Panther mails?"

CHAPTER VII.

Immediately after breakfast Constable drove down to the city to send out final orders to Captain Negley, and attend certain matters having to do with the Madame's facilities for entertainment. Uncle Joey was to go for the mails. If he could prevent, Constable was minded that there should be no hitch nor tangle at the last moment. In spite of darkish apprehensions, his heart would burst now and then into singing, since he asked but two hours more of old Pelee, upon whose summit was now written in lightning and black cloud the ominous letters of Disaster.

The ladies were left to such graceful ministrations of Breen as were found needful. Mrs. Stansbury, having gained her point, imposed no further delays. The eagerness of the daughter was controlled, but in no way concealed. The past three days had left a pallor upon her face, and shadows under her eyes, but the innate fineness of her features seemed intensified rather than diminished by physical suffering, and the more subtle perturbations of the inner woman.

"When a strain brings out the splendor of a woman's face, mark her well for a thoroughbred," Breen had found occasion to whisper to his friend. The sentence was soul's refreshment, as Breen intended it to be.

Constable, indeed, was contemplating the full significance of the words, and their possible bearing upon his present and future, as he rode down the Morne d'Orange into the Rue Victor Hugo. The little black carriage of Father Damien was approaching, and, gripped by a sudden idea, Constable halted it, saying to the elder spirit of the parish, whom he had met at the plantation house: "Father, take this two thousand francs and use it for the maintenance of the homeless refugees in Fort de France. I shall see that more funds get to you to-day."

A little way further, another carriage approached, one of the public conveyances of the city this time. Behind the driver loomed the head and shoulders of a white man—hard head and broad shoulders—the sight of whom struck the music from the brain of Constable, as a knife that is slashed across the strings of a harp. Both vehicles stopped abruptly.

"Well, I've got you," the broad individual remarked cheerfully. "Where's the other fellow?"

Let it be known that the man whom Constable now faced was the same energetic person who occasioned discord on the Brooklyn pier, just as the Madame swung blithely forth into the harbor. Constable was thinking very rapidly. He felt prepared to commit murder rather than have his plans for the morning thrust aside.

"The other fellow?" he repeated gently.

"The man hidden in your cabin when you cleared. His name is Nicholas Stembridge, if you don't happen to know," the stranger said, with some impatience. "Where is he?"

"Where you saw him last," Constable said, with sudden cordiality; "and I want to state that I'm glad to see you—that is," he added doubtfully, "if you've come to take him away. If you've looked me up, you'll have found that I'm usually ready to pay in money, hide, or liberty, for the mistakes I make."

(To be continued.)

No Pay for Mother.

"Mother gets up first," said the new office boy. "She lights the fire and gets my breakfast so I can get here early. Then she gets father up, gets his breakfast and sends him off. Then she gives the others their breakfast and gets 'em ready for school; and then she an' the baby have their breakfast."

"What is your pay here?" asked the man.

"I get $3 a week and father gets $3 a day."

"How much does your mother get?"

"Mother!" he said indignantly. "Why, she don't have to work for anybody."

"Oh! I thought you just told me she worked for the whole family every morning."

"Oh! that's for us—but there ain't no money in that."

Saved by the Trolley.

Knox—Saw Green and his wife at the opera last night. I can't see where their enjoyment came in, as neither of them knows the difference between a symphony and a sonata.

Blox—Well, I ought to be ashamed to confess my ignorance, but I'm in the same boat. By the way, what is the difference?

Knox—Why — er — a sonata, you know—er—I mean a symphony is—say, there's my car, old man; see you later.

Puzzles the Small Boy.

The small boy is apt to wonder why a young man has the shoulders of his coat padded instead of the seat of his trousers.—Philadelphia Record.

Buenos Aires has a population of 1,200,000, of which about 80 per cent is foreign, the Italians forming about 60 per cent of the foreign population.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

William Henning was overcome by the heat while spending the day with his family at Bluffside Beach, near Laporte, and died.

S. C. Staley, of Charlottesville, and J. F. Evans, of Shirley, have purchased the Bank of Shirley of Evans & Wood, and have taken possession.

Gerry, 13 years old, son of Jerry Johnson, near Elkhart, is dead of injuries received by being knocked down by a runaway team, which he tried to stop in a wheat field.

Harry Knowles, 23 years old, unmarried, brakeman on the Clover Leaf railway, while coupling cars at Linden, was caught between bumpers and one leg was badly crushed.

The Miami County Commissioners have selected Wednesday, Sept. 30, for laying the corner stone of the new courthouse. The Commercial Club will arrange the program of exercises.

J. G. Hadley, deputy fish commissioner, while driving in the country near Plainfield, was thrown from his buggy and his leg was broken. Mr. Hadley was but recently appointed to the position.

William Higgins, a well-known young man of Carlisle, swallowed carbolic acid with suicidal intent, and died in a short time. His death is a shock to friends, as no known cause exists for his self-destruction.

Lawrenceburg will have no public library, the City Council having defeated by unanimous vote the ordinance authorizing a tax for library purposes. The ladies of the literary clubs are highly indignant over the action of the Council, and will begin legal proceedings to force the Council to pass the necessary ordinance, the law being mandatory, it is thought.

H. C. Logan found a dead quail on his farm near Morocco and noticing the fullness of its crop, he he opened it and found it packed almost solid with chinch bugs. Out of curiosity he counted the bugs, which numbered 450. Logan thinks the large number of bugs caused the death of the bird. He has promised himself never again to shoot a quail because of the value of the bird as a bug catcher.

A rich vein of bituminous coal has been discovered about three miles southeast of Montezuma, on the land formerly owned by Thomas Craig, but recently purchased by the Winner Coal Company. The vein was found at a depth of 25 feet, and is from four to five feet thick. The men in the company are Jesse Woods, John Wilhite, Harry White, Wallace Haworth and Robert Knox.

The Department Council of the Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., will hold an annual convention in Marion October 7-8. A feature will be competitive drills by the several cantons, and conferring the decoration of chivalry on Col. Daniel Gunder, leader of the Marion canton. Gen. M. A. Rainey, Marengo, Ia., chief of the Patriarchs Militant division, will be present, as will also Gen. James H. Harris, chief of the Illinois department council, with staff.

Mrs. Ephraim Montgomery, of Princeton, was seriously burned by carbolic acid. In removing the bottle containing the acid from the mantel, the cork having been taken out, in some manner it was overturned and the contents was spilled over the woman's face and neck and also upon the head of her little child. The little one was slightly burned. Mrs. Montgomery's injuries are severe, and it is feared she may lose the sight of one eye.

Bonnie Kent, 14 years old, an orphan, was instantly killed on the farm of David Bowser, near Nashville. Mr. Bowser was stacking hay, using a "gin pole" and derrick contrivance to elevate the hay on the stack. As the men were stacking hay a stake to which the guy rope was attached for the purpose of bracing the frame, pulled out, allowing the derrick to fall. It dropped on the little girl, who, with several companions, was seated near. It crushed her skull and caused instant death. Bonnie Kent was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Bowser from the Indianapolis Orphans' Home.

Patents have been issued to Indianians as follows: C. E. Birch, Crawfordsville, fence tie; M. E. Crowell, Franklin, gas producer; E. Deister, Ft. Wayne, feeding device for ore concentration, also ore concentrating table; W. L. Dillman, Kokomo, cream separator; H. A. Goebler, Connersville, advertising device; P. P. McIntire, South Bend, attachment for photographic printing apparatus; A. W. Reiling, Ft. Wayne, car controlling apparatus; D. E. Ross, Brookston, compensating gearing; E. E. Sappenfield, Waveland, train order delivery apparatus; J. Schies and M. Wyant, Anderson, glass tank furnace; J. R. Whittemore and J. F. Morgan, Indianapolis, inserted cutter blade holder.

Notice was given that the Citizens' Glass Company will begin operating the plant of the old Evansville Glass Company on the 2nd of September, giving employment to nearly 200 skilled workmen.

Amos Goad, a well-known Boonville Democratic politician, while milking his cow, was dragged against a stall and his right hip was broken. The eagerness of the cow to reach her calf in another stall was responsible for the accident.

Mrs. Margaret Geitz, of Columbus, aged 78 years, fell from a ladder while picking pears, and was seriously injured.

While attempting to load his father's shotgun Will Crossin, a 13-year-old boy, of Princeton, was shot in the right limb. Surgeons amputated the member.

Wm. Lewis, aged 14, fell from a load of hay near Princeton and struck on a pitchfork held by his brother. Two prongs passed through the body, penetrating a lung.

Bernard Vonnaught, who, as architect, designed some of the best known buildings of Indianapolis, died recently, aged 53 years, after an illness of three months of carcinomo of the stomach.

Thieves entered the saloon of John A. Reath, in Bedford, last week, escaping with some money and liquors. This is the third saloon robbed in the last week in the same manner, evidently the work of the same person in each case.

A number of young farmers in the vicinity of Morocco, mostly renters, will seek homes in Michigan as soon as their crops are gathered. High rents and a decreased yield in crops the last two or three years are their reasons for desiring a change.

During a heavy rainfall at Laporte lightning struck the Swedish Lutheran church, wrecking the tower, but not setting fire to the building. Andrew Wester, janitor, with three young women, who were in the parlors of the church, rehearsing a dialogue, were shocked but not seriously injured. The loss is $500.

Miss Edith Landis, of Linton, was drowned in the Wabash river near Ft. Harrison. She was a member of a boating party, and the boat sprang a leak and sank before the shore could be reached. Sanford Acton, her escort, could not get to her before she disappeared from view. She was visiting relatives in Terre Haute.

Samuel Slack, a coal miner, was brought to a Terre Haute hospital from Seelyville with knife wounds in the abdomen, which probably will cause his death. He says he was assaulted by two men he did not know while he was walking to his home afte dark. He thinks his assailants mistook him for some one else.

Peter Meyer, a hermit, aged 77 years, who lived in a box car on the outskirts of Jerseyville, was found dead and $10,000, which he is known to have had with him, is missing. The body was several feet from the bed, surrounded by overturned chairs and torn clothing, and there was every indication that death was not normal.

After lying in the broiling sun for two days Edward Hinkley, of Oxford, died in the jail hospital at Lafayette. He was a hard drinker at times. He came to Lafayette and was taken sick at the foot of Main street. People who passed, thinking he was intoxicated, paid no attention to him when he asked for a drink of water, but passed on.

A snake has been seen several times within the last few days on Col. W. W. Dudding's farm, near Greenfield, by Charles Coffman, Archie Jones and other persons, who describe it as fifteen feet in length, with a head as big as both hands of a man, and its body as large as a man's thigh. The body is covered with white and brown spots.

A team of fine farm horses and thirteen hogs were killed, and Everett Widds, 15 years old, was badly injured, being struck by a passing train at Upton station, near Mt. Vernon. The father and son were returning from a sale with two wagons loaded with hogs and the boy had driven halfway across the track when the train caught him. He was injured about the head and hips, and also internally, but may recover.

With the completion of two new buildings that are now being erected at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane at Richmond, conditions in the Eastern Indiana district will be somewhat relieved, although it will be far from possible to accommodate all the insane. There are many confined in the county jails, poor farms and other institutions, some of whom could be improved by treatment, but there is no room for them at the State hospital.

A life-sized bronze statue of the late James Oliver, the work of Lorado Taft, was placed in the Oliver Hotel at South Bend last week. It is a magnificent piece of work and is a fitting testimonial to the memory of the man whose industry did so much for the city, and whose public spirit prompted him to build the hotel. The work is an excellent likeness. The bust was placed in a niche at the foot of the double staircase leading to the parlor floor.

Mahlon Rhodes, a farmer living five miles northeast of Silver Lake, was seriously injured by his horses running away and throwing him out of the wagon.

Andrew Mullen, 52 years old, and unmarried, was found dead in a chair when his brother, George Mullen, also a bachelor, returned home from work at Anderson. He had committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid. Ill health is thought to have been the cause of the suicide.

HIGHEST CITY HALL.

New York to Have a 34-Story Municipal Building Costing $7,000,000

The New York board of estimates and Mayor McClellan are now passing finally on plans for the highest city hall in the world. This 34-story building, to cost $7,000,000, will stand in the triangle of Park Row, Center and Duane streets, and tower 559 feet 8 inches above the sidewalk. It will be twice as high as the Flatiron and just a few feet shorter than the Singer building. The New York hall will house practically all the city departments and leave 23 floors to be rented by the city as offices. It is expected they will bring in $500,000 in rentals annually. French renaissance is the type, with exterior columns. Steel and stone is to be the construction. A peculiar feature of the building will be that all the rooms will be outside rooms and no interior light court will be needed.

NEW YORK'S PROPOSED CITY HALL.

New York's municipal skyscraper will differ from the ordinary ones in that it will not depend upon its tower for its great height. The height to the roof of the main structure is to be 349 feet. From the roof to the head of the figure on the tower is a distance of 210 feet 8 inches. The figure will be 24 feet high and the diameter of the clock face is to be 25 feet.

HOW TO RESTORE A DROWNING MAN.

Here is a simple and effective way to restore a drowning man:

The man should be stood on his head in order that all the water possible be gotten from his lungs. The old method of rolling him on a barrel is not a bad one for the same purpose.

Then an effort should be made to induce artificial respiration. To this end put the person flat on his back and let some one catch hold of his arms just below the elbow.

Then raise the arms above the head and bring them down.

As they reach the body, press in on the ribs to force out the air gained by lifting the arms.

Keep this up at the rate of 18 times a minute.

Then try to get the heart to moving by giving a stimulant like liquor or a hypodermic injection.

Sometimes a slight fluttering of the heart is sufficient to get back life.

Get a physician as soon as possible.

Labor World

A delegation of French leather workers is making a tour of American factories.

Hebrew painters and paperhangers of Boston, Mass., are reforming their old union.

San Francisco (Cal.) Building Trades Council has organized an athletic association.

Carpenters of the City of Mexico have organized a labor union affiliated with the A. F. of L.

More union car men are wearing the union button in Chicago to-day than ever before in the history of the organization.

White and negro longshoremen at New Orleans, La., have signed a five-year contract with the stevedores and steamship agents.

A seceding organization from the Brotherhood of Railroad Employes has taken the name of Brotherhood of Railroad Station Employes.

The railway trackmen are planning for the establishment of a home for their aged and indigent members. It is proposed to acquire a tract of 500 acres near Fort Scott, Kan., as the location for the institution.

St. Paul Typographical Union has decided to make a label exhibit at the Minnesota State fair, and will ask the Minneapolis union to join with it. Last year the St. Paul men made a label display which was very creditable.

In New York State a bill which takes from the health boards of the first-class cities the inspection of mercantile establishments and places it in the hands of the responsible labor department was passed at the extraordinary session of the Legislature and will go into effect on Oct. 1.

The next convention of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders will be held during the second week in June 1910, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Cleveland (England) ironstone miners have decided to press for a 12 o'clock Saturday; that is, that operations shall cease at the mines at 12 o'clock on Saturdays instead of 1 o'clock, but no stoppage of work is likely to result if the masters refuse to make this alteration. There has been no general strike of the Cleveland ironstone miners for more than thirty years.

AUGUST

U293
L 903

Headache Every Month

You may think, because you have long had it, that you must have a headache every month, being a women.

But if you think so, you are wrong, since a headache is a sign of disease of your womanly organs, that thousands of other women have been able to relieve or cure, by the use of that wonderful, woman's medicine,

WINE OF CARDUI
WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I recommend Cardui to all sick women," writes Mrs. A. C. Beaver of Unicol, Tenn. "I suffered with headache, bearing-down pains, feet swelled, pains in shoulders and many others. At last I took Cardui, have gained 20 pounds and have found it the best medicine I ever used for female troubles."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 37

J. A. PROVINES
TRUSTEE
of Concord Township.
OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.
C. R. PRICE,
ST. JOE, IND.
Office in Case building,
Bell Phone No. 44.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 12:05p.m
No. 3, Western Express 8:06 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:21 p. m

The Old Proverb

That "It takes nine tailors to make a man" may possibly mean that it takes nine trials to find the right tailor.

You can save eight trials by coming here first. At this time in the year we can do considerably better by you than later. Not better in style, fabric, fit or finish—that's impossible—but better in price. For Example:—

Suits from $18.00 up.
Pants from $4.00 up

ED MAY,
TAILOR,
Butler, Ind.

PATENTS

and TRADE-MARKS promptly obtained in all countries, or no fee. We obtain PATENTS THAT PAY, advertise them thoroughly, at our expense, and help you to success.

Send model, photo or sketch for FREE report on patentability. 30 years' practice. SURPASSING REFERENCES. For free Guide Book on Profitable Patents write to 503-505 Seventh Street, WASHINGTON, D. C.

D. SWIFT & Co.

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Editorially.

Begin to save when you begin to earn. There is one sure mark of the coming millionare. His revenues always exceed his expenditures. He begins to save as soon as he begins to earn. Capitalists trust the saving young man. It is not capital your seniors require, it is the man who has proved he has the business habits which make capital. Begin at once to lay up something. It is the first hundred dollars saved which tells. And here is the prime condition of sucess, the great secret; concentrate your energy, thought and capital exclusively upon the buisiness in which you are engaged. Having begun in one line, resolve to fight it out on that line, to lead in it; adopt every improvement, have the best machinery and know the most about it. Finally, do not be impatient, for as Emerson says, "No one can cheat you out of ultimate success but yourselves".

The day is not far distant when "cards of thanks" will be a thing of the past. When death enters a home neighbors never fail to do all in their power to place a silver lining back of the dark cloud, and they do not expect or desire any thanks through the public press. One subscriber, however, not to be outdone, sent in the following: "Mr. Editor: -I desire to thank the friends and neighbors most heartily in this manner for their cooperation during the illness and death of my late husband who escaped from me by the hand of death on last Friday, while eating breakfast. To my friends and all who contributed so willing toward making the last moments and the funeral a success, hoping these lines will find them enjoying the same blessing. I have also a good milch cow and roan gelding horse, eight years old, which I will sell cheap. 'God moves in a mysterious way, His duties to perform. He plants His footsteps on the sea and rides upon the storm'. Also a black and white shoat cheap".

Music Everywhere.

The history of times immemorial shows that all people of every race and tongue had their music. In songs they praised their gods, chanted their nation's glory, lauded deeds of heroism, communed love with love and let their hearts tune to imaginary themes. To accomplished all this more skilfully musical instruments of some type have always been found where people have resided. The musical art reached great perfection in some of the more civilized countries and especially along the balmy Italian shores where the native people allow their emotions to move them to mighty sentiment through song.

Notwithstanding however the prevalence of music throughout all ages and the height of its excellency in classic times, it is true that the universality of music was never so great as today. In hovel or palace, in country dwelling or city home the strains of music are heard; at the banquet table and in the presence of the dead its mighty strains give pleasure or sympathetic sorrow; in the home, the church, the school its melodies pour forth for the betterment of all; on the street or in private cell, its notes are heard; in play houses the public sits enraptured while an artist performs with the voice or skillfully executes on one of many instruments; the saloon and houses of ill fame have stolen God's rich melodies and are using them to carry on nefarious traffics; music indeed, is everywhere pouring forth its cadences in response to the promptings of the hearts of men and women.

Socially music is of vast importance. At an evening gathering, nothing is so pleasant as selections from voice or instrument; in the church it is used to sing praises and to reach the heart of man; in fraternal relations the principles of orders are poured forth in musical strains; wherever people meet for public intercourse music is there to enliven the event.

Commercially, good musical talent is at a premium. So eager is the human race to listen to it that large sums are given to see and hear the masters. Amusement and theatrical managers are always on the lookout for what is good in a musical way. Traveling musical aggregations draw large crowds and their members receive fair salaries. Teachers of music are in great demand not only in musical schools, but in private and public educational institutions their services are required. All this demand for musical skill in every phase of life's walk is tending to make the profession a very attractive one. On this account nearly every home has some kind of a musical instrument and members of the family receive instruction as to how to use it. Specialists everywhere are busy training the student and many cross the waters to study under the masters of foreign climes.

Yes, music is everywhere welling up in the hearts of men and women, prompting them to praise, thanksgiving and other lofty sentiments. It is true that musical ability hath a charm not possessed by any other one accomplishment.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasion," writes Mr. W. Stone, of East Portland, Maine. It is the proper thing too for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman drug store. 25c.

Prohibition Lecture.

Sunday afternoon a good sized audience listened to a very interesting address by Alfred L. Moudy of Waterloo. His subject was The Great Reform. Mr. Moudy is able to hold the attention of his hearers with original and logical ideas. He does not attact nor abuse his opposition but holds forth his own side of the question with tremenduous energy. The Hoosier Male Quartette of Auburn furnished the music. The quartette consists of George Quince, Ed Bishop, Morris Widney and Vernon Frank.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY'S.

Dio Dermott and wife of Coldwater, Michigan are spending a week with friends in this locality.

Will DeLong, wife and daughter Ruth, went to Hamilton Lake, Friday night to remain two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Milliman, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Reasoner, Mrs. John Simanton, Amos Levy and, Leon Seebler went to Gage lake Saturday, for a week's outing.

A Letter.

The first of two letters written by J. W. Sherer describing his trip to Texas.

EDITORS OF NEWS: In accordance with my promise I write you an account of my trip to the Pan Handle of Texas. The Pan Handle lies in the North West part of the state and is a territory 150 miles square or about three-fifths the size of the state of Indiana.

Our destination was Glezier in the North East corner of the Pan Handle on the Santee Fe R R. Our crowd left Waterloo, August. 4, via the Lake Shore R. R.

Shortly after leaving evidence of drought became apparent and at Elkhart much of the corn was ruined.

At Gary the million dollar steel plant attracted much attention. The steel plant is located upon a tract of barren land, on the north side of the track and the town is some distance south of the tract. It seems to be substantially built and rather attractive considering its surroundings. The heat here was simply terrific. If there is any place hotter may I never see it.

We reached Chicago at 3:30 P. M. arranged for our tickets and started out to see the city. Here we ran across a lone pilgrim from Pennsylvania who joined our party. He bought a section and will move out there this fall.

We visited The Fair, a department store where any thing may be obtained from an oriental rug to a weinerwerst, from a tooth pick to a piano or a diamond to a dough nut. Here we laid in a large supply of lunch which lasted us for supper and breakfast. Here I would say that any one making the trip can save a nice little bunch of money by taking a lunch basket with two days rations in it and at the same time be well fed.

We left Chicago at 6:30 and had enough daylight to see Chicago's great drainage canal. It is about 80 feet wide and 30 feet deep.

Night shut out all view of the country and we turned into the sleeper at ten o'clock. I got section number 13 but the Jonah did not work on me. It is curious how many people won't stand for it.

During the night a heavy electrical storm occured and two barns could be seen burning at the same time from the car windows.

We crossed the Mississippi at Ft. Maddison, cut across the corner of Iowa and were in the "show me" state Missouri. Soon after daylight we were in the Missouri valley and it was a desolate sight to see. The spring rains had flooded it for miles destroying almost all the crops.

We arrived at Kansas City about 10:00 A. M. Wednesday and were delayed about an hour on account of immense crowd of land seekers. There were sixteen train loads of from ten to fifteen cars each bound for Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico.

The Santa Fe R. R. follows the Kaw or Kansas river for about 50 or 60 miles and here was more destruction by floods.

We ate dinner at Emporia, Kansas. From Emporia to Wellington the country is magnificent; corn lands, wheat lands, alfalfa, cattle, horses, every thing which goes to make this country of ours the greatest food producer in the world. Kansas it will be remembered is a prohibition state, but it did not seem difficult for some of the boys to get hot tea. Of course they did not ask for plebeian beer. They asked for "Budweiser" and various other non de plumes. It must have been a second cousin of the "Oh be Joyful" brand, for it inspired the following classical chorus: "Bud Weiser is a friend of mine, a friend of mine, a friend of mine" Bud Weiser is a friend of Bill the Keiser and Bud is a friend of mine". In striking contrast with this was the situation at Kansas City. We reached Kansas City Sunday evening coming home. The train pulled into the station and several hundred thirsty souls made a rush for something to drink. All the restaurants bore placards with the discouraging legends: "Bar closed today". All the magical pass words from "Bud Weiser" to "Bill the Kaiser" failed to move the stony hearts.

Upon our return trip at Woodward, Oklahoma a band of full blood Apache Indians came aboard the train. There were men, women, children and pappooses; the latter were in baskets upon their mothers backs. The men could not find seats, so they sat upon the floor in the aisle. They expressed their disapprobation of the situation in voices which resembled a hybrid between a guinea hen and a horse fiddle. They had been to Woodward in full tribal regalia as an attraction to some sort of doings going on there.

In crossing Oklahoma we went through a strip of land which is red enough to make barn paint. It is claimed to be fertile but crops are nothing extra. Yours truly.

J. W. SHERER.

(Concluded next week.)

Another One

Below is a portion of a letter from George Ridgway on board the U. S. S. Maryland.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., AUGUST 8TH, '08.

DEAR PARENTS:

I landed here on the Maryland this morning in time for breakfast. We had a fine trip all through, leaving Norfolk, Sunday morning. We went by the way of Newport News, Cincinnati, Richmond, St. Louis, Topeka and prominent cities of the west. Talk about fun, I guess we boys had it. I saw Don at Norfolk, Saturday morning.

We passed through some very fine country on our way, especially in the Central States, but saw some very poor land in the West. Jackrabbits are about all they have in Colorado and Arizonia.

I like the Maryland alright. She is a first class armored cruiser and counted the best ship in the U. S. Navy. There are about 900 men on board and those I have met thus far seem to be nice fellows. We do not expect to stay here long as we will coal ship about the 17th and leave soon after for Honolulu and the Phillipine Islands.

When we came aboard this morning we were like some little kids not knowing which way to turn, as the ship was so large and had so many rooms in her.

We saw excellent fruit crops between Norfolk and Cincinnati and mammoth peach crops here in California.

As ever yours
George Ridgway.

U. S. S. Maryland,
San Francisco, Cal.

GENERAL ITEMS

The county board of education has decided to open the schools, Sept. 14.

The payroll of the transportation department of the Chicago division of the B. & O. for the month of July was the biggest of any month since January. The business on the road is slowly increasing. Crops are now being moved in large quantities.

The worst season in the history of Robison Park at Fort Wayne will close on Sunday August 23, when the park will shut up for the season. The management of the park has exerted every effort to have the public sustain the enterprise this year, but without avail, and there will be only one more week available to the public to visit this place.

PATENTS

PROCURED AND DEFENDED. Send model, drawing or photo. for expert search and free report. Free advice, how to obtain patents, trade marks, copyrights, etc., IN ALL COUNTRIES. Business direct with Washington saves time, money and often the patent. Patent and Infringement Practice Exclusively. Write or come to us at 623 Ninth Street, opp. United States Patent Office, WASHINGTON, D. C.

CA·SNOW & Co.

It was rumored that the Grabill band had disbanded but this has proven to be a mistake. The band is still on its feet and better than ever.

A beautiful thoroughbred saddle mare has been presented to Rev. Charles Reign Scoville of Butler, the famed evangelist, by Lexington, Kentucky, friends because of their appreciation of the work done there several months ago. It was purchased at figures near $500 by subscription and was shipped to Mr. Scoville at Butler.

Supt. Coe had thought of having the county teacher's institute changed to Waterloo on account of a carnival company at Auburn on the same dates. He has finally concluded however that it would not be wise to do this. The teachers will now have an opportunity to manifest their professional interest in the face of a noise making carnival.

Business College.

Many DeKalb County people owe their present position and standing in life to the training received in the International Business College of Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Twenty years of continued success has brought this school to rank among the highest of its class in the United States. Ft. Wayne is a great city, almost at your door, and many opportunities are to be had, if you possess a first-class Business Education.

Write for our large handsome catalogue.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 87.

St. Joe, . Indiana.

Undertaking a Specialty.

Elza Kinsey, who is a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Calls answered day or night. Prices reasonable. Satisfaction guaranteed.

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

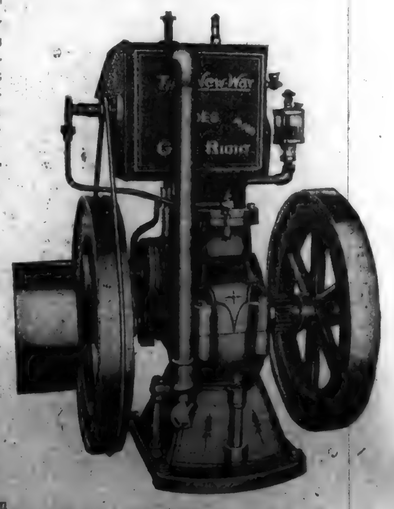
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

AUGUST

0294
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

News Items

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman is on the sick list.

Mervin Widney of St. Joe, made a business trip to town, last Tuesday.

Murray Bros. will do some repairing on the break above the dam in the near future.

Many of the St. Joe Knights of Pythias (K. of P's) attended the Spencerville lodge, Monday night.

Edd Cupp and mother went to Ft. Wayne, Wednesday. Mr. Cupp returned to his work at Elkhart, Monday.

Jerry Klopfenstine and wife of near Leo, Frank Rhoads and wife of Concord and John Beams and wife were Sunday guests of Frank Beams and family.

Frank Baltz arrived home Monday morning, to spend a two week's vacation. He has been traveling in eastern Ohio for the Robert Johns Co., of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Hursh of Watonga, Oklahoma, arrived here on last Friday. They will remain here in this vicinity for at least three weeks on their visit.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Miss Young is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Baltzer Kontz.

J. A. Provines Jr. spent Sunday with Ritz Carnes at Chicago.

C. G. Rectenwalt and wife have moved from the U. S. to Canada.

Isaac Grush and wife of Hurshtown, visited Peter Kensinger, Monday.

H. G. Hurst and Ed Carnes attended the ball game at Hicksville Tuesday.

Daniel Bair and wife of Findley, O., visited friends and relatives here, last week.

Mrs. Cora C. Steward and daughter, Armintie, spent Friday at Robinson Park.

J. A. Provines Jr. expects to accept a position at Chicago or Indianapolis soon.

A crowd of young people spent a pleasant afternoon in Tyndall's grove, Sunday.

Rev. Dressel and wife were visiting at Middlebury last week with relatives and friends.

Miss Nina Pring and brother Perry, of Shawnee, Oklahoma, are visiting relatives here.

Miss Jennie Porter, who was visiting Mrs. Sam Steward, returned to her home Sunday night.

The school building has been cleaned and is in excellent shape for use this coming term.

Messers Ritz Carnes of Chicago, H. G. Hursh and J. A. Provines Jr. were at Hicksville Wednesday.

Wallace Wilson and wife of Norris Chapel visited Mrs. Wilson's mother, Mrs. Lydia Jane Steward, Sunday.

Miss Sarah Myers returned Saturday from Ft. Wayne, where she spent two weeks visiting among relatives.

Dr. Nelson Lake and wife of Pleasant Lake, spent Sunday with Dr. Lake's parents, Geo. Lake and wife.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman has been quite sick. Dr. Shook's services were called and she is better at this writing.

Mr. George Wilson is able to be about on crutches. Dr. Shook who has been at his service says that he will have a limb as good as before.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Will Accept Nomination.

The many political friends of John W. Henderson have been urging him to be a candidate for representative on the republican ticket. He has at last consented if it is the sense of the delegates that he is the best man for the place. Mr. Henderson is one of the most widely known men in the county, and he has made friends everywhere. He is regarded as one of our careful and considerate citizens whom men learn to admire and respect. If the republicans should see best to place him in nomination, they surely have secured a good man.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

Spiro Powder

Is guaranteed to remove the odor of Perspiration. Use it and BE SWEET.

25c a Box.

Bowman's Drug Store

Harvy Wrenn and wife of Garrett are visitors of his mother.

Guy Strong and family were Sunday guests of Mrs. Strong's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Steward.

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Barton came Friday for a two week's visit with Mrs. Barton's parents, Daniel Metcalf and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sommers were at the picnic given for the benefit of the Orphans Home at Ft. Wayne Thursday.

Lewis Lake and wife came to attend the Lake Reunion, Saturday, and remained over Sunday with Mrs. Lake's parents.

The Lutheran Sunday School attended the picnic at Cobuntown on Saturday last and report an excellent time. They will attend the picnic at Springfield Center next Saturday.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

Will Play Ball.

This afternoon at the south side ball park, a game will be played between the married men and the single athletes of Spencerville. This will be the first of a series of three game. Spencerville's old timers have been noted for their base ball efficiency and will no doubt give the youngsters something to do. Hull and Kelley will do the battery work for the single men while Allen will put them over for the "doubles" and Beams will do the receiving. Lee C. Tustison will umpire the game. Come out and join in the fun.

Why James Lee Got Well

Everybody in Zanesville, O., knows Mrs. Mary Lee, of rural route 8. She writes: "My husband, James Lee, firmly believes he owes his life to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery. We tried it, and its use has restored him to perfect health." Dr. King's New Discovery is the King of throat and lung remedies. For coughs and colds it has no equal. The first dose gives relief. Try it. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free

Struck by Lightning.

Thursday afternoon during the electrical storm, the house of John Beams was struck by lightning. The bolt struck the upper story and followed the studding until it reached the cement blocks when it seems to have traveled in them.

It left the lower story at a point about a foot from the ground coming out through the cement, leaving a clean cut hole about the size of a lead pencil. The plastering in the upstairs was damaged considerably in three different rooms. Large portion of it were torn from the walls and the lathing loosened. The strange thing about it is that the building did not catch fire. Mr. and Mrs. Beams and son, Robert were considerably shaken up by the stroke.

WABASH CORNERS.

Anna Rickett was at Auburn on business Saturday.

Pearl Pervines spent Thursday with her sister, Lizzie, of Auburn.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

Gene White and family were Sunday guests of J. B. White at St. Joe.

Mrs. J. B. White of St. Joe, was the guest of the correspondent on Tuesday of last week.

Henry Flowers of near Metz, Ind., spent Monday night of last week with Sherman Wolff and wife.

Mrs. Orange Herrick and Mrs. Sherman Wolff spent Wednesday afternoon with George Wilson and family of Spencerville.

John Knisely of northeast of Hicksville, was the guest of his mother, Mrs. Rachel Knisely of this place, last Saturday.

Mrs. Ida Woodcox and son Homer, and Mrs. Ella Gill of St. Joe, were callers of Sherman Rickett's Saturday evening.

Merwood Rhoads spent Saturand Sunday with relatives at La-Otto and Huntertown.

Mart Hull, wife and daughters Marie and Goldie, were Sunday guests at John Brown's near Auburn.

Ed Hull went to Angola last Thursday to assist in a ball game.

John Baker of Fairview, called on Sherman Wolf and wife, Sunday morning.

Mrs. Ella Gill of St. Joe and Mrs. Angelia Wolff called on Grant Keller and family, Monday afternoon of last week.

Political Announcements.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davison, of No. 379 Gifford Ave., San Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy, for headache, billiousness and torpor of the bowels and liver is so pronounced that I am promted to say a word in its favor, for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

Dealer in
EDISON PHONOGRAPHS, RECORDS & SUPPLIES.

The phonograph is today recognized as a pleasing and useful instrument to have in any home. It speaks, sings, and plays music, imitating the human voice and musical instruments with perfect accuracy. Come in and hear it. The August records are now on sale.

A FULL LINE OF CIGARS.

Beams & Co.

We are in business to supply your wants in general merchandise. Good seasonable goods suitable for the local trade.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience is that you come in and see what we have. Very likely you will come to town this afternoon or tonight or later. Be sure to glance our way, then follow the glance.

What is Wanted

Spencerville, Indiana.

Erick & Co.

Two More Saturdays

Next Saturday and Saturday, August 29 will be the last two days on which the clock will stop August 29 the cash prizes will amount to $15.00. First prize $10. Second prize $3. Third prize $2.

Be on hand promptly at 3:30.

For Working Men.

We have a complete new line of overalls and working coats. We are the sole agents for the famous Cahart overalls and coats and a better line of goods was never made or shown in these parts. Come in and see them, buy them, wear them and be satisfied is of the best quality. We keep pure, fresh groceries and up-to-date, durable dry goods. These merit your trade. Come once and you will likely want to come again.

Our General Merchandise

Every dollar spent for painting, coating or replacing your roof is a Money Patch that you can avoid if you use J-M ASBESTOS ROOFING—which requires no coating or painting to preserve it.

J-M ASBESTOS ROOFING

is made of Asbestos, an indestructible mineral. Cannot rot or rust, resists fire and is not affected by gases, acids, heat or cold. Its first cost is the only cost. That is why it is the "cheapest-per-year" Roofing. Easily applied by anyone.

ASBESTOSIDE is an Asbestos Siding for buildings and the most economical, durable and easily applied siding known.

Ask for samples and prices.

H. W. JOHNS MANVILLE CO.

217 Clybourn St. Milwaukee, Wis.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER

CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable.

Beams & Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Christ Snyder of La Otto visited Mariah Oberholtzer Monday.

The Walter Reunion will be held at the home of Chas. Preece on Mill street at this place Saturday.

AUGUST

L 903

0295

The Popular Pulpit

HELP FOR ALL IN GOD.

By Rev. Edwin W. Caswell.

The one hundred thousand spectators witnessing the Olympiad at London were filled with wonder when they saw a mere boy, from New York City, the smallest of the fifty-five competitors, win the great Marathon race.

Littleness was better than bigness; quality than quantity. That the unseen forces of the will, purpose and faith are mightier than visible prowess was proven when David met Goliath, when the Japanese defeated the Russians and when John Hayes won the twenty-six mile race. Consciousness of weakness means preparation, discipline, progress and development and these mean victory. Necessity is called the mother of invention, therefore if the young man of wealth feels no necessity he will fail of the greatest achievement.

Carnegie and Rockefeller struggled up from the weakness of poverty to the summit of wealth and influence. Dante, Ruskin and Carlyle fought against the weakness of bodily ills till they attained the climax of intellectual greatness. The handicap of blindness enabled Milton of England, Milburn and Mathewson of Scotland to behold visions of thought and beauty beyond their fellows.

Hardships, deprivations and great difficulties in early life lifted Lincoln and Grant into their loftiest seats of power. Prisons have palaces proved to minds like Paul and Bunyan, where they were inspired to produce pen pictures that have delighted and blessed mankind in every land. Is it not a sublime truth that there is a pathway upward for every one? No wonder that Paul gloried in his infirmities, persecutions and distresses, for he exclaimed: "When I am weak, then am I strong, for the power of Christ will rest upon me."

The little child becomes strong because it stretches out its hand to the parent. The father is nobler when he bears his child out of danger into safety. So the sinful and troubled soul that stretches out its hands of faith to the Heavenly Father feels underneath the everlasting arms and nestles in the bosom of forgiveness and fatherhood, and who shall say God is not happier and mightier because of his embrace of helplessness?

Do you feel crushed by the law of "the survival of the fittest" or that "the weakest go to the wall?"

Heaven's law of grace creates fitness and meetness for the highest inheritance.

Do you agonize in the convulsions of pain? It is the divine hand leading you to greater riches as earthquakes reveal the gold in the rended rocks.

If God in nature can produce the diamond from the black carbon, the white lily from the black earth and bulb, the great tree from the tiny seed, He can bring purity out of sinfulness, strength out of weakness and heaven out of hell. His power will enable the soul that trusts in Him to overcome dangerous hereditary tendencies, untoward environments, unspeakable difficulties, so that you may become the author of opportunities and the creator of circumstances, and, though, at last, like John Brown, you go down to ignominous death, your liberty-loving soul will go "marching on" through all millenniums, in blessed companionship with Him who arose from the weakness of the manger, the cross and the sepulchre to become conqueror and ruler of all worlds.

If we put out little crosses at the foot of His great cross, He will lift them up until they become transfigured into crowns of glory forevermore.

DOES IT PAY?

By Henry F. Cope.

"What shall it profit a man?"—Mark 8:36.

The New England conscience insisted that everything that felt good must, therefore, be bad, that the fact that it was a pleasure to do any particular action was proof sufficient that that action was dangerous and sinful, that which pleased the palate must be pernicious to the health, that which the taste rejected must be "good for you."

Holding this view life became a bundle of contradictions, a perpetual warfare between those things which the Creator seems through our senses to suggest that we should do and those which piety prescribed. The good man was the unnatural one who exhausted himself in fighting against himself.

Religion becomes, under such circumstances, a matter of determining whether it pays to endure this present brief period of restrictions, deprivations, and denials in order to enjoy an eternity of bliss, whether it is worth while to endure purgatory on earth for the sake of paradise after death.

The question of religion goes a great deal deeper than whether it pays to be miserable here in order to be selfishly blissful in glory; it goes deeper than considerations of cold cash or commercial supremacy; it is this deep, root question, does it pay to follow your ideals?

Is it worth while, at any cost, to persist in the path of being the best you know? Supposing that obedience to that heavenly vision that comes at least once to us all leads into paths of pain, demands willingness to suffer and to bear loss, to remain unknown, to endure what many call failure, is it still worth while?

It is not an evidence of anything basely utilitarian in the character of this age that you hear so often the test question, "What's the use?" applied to proposed courses of action or duty. Ultimately all things must come to this proof of their right to be, that they have use, value, or they render service.

One is justified in putting the same test to every demand of religious duty. It is certainly a non-religious act to go on doing things in the church or in the name of religion without any thought of their purpose or value; it may be an irreligious act. Many a person is stunting his religious development by doing acts of religion without the religious motive.

If you urge a boy to go to Sunday school, and he answers: "O, what's de use?" would it not be better, instead of forcing him into involuntary compliance with your sense of religious duty, to fairly face his question and discover if there is any value, any use, any sufficient service in this which you urge him to do?

We have no moral right to go through any mechanical round of performances blindly making these motions, performing these rites, mumbling these words, simply because our fathers in the flesh did these things, or our fathers in the faith command us to do them. There is nothing of faith in unthinking routines, even in the name of religion.

Certainly here no clear or worthy answer can come from the test of commercial standards. We must see life all the way around before we may know whether the high path pays. Is the whole world the richer for the life that pays the great price for living? Is the gain to the individual in strength and beauty of life worth the cost?

Surely we know that all this life of things depends on the dynamic of the world of thought, that only a life inspired by noble ideals can do even the least piece of work in a worthy manner. It is the pursuit of some ideal that gives proficiency in every calling; it is the pursuit of the ideal life that gives power in the art of living.

It is easy to see how it pays to dig ditches, or to sell goods. Are we so blind that we cannot see both the joy and the profit of the life that is lived for the supreme aims, the life that gladly loses the shadow for the substance, the things that perish for those that endure, that piety is not seeking out the painful side of life, but it is living for life itself rather than for its tools or its meals, that no price you can pay is too great for the prize of full living?

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Selfishness is the suicide of happiness.

The divine is not discovered by definition.

Virtue is the moral fiber that comes from soul struggle.

Thinking bitterly of others strikes a blow at my own heart.

Our neighbors are not lifted up by looking up their records.

He who spreads himself in prayer is not likely to rise in it.

People who practice duplicity naturally label it diplomacy.

It's always easier to sing about heaven than to serve earth.

Every great public victory has many a private struggle behind it.

Love is that which roots in sacrifice, grows in service, blooms in joy.

Many believe they are sanctified because they feel so self-satisfied.

Square dealing means to many making all others fit to their angles.

It is not much use talking over your fidelity if folks do not find you friendly.

Disappointment is often only a turn in the road to the highest appointment.

The great life expects to fail often, but it determines never to stay in failure.

Seeing the way that others should go is not equivalent to going in the way we see.

It is always easy to make difficulties in doctrine a hiding place for the demands of duty.

There's a lot of difference between taking faith as a shield in battle and as a cloak in business.

He has little faith in truth who rushes out with a blanket every time the wind of criticism arises.

They who are most discontented with their circumstances are likely to be best satisfied with themselves.

The finest lubricant for the machinery of our human living is the recognition of virtues and values in other people.

When we survey any rich fruitage in our own lives it is worth while to ask who dug the wells for their refreshing.

The man in the church with the roving eyes looking over the bulbous nose is pretty sure to be strong on the doctrines.

Many a man who shrinks from the duty that dirties his hands plunges with delight into that which blackens his heart.

There's an irony in nature that is almost sure to bring those who prescribe for the race around to taking their own medicine.

Smiles of The Day

Looking Ahead.

Miss Gaddie—Mr. Bragley is getting to be quite an enthusiastic gold player now.

Mr. Wise—Yes, but he's worrying a good deal because he's so small.

Miss Gaddie—Afraid he'd never get to be an expert?

Mr. Wise—Oh no! He's afraid there won't be room enough on him for all the medals he's going to win.

Meeting the Condition.

"Augusta," said Mr. Wyss when the quarrel was at its height, "you have devised a great variety of ways to call me a fool."

"Merely a matter of necessity," replied Mrs. Wyss. "You have devised so many ways of being one."

Result of Education.

Mr. Woodlot—Naow, Hiram, this isn't the fust time I ketched ye loafin' to-day. It seems ez college has completely spiled ye!

Hiram (class '08)—Patience, pater; I'm merely trying to figure out by geometry how to get around this rock with the plow without swerving from my course!

Sure to Swell.

City Girl—Oh, isn't this a swell vine!

Country Boy—Yep, it be. It's pizen oak.

Mean.

Scribbler—Do you like my books?

Funnicus—I'm stuck on two of them.

Scribbler—Which two?

Funnicus—The two I bought.

Looking for Work.

"Why don't you go to work instead of begging and boozing?"

"I will, boss, as soon as there's an openin' in my trade. An' I ain't got long to wait now, nuther."

"What is your trade?"

"I'm a trackwalker for aeroplane lines."

No Limit.

Gunner—She's a very progressive young lady. She is going to enter the field of journalism and start a paper.

Guyer—Yes, and she is going to call it "The Rumor." Don't you think that is rather an unusual name?

Gunner—Not at all. When a rumor is started by a woman it always gains a wonderful circulation.

Puzzled Her.

Mrs. Stubb—John, is it cold out to the baseball grounds these days?

Mr. Stubb—Cold? Why, Maria, it is as hot as blazes. What in the world gave you the impression it was cold out there?

Mrs. Stubb—Why, John, the paper says the features of yesterday's games were several warm muffs.

His New Specialty.

The foolkiller was observed to be soaring in the clouds.

"Off for Mars?" asked Father Time, facetiously.

"No," replied the Foolkiller, "I am up here looking for the fool who rocks the airship."

Joke Within a Joke.

Scribbles—I had a good joke on my wife yesterday.

Dribbles—So?

Scribbles—Yes. She actually laughed at one of my jokes in a magazine, but of course she didn't know it was mine.

In a Book Store.

Clerk—There goes a man with a very interesting history.

Lady—You don't say so? How do you know?

Clerk—I just sold it to him.

Playing Safe.

"Are you going to send Graftleigh back to Congress?" asked the reporter.

"That's what," replied the rural politician. "We realise that it will be safer for us to have him there than at home.

His Offer.

Clarice—He asked me if he might offer me his umbrella, and——

Phyllis—But it wasn't raining, was it?

Clarice—No, but he said we could stroll along together until it began.

Bright Girl Again.

Teacher (at object lesson—So now, children, you know how a knife is made. I want you, Marjorie, to tell me which is the most important part of a knife.

Marjorie—Er—er—er——

Teacher—Well, I'll help you. What part of his knife does your father use the most?

Marjorie—The corkscrew.

An Optimist Needed.

Mae—Our pastor preached a sermon on marriage last Sunday.

Edythe—Did it seem to have a stimulating effect?

Mae—No. On the contrary, it was so solemn and conveyed so many warnings that it broke off two engagements.

Womanlike.

Ostend—The paper says the women's club went out on a yachting party with fifty members—all told. What does "all told" mean, pop?

Pa—Oh, I guess it means they all told everything they knew about the members that did not go.

Certain Symptoms.

"Bill," said the farmer's boy in an awed whisper, "Jim has washed his face twice this morning."

"Do tell!" ejaculated his lanky brother. "Well, visitors must be coming."

"And he has put on a new shirt and a clean collar."

"Jumping June bugs! Why, he must be going to a picnic!"

"And his shoes are blacked and every time you get near him you can smell hair oil."

"Then that settles it. Bill has got a gal. Tell ma she can soon prepare for a new daughter-in-law. Never knew them thar symptoms to fail."

Early in the Season.

Visitor—Aren't any of you suburbanites preparing to grow anything in your gardens this year?

Woodson—Well, there's one thing most of us have grown already.

Visitor—Indeed? What's that, pray?

Woodson—Tired.

Reform Movement.

The milkman had been brought to see the error of his ways.

"Thomas," he said to his assistant, "I am going to furnish my customers with absolutely pure milk after this.

"So?" queried Thomas.

"That's what," continued the milkman. "Hereafter we will use distilled water only."

Too Much for Him.

"How true that old saying is about a child asking questions that a man cannot answer," remarked Popleigh.

"What's the trouble now?" queried his friend Singleton.

"This morning," replied Popleigh, "my little boy asked me why men were sent to Congress and I couldn't tell him."

Something Wrong.

Ardupp—There's one thing I can't understand.

Norcross—What's that?

Ardupp—Why it is that in this era of trusts it's so hard to get trusted.

Had a Conference.

Bronson (to fisherman)—Just throw me half a dozen of those trout.

Fisherman—Throw them?

Bronson—Yes; then I can go home and tell my wife I caught 'em. I may be a poor fisherman, but I'm no liar.

Foiled Again.

"I presume," said the lodger, icily, at the conclusion of the little dispute with his landlady, "I presume that you will allow me to take my belongings away with me?"

"I am sorry," was the icy reply, "but your other collar has not yet come home from the laundry."

Careful of Him.

"Why don't you let your husband carry that heavy basket of wet clothes, Mrs. O'Lympick?"

"Because the poor fellow has to be careful of his strength. You know he is entered for the hammer throw and weight-lifting contests."

Not Impressed.

"I have been abroad in the best of society," boasted the city youth. "Why, even my trunks bear the labels of Switzerland."

"Gosh, that ain't nothing, sonny," drawled the rural uncle. "So does a box of cheese."

Fly in the Ointment.

First Bride—Does your husband ever say anything about his mother's cooking?

Second Bride—Sometimes; but I never pay any attention to it. It's what he says about my cooking that makes me angry.

Mystery.

"I wonder why it is?" said the man who seemed to be thinking aloud.

"Why what is?" queried the friend who had overheard.

"That people who are so different from us seem to be satisfied with themselves," concluded the noisy thinker.

Not Literary Himself.

"But, papa," pleaded the pretty American girl, "can't you take the little prince along with us to the seashore? He is so literary I just know he will entertain you."

"No, thanks," replied the old millionaire, firmly, "I don't care to take any literary supplements."

Reckless Man.

"It says here, Maria," said Mr. Hardapple, as he opened his weekly paper, "that a man with an open umbrella jumped off a New York skyscraper."

"Do tell, Hiram!" gasped Mrs. Hardapple, looking up from her churn. "And did it break his umbrella?"

DARKNESS IS VISIBLE.

Japanese Villages Where It Is Dim at Midday.

Without having actually seen them, you cannot imagine how dark some Japanese country villages remain even in the brightest and hottest weather. In the neighborhood of Tokyo itself there are many villages of this kind. At a short distance from such a settlement you see no houses; nothing is visible but a dense grove of evergreen trees. The grove, which is usually composed of young cedars and bamboos, serves to shelter the village from storms, and also to supply timber for various purposes. So closely are the trees planted that there is no room to pass between the trunks of them; they stand straight as masts, and mingle their crests so as to form a roof that excludes the sun. Each thatched cottage occupies a clear space in the plantation, the trees forming a fence about it, double the height of the building. Under the trees it is always twilight, even at noon; and the houses, morning or evening, are half in shadow. What makes the first impression of such a village almost disquieting is, not the transparent gloom, which has a certain weird charm of its own, but the stillness. There may be fifty or a hundred dwellings; but you see nobody; and hear no sound but the twitter of invisible birds, the occasional crowing of cocks, and the shrilling of cicadae. Even the cicadae find these groves too dim, and sing faintly; being sun lovers, they prefer the trees outside the village. I forgot to say that you may sometimes hear a viewless shuttle—chaka-ton, chaka-ton—but that familiar sound, in the great green silence, seems an elfish happening. The reason of the hush is simply that the people are not at home. All the adults have gone to the neighboring fields, the women carrying their babies on their back; and most of the children have gone to the nearest school, perhaps not less than a mile away. Verily, one seems to behold the mysterious perpetuation of conditions recorded in the texts of Kwang Tze:

"The ancients who had the nourishment of the world wished for nothing, and the world had enough; they did nothing, and all things were transformed; their stillness was abysmal, and the people were all composed."—Atlantic Monthly.

PERILOUS RIDE IN A ROWBOAT.

How Two Michigan Men Gained a Valuable Timber Claim.

Bert Marquette and A. Rogers, two Cheboygan (Mich.) timber cruisers, beat out rivals for a valuable piece of land by using a leaky rowboat to ferry them across thirty miles of stormy water separating Isle Royale from the north shore of Lake Superior, says the St. Paul Dispatch. Marquette and Rogers were in Duluth waiting for navigation to open, so they might be first on the ground. They took the first steamer out for Isle Royale, and learned that two other men on the vessel were bound on the same mission—the looking over a piece of timbered land on Isle Royale as a preliminary to filing on it as a stone and timber claim. Isle Royale is in the Marquette (Mich.) land district, and whoever reached Marquette first and made his filing would be entitled to the land under the law.

It looked very much as if the race would depend upon the last spurt of the four from the railroad station at Marquette to the land office, for they would have to depend on the same boats and trains to get them to the island and then to the Michigan town, but Rogers and Marquette, knowing there would not be an early boat back to Duluth so early in the season, decided to take a chance with a rowboat, which they found tied in a sheltered cove.

The idea seemed foolhardy, for thirty miles of water intervened between the isle and the mainland, and as it was the season of storms, there seemed about one chance in ten of a rowboat being able to make such a trip. But the Michigan men cast caution aside and took the rowboat, leaving $3 as rental, together with a note explaining that the craft would be returned.

It was not until they had got out from the shore that they found that the boat leaked, but by bailing with the cups they carried in their packsacks they managed to keep it from sinking.

No serious storms occurred during the trip, though there was enough wind to keep the rowboat in constant danger of being swamped; but the north shore was made in safety and from there the men traveled by foot and stage to the Alger-Smith railroad and thence to Two Harbors by train. From there to Duluth and Marquette the journey was easy, and the cruisers won out by an easy margin. The rowboat was sent back to the island by the next steamer.

Willie's Wisdom.

Teacher—Willie, why don't you keep your hair combed? Willie—'Cause I ain't got no comb. Teacher—Why don't you ask your mamma to buy you one? Willie—'Cause then I'd have ter keep my hair combed.—Judge.

Better Left Unsolved.

Parke—Tell me, old chap, honest, now, do you permit your wife to control you? Lane—To be honest with you, that's a question I have never dared ask myself.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Over 92,000 natives are employed by the missionary societies of this country and Europe in spreading the gospel among their fellows.

Homely people believe pretty people have no sense.

Is Pe-ru-na Useful for Catarrh?

Should a list of the ingredients of Peruna be submitted to any medical expert, of whatever school or nationality, he would be obliged to admit without reserve that the medicinal herbs composing Peruna are of two kinds. First, standard and well-tried catarrh remedies. Second, well-known and generally acknowledged tonic remedies. That in one or the other of these uses they have stood the test of many years' experience by physicians of different schools. There can be no dispute about this, whatever. Peruna is composed of some of the most efficacious and universally used herbal remedies for catarrhal diseases, and for such conditions of the human system as require a tonic. Each one of the principal ingredients of Peruna has a reputation of its own in the cure of some phase of catarrh or as a tonic medicine.

The fact is, chronic catarrh is a disease which is very prevalent. Many thousand people know they have chronic catarrh. They have visited doctors over and over again, and been told that their case is one of chronic catarrh. It may be of the nose, throat, lungs, stomach or some other internal organ. There is no doubt as to the nature of the disease. The only trouble is the remedy. This doctor has tried to cure them. That doctor has tried to prescribe for them.

No other household remedy so universally advertised carries upon the label the principal active constituents, showing that Peruna invites the full inspection of the critics.

Grapes Fresh All Winter.

A clever French process by which vine growers in France are able to market fresh outdoor grapes all through the winter is thus described. Bunches of the finest grapes when ripe in autumn are cut in such a way that to each bunch a piece of the vine five or six inches long remains attached. From this piece the stems of the bunch hand, an arrangement vitally necessary to the success of the operation.

A large number of the wide-mouth bottles, filled with water, is ranged in a cellar and in the open end of each is inserted the pieces of vine stem, the bunches of grapes handing outside. The grapes do not touch the water, but are thus supplied with moisture through the vine stem, which is immersed in water. By this process choice varities of table grapes are kept in perfect condition for the whole winter.

The temperature of the cellar is uniform and moderately low and care is taken daily to supply the bottles with the water lost by evaporation. Fruit thus carefully tended is somewhat costly, but there are many patrons who willingly pay $2 a bunch for the delicacy of fresh grapes in midwinter.

Beauty Hints.

Superfluous hair may be permanently removed by amputating the limb upon which it appears.

Some ladies have found that a judicious use of powder will cause a critical husband to entirely cease remarking upon their alleged homeliness. The powder, it might be explained, was directed at the said husbands.

Nitroglycerin in sufficient quantity will simply knock the spots off a freckle-faced girl.

A simple and healthful addition to the daily bath is a couple of gallons of oil of roses. This can be procured at any drug store at the nominal price of 5 cents per drop.—Toledo Blade.

A Sporting Event.

Mrs. Peck—Henry, do you see anything in the paper about Blinker running over his mother-in-law?

Mr. Peck—Not yet. I haven't come to the sporting news.—Puck.

One of the Essentials

of the happy homes of to-day is a vast fund of information as to the best methods of promoting health and happiness and right living and knowledge of the world's best products.

Products of actual excellence and reasonable claims truthfully presented and which have attained to world-wide acceptance through the approval of the Well-Informed of the World; not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and obtaining the best the world affords.

One of the products of that class, of known component parts, an Ethical remedy, approved by physicians and commended by the Well-Informed of the World as a valuable and wholesome family laxative is the well-known Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brentwood

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

AUGUST

L 903

U 296

This woman says that after months of suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her as well as ever.

Maude E. Forgie, of Leesburg, Va., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For months I suffered from feminine ills so that I thought I could not live. I wrote you, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and using the treatment you prescribed I felt like a new woman. I am now strong, and well as ever, and thank you for the good you have done me."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

All dealers. Sample, Booklet and "WHIZ" Parlor Card Game, 10c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

Get your Letter Paper and Envelopes printed at this office. We can give you the

EAGLE LINEN

PAPER and ENVELOPES

It is fine and will suit you. Try it.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

TO-NIGHT Cascarets

BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER

JOS. DUCHAC & CO.

FINE WISCONSIN FARM AND TIMBER LANDS $25.00

92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO

If afflicted with sore Eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

BABY CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Covered with Torturing Eczema—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby niece was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body, but the worst was on her face and hands. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid. But I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and she was cured in three months. Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907."

John Has Become a Sightseer.

"John Chinaman, as a race, has become fired with municipal zeal," said a New Yorker who likes to watch the sightseeing wagons. "Also John has became financially reckless. Several times this spring I have seen 'rubbernecks' go by with two or more Chinamen among the passengers. I don't remember ever to have seen that phenomenon until this season, except, of course, in the case of traveling Orientals. But the sightseeing Chinese that I have noticed lately are residents of New York out for the first time in their lives probably to see something of the town they live in."

His Run of Bad Luck.

Dinguss (chronic borrower)—Shadbolt, I called twice to pay you that $5 I owe you, and you were out both times.

Shadbolt—That's unfortunate, for I wanted the money. You have it with you now, I presume?

Dinguss—Why—h'm—no. The fact is, I'm short again, and I've dropped in to touch you for another fiver.

Shadbolt—That's equally unfortunate, Dinguss, for you're not going to get a blamed cent.

Don't Spoil Your Clothes.

Use Red Cross Ball Blue and keep them white as snow. All grocers, 5 cents a package.

THE ELECTRIC WINCH.

A Modern Substitute for the Old-Time Hand-Power Windlass.

When underground conduits for electric wires were first put down the wires were drawn through them by means of a windlass manned by laborers. Nowadays they use electric winches.

These are installed on the great electric trucks used in carrying the wire cables and tools. The newest of these giant trucks is twenty-one feet long and seven feet wide and it weighs tons, a heavy load to move in itself, but the storage battery it carries contains stored up power sufficient to move it and its load of tons added and also to operate its winches.

The electric winch is set in this truck at its forward end and it does not take up a very great amount of room. In pulling a new electric wire cable through a conduit or pulling an old cable out the big truck is first backed up to the manhole and then the rope attached to the cable is brought up to the barrel of the winch at the truck's forward end.

When they are all ready to haul the man tending the winch takes three or four turns of the rope around the barrel of the winch and another man takes the free end of the rope leading from the winch, and keeps that taut to make the turns bind on the barrel, and then, instead of four men getting to work turning on cranks, the winch man turns a switch, which is in appearance not unlike a hand on the face of a clock, and turns the power into the motor, and the snug little apparatus that is set in operation by the power of a finger begins to pull and to pull irresistibly.—New York Sun.

SELF DELUSION.

Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgencies and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whisky is good for him on a cool morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whisky or beer!

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headache and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon.

"My folks thought it was coffee that ailed me, but I liked it and would not admit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me.

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to see what a difference it would make with my head, and during that first week on Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past and the whole family is in fine health."

"Postum looks good, smells good, tastes good, is good, and does good to the whole body." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Pointed Tunic with Skirt.

The tunic drapery is one of the very latest decrees of fashion and is really exceedingly graceful and very generally becoming when cut on such lines as those illustrated. It is generally classic in effect, and it drapes the figure with real grace, while it is adapted to every material that will drape successfully. This one is arranged over a closely fitted skirt that is finished with a circular flounce at the lower edge. As illustrated the material is crepe de chine with trimming of applique in self color, but the bordered materials, which are so fashionable, can be utilized with success, as the border can be cut off and arranged over the tunic and the flounce, and all the pretty soft silks, light weight wools and the like are appropriate for the design.

PATTERN No. 5997.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5997.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Child's Reefer.

There is no coat that suits the young child better than the simple reefer. It is always smart, always in style, it slips on and off with ease, and it can be made from a variety of materials. This one is adapted to girls up to eight years of age and to the tiny boys and can be made from white broadcloth or white serge if something very dressy is wanted, from dark blue or dark red serge if something more useful is in demand, from dark colored broadcloth or from one of the mixed cheviots. It is finished with simple tailor stitching with belding silk and allows a choice of the regulation collar with lapels or of a high roll-over collar.

PATTERN NO. 5979.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5979.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

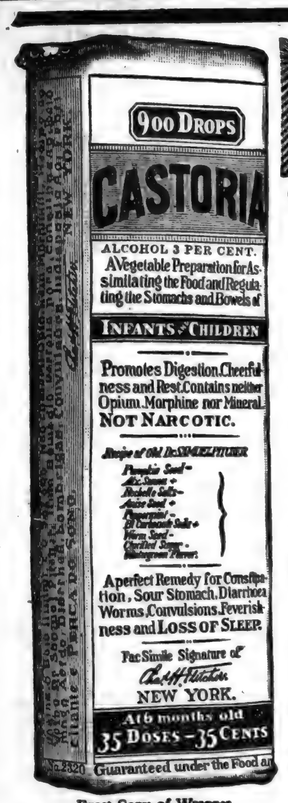
ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The population of Bombay is within less than 20,000 of the million mark.

No horses are to be seen on the farms in Bolivia, bullocks or oxen being universally employed.

Luther Burbank, the horticultural wizard, is going to introduce his spineless cactus to the deserts of Nevada.

It is estimated that the total amount of coal in North China, where are most of the coal fields is 650,000,000,000 tons



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Manila One Day Behind.

Manila is one of the most important ports in the Philippine Islands, but, strange to say, is one day behind all other places of its size in the world. This curious fact is accounted for in this way: Although the Philippine Islands lie near the Asiatic coast, they were discovered by Spaniards who sailed from America. When they crossed the magic line where Sunday changes into Monday these fiery dons of proud Castilian ancestors did not revise their calendar. When told of this years later and informed that their mode of reckoning time was not up to modern notions they merely said that was so much the worse for modern notions. Anyhow, the fact remains that these islanders keep plodding along one day behind the rest of the world, which reckons time by new style.

THE TIME TEST.

That Is What Proves True Merit.

Doan's Kidney Pills bring the quickest of relief from backache and kidney troubles. Is that relief lasting? Let Mrs. James M. Long, of 113 N. Augusta St., Staunton, Va., tell you. On January 31st, 1903, Mrs. Long wrote: "Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me" (of pain in the back, urinary troubles, bearing down sensations, etc.). On June 20th, 1907, four and one-half years later, she said: "I haven't had kidney trouble since. I repeat my testimony."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Machine for Shuffling Cards.

A machine which automatically shuffles a pack of cards in an instant with the cards concealed from sight and which changes the position of nine out of every ten cards is the latest mechanical device for cardplayers. It not only protects the cards from injury but gives an absolute square deal shuffle. The machine weighs four pounds and attaches in a moment to any table. It is about twelve inches high.

Greedy Little Salmon.

Little creatures may be very greedy and yet not be able to eat much, because of their size, as was illustrated, for instance, in the case of a batch of about 20,000 little Chinook salmon that were hatched out at the New York aquarium.

These young fishes, each about two inches long, would eat so much that their little stomachs fairly stuck out, and yet to feed the whole 20,000 took daily only one pound of liver and a quart of herring roe, both chopped fine.

By Default.

"Does your husband ever praise your cooking, Bertha?" asked the young wife's elderly aunt.

"O, yes, indeed, auntie?"

"What does he say when he does?"

"Well—er—he doesn't say much, you know, but I can always tell when the cooking pleases him. He doesn't swear at it."

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES

RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES

375 "Guaranteed"

CHEAP SUBSTITUTE FOR NICKEL.

Equal in Ductile Strength and Costs Much Less to Produce.

A new metal called monel, which is expected to cause something of a revolution in the industrial world, is being produced at the works of the Canadian Copper Company at Sudbury, Ont., says the New York World. It is cheaper than nickel, and it is claimed that it possesses all the qualities of the former.

Monel is a compound of copper, nickel, iron and one or two other minerals which are found in the district, and its importance lies in the fact that it is much less costly than nickel, is less liable to rust and will serve all the purposes for which nickel is at present utilized. The company has now got beyond the experimental stage in the production of this new metal. It costs very much less to produce it than nickel, as the costly refining process is dispensed with.

It was the result of some experiments made by F. H. Clergue and his chemist, Mr. Sjostedt, aiming at the production of nickel steel for naval armor plates, that turned the attention of the Canadian Copper Company to the possibility arising from nickel alloys. What greatly facilitated the experiments was the fact that the melting point of nickel and iron are practically the same, while that of copper is very little higher.

The new metal is said to be of equal ductile strength with nickel and to possess all its other essential qualities, but it is not yet claimed that it would serve the purpose of nickel steel used as armor plate.

Good Housekeepers Use the Best.

That's why they use Red Cross Ball Blue. At leading grocers, 5 cents.

The Tough Kid.

Nabor—I saw the doctor at your house yesterday.

Subbubs—Yes, that boy of mine climbed up on the porch when he was told not to and——

Nabor—Ah, I see! He fell and broke his——

Subbubs—No! much! He's sound as a dollar. But my wife tried to whip him for it and now she's a nervous and physical wreck.—Philadelphia Press.

Kind Deed.

At a meeting of a Band of Mercy class in a small town near Denver each child relates the kind deed he or she has recently done. One day the teacher asked little Emily to relate the kind deed she had done. She quickly rose and said:

"I took off a tin can tied to a little dog's tail."

The teacher asked, "Did you know who tied it on?"

"Yes," replied Emily, with hesitation. "I didn't know any kind deed to report, so I tied it on so that I could take it off."—Philadelphia Ledger.

FITS St. Vitus' Dance and Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ld., 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa

A Gray-Haired Child.

To have all his hair turn gray at the early age of 6 years, with no apparent cause, has been the lot of the young son of John Ertwine of 11th street, Bloomsburg.

About a year ago the parents noticed that the boy's hair, which was dark, was beginning to turn gray in several places. At first they pulled out the gray hairs, but these increased so rapidly that at present it would be necessary to keep the boy's head shaved to keep the gray hair from showing.—Philadelphia Record.

There is an altar society in Brooklyn composed of night policemen. The members contribute a certain amount every month which pays for lights and flowers on an altar of perpetual adoration.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Libby's Food Products

Peerless Dried Beef

Unlike the ordinary dried beef—that sold in bulk—Libby's Peerless Dried Beef comes in a sealed glass jar in which it is packed the moment it is sliced into those delicious thin wafers.

None of the rich natural flavor or goodness escapes or dries out. It reaches you fresh and with all the nutriment retained.

Libby's Peerless Dried Beef is only one of a Great number of high-grade, ready to serve, pure food products that are prepared in Libby's Great White Kitchen.

Just try a package of any of these, such as Ox Tongue, Vienna Sausage, Pickles, Olives, etc., and see how delightfully different they are from others you have eaten.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

IRRIGATED FARM LANDS

IN COLFAX COUNTY, NEW MEXICO

NEVER-FAILING CROPS!

Finest soil and climate specially adapted to cereals, fruit, sugar beets, alfalfa, melons, etc.

Altitude, 5,700 feet.

Selling at $40.00 to $60.00 per acre, including perpetual water rights. Terms to suit.

Lots now on sale in the new town of Preach—splendid business opportunities.

Our private Pullman car leaves first and third Tuesdays each month. Next excursion Sept. 1. Fare, $30.00 round trip. Refunded on purchase.

Write for full particulars. Local representatives wanted.

FRENCH LAND AND IRRIGATION COMPANY

604 Atwood Building . . . CHICAGO

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.

Texas Pan-Handle Farm Lands

Come to our Chicago Office and go with us on Special Train

TUESDAY, AUGUST 4TH

To examine our FARM LANDS, equal to any in CENTRAL STATES. Our Prices are so LOW and TERMS so very REASONABLE you will buy.

LOCATORS LAND COMPANY

646 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Agents in every community to help us sell our Panhandle Texas lands, which adjoin improved farms. Level, fertile, no stones, sand or alkali. Price $10 to $17 per acre. We operate farms and furnish teams. Write for circular. Farmers' Colonization Company, 1215 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

AUGUST

L 903

0297

MRS. WARNER
THE MILLINER

IS AT

CLEVELAND and DETROIT

THIS WEEK ATTENDING THE MILLINERY OPENINGS.

4 %
INTEREST

Interest paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.

Three (3) Per cent

Interest paid on certificates of deposit if left for two months.

The above savings propositions are the most liberal of any banking house in DeKalb County.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.

Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid
$50,000

Security to Depositors
$100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.
Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner David S. Ober
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher C. West

Coburn's Corners.

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

Sax Hadsell and family spent Sunday with relatives in Hicksville.

Dio Dermot and family, of Michigan are visiting in the neighborhood this week.

The Coburn's Corners Sunday School will attend the Springfield Center picnic, next Saturday.

A number from this way attended the Temperance Lecture at St. Joe Sunday afternoon.

Samuel Emery and grandson Archie Milliman, of Mich., have been visiting with friends in this vicinity, the past week.

Samuel Kelley spent Sunday with his son, D. M. Kelley.

Mort Shutt and son Stanley, made a business trip to Ft. Wayne, Saturday.

Pluma Kimes spent Friday afternoon with Fern and Zenith Wearley.

Greely Wearley, wife and daughter LeAnna, spent Sunday with relatives at Huntertown.

Wm. Rhoads spent a couple of days last week with his daughter and other relatives at New Paris.

Will Benninghoff came home from his work at Elkhart, Friday to attend the Lake Reunion.

Mrs. Effie Schoolmaster of Fremont, Mich., and Mrs. Mattie Hart called on Mrs. Minnie Wearley, one day last week.

Mrs H. T. Walters of Portland visited with her sisters this week, Mrs. Claude Shutt and Mrs. Minnie Tyndall and families.

DeVern Kelley returned to his home in Adrian, Mich., Wednesday, after visiting with his uncle, D. M. Kelley, and other friends.

Mrs. Jennie Heltzel, daughter Effie and son Vene, and Mrs. Wm. Wearley of Woodburn, visited with relatives, Thursday. Miss Heltzel prolonged her visit a few days.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gee spent Tuesday at the home of Mac Leighty.

Spices that are guaranted to be absolutely pure at H. Milliman's.

Mrs. Lilly Shull of Walkerville Michigan visited relatives in this neighborhood over Sunday.

Laney Gee and family expect to attend the Hollopeter Reunion at Robinson Park to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hamilton spent Sunday at the home of Nicholas Goldsmith, west of Spencerville.

Mr. George Lilly and daughter of Hicksville and Mr. Isiah Davis of Scio attended church services Sunday.

Fifteen little friends spent Wednesday afternoon with Portia Hadsell. It was her fifth birthday. The little folks brought several presents.

Clyd Hart took sick Saturday night. The doctor pronounces the disease malarial fever. Monday night his temperature was at 103 and Tuesday forenoon his condition was not improved.

FAIRVIEW

Master Paul Brown spent Sunday with Harold Coyle.

Lawrence Brown spent Sunday with Frank Ginther of St. Joe.

Elic Platters attended the funeral of Mrs. Barton at Auburn, Sunday afternoon.

Delia May of Auburn, was a guest of her brother, Frank May, Saturday and Sunday.

Marguerite and Leota Milliman spent Saturday and Sunday with their grandparents at St. Joe.

The Misses Laura Baker and Ethel Snyder spent Sunday afternoon with Ethel and Erma Houser.

Master Crates May returned home Sunday after a few days visit with his grandparents of Auburn.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

Norman Rolland came very nearly loosing two of his horses, last week. One became entangled in the harness while Mr. Rolland was plowing and cut itself severely on the plow and the other has blood poison.

Wm. Knight suffered a stroke of paralysis, Saturday afternoon. A second stroke followed Saturday night and since then he has remained in an unconscious condition. The latest report from him showed no improvement in his condition.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No 2.

June Volkert of Grand Rapids, Mich is visiting her uncle, J. Benninghoffs', and other relatives.

John Notstine of Kansas, Chas. Grill and George Hart, spent Sunday with Harvie Kimes Sr. and family.

Ben Gerig and family spent Sunday with Solomon Goldsmith and wife.

Jake Grim and Tel Elson called on Wm. Watson and family, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bair of Findley, Ohio, spent a few days with William Watson and family.

Wm. Huffman, wife and daughter Lillie, and Edward Muhn of Auburn, spent Sunday with Clarence Conner and wife.

Henry Rakestraw and wife spent Sunday with Geo. Campbell and wife and attended the funeral of Mrs. Barton.

FOUND:- An extra duster in a buggy at the Meese Chapel picnic. Left by error. Owner may have same by calling at Rose Lawn.

The committee on program for the Lawn Festival on James Friend's Lawn, Saturday evening, Aug. 22, are arranging for an excellent program.

SPENCERVILLE
R. F. D. No. 1.

Springfield Center picnic will be held next Saturday.

The Horn Reunion will be held Thursday at F. T. Horn's.

Mrs. Neff of Ft. Wayne visited Mrs. George Horn a few days last week.

The Sapp Reunion will be held next Thursday at Charles Hartzell's of Harlan.

Mary Horn went to Ft. Wayne last Saturday to visit among friends a few days.

Theresa Hay visited in this community last week. Her grandmother, Mrs. Hursh accompanied her to her home near Waterloo, last Saturday.

Zona Horn went to Ft. Wayne Saturday to meet Miss Reed a former room mate when attending school at Valparaiso. She will remain several days.

Mrs. Droyer, daughter and niece returned Friday evening from Streator Ill., where she had been for the last month. She left her brother very low. On Monday she received a message from Danville Ill. that her sister died on Sunday evening.

County Line News.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

Ralph Gump, Iva Gump and Miss Myrtle Leavengood of Marion, Ind., spent a few days with Geo. Rinehold and family the past week.

Geo. McNutt, wife and daughters Myrtle and Hazel, and son Lemon, Geo. Rinehold, wife and daughter Agnes, Iva Gump of Marion, Ind., and Clay Rinehold and son Joe, spent Sunday with Raleigh Wyatt and family.

The Meese Chapel picnic turned out rather "wet" during the morning hours. A goodly number was present and there was plenty of sunshine under the wagons and trees and in the buggies. All came to have a picnic and were determined to stay. The afternoon was pleasant and as a social event was a grand success.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILOAD

Excursion

To Toledo, O.,

August 28, 29, 30, 31

ACCOUNT:— 42nd. ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

Consult B. & O. Agent.

Local Items.

Old papers at News office.

Clarence Walter was home from Ft. Wayne, Sunday.

Henry Hathaway was at Chicago, Sunday and Monday.

Bertha Hart of South Bend is here for a few weeks vacation.

For a change why not go to KAGEY'S and try a glass of Liquid Force.

Gasoline cans filled day or night at MILLIMAN'S DRUG STORE.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Barney spent Sunday and Monday at New Haven.

Claude Bickhart of Harlan, is a guest of his uncle, B. F. Walter, this week.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

Isaac Speer and Amber McBride of Waterloo visited with their cousin, Simon Wineland, Saturday.

Miss Ida Widney, who has been here this summer, has gone to Michigan to teach during the winter.

Clarence Widney returned to Oklahoma last week, after a two weeks visit with friends and relatives.

Merritt Sechler, Ralph Patterson and Lee Tustison attended a social event at Harlan, Tuesday evening.

George Bleeks and wife, who have been visiting with friends in Pinkstaff, Illinois, for a couple of weeks, expect to return home, Thursday.

Mrs. J. N. Scholes went to Angola, Friday, where she will spend a few days with her husband at Lake James.

Mr. and Mrs. Towsley and Miss Hornberger of Elkhart are visiting their sister, Mrs. George Swineford.

The first Herrick family reunion will be held Friday in Mr. Frank Herrick's grove on his seventy-first birthday.

Chas. Thomas and wife of Jackson, Michigan came Tuesday noon and will remain over the Herrick family reunion.

Mrs. Don VanFleit returned to her home in Garrett today, after visiting two weeks with friends and relatives at this place.

Chas. F. Thayer of Charlotte, North Carolina, arrived Monday evening for a months visit with his mother and other relatives and friends.

It pays to advertise. C. A. Woodcox informs us that he secured six buggies to paint this week on the strength of one ad. Think of it!

George W. Kuhlman was on our streets, Monday. He brought a floral offering as a tribute to Mrs. Rush who was a friend of his family in his boyhood days.

Mrs. Willis Brown of Waterloo, Iowa arrived Monday noon. She was called to the bedside of her mother but did not reach here until after Mrs. Rush had died.

The schoolhouse is undergoing some necessary repairs this week. The rooms are to be freshly papered and the old part of the building repaired. W. L. Church is doing the work.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, vice president of the state W. C. T. U. organization will lecture in St. Joe at the Lutheran church Wednesday evening, August 26th. All are invited. A free will offering will be taken.

J. L. Rhodenbaugh has purchased a genuine Rocky Mountain burro for the amusement of his little daughter, Irma. The animal was imported from the west. It is a source of attraction especially to the children.

In the News window you can find a number of Texas products brought from the Pan Handle district by Mr. Sherer. In the window also are some fine specimens of beans and on display is a stock of corn over thirteen feet in length. Put your products on display in our window.

Of all the able representatives of the W. C. T. U. who have visited Greensburg, none have surpassed Mrs. Elizabeth T. Stanley, the State lecturer. Her address last night in the G. A. R. Hall was most inspiring. Hundreds were turned away from the mass meeting in the M. E. Church Sunday night. Mrs. Stanley is always welcome in Greensburg. Mrs. Stanley will be at the Lutheran Church August 25th. at 8:00 P. M.

The DeKalb County W. C. T. U. convention will be held in Auburn Tuesday August 25th. in the Lutheran church. Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, vice president and also state lecturer will be in attendance. Mrs. Stanley will be with the St. Joe union, August 26th., holding a parlor meeting in the afternoon and giving a lecture in the evening. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing. Sherwin Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles, hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

Harry Milliman
The Druggist

PICKLING TIME

is now almost at hand. You will want spices to season the pickled fruits and vegetables for use during the winter. You will want spices that are all spice. We have them, pure and unadulterated, guaranteed to be absolutely pure under the pure food and drug law.

A COMPLETE LINE OF SPICES.

Ground Mustard, Tumeric, Mixed Spices Celery Seed, Mustard Seed, Cloves and Cinnamon.

Do You Know

that we are handling gasoline? Our tank is new and the gasoline is of the best grade. Cans filled day or night.

It Makes no Difference.

BRING YOUR GASOLINE CAN

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

THE ETERNAL QUESTION in this instance is one of Clothes. Twice a year every man is called upon to solve it, and it is up to us to help you find the answer. This year we are better equipped than ever. The INTERNATIONAL TAILORING CO. of New York and Chicago have supplied us with a line of Fabrics and Styles which will solve the question for every man regardless of his taste. If you are in doubt as to what to wear, a call here will put you right. Let us take your measure. Popular prices.

The New Fall Hats are in. Swell stiff hats in Black and Brown at $2, 2.50 and $3.00. Newest shapes in Soft hats for Young Men $1.50, 2.00 and 2.25

Big Four Store.

Report of the Condition of the

St. Joe Valley Bank.

a private bank at St. Joe; in the State of Indiana, at the close of its business on August 11, 1908.

RESOURCES.
Loans and Discounts		$52 529 69
Other Bonds and Securities		1 000 00
Furniture and Fixtures		600 00
Due from Banks and Trust Companies		13 893 90
Cash on Hand		3 820 85
Cash Items		6 0 20
TOTAL RESOURCES		52 494 14

LIABILITIES
Capital Stock—paid in		$10 000 00
Surplus		1 000 00
Undivided Profits net		2 375 25
Demand Deposits	$27 617 75
Demand Certificates	11 501 14	39 118 89
TOTAL LIABILITIES		52 494 14

STATE OF INDIANA, COUNTY OF DEKALB SS:

I, W. C. PATTERSON, CASHIER, of the St. Joe Valley Bank, St. Joe, Ind., do solemnly swear that the above statement is true.

W. C. PATTERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 14th day of August, 1908.

My commission expires April 16, 1912.

S. S. WIDNEY, Notary Public.

AUGUST

0298

L 903

Supplement to the

St. Joe News

St. Joe, Ind. | Wednesday, August 19 1908 | Tustison & Leighty, Pub

Stop That Thirst!

This hot weather you get thirsty. Perfectly natural you know, and you want to drink, drink, drink. What you drink in warm weather is important to your health. The danger is that you may drink impure beverages, and bring on such diseases as malaria and typhoid fever

Try Our Health Giving Drinks

Moxie, Force, Wayno and Red Cross Fruit Juices. Wayno, the new fountain drink, a nutritious beverage flavored with orange, peach, grape or cherry. Lemonade and all kinds of phosphates.

Ice Cream & Sodas

Served in all the fancy ways or plain dishes.

CHAS. F. KAGEY, ST. JOE

Local Briefs

The Nelson family reunion will be held at Hicksville, next Tuesday.

Ira Bowen and wife went to Hamilton lake Saturday and remained until Tuesday.

May Woodard returned home Saturday, after spending a few days at Butler.

Earl Sherer and Frank Ginther of Ft. Wayne visited Sunday at this place.

Samuel Emery and grandson Archie, of Coldwater, Michigan, are visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. Charles Huffman left Tuesday to visit friends at Worcester and other points in Ohio.

Earl MacPherson of Marion, John Provines of Spencerville, the Misses Nellie Blackburn and Lois Reichelderfer of Harlan, were guests at the home of Merrit Sechler Saturday evening.

Joe and Clare Hull were at Ft. Wayne Sunday.

Sim Maurer and Susie Sechler of Spencerville spent Sunday at John Sechler's

Mr. Deener of New Haven was the guest of Maud Scholes over Saturday and Sunday.

Grace Sechler and Mrs. Sam Mumaw went to Chicago, Saturday to visit with friends.

Will Curie was at Auburn Monday, meeting with the Democratic Executive and Central committees.

Donald and Gareld Kinsey visited last week in the country homes of their cousins Ralph Sechler and Jimmie Glawe.

Dr. Lake and wife went to Chicago, Sunday morning. Mr. Lake returned yesterday, but Mrs. Lake expects to spend a couple of weeks with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Russia Langley left yesterday for Sandusky and from there she will take a lake trip visiting at Toledo and Detroit. She expects to be gone about one week.

Mrs. Simon Wineland is sick this week.

Gasoline that is all gasoline at MILLIMAN'S DRUG STORE.

Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett from Antwerp visited at High Reasoners a few days last week.

A party of young people from Hicksville spent Saturday evening at the home of Gladys Barney.

John Zimmerman, wife and three children and Elias Zimmerman of Auburn called on M. T. Bishop's Saturday evening

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Chas. S. Smith, of West Franklin Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

Silas Reasoner and Am Rinehart were in Ft. Wayne, Sunday.

Spices for pickling time—get them at Milliman's Drug Store.

Mr. William Hamilton who has been sick for a couple of weeks is about town again.

Mr. Sam Widney and James Hamilton went to Winona Lake Tuesday to remain one week.

You didn't think we would come back so soon but we are going to keep pounding away—for it pays. When we get all the work we can do we will just talk for fun you know. But do you know, we got results from last week's ad? Five rigs to date—that's some isn't it? But let us repeat it—you had better paint that buggy now—best time in the world; you get the benefit of the handsome rig all fall and protect the wood also—but you know all about that. Come and see us in the old skating rink.

C. A. WOODCOX.

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Best Staple and Fancy Groceries

By the best we mean everything that is good. When you buy from us—staple or fancy—you get the best. Whether you phone your order, send the children, or come personally, your order receives the same careful attention, and you get the best we have. There is some satisfaction in that—don't you think?

Soap.

The only place in town to get 8 bars of good soap for 25c

OLD MILL SOAP

..As good as the Best...
"That's Sufficient."

Pure Spices.

Mustard seed, all spice ginger, cinnamon mustard, cloves.

Pure Cider Vinegar.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

AUGUST

L 903

U299

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 26, 1908. NO. 35

FAMILY REUNIONS

Many Held Last Week in the Surrounding Country. Friends and Relatives Mingle in Social Pleasure and Feasting.

THE HERRICK FAMILY.

The first reunion of the Daniel and Susan Herrick family was held on the Frank Herrick farm, near St. Joe, which has been owned by some member of the family for fifty-three years. The fact that the gathering was on the old home place made the home coming more real.

Horace and Frank, the only living sons, and Mrs. John Stopher, the only living daughter, were all present. Descendants to the fourth and fifth generations were represented. The representatives of the fifth generation were: George and Zella Reichelderfer, Ross Harding, Pauline Thomas, Dorothy Grice, Glen, Harmen, Mabel, Everett and Darwin Huther, and Beryl Thimlar

Mr. Irvin Hadsell, of Peru, Indiana, furnished a beautiful new Chute & Butler piano for the occasion and a music program of piano solos and duets, vocal, violin, and cornet solos, vocal duets and a few chorus and orchestra numbers which might have done credit to a city concert.

The guests from a distance were: Attorney G. T. Herrick, Wabash, Ind.; Aden Herrick, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio; Chas. N. Thomas and family, Jackson, Michigan; Mr. Irvin Hadsell and family, Peru, Indiana: John H. Harding and family, Mrs. M. W. Tinkham, and Mrs. O. R. Cook Ft. Wayne, Ind.: Abraham Culbertson, Concord, Ind.. H. W. Stopher, Noblesville, Ind.: H. Grubb and family, New Haven, Ind.; Vachel Harding and son, Thurman, Della Herrick, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The whole affair was so well conducted that every one wished to make a permanent organization. Frank Herrick, St. Joe, Ind., was elected president, and H. W. Stopher, Noblesville, Ind., secretary and treasurer The next reunion will be held August, 21, 1909 at Sylvester Stodher's, near Harlan, Ind. The following committee on arrangements was appointed: Wm. A. Reichelderfer, Sylvester Stopher, E. C. Reichelderfer, Daniel Herrick, D. N. Herrick.

THE HORN FAMILY.

The ninth annual reunion of the Horn family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horn, August 20, 1908.

Nature with her cool refreshing air and bright sunshine was a great relief to the past intense heat. No One could complain of the weather. The forenoon was spent in greeting one another.

A tent and a large canvas was erected under which the tables were spread with a very inviting dinner. At the noon hour after all were seated at the tables a few words of welcome were given by the secretary, after which all did justice to the many good things placed before them. Shortly after dinner the president appointed the nominating committee to nominate the officers for the following year.

While the committee was holding their meeting, the gathering was entertained by an interesting address by Rev. Dressel, also vocal solos by Miss Bertha Jinkens and Miss Venus Horn

THE WALTER FAMILY.

The fifth annual reunion of the Walter family was held August 22, 1908, at the home of Mr. and Mrs Charles Freece in Spencerville, Ind. The morning gave promise and brought forth an ideal day for the occasion. The kinship commenced gathering early. The first were those from Ft. Wayne over the Wabash on the early morning train.

Everything in detail had been looked after by the host and hostess and the forenoon was taken up by greetings and visiting with the arrivals as they kept steadily coming in each with their baskets, contents as yet unrevealed. The two hour dinner was a most sumptuous affair. The tables, with a capacity for sixty, under the magnificent tent secured for the occasion, loaded with good things until the very sight of them would create envy in the heart of kings.

The banquet over and the feast ended, the president G. W. Walter called order and held a brief business session. The first in order was a letter read from Mrs. Sarah E. Walter expressing regrets that she could not be present and enjoy the day, also wishing God's blessing to rest upon all.

In the selecting of officers for the ensuing year, the result was as follows: President, George W. Walter; Secretary, Miss Fern Walter; Treasurer, Mrs. John B. Hatfley; Historian, B. F. Walter. Committee on arrangements, Henry A. Walter, Mrs. Effie Wineland and Mrs. Lillie Mullen.

The business being ended the gathering was favored by talks from Rev. F. A. Dressel and Rev. P. H. Walter in which they set forth the influence and virtues that should predominate in the American Home. Rev. E. W. Erick having taken his leave of absence, he escaped the drill, for many were wont to hear him.

In summary the greetings were full of love and partings were with the best wishes for all. The day rounded out as a most enjoyable time.

All joined in singing, Will There be Any Stars, and America. A poem and a letter that had been sent by relatives from a distance were read, followed by a report of the nominating committee and the election of officers which were as follows: Israel Horn, President; Frank Horn, Vice President; Mrs. R. H. Horn, Secretary; D. K. Horn, Treasurer. The committee on arrangements for the coming year are: J. Y. Davis, Ezra Horn, Frank Horn, D. K. Horn, and R. H. Horn.

The visitors from a distance were Misses Bertha and Margaret Jenkins, Iowa, Miss Della DaVibiss, Peru, Ind., Miss Lavada Reed, Hale Center, Texas, Cornelia Coburn, Ft. Wayne. The other visitors were Miss Minnie Nelson, Grabill and Rev. Dressel, wife and son.

Although the crowd was not so large as usual, all present seemed to greatly enjoy the day. At due time good byes were said as each went to their homes.

THE HOLLOPETER FAMILY.

The Hollopeter family reunion was held at Robison Park, August 19. The dinner was served in the dancing pavillion and about one hundred were gathered around the tables. The afternoon program consisted of songs and speeches which were highly enjoyed by all present. Druggist Myres of Ft. Wayne was present and was among those who gave addresses. The family was well represented. Members were present from Arkansas, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana. The business session was held following the afternoon program at which time officers were elected. The next reunion will be held at Fostoria, Ohio. The date has not yet been detemined.

THE GORRELL FAMILY.

The 6th Gorrell Family Reunion was held at Robinson Park, Aug. 20th Although there were many attractions at the park on that day they in no ways interfered with the social affairs of the Gorrell association. A fine program both forenoon and afternoon together with a very elaborate dinner greatly pleased the guests of whom there were 168 present. The following officers were elected, Pres. J. M. Gorrell of New Haven; Vice Pres. H. Kees; Sec. and Treas A. D. Gorrell of Grabill. Several from a distance were present among them being Mrs. Simmons, of Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, of Evart, Mich., also several from Findly, Ohio, and many surrounding towns. The next reunion will be held at St. Joe.

Concluded on page five, column 3.

Sunday School Convention.

The Concord Township Sunday School Convention will be held in the Christian Church at St. Joe, Sunday September 6th. There will be a n afternoon and evening session. The afternoon session will begin promptly at two o'clock with a rousing song service. A large chorus composed of the singers from the Sunday Schools of the township will lead this service under the direction of Lee O. Tustison. The devotional service will be in charge of Rev F. A. Dressel.

The main discussion of the afternoon will be upon the following subject: How can a teacher draw out a class that will neither study or ask questions. The leaders in this discussion are D. J. Baker and Mrs. Dr. Sheffer and it is expected that Sunday School workers from all over the township will give their ideas relative to the question

The state worker, George N. Burnt is to be present and will give a short address at this time. Mr. Burnt is one of the most enthusiastic workers Indiana has had, and wherever he goes his personality and intense earnestness puts life into the cause. Following the address a question box will be conducted by Rev. J. A. Brown. The audience will be dismissed by a song, and a benediction by Rev. J. C McCain.

The evening session will begin with a special song service and continue for one-half hour. The address of the evening will be given by Mr. Burnt and all should endeavor to be present and listen to this interesting talker with a vital message.

The president C. C. Woodcox is putting forth every effort to have a successful convention and deserves the support of every Sunday School worker. The singers from the schools of township will not fail to meet at the Christian Church, Friday evening, September 4th., when arrangements will be made for the special chorus at the convention.

Business Meeting.

The members of the Concord, Fairview and St Joe M P church es are requested to be present at the St. Joe M P church Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, for a business session. Rev J C McCain will be present and will fill the regular appointments on Sunday. Morning services at St Joe.

Local Items.

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

Attend the Public Sale Saturday, Sept. 5, at St. Joe.

B. L. Bailey of Auburn visited with his parents here, Friday.

J. R. Culbertson and J. K. Stafford of Auburn were on our streets Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bennett of Evart, Mich., are visiting with Mrs. Bennett's sister, Samantha Kees and other relatives.

W. C. Patterson and family accompanied by Mrs. Carnes of Fort Wayne, attended the Nelson family reunion at Hicksville, Tuesday.

Subscribers should keep in mind the postal ruling which requires us to collect subscriptions of patrons who are one year or more in arrears. By noticing the date your subscription ends and keeping paid up you will save yourself the annoyance of receiving a statement from us.

Don't forget the lecture in the Lutheran church, tonight.

Laura Hadsell of Hicksville, visited Friday, with her aunt, Mrs Sheffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter of Ft. Wayne, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Reasoner.

Miss Winifred Bills of South Bend, came Saturday to spend her two weeks vacation with her parents.

Prof. Ely, superintendent of the St. Joe schools for the coming year was in town, Monday evening, and met with the school board.

School Notice.

The school board thus announces that the public schools of St. Joe will open Monday, September 7th. Improvements inside and about the building have been made, getting ready for a successful term of school. During the vacation season considerable property has been destroyed on the school premises. It is understood that the damage has been done by the St. Joe boys, and means will be pushed to punish such parties in the future. A liberal reward will be given anyone who will aid in the conviction of such miscreants. Signed

The School Board.

Political Announcement.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

Every Man of Means

Saved Some of His Money

He layed by in days of plenty that he might be able to meet his obligations in days of adversity. The secret of success is not so much in knowing how to make money as in knowing how to save it. A bank account makes a man feel more independent, he knows he has something to fall back on and learns to be careful of his savings. Suppose you save only $2 per week, it will amount to a considerable in time. Learn to be economical and deposit your savings with the

St. Joe Valley Bank.

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Best Staple AND Fancy Groceries

By the best we mean everything that is good. When you buy from us—staple or fancy—you get the best. Whether you phone your order, send the children, or come personally, your order receives the same careful attention, and you get the best we have. There is some satisfaction in that—don't you think?

Soap.

The only place in town to get 8 bars of good soap for 25c

OLD MILL SOAP

..As good as the Best...

"That's Sufficient."

Pure Spices.

ustard seed, all spice ginger, cinnamon mustard, cloves.

Pure Cider Vinegar.

Country Produce Wanted.

Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

OLIVES OLIVES

For the dinner or luncheon there is nothing so delicious and apetizing as an olive. It whets the appetite and gives one that "want more" feeling. Have you learned to like them? Get the olive habit and get your olives at

KAGEY'S

The olives he handles are all hand packed which insures perfect olives and well filled bottles. The Manzanilla brand stuffed with Spanish sweet peppers are simply fine and sell at 10 and 25c. The Queen olives are plain but excellent and sell at 10, 25, 35 and 50c.

OLIVES OLIVES

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Wm. Curie

Buggies & Implements

A GOOD ONE

Bradley's Fertilizer is recognized as the best on the market and sustained a strong reputation during a period of twelve years. No experiment in using. A big shipment ill be here

September 1st.

BIG DISCOUNT.

I have a few of the Oliver No. 11 Riding Plows and will close them out during the coming week at a big discount. Your opportunity to get a good plow.

Get ready for seeding time by purchasing a BUCKEYE DISC DRILL.

To assist in preparing the ground you need a STEEL LAND ROLLER.

COME AND SEE ONE.

BUGGIES

Defiance & Kiblinger.

HARNESS

AUGUST

0300
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY . . Publishers

1908 AUGUST 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	•	•	•	1
2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 5th · F. M. 11th · L. Q. 18th · N. M. 26th.

PAST AND PRESENT

AS IT COMES TO US FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Telegraphic Information Gathered by the Few for the Enlightenment of the Many.

Seventy Killed in Mine Explosion.

It is now believed that not a single man of the seventy miners who were entombed by an explosion which occurred in the Maypole coal mine at Wigan, England, survived the disaster. The four men reported rescued were engaged in an adjoining building. The ventilating fan, which was put out of order by the explosion, has been repaired and the mine having been cleared of gases, the rescue party again descended. The sight which met their eyes was horrifying. Not far from the bottom of the shaft eighteen bodies were found, all frightfully mutilated, legs and arms had been blown off and heads battered almost beyond recognition. The search parties were driven back by the fire. Several of the rescuers were overcome by the fumes from burning coal, but they were safely brought to the surface. It will be impossible to make a thorough examination of the workings until the fire has been subdued and the air purified.

Couple Die in Their Car.

John Gluek, a wealthy Minneapolis brewer, and his wife were killed at Cottagewood, on Lake Minnetonka, in a collision between their automobile and a train on the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad. Mr. Gluek and his party were bound for the city. At the railroad crossing their car was caught by the train and hurled against a small station at one side. Mr. Gluek was killed instantly and Mrs. Gluek was pinned under the debris, which took fire. She was dead when taken out. Mr. Gluek was secretary and treasurer of the brewing company bearing his name, and was an old res-the Destroyer was found badly wrecked with her boilers standing on end and the docks strewn with maimed and bleeding workmen. The injured were taken on board the tug and hurried to Amherstburg for medical attention.

Strike of 30,000 Tailors Threatened.

A general strike of the members of the United States Brotherhood of Tailors was ordered at a meeting of the general executive board of the brotherhood held in New York City recently. Michael Price, secretary of the board, announced that 30,000 tailors in various parts of the country would be idle within a week unless the demands of the men were granted. The demand is for a 20 per cent. increase over prevailing wages.

Set Gun for Thieves; Killed Mother.

Mrs. Oliver Christman, living a few miles east of Richmond, Ind., was instantly killed by the discharge of a trap gun which her son Frank had set for chicken thieves. The contents of both barrels of the shotgun entered her breast. The son is prostrated.

Fatally Shot at Fishing Camp.

Paul Pendergraft, of Dillsboro, Ind., 16 years old, was shot under the right arm while pulling a shotgun from a wagon at a fishing camp. He will die.

Killed Playing Soldier.

When playing "soldiers and Indians" Edward Finerty, aged 12 years, of Gary, Ind., was shot and killed by John Gormeley, a 16-year-old companion.

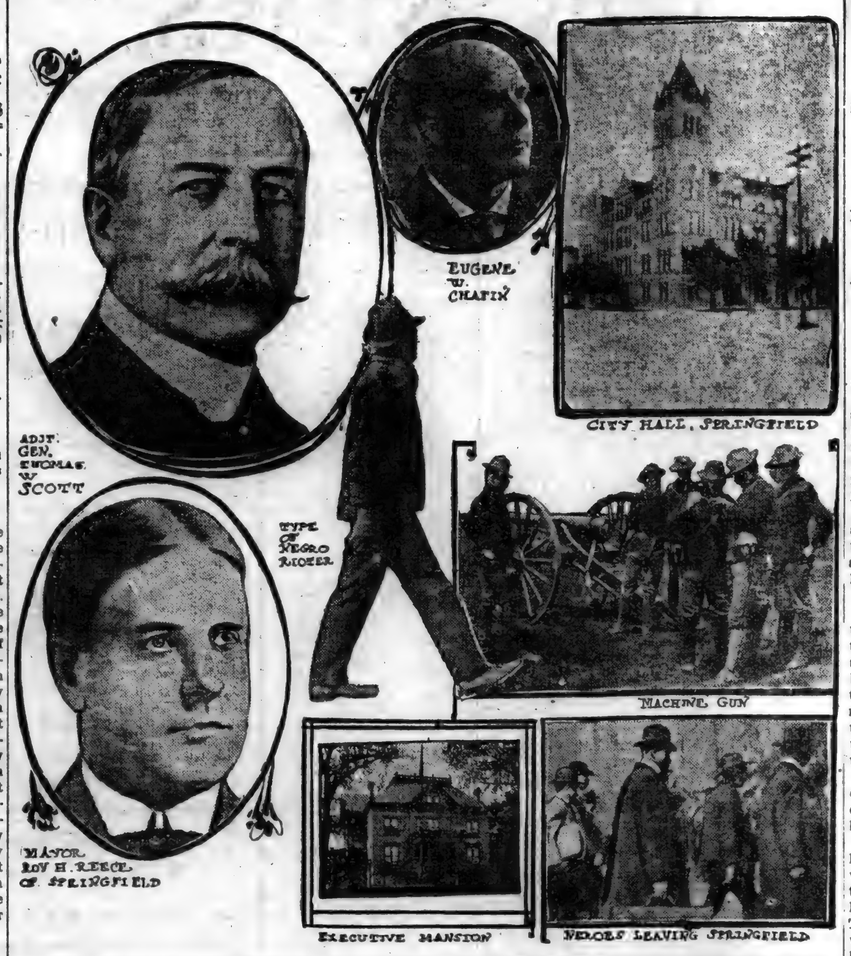
Dr. Henry Hopkins Dead.

Dr. Henry Hopkins, former president of Williams College, is dead of pneumonia at Rotterdam, Holland, according to a telegram received by his brother, Col. A. L. Hopkins, of Williamstown, Mass.

$50,000 Fire at Newcastle, Ind.

Fire of unknown origin which started in the varnish room caused $50,000 damage to the plant of the Indiana Rolling Mill at Newcastle, Ind.

MEN SEEKING TO CHECK SPRINGFIELD RACE WAR, AND SCENES INCIDENT TO RIOTS.



SOLDIERS RULE SPRINGFIELD.

Iron Grip of the Militia Overawes Mobs in Illinois Capital.

Springfield correspondence:

After three days and three nights of riot and bloodshed the fourth day dawned with the race war situation seemingly just as ominous and threatening as it was during the hours in which the torch was being applied and negroes were being lynched and shot and stoned in every street. The anti negro element in the community has been curbed and overawed by the militia, but there has been no suppression of the spirit of antagonism against the colored race.

Fifty-five hundred armed national guardsmen patrol the streets and the fever for blood has abated, temporarily at least, among the wild element which ruled the state capital for forty-eight hours. It is not to be understood that the trouble is over. The display of strength made by five regiments of the State's organized militia, simply overawed the population which has been responsible for all of the disturbance. There was comparatively little disturbance after the Second Infantry from Chicago swept through the streets Sunday afternoon. The news of the coming, also, of the Seventh Infantry and the First Cavalry, both of Chicago, had been heralded all over the city, and this went far toward bringing about a little peace.

The most overt act of Saturday night was an attempt to cut the fire alarm and telegraph wires at 7th and Washington streets, in the heart of the business district. With the wires down, the city would have been practically at the mercy of the incendiaries, who found firing the buildings in which negroes lived or maintained small businesses the easiest way of keeping the rioting going. The man who would have cut off the fire protection of the city was discovered in the act of reaching for the wires. A half-dozen shots from troops who were on patrol in the courthouse square were aimed at him as he stealthily climbed toward the wires. One bullet probably hit him, for he dropped to the roof of the building, but made a successful escape. To this affair is added the attempt to fire the negro section on the northwest side of Springfield.

Overawed by the presence of the great body of troops, the largest that has been assembled in an Illinois duty camp since the riots in Chicago in 1894, the lawless element of the city, white and black, which in its fury has been responsible for the death of five persons since the rioting began Sunday, made no demonstration during Sunday. The city is under strict military rule. Soldiers are everywhere. Every street in the business portion of the city is patrolled. National guardsmen, with loaded rifles, keep an incessant march up and down the thoroughfares. No gatherings of citizens are permitted. Every one is kept on the move. The troops have been given strict orders to allow no mobs to be formed; and are obeying these orders to the letter. The big fact stands out that the majesty of the law, as represented in the khaki-clad troops of the State, has been recognized, and through fear of the riot ammunition which was issued with orders to shoot to kill, Springfield was again at peace.

NOTES OF SPRINGFIELD RIOTS.

A second negro was hanged, but rescued by soldiers.

Governor Deneen ordered the First, Second and Seventh Regiments to Springfield from Chicago.

Springfield pastors united Sunday in preaching against the rioting which has disgraced the city.

Forty-five hundred soldiers at last overawed the mobs in Springfield and restored a semblance of order.

Troops aided the Springfield fire department, keeping a mob in check while flames in negro refuge were fought.

Prominent negroes in Chicago denounce the mob violence at Springfield and declare the law should be sufficient to punish all offenders.

ILLINOIS STATE CAPITOL.

A woman arrested on charge of inciting riot was released on bail, but a number of men are held on suspicion of taking part in the mob work.

Governor Deneen issued a formal statement reviewing acts leading up to the outbreak, the results of the rioting and the efforts to restore peace.

The brutal murder of an aged negress by a man of her own race, crazed by the Springfield riots, almost resulted in a lynching in Chicago's "black belt."

TWO NEGROES ARE LYNCHED.

Deadly Work of Frenzied Mob Creates Reign of Terror.

Scott Burton, 65 years old, a barber, was lynched Saturday morning. Burton conducted a little barber shop at 12th and Madison streets in Springfield. He is said to have quarreled with a white man. A house near his shop was fired on by the mob. He ran in terror. The frenzied men saw him and he was captured. He drew a revolver and was knocked down. A razor fell from his pocket. A 10-year-old boy saw the razor. Grabbing it, he slashed the negro on the neck. The sight of blood so maddened the crowd that it secured a rope and hanged the old man instantly. Thirty shots were fired into his body after he was dead.

William Donnegan, an 80-year-old negro, was brutally beaten and hanged by a mob at his home Saturday night and died at St. John's hospital at 11 o'clock Sunday morning.

The police have gained a confession from one of the men arrested on suspicion he was a member of the mob which attacked Donnegan. The man is Abraham Raymer, who has been in Springfield only a few months. He is a Russian Jew and talks broken English. After an hour's grueling by Chief Morris, Raymer broke down and admitted he was one of the mob that so cruelly strung the old negro to a tree after slashing his throat with a razor.

He also gave the police the names of four or five of the mob which he knew. Ernest Humphrey was one of the men accused by Raymer. He was arrested Sunday. Officers are searching for the others implicated by Raymer's confession.

From Raymer's story, the only provocation for the lynching was that Donnegan was married to a white woman. According to his statement, the mob assembled at Seventh and Washington

STATE ARSENAL, SPRINGFIELD.

Chicago sent 1,500 additional soldiers, including 250 cavalrymen, to Springfield, making a total of more than 5,000 guardsmen in the capital to maintain order.

A boy who attempted to board the First Regiment train at Kankakee was stabbed to death with a bayonet by a soldier from Chicago, and the authorities insisted on arresting the man.

Many lynchings and race riots have marred the peace in the last few years, but the North has had few of the risings. A total of 1,580 had been lynched in twelve years prior to 1908.

streets, only one block distant from the headquarters of Gen. Young and staff.

There were 200 men in the crowd that went to the home of Donnegan, but not more than half a dozen knew where the rioters were leading or what their intentions were. As the mob neared the home of Donnegan members of the negro's family felt that the marchers were bent on killing them. The wife and children fled through a rear door, but Donnegan, who was almost blind from old age, was unable to accompany them.

ILLINOIS CAPITAL IS RULED BY RIOTERS

Five Persons Killed, Many Injured, and Stores Wrecked—Mob Lynches Two Blacks.

NEGRO QUARTER IS BURNED.

After Destroying White Restaurant Houses of Blacks Are Fired by the Crowd.

Springfield correspondence:

Riot, arson and slaughter held possession of the black belt and levee of Springfield, Ill., all through Friday night. Two men were killed, nearly 100 wounded, the streets were full of militia, and rioters set fire to negro houses in all parts of the black belt.

The fire department was intimidated and overawed by the rioters, and until the arrival of 1,000 additional State soldiers the authorities were practically helpless to control the situation.

Mob Balked by Ruse.

All this turmoil grows out of an attempt to lynch a negro who had attacked a white woman. The negro was spirited out of town, and the mob, balked in its vengeance, immediately turned on the man who loaned his automobile to the authorities to enable them to convey the negro to a place of safety. This was the spark that started the riot.

Special trains were hurried from Decatur, Jacksonville, Bloomington, Peoria, and half a dozen other towns, bearing infantry, cavalry and artillery.

Early in the state of riot all the saloons and disorderly houses in the city were closed by the Mayor, and the militiamen did their best to prevent the collecting of any crowds in the streets. Their efforts were futile, however. They would disperse a crowd in one neighborhood, and it immediately reassembled in another.

When at 2 a. m. the burning of negro houses commenced the negroes retaliated by shooting from the upper stories of the houses in the neighborhood where the torch was applied. A number of persons were hit during these fusillades was stopped to let the sheriff's men and their prisoners get on board.

As soon as this was known the mob began to gather, howling for vengeance against the man who had assisted in the escape of their prey. The cry, "Come on to Loper's," was raised, and a few minutes later bricks were crashing through the windows. Loper met the mob with a rifle. They paid no heed to him, and he was forced into the back part of the building, where he was compelled to witness the complete destruction of his property.

The restaurant was the largest in the city, and had a large trade. Within an hour it was a complete wreck. All of the furniture was taken out and piled on top of the automobile, which had been turned over on the street, and then a match was applied to the gasoline tank. The bonfire raged until midnight. The police were utterly powerless to cope with the mob and the fire department, which had been called out, was not allowed to extinguish the flames.

During the attack an attempt was made to do bodily harm to Mayor Reece.

At 10 o'clock Louis Johnson, a 19-year-old boy, was found dead in a rear stairway leading to the basement of a downtown building. He had been shot through the groin.

At the time the riot began Eugene W. Chafin, the Prohibition candidate for President, was addressing a meeting in the courthouse yard. A negro pursued by a mob came dashing up the platform, and in endeavoring to protect the man from his pursuers the orator was struck in the face with a brick and badly injured.

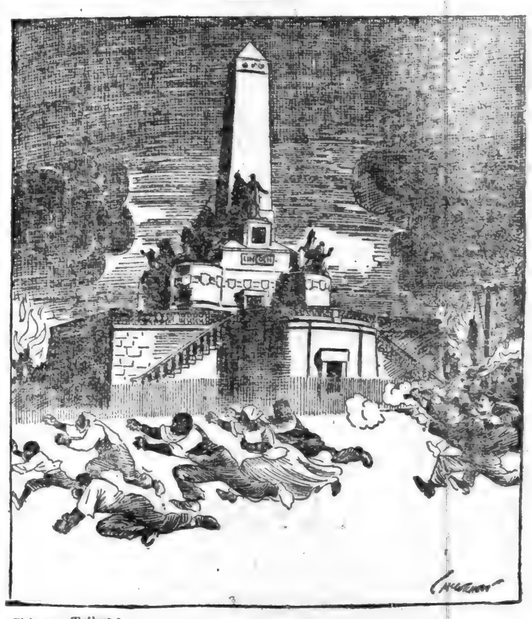
GRAND JURY BEGINS TASK.

Investigation of Outrages at Springfield Sequel to Disturbances.

Springfield Monday entered upon the investigation of outrages and the arrest of accused men. A special grand jury was summoned by Judge James A. Creighton of the Sangamon County Circuit Court as the result of a conference between Governor Deneen and State's Attorney Frank Hatch. A large amount of evidence, implicating many citizens, was obtained during the rioting, and this will be submitted. Suspects were arrested each day during the reign of terror, and will be held awaiting the deliberations of the official body.

The assurance of General Young that his force is sufficient to render abortive any attempt at mob violence is shared by the negroes. Many more of them from the residence districts of the city came to the arsenal, swelling the number sheltered by the State to 400. They are guarded as closely as is the ammunition and were carried away by their friends before their identity was discovered.

IN SPRINGFIELD.



—Chicago Tribune.

Origin of the Trouble.

The inciting cause of the trouble was an assault made on Friday on Mrs. Earl Hallam, wife of a street car conductor. Mrs. Hallam, whose husband works at night, was pulled from her bed at midnight by a negro, who then dragged her into a garden in the rear of the house, where he assaulted her.

This was the last straw on the minds of the whites of the city, the hatred against the blacks having been smoldering since a month ago, when Clergy A. Ballard was slain in his home by a negro, who, it is said, had entered the Ballard home in an attempt to assault Mr. Ballard's young daughter.

George Richardson, a negro, was arrested for the assault upon Mrs. Hallam and placed in the city jail with Joseph James, who was accused of the Ballard murder.

Mutterings of mob violence began soon after the Richardson identification by the woman, and a great crowd collected about the jail. After Richardson had been identified by Mrs. Hallam the crowds grew even more violent, and it was decided to take the prisoner out of town.

Sheriff Charles Werner made arrangements to take the men to Bloomington and the attention of the crowd around the jail was distracted by an alarm of fire while the men were placed in Harry T. Loper's automobile and whisked away to the railroad station near the fair grounds, where a train kept in the building. The colored people are fed from the kitchens of the militiamen, which are across the alley from the west entrance to the building.

It is estimated that 1,500 negroes have left the city, some of them never to return. The exodus has taken them to Chicago, St. Louis, Peoria, Decatur, Bloomington, Lincoln, Carlinville, East St. Louis and Jacksonville. Many have left the State, and the Kingdom of Gallaway in Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky and even Louisiana will be expected to provide new homes for the refugees.

Two hundred of the Springfield rioters are to face charges of murder before a special grand jury, which Governor Deneen and the State's Attorney have called.

BAYONET KILLS A BOY.

Lad at Kankakee Is Stabbed to Death by Soldier on Guard.

At Kankakee, Earl Nelson, a delivery boy for a local grocery, was stabbed to death by one of the soldiers of the First Regiment, I. N. G., of Chicago as it passed through on its way to Springfield. About 300 residents of the town witnessed the stabbing and clamored for revenge. According to the story told by Arsen Arres, a French boy, and witness of the shooting, at the inquest, the killing of Nelson was unprovoked. His story is borne out by the testimony of Elmer Osborn and Eli Barnett, other Kankakee youths who were with Nelson and saw the murder. After a lengthy session of the board of inquiry at Springfield, Private Joseph B. Klein of Company A, First Infantry, was sustained in his plea of self-defense in the fatal stabbing with a bayonet of the youth at Kankakee.

AUGUST

0301

L 903

REVIEW OF INDIANA

"Onion day" at Wolf Lake drew a crowd of 4,000 people to the little Noble County village in the heart of the onion district.

George T. Barney, aged 86 years, and president of the Indiana Association of Mexican War Veterans, is seriously ill at his home in Elkhart.

Mrs. Benjamin Sawyer, of Bluffton, has come into possession of an old family Bible, printed in 1730, which she prizes very highly.

Dr. D. N. Fitch, of Auburn, elected a member of the School Board, failed to qualify within the prescribed time limit, and J. A. McIntyre, the old member, will retain the place.

Although her jugular vein was severed when her husband cut her with a razor, and although physicians said she could not live, Mrs. Cleveland Snyder, of Muncie, is still living at the hospital, and she may pull through.

Loren L. Hills, who died at Fremont at the age of 91 years, 6 months and 27 days, served as a soldier in the Mexican War under General Scott and was with General Custer through the Indian troubles on the Western frontier. For more than thirty years he has lived in or near Fremont.

Elwood Neptune, a resident of Columbus, was found dead, in a half dressed condition, in his back yard. He went to the back porch to bathe his feet, and had an attack of heart failure. His wife supposed he was in bed. The coroner is investigating, but there is no doubt about the nature of the disease. Mr. Neptune was 46 years old, and leaves a widow and three children, married.

Miss Myrtle Brewster, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Brewster, of Anderson, is seriously ill from the effect of spider bites. The young woman was eating a peach at Mounds Park when she felt the sting of an insect on her lips, and to her horror a large spider sprang from her mouth and bit her on the hand. Since then she has been ill and her condition has become serious.

Hoping to win a wager by driving a team of mules attached to a road wagon from Guionsville, Ind., to Oklahoma City, 900 miles, in thirty days, William Cutter and Charles Eut, accompanied by a sister of Mr. Cutter and the family of Eut, have started on their long journey. Eut is a well-to-do contractor of Oklahoma City, while Cutter is a prosperous Ohio County (Indiana) farmer.

A gasoline launch containing John Schnake and ten other people struck a gravel barge in the Evansville port and the launch turned over, and all the occupants, among whom were six children, were thrown into the swift current of the river. John West, watchman on the barge, with the aid of a skiff and ropes, rescued all the people. Schnake was thrown under the launch and came near drowning.

As a reward for having her life when she fell from a boat at Winona Lake, a year ago, Miss Edna Ault, of Auburn, became the bride of her rescuer, Clarence Myer. The bride is 17 years old and her husband twenty. When he saved Miss Ault, Mr. Myer also rescued Miss Cora Leonard, of Anderson. The young women were in a boat alone when the boat upset, and Mr. Myer, who was near them, jumped in the water and held both girls above the surface while he swam to his boat.

Lawrence Bender, a prosperous farmer near Boonville, lost his large hay barn with contents, by fire of unknown origin. This season's crop of hay, over seventy tons, was also burned, with his farm machinery. Five horses were cremated. Matthew Ashby, a spectacle peddler, who had stopped for the night, tried to save a fine horse which he owned, and he lost his right eye. Several of the farm laborers were badly burned while trying to save property. Mr. Bender was engaged in baling his crop of hay, and the task was half completed. Everything was in ship-shape when the laborers quit for the night, but they were awakened to find the barn in flames. The loss is estimated at $5,000, with $2,500 insurance.

Dr. A. R. Hughes, of Cassopolis, who has been visiting friends in Warsaw says that every person should for a short time each summer go barefooted. "I mean men, women and children, well and sick," said Dr. Hughes. "We would have less sickness, fewer aches and pains, grunts and groans if people in general would stick their limbs into mud every once in a while. It has come to the point where the American people are making fools out of themselves in the matter of dress. A fig leaf is preferable to a lot of the merry widow trash that women are bedecking themselves with today, and men may be placed in the same class of fools. But I hope that some time it will be the style to go barefoot to church and other public places."

Frank H. Merica, a motorman, has filed suit at Bluffton against the Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction Company demanding damages in the sum of $1,500 for injuries sustained in attaching a fuse to his car.

Christopher Weiss, a well-known plumbing contractor of South Bend, has been missing since August 2, and his relatives believe that he is the victim of foul play. At his business was in a prosperous condition there was no reason for him to leave.

Huntington Company, No. 16, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, won third prize, $600, in the K. of P. competitive drill contests at Boston, Mass.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church at Boonville raised $75 by feeding fried chicken to hungry Democrats last week during the Congressional convention.

W. B. Miller, who is said to have been the first white child born at Bluffton, is seriously ill at Marion. He was born June 4, 1839, and is therefore 69 years of age.

Bicknell now has only one saloon and it will quit business next February. One was put out of business last week and five were closed by remonstrance some time ago.

Harlan Culp, living six miles north of Elkhart, is harvesting potatoes from a ten-acre tract that is yielding 100 bushels to the acre and the tubers are selling at $1.00 per bushel.

Dennis Cain, aged 93 years, was struck by east-bound passenger train No. 46 at Batesville. He suffered a broken arm and internal injuries. His home is in New Orleans. He was taken to the City Hospital at Cincinnati.

Lloyd Shireman, 23 years of age, was drowned in Rock Lake, Kosciusko County, when he drove a horse into the water to wash the animal. The horse swam at once for deep water and both man and the animal were drowned before assistance could reach them.

A. J. Flowers, of Morocco, declares he is the oldest town marshal in Indiana in active service. "Uncle Jack," as he is familiarly called, is a veteran of the Civil War, and is nearing his seventieth year. He has been town marshal almost continuously for fourteen years, and in that capacity has come to be regarded as a permanent fixture.

M. Whitney Thompson, 49, once the champion trapshooter of Indiana, died at his home, four miles northeast of Lafayette, of cancer of the stomach. He was the leading spirit and first president of the Lafayette Gun Club, at one time one of the leading organizations of trapshooters in the State. He became famous, locally, as an expert rifleman and trapshooter. He won the State medal at the shoot held in Lafayette five years ago.

Charged with cruelty to animals, Jacob and Boyd Vangilder, two Kosciusko County farmers, were placed under arrest by Constable A. C. Farber. It is alleged that when a porker belonging to Roy Carr, a neighbor, trespassed upon the Vangilder place, the defendants beat it to death with whips and clubs. They contend that the animal had frequently come upon their lands and that it had caused considerable damage to growing crops.

Preparations are being made at the Indiana Reformatory in Jeffersonville for an exhibit to be displayed at the Indiana State Fair at Indianapolis. It is designed to illustrate the various trade schools and the school of letters. Many extensions have been made, including shirt and shoe manufacture, since the last exhibit two years ago. The exhibit will be under the direction of Prof. George B. Asbury, superintendent of the school of letters in the institution.

There's a plum tree in the garden of F. W. Flammer, at his country place, north of Indianapolis, that he is taking care not to shake. A vigorous shake would bury the shaker beneath a pile of the fruit. One small branch, which broke beneath the weight of the plums was found to have 250 plums on it and not less than fifty had dropped off in the handling of the branch. The plums are of the Burbank variety and are fine fruit. It is the first year the tree, a young one, has borne to any extent.

Wawasee, Kosciusko County, has the smalest postoffice building in the United States, at least Postmaster Jesse M. Sargent believes that he is housed in the smallest Government building from New York to San Francisco, and from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico. This particular building is something less than six feet in height and it is about five feet square. Hundreds of persons receive their mail daily from this place, for many persons, drawn from the Middle West, are spending the summer at Wawasee. There are many persons who visit Wawasee who would like the distinction of having been in the smallest postoffice in the United States, but, as Postmaster Sargent puts it, "It is strictly against the rules," but however, he sometimes allows the inquisitive people to poke their heads through the general delivery window or the stamp window. What they see is picturesque, for Postmaster Sargent is a souvenir postcard fiend. He admits it, and he is now favoring his friends with postcard pictures of the smallest Government building in America.

Charles Birch, of Crawfordsville, a young man, has secured patents on an entirely new type of woven-wire fence, against which the steel trust can make no headway, as alleged, for infringement of patents.

John Winters, an aged miller a Portland, was instantly killed when he attempted to throw a belt by the use of a piece of gas pipe. In some manner the pipe was driven through his heart. The accident occurred at the Cartwright & Headington elevator.

CAN'T MAKE WEATHER FOR EVERYBODY.

CURRENT COMMENT

Among the many causes to which was attributed the business depression which first manifested itself in March, 1907, and which reached its climax in the panic of October, was the high level of prices to which practically all commodities had been forced.

Financiers, manufacturers and merchants were almost a unit in declaring that prices must come down. But we are recovering from the depression and, with few exceptions, prices remain at their greatest altitude.

The most recent report of the Department of Labor and Commerce, covering the movements of wholesale prices for the past eighteen years, including 1907, shows that in spite of the financial and market depressions coincident with the last six months of 1907 prices of commodities save in a few departments, such as lumber, fuel and metal materials, were higher at the close of the year than at its opening and that the average price of all commodities showed a decrease of only a little over 1 point for the period, the actual decline being from 127.9 to 126.4.

The report shows that wholesale prices, considering the 258 commodities as a whole, reached a higher level in 1907 than at any other time during the 18-year period covered. The average for the year 1907 was 5.7 per cent higher than for 1906; 44.4 per cent higher than for 1897, the year of lowest prices during the 18-year period, and 29.5 per cent higher than the average for the 10 years from 1890 to 1899. Prices reached their highest point during the 18-year period in October, 1907, the average for that month being 1.2 per cent higher than the average for the year 1907 and 2.8 per cent higher than the average for December, 1906, the month of highest prices in 1906.

Of the 258 articles for which wholesale prices were obtained, 172 showed an increase in the average price for 1907 as compared with 1906, 35 showed no change in the average price for the year, and 51 showed a decrease in price.

When the commodities are considered by groups, all of the nine groups showed an increase in price in 1907 as compared with 1906. For farm products taken as a whole this increase was greatest, namely 10.9 per cent; for food, 4.6 per cent; for cloths and clothing, 5.6 per cent; for fuel and lighting, 2.4 per cent; for metals and implements, 6.1 per cent; for lumber and building materials, 4.9 per cent; for drugs and chemicals, 8.3 per cent; for house furnishing goods, 6.8 per cent, and for the miscellaneous group, 5 per cent.—Utica Globe.

ODDS & ENDS OF SPORT

Jack Leyburn helped the Michiganders christen their new Detroit track by trotting a mile in 2:04¼ in the Blue Ribbon event.

Nancy Hanks, the famous trotting mare, has foaled a bay colt by Todd at Hamburg place, John E. Madden's farm, near Lexington, Ky.

Manager Egan of the Burlington baseball club has been in Davenport inquiring into the prospects for purchasing the Davenport baseball park.

At Pekin, Ill., Justo, in the 3-year-old trot, went the first mile in 2:13¼, the fastest this year for a 3-year-old trotter. The quarters were made in 0:34½, 1:07½, 1:41, 2:13¼.

At Brighton Beach Etherial ran 5½ furlongs in 1:06, equaling the time made by Brookdale Nymph and Royal Vane for the distance. Half Sovereign won the handicap at six furlongs from a good field in the fast time of 1:12 2-5.

The records of the Fargo track, all the track records of North Dakota and the half-mile track record for the entire United States so far this season were broken by Lady Maud C., owned by Walter Palmer of Ottawa, Ill., when she made a mile in 2:08½.

The six-round bout between "Billy" Papke, the western middleweight, and "Sailor" Burke of New York, which was set for the Coliseum Athletic Club in New York, did not take place owing to police interference. A number of persons had gathered to see the fight.

VALUABLE FUEL IN WASTE.

Results of Experiments with Coal of All Kinds Are Published.

The results of the work done at the United States fuel testing plant at Forest Park, St. Louis, from Jan. 1, 1906 to June 30, 1907, are presented in a report issued by the United States Geological Survey.

The scope of the work during the period covered has been largely restricted to a series of comparative tests made under conditions as nearly uniform as possible on bituminous coals and lignites from different fields of the United States as representative of known extensive deposits. Chemical analyses were made of samples of these fuels collected at the mines by United States inspectors sent out for that purpose and also of samples taken from the cars, from the fuel as fed to the boilers, as fed to the producers, before briquetting, before and after washing and before coking. Samples of briquetted coal were also analyzed and the results of the entire series of analyses and tests are presented in the report.

The briquetting plant has developed new possibilities in the utilization of slack coal and anthracite culm as an efficient fuel for combustion on locomotives. Experiments are now being extended to determine the value of briquetted coal for use in the naval vessels of the United States.

The plant at Forest Park was dismantled in March, 1907. The section of steam, producer gas and briquetting were transferred to a new gas plant erected at Norfolk, Va., and those of coking and washery to a new plant at Denver. The principal chemical laboratory of the fuel testing plant has been removed to Pittsburg, but a branch laboratory will also be maintained at Norfolk for the purpose of experimenting on the gases in different portions of the combustion chamber of steam boilers and of gas producers. The smoke abatement investigations a public buildings will be supplemented by more detailed experiments at the Norfolk plant.

FROM FOREIGN LANDS

The city council of Spandau, in Brandenburg, Prussia, has inaugurated a movement to raise $1,625,000 as a national gift for Count Zeppelin.

Advices have been received at the American embassy in St. Petersburg that Ambassador Riddle is making good improvement under the treatment at Kislovodsk, whither he went to recuperate from the effects of his recent illness.

Capt. Lumsden, who commanded the British cruiser Gladiator at the time she was lost in a collision with a liner, has been found guilty of default in not complying with the rules of navigation, and has been dismissed from the service.

The insular constabulary band, of Manila, is going to Australia as the guest of that government, to participate in the receptions of the American fleet. The Philippine authorities donate the service of the band and Australia pays the expenses.

The presidential election in Panama went off smoothly, the result being the choice of Senor Abaldin, candidate of the opposition to the government, unanimously. The supporters of the government remained away from the polls. The electors are to meet Aug. 1, and their decision will be certified Aug. 18 in advance of the meeting of the National Assembly on Sept. 1.

In a desperate battle between Mexican troops and Papago Indians at the Inmaculada ranch, near Cetrocolo, a mining camp in the Altar district of Sonora, nineteen Indians and two soldiers were killed and five soldiers were wounded.

At the Quebec celebration the Prince of Wales proved himself a worthy representative of King Edward, appearing at the various functions as a field marshal, an admiral and as a plain English gentleman. The military pageant on the plain of Abraham was the greatest ever seen in Canada.

SHERMAN IS NOTIFIED; UTICA HAS GALA DAY

Republican Choice for Vice President Told of Nomination by Senator Burrows.

ENDORSES TAFT PRINCIPLES.

"Shall the Administration of Roosevelt Be Approved?" Declared Big Issue by Nominee.

Utica, N. Y., correspondence:

With one of the briefest speeches ever delivered by a candidate for so high an office, James Schoolcraft Sherman Tuesday accepted the nomination of the Republican party for the Vice Presidency. He spoke from a flag-covered stand erected in front of his home, and was surrounded by party leaders from different sections of the country, and by an enthusiastic, non-partisan crowd of friends and fellow townsmen.

JAMES S. SHERMAN.

The nomination was tendered by a committee appointed at the Chicago convention in June, Senator Julius C. Burrows of Michigan being the chairman and spokesman. There were brief addresses also by Secretary of State Root, President M. W. Stryker of Hamilton College, from which Mr. Sherman was graduated; Mayor Thomas Wheeler of Utica, and Charles S. Symonds, chairman of the local reception committee.

Mr. Sherman followed the example of Mr. Taft in pledging allegiance to the policies of President Roosevelt. He declared there was no issue as to whether or not "the people shall rule."

Casts Aside Bryan Slogan.

"Surely the people shall rule," said Mr. Sherman; "surely the people have ruled, surely the people do rule."

Casting aside the campaign slogan raised by Mr. Bryan, the vice presidention nominee asserted that the "overshadowing issue of the campaign really is: 'Shall the administration of President Roosevelt be approved?'"

Mr. Sherman made no attempt to discuss in detail any of the issues raised in the party platforms, contenting himself with the declaration that he subscribed fully and heartily to all that had been written into the Chicago statement of principles and to all that had been said by Mr. Taft in his speech accepting the nomination.

Nature Smiles on Scene.

The day was clear and delightfully cool, and the local committee on arrangements was prepared to carry out in full the long outdoor program which the heavy rains the previous day threatened to curtail. Incoming trains in the morning brought throngs of visitors from the middle and western sections of the State, while the trolley cars from points as far west as Syracuse were crowded. Among the distinguished arrivals were Secretary Root, whose home is ten miles from Utica; National Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock, who came from Chicago, accompanied by several members of his staff, and State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff.

Cigarettes of a Year.

From the preliminary report of the commissioner of internal revenue it appears that there were smoked in this country last year cigarettes to the number of 55,402,336,113, not counting the little cigars. From the same report it is apparent that the consumption of spirituous liquors is on the decrease. On the other hand, the consumption of beer is increasing. During the fiscal year $181,789,242 was paid to the government on spirits, as compared with $147,550,281 the previous year. The decrease in liquors distilled was over 13,000,000 gallons. In the same time 58,747,680 barrels of beer were made, a gain of 201,000 barrels. Tobacco yielded a total revenue of $49,862,754, or a loss of nearly $2,000,000.

Highest Tower Good Advertising.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's new tower over the Madison Square building at New York, which is to be, when completed, the highest structure in the world, has received 8,746 newspaper clippings already containing some reference to the tower, and Frank A. Burrelle, the clipping expert, estimates that these clippings would make a total of 104,952 inches, or 1,469,328 agate lines. To buy this amount of notice for the company at advertising rates would have cost $440,798.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

The steady improvement in commercial credits is emphasized by a decline in failures to the lowest level reported this year, and the volume of payments through the banks again makes a closer comparison. A copious rainfall has removed apprehensions as to the corn crop, and the position now affords more encouragement for splendid results. Movements of commodities show recovery in some important lines and there is further reduction in idle cars of the Chicago roads, heavier forwarding of finished products, merchandise and the leading foodstuffs drawing more largely upon rolling stock.

Activity in the leading industries is stimulated by a wider aggregate of demands, and some gain is noted in output of steel mills, furnaces, forging and heavy hardware. Specifications have extended for structural materials and current bookings are good in wire, electrical supplies and machinery. Heavy construction and building needs become more encouraging, the work in sight assuring increasing employment at fabricating plants, planing mills and lumber yards.

Outside demand is seen to be strengthening for forest products, hides, leather and wool, and prices generally sustain firmness for the raw materials. More capacity and workers are engaged in the factory districts, and rising pay rolls add to recovery in the purchasing power. Money is quoted at 3½ to 4½ per cent, the lowest discount rate in some years, and this favorable banking condition supports manufacturers in their disposition to advance industrial efforts.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 16, against 21 last week and 22 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 3, against 4 last week and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Trade is of fair volume, crops have made further progress, corn especially being helped by rains, and collections show tangible improvement, though backwardness is still a subject of complaint here. All advices agree that buyers are in the various markets in large, if not record, numbers, but caution and conservatism are strongly apparent. Industrial reports are as favorable as for some weeks past. There is still slow, gradual improvement in the iron and steel and allied trades, though pig iron is lower this week, and as southern lumber prices are higher there is talk of many mills being again set in motion. Still there are numerous reports of curtailed output and textile lines at one leading center are running to only 50 to 60 per cent of capacity. The wool trade has a cheerful tone and good interest is displayed by large and small buyers.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Aug. 13 number 249, against 205 last week, 146 in the like week of 1907, 143 in 1906, 147 in 1905 and 203 in 1904. Canadian failures for the same period number 31, against 19 last week and 30 in the corresponding week of last year.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.65; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.85; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2, 92c to 94c; corn, No 2, 77c to 78c; oats, standard, 47c to 48c; rye, No 2, 77c to 78c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $9.50; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 22c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes, per bushel, 80c to 83c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $6.80; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 90c to 91c; corn, No 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 48c to 49c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 93c to 95c; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2, 46c to 47c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.75; hogs, $4.00 to $6.80; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 94c to 95c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 81c to 82c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 79c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.10; hogs, $4.00 to $6.40; sheep, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 93c to 94c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 3 white, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.14 to $1.16; corn, No. 3, 77c to 78c; oats, standard, 46c to 47c; rye, No. 1, 77c to 78c; barley, No. 2, 74c to 77c; pork, mess, $15.25.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.75; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.00; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.60; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2 red, 98c to 99c; corn, No. 2, 87c to 89c; oats, natural white, 52c to 54c; butter, creamery, 20c to 23c; eggs, western, 17c to 19c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 93c to 95c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 46c to 47c; rye, No. 2, 76c to 77c; clover seed, October, $7.50.

THE FIRST DOZEN.

The first coal was mined in 300 B. C.

The first windmills were the Saracens'.

The first handkerchiefs appeared in 1743.

The first balloon was made by a French priest in 1620.

The first music book was issued in 1495 by Wynkin de Worde.

The first surname appeared in the reign of Edward the Confessor.

AUGUST

0302
L 903

Bad Backache

Such agonies as some women suffer, every month, from backache!

Is it necessary? No. It can be prevented and relieved, when caused by female trouble, by taking a medicine with specific, curative action, on the female organs and functions, which acts by relieving the congestion, stopping the pain and building the organs and functions up to a proper state of health. Try.

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I suffered for 18 years," writes Mrs. Malinda A. Akers, of Basham, Va., "with various female troubles. I had such a backache that it drew me over, so I could not stand straight. The doctors could not help me, so I took Cardui, and now I feel like a new woman."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 35

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:

THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

Fifty years ago there was some excuse for bad roads, for our country was poor Now it is rich there is no excuse. A good road is always to be desired, and is a source of comfort and convenience to every traveler. Good roads attract population, as well as good schools and churches. Good roads improve the value of property, so that it is said a farm lying five miles from market connected by a bad road, is of less value than an equally good farm connected by a good road. Good roads encourage the greater exchange of products and commodities between one section and another. Good roads are of great value to railroads as feeders.

One of the interesting features of the new school of agriculture is the recognition of the helpfulness of many feathered wild tenants of our farms. Thanks to the investigatoin of the department of agriculture, many birds which were once ruthlessly destroyed by the ignorant pot hunters are now carefully protected Because of their usefulness in keeping down the insect hordes that prey upon plant life. The quail or bobwhite is one of the farmers' feathered friends. This interesting bird is helpful to the farmer in destroying weeds, bugs, grasshoppers, cotton boll, weevil and many other insects. If not hunted it is a tame bird, often appearing in the farmer's garden or barnyard.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4. East bound....4:55 a. m.
No. 16. East bound...12:40 p. m.
No. 17. West bound...11:58 a. m.
No. 3. West bound....8:42 p. m.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No 11, Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a. m
No. 3, Western Express 7:58 p. m.

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:26 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

My Birthday.

During the past week one of the force had a birthday anniversary. Of course this was nothing much out of the ordinary. He has had one every year since he was born. But this was the twenty— there, one more word and the reader would have known. It seems that the question of ages has always been a delicate subject, more so with women, however; so much so that there is a well defined age limit with many of the fair sex. Just why a man should be so careful about revealing his age is not so plain to see, especially to one who does not know the reason. But this birthday was somehow different. It made the one to whom it belonged just one year older. Nothing so strange about that but the most momentous circumstance lies in the fact that the time intervening until that state of old bachelorhood was narrowed by the interval of one year. There is possibly nothing that a man hates more than an "old bachelor" unless it be an "old maid". Of course the man who has kept clear of, or been excluded from the realm of matrimony likes to have people believe that a bachelor's degree gives him pleasure unbounded. Most bachelors are happy since they know of nothing to make them unhappy.

But as has been said, one of the News force has lived long enough to have another birthday anniversary. Some score and more years ago he first saw the light of day. At least this is the traditional story. He was a little fellow then—as small as he often feels now. The entire order of events occasioned by his advent have not been preserved but those who know state definitely that he was the hero of the day. Papa and mamma were proud, and a solicitous auntie took him in charge and at once began to direct his career. Nothing to it then, he must do as she directed and it took many weeks of kicking, squirming and howling to make the home folks understand that the baby had a mind of its own.

Such was the beginning, and now after a span of years in which there has been experience at home and abroad, in school and out, in pleasure and reckless folly, at earnest and strong endeavor,—today it is as difficult to look into the future as it was when but a child in mother's arms. Life at its best is an uncertain quanity. Today it glows with bright prospects,—tomorrow the future looks dark and hope vanishes. Plans are layed and thwarted. About and between goes baleful fate which often shatters the fondest hopes of mankind. But life is not all discouragement. Happiness abounds everywhere if one but find it. Future prospects are bright in their ideality even if never worked into reality. And so the oft recurring years teach valuable lessons and the truth of the assertion that it is not all of life to live nor all of death to die impresses its vastness in the life experience of the individual who cares. If life as we find it today were all that one had for the reward of strenuous and honest toil, life would not be worth the living, and if death were the end the human heart would not be promted to do deeds of usefulness while here. From birth until death is but a span of existence in which every man and woman is the ruler of self. He dicates his own course and rules king of his actions, choosing his course and determining its outcome. This period is given as a preparation for another state where all that was begun here may be worked out whether of good or bad. After death there is then no choice, simply a completion of the course of action pursued while on this earth. Therefore as the recurring years shorten the span of this existence, it behooves every man and woman to do that which lies before them—the thing that is nearest to duty—the thing that does most for the good of mankind.

Obituary.

Jemima A. Rigby was born in Fairfield county, Ohio, July 27, 1820. She was united in marriage to W. E. Rush of Royalton, Ohio. February 16, 1843. They immigrated to Indiana in 1855 and settled in Auburn. To this union were born eleven children, six sons and five daughters; Sarah A., Mary D., John F., Charles E., Martha J, Harry S., Henry B., Josephine A., Frank M., Mark L. and Alice G. All grew to manhood and womanhood excepting two daughters who died in infancy. Three sons preceded her to the spirit world. Seventy-four years ago at the age of fourteen she was converted and united with the M. E. church in Royalton, Ohio, and remained faithful and loyal to the cause for the remainder of life. While her children were not all members of any church they had religious training and were brought up to attend church services.

For nearly fifty years they lived in the same home at Auburn. The husband died February 3, 1901, aged 88 years, two months and twenty days. In 1893 they celebrated their golden wedding and had the husband lived one year longer they could have celebrated their sixtieth anniversary. Four children now reside in the far west. For the past three years she has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Florence Buchanan, at St. Joe, where she passed peacefully away August 16, 1908.

The funeral services were held Aug. 18th, in the M. E. church at Auburn conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. B Freeland, and the remains were interred in the Evergreen cemetery beside her husband to await the resurrection of the just. Elza Kinsey was the funeral director.

CARD OF THANKS.

We sincerely thank the friends who so kindly assisted us during our affliction, also for the beautiful flowers and to the flower girls.

MR. AND MRS. F. BUCHANAN.

Large Stock Sale.

The stock sale on the Mervin Widney farm, Friday was largely attended. The stock sold, was owned by Henry Krabill and Mr. Widney. Men had come from a distance to bid on the stock and the manner in which they bid showed that they had money. Some were there from Churubusco, Woodburn, Albion, Edgerton, Avilla, and Pleasant Lake. Auctioneer Rhudenbaugh says it is the nicest sale he ever cried considering the amount of goods sold. There were no by bids everything going to the highes bidder.

Nervous Break-Down

Nerve energy is the force that controls the organs of respiration, circulation, digestion and elimination. When you feel weak, nervous, irritable, sick, it is often because you lack nerve energy, and the process of rebuilding and sustaining life is interfered with. Dr. Miles' Nervine has cured thousands of such cases, and will we believe benefit if not entirely cure you. Try it.

"My nervous system gave away completely, and left me on the verge of the grave. I tried skilled physicians but got no permanent relief. I got so bad I had to give up my business. I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. In a few days I was much better, and I continued to improve until entirely cured. I am in business again, and never miss an opportunity to recommend this remedy." MRS. W. L. BURKE, Myrtle Creek, Oregon.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

From Curie.

The following letter was handed for publication last week, but on account of a lack of space it was kept for this week's issue.

TULSA, OKLA.
AUG. 9, 1908

DEAR PARENTS:

It has been nearly two weeks since I left home. I arrived at Chicago about 5:15 P. M. and then walked to the Dearborn Station, after getting my ticket validated and purchasing my pullman berth I immediately got on my train, which was already to leave at 6:00 P. M. I happened to meet a young fellow from Michigan who is a student in the University of Oklahoma going back there to go on a geological surveying party. He knew a number of Tulsa boys, and of course we got pretty well acquainted. Going out of Chicago we traveled along the famous drainage canal. This canal was cut through rock, of which great quanities were heaped until they look like small mountains. It is a novel sight and I can now see why it was a stupendous feat of engineering skill.

On awakening in the morning and dressing for breakfast, it was a pleasure to eat while crossing the big muddy Missouri river. Arrived in Kansas City about 8:45 A. M. Wednesday morning. Checking my grips at the Union Station I started out to seek my old Tulsa friend. I found his office in the National Bank of Commerce Building and walked in suddenly giving him a suprise. He is the office man with one of the city Attorneys. Called John R. Leighty up at 11:00 A. M. and he said he would call at that office at 12:00 A. M, but he did not call until (Mr. Adams) my friend and I had gone to lunch. He left word asking me to call him up at his residence and accept a dinner engagement at 6:30 P. M. which I did He had an old friend from Cumberland Virginia, who is superintendent of the Cumberland Division on the B. & O. rail road company with his wife and self, also an other gentleman from Baltimore Md. We all met in the Baltimore Hotel, which is famed for being one of the best in the middle west and after dinner we went out to Electric Park, where we had an enjoyable evening. I found Mrs. Leigety to be a pleasing conversationalist. I wrote a letter to them thanking them for their courtesy to me while there. Since leaving home again I find that it only serves to make the tie stronger that binds me to home. Hoping that you are all well.

I remain your son

LESTER.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasion," writes Mr. W Stone, of East Portland, Maine. It is the proper thing too for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman drug store. 25c.

Small Blaze.

Thursday forenoon, J. C. Hull started a small fire in the shop stove. Shortly afterward someone on the street discovered that the roof on the barber shop was afire. The promptness of the volunteer bucket brigade soon extinguished the fire so that no great damage was done. The men of St. Joe are prompt in getting out to a fire. Within the past few years the alarm of fire has been given and blazes extinguished even when it was thought impossible to do so. Thursday, a dozen men had collected and put out the fire before others within the same block knew about it. One man was so prompt and eager to help that he came with a bucket minus a bottom.

Mrs. John Sechler is visiting her parents at Mooresville.

J. Y. Davis and Mahlon Baker will have a joint public sale, Saturday September 5th.

W. A. G. Smith & Co. have added to their establishment a cement brick machine and are now making brick for building purposes.

Mrs. W. B. Brown of Waterloo Iowa and F. M. Rush of Mt. Clemens, Mich. came to attend the funeral of their mother and remained over for a visit with friends.

There are more McCall Patterns sold in the United States than of any other make of patterns. This is on account of their style, accuracy and simplicity.

McCall's Magazine (The Queen of Fashion) has more subscribers than any other Ladies' Magazine. One year's subscription (12 numbers) costs 50 cents. Latest number, 5 cents. Every subscriber gets a McCall Pattern Free. Subscribe today.

Lady Agents Wanted. Handsome premiums or liberal cash commission. Pattern Catalogue (of 400 designs) and Premium Catalogue (showing 750 premiums) sent free. Address THE McCALL CO., New York.

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

PICKLING TIME

is now almost at hand. You will want spices to season the pickled fruits and vegetables for use during the winter. You will want spices that are all spice. We have them, pure and unadulterated, guaranteed to be absolutely pure under the pure food and drug law.

A COMPLETE LINE OF SPICES.

Ground Mustard, Tumeric, Mixed Spices Celery Seed, Mustard Seed, Cloves and Cinnamon.

Do You Know

that we are handling gasoline? Our tank is new and the gasoline is of the best grade. Cans filled day or night.

It Makes no Difference.

BRING YOUR GASOLINE CAN

GENERAL ITEMS

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S.

The Flint & Walling company of Kendallville, is manufacturing a 175 foot tower to be used in making gun shot. The tower is to be sent to a firm in South America.

Eight of Garrett's saloons have closed since the remonstrance took effect in March. Six remain in business—John Trapp, D. I. Clayton, Charles Downend, Isaac Whirledge, Ora Neff and Frank Coverdale. The next license to expire is that of John Trapp, in October.

About 200 women in Mitchell are literaly stung. A smooth tongued individual has talked them into buying $1 worth of green soap. He told them, of course, that he was introducing the goods and really gave them two dollars worth for one dollar. Some of those who bit say that he sold $200 worth of the stuff in Mitchell. The soap has proved of no value and besides it containes an acid that eats the skin and flesh from the fingers causing a very painful and stinging sensation.

Envelopes 5c a bunch.

Tomorrow, August 27, will occur the 33rd Annual Old Settlers meeting on the fair grounds at Hicksville.

Garrett parties are working on plans for a big automobile factory that will employ fifty or seventy-five men. This is being done to prevent a repetition of the hard times incident to the laying off of men by the B. & O. railroad company.

L. D. Robbins the ice cream man of Auburn, is forwarding plans to have one of the finest athletic parks in northern Indiana. He owns several acres south of the Vandalia depot and on this ground he intends to have a base ball diamond, a tennis court, a foot ball gridiron, a basket ball ground, shade for Sunday School picnics and tables for dinners.

To have the privilege of voting a man must have been in the country a year, state 6 months and in county sixty days, in the ward or precinct thirty days: and if he be a foreigner he must have declared, in the superior or circit court his intention of natural ization. These are requirements which must be complied with in order to vote at any city, state, county or national election in Indiana.

WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Elza Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

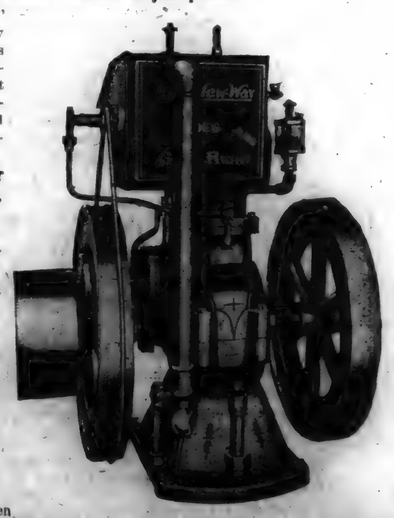
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor, If you don't say, it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.

Exclusive Agent.

AUGUST

0303
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

News Items

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Rev. and Mrs. N. P. Barton made a business trip to Ft. Wayne, Thursday.

John Rupert left Tuesday for Lima, Ohio, where he will work in the oil-fields.

Rev. Pete Walter came last week for the Walter reunion and to visit relatives.

William Keefer and daughter Lale, were the guests of Benjamin Hursh and family, Tuesday

Samuel Cole went to Garrett, Tuesday and his niece, Mrs. Tyndall, accompanied him home.

Mrs. Flossie Wilson left Tuesday for Hicksville, where she will spend a week visiting among relatives.

Hullie Rummel from Oklahoma came Tuesday night to join his family, who have been visiting relatives.

One week from Thursday the Lutherans and Methodists will hold a picnic in the Baltz grove. There will be a basket dinner and everyone is to have a general good time. The second game between the "marrieds" and "singles" will be played in the afternoon.

Roy Applegate of Antwerp, was the guest of his cousin, Frank Lake, last week,

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Rectenwall are at home to their many friends in the Hetz property.

Messrs. Jake Baltz and Will Sommers made a business trip to Fort Wayne, Thursday.

Mr. Frank Steward, of Garrett, came Saturday night and spent Sunday with relatives.

Jack Beams was taken to Plymouth last week where he will remain at the Sanitarium for treatment.

John Hobaugh, who has been seriously ill, is improving nicely under the care of Dr. S. S. Kimes.

Arthur Steward has purchased the Vanzile property and expects to make it his home in the near future.

Mrs. Birtsfield is working for Mrs. Mable Erick and expects to make her home there during the coming winter.

Mr. George Wilson whose limb was broken is now able to walk with the aid of crutches. He was out Saturday for the first.

Lost:—Pair nose glasses with gold automatic button and chain. Finder please return to H. N. Rummel and receive reward.

Rev. and Mrs. Pam Barton and Miss Ethel Metcalf left Friday for Huntertown where they will spend a few days visiting friends.

W. W. Fisher and George Beams are attending the teacher's institute at Auburn, this week. George Wilson was unable to attend.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

Mr. Newt Hursh and wife of Oklahoma came last week to visit the former's son, Harry, and Mrs. Mariah Oberholtzer. All took Sunday dinner with Mr. John Beams and family.

Miss Jennie Steward entertained at Sunday dinner the Misses Inez Rhoades, Pluma Kimes, Clara Keesler, Fern and Zenith Wearley, Hazel Berry of St. Joe and June Volkert of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

J. A. Provines, Jr. will travel for the Robert Johns Novelty Company of Chicago, taking W. W. Fisher's place. Mr. Fisher will travel for the company next week when he resigns to take up his school work.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

Junoza Kidney Pills

Not Laxative.

An effective remedy for kidney disorders and all diseases arising from disorders of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER, ETC.

They purify the blood and put urio vigor and life in the system.

Sold at

Bowman's Drug Store

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davison, of No. 379 Gifford Ave., San Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy, for headache, biliousness and torpor of the bowels and liver is so pronounced that I am prompted to say a word in its favor, for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of." Sold under guarantee at H. Millman's drug store. 50c.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

Reunions.

Continued from First page.

THE BOGER FAMILY.

The sixth annual reunion of the Boger family was held Thursday, at the beautiful William Ringwalt grove, Springfield township, Allen County. This grove has been arranged especially for the purpose of holding these reunions, with plenty of good seats, tables, etc.

The day was a beautiful one and one hundred sixty of the family were present to enjoy the occasion. The program began with a welcome address by Rev. Lee Boger, who is now in Chicago attending school. After music and a prayer by Rev. E. W. Erick, the gathering was adjourned for dinner. This festive occasion was heartily enjoyed by all. During the noon hour the business meeting was held and the following officers were elected: President, A. O. Boger; Vice President, Dennis Merrill; Secretary, Effie Boger; Treasurer, George Zeimer.

After dinner all listened to songs and recitations by different members of the Boger family. Rev. Hogshead of Ohio, and E. W. Erick both gave excellent addresses. Just before closing the afternoon exercises a letter was read from Phebe A. Persons of Northfield, Minn., which is printed for the convenience of relatives and friends who did not hear it read.

NORTHFIELD, MINN.

MY DEAR FRIENDS ONE AND ALL:

Another year has come and gone, another reunion of our families, is assembled to enjoy each others society and gladly, oh so gladly would I join were it possible for me to do so; but no, I am here in beautiful Minnesota and you are there in dear old Indiana my childhood home. Many fond recollections I have of the places there and some not such pleasant memories; there as here are some things we do not love to think of but all such come into our lives. Some delightful times were spent in my earlier years; at my first marriage I was so happy, but in less than five years death came. Oh how sad then it seemed, the sun could never shine again for me; but a second marriage came and I have been here for nearly seventeen years. My home here has been happy and I have enjoyed life here, but death comes and takes my husband and in four more years death comes again and takes my first born, a dear boy of twenty leaving me with but my one dear precious boy. These deaths I have mentioned are not all, father and mother have gone, a half brother and half sister and can I mention all, you all know of brothers in-law three of them and so many dear cousins whose faces I should sadly miss among you were I to meet with you. New and young recruits are forming into line many of whom are strangers to me but of my own kin.

How I wish I might take you each by the hand and look into your faces but this may never be; some ere another year may have passed on or it may be the call will come to me, but be it as it, may let us have our lamps filled and burning that when the summons comes we may say "Yea Lord" and bow in humble submission to His will. Now while you are together enjoying yourselves remember one out here in Minnesota, who is thinking of you all and requests one thing of you and that is to all arise and sing "Blest be the tie that binds" and just make that grove ring with your voices and if Rev. Erick is there I wish he might at the conclusion of singing offer up one of his earnest prayers and ask God's choicest blessings to rest and abide with us all.

I have some and many kind friends here whom I think a great deal of, those who in my times of sore bereavement have been true friends to me; but dear ones our own kindred are dear to us too and we can but hold them in fond memory. Now lest I take too much of your time I will bid you all good bye and a God bless you all.

PHEBE A. PERSONS.

After singing and prayer by Rev. Erick the family adjourned to meet at the same place next August.

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.

Why James Lee Got Well

Everybody in Zanesville, O., knows Mrs. Mary Lee, of rural route 8. She writes: "My husband, James Lee, firmly believes he owes his life to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery. We tried it, and its use has restored him to perfect health." Dr. King's New Discovery is the King of throat and lung remedies. For coughs and colds it has no equal. The first dose gives relief. Try it. Sold under guarantee at H. Millman's drug store, 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free

Exciting Struggle.

The ball game Wednesday afternoon between the "marrieds" and "singles" proved to be a fine exhibition of the game. For three hours the contest raged fiercely and excitement raised to almost a fervent heat. For fourteen innings the struggle lasted and, not until those old timers were so crippled and worn with the battle as to be unable to run, were the single men able to get any scores to the good. Young blood entered the battle eager to show their elders how to play the game in the modern way; older heads went into the fray inspired by the glory of former achievements, and when the opposing teams found they were evenly matched all settled down to win at any cost. And so the struggle went on until at the end of the fifth inning the score was one to nothing in favor of the youngsters. But as the game progressed the married men gained confidence and in the sixth they pushed two counters across the home plate. The singles tied the score in the first of the seventh and the battle went on. In the first of the ninth those unmarried fellows were exceedingly uncharitable and doubled their score. Their opponents came to bat on what seemed to be the last stretch of the game, but although the boys were three tallies ahead the marrieds were by no means defeated; and so with a determination born of experience in domestic and other struggles they put forth their best efforts and tied the score with some spectacular batting stunts not often witnessed on the major league lot.

At the end of the ninth all realized how that they must still watch the struggle continue. A different attitude took hold of the players. In sheer determination they settled down to do or die and what a magnificent effort they made! What if a few bad names were spoken, some strong words said and fists clenched in menacing way. Who could be rational in such a time as this, while the contest moved on and on? Would the end never come? The unlucky 13th is passed and still the battle wages. In the fourteenth the veterans are tired and worn, and although they stick nobly to their post they are unable to prevent the singles from getting three scores. In their own half at the bat they are unable to secure more than one one run, and go down in defeat with a score of 7 to 9, but in that hour their names were raised in immortal glory for the brave fight they made.

The battery work was of high type on both sides; Hull and Kelley for the singles, Allen, Bowman and Beams for the marrieds. So efficiently did opposing batteries work that it was a case of "Greek meet Greek".

It has been planned to play two more games. The next one will no doubt draw a large crowd.

S. S. Kimes

—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.

Spencerville, Ind.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

Dealer in EDISON PHONOGRAPHS, RECORDS & SUPPLIES.

The phonograph is today recognized as a pleasing and useful instrument to have in any home. It speaks, sings, and plays music, imitating the human voice and musical instruments with perfect accuracy. Come in and hear it. The August records are now on sale.

A FULL LINE OF CIGARS.

Beams & Co.

We are in business to supply your wants in general merchandise. Good seasonable goods suitable for the local trade.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience is that you come in and see what we have. Very likely you will come to town this afternoon or tonight or later. Be sure to glance our way, then follow the glance.

What is Wanted

Spencerville, Indiana.

Erick & Co.

One More Saturday

Next Saturday afternoon, August 29 will be the last time the prize clock will stop. On this day the cash prizes will amount to $15.00. First prize $10. Second prize $3. Third prize $2.

For Working Men.

We have a complete new line of overalls and working coats. We are the sole agents for the Cahartoveralls and coats and a better line of goods was never made or shown in these parts. Come in and see them, buy them, wear them and be satisfied.

Our General Merchandise

is of the best quality. We keep pure, fresh groceries and up-to-date, durable dry goods. These merit your trade. Come once and you will likely want to come again.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also urnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable.

Beams & Baker.

AUGUST

0304
L 903

The Popular Pulpit

TO AID OTHERS.

By Rev. George T. Dowling.

I sat where they sat.—Ezekiel 3:15.

You do not want your life to be a cipher. You want to help some one and you do not know how. You have very little money to give, perhaps none at all; very little influence, very little of anything. But you have more than you think. You have the possibility of the most valuable equipment that any man ever had. Here was Ezekiel. He was a youth just starting in the noblest of all callings, that of a preacher. Yet God held him back until he had cultivated what you may cultivate. He had made all intellectual preparation. He had absorbed the message that he was to deliver to those poor captives down there by the waters of Babylon. In his oriental manner of expressing it, he had "eaten" the roll on which the message was written. Still God held him back. There was one more thing which was absolutely necessary. He had to put himself in their place. Then, but not till then, he was prepared for his work.

What is the greatest underlying need in the commercial world to-day? It is not simply wages. Men are having larger wages than they have ever had in the history of mankind. It is more sympathy. It is a greater willingness on the part of those in position and power to enter into real appreciation of the trials and anxieties of those whom they control. It is a greater willingness on the part of the employe to realize that his employer as well as he has sleepless nights, too, and thus, just as often as he can, to give him credit for at least trying, amid many perplexities of his own, to do his best.

Why is it that one preacher will reach a multitude and the other will not? That is a question which it is seldom easy to answer, because there is no "secret" of success unless we use the nebulous term "personality," and that does not answer. For who can tell us what personality is? The "secrets" are multiplex, and many of them escape analysis. But among them all, in the successful preacher we shall always find this: When he looks out over his congregation on Sunday morning, he has compassion on the multitude as Jesus did; he puts himself in their place. No man with a heart in him can be formal or cold or unimpressive when he can say to himself at such a time and feel it: "Here is a company of struggling men and women, each one the center of a history, each one in some undefinable way longing to be better than he is, each one stifling his own sob and fighting his own battle. And each one of these trouble-tossed men and women is silently pleading for some word of courage and hope." That is the "secret," if there is any secret. He sits where they sit.

And this same "secret" of influence runs all through life. Whether our pulpit is in the church or the workshop, the schoolhouse or the home, we can never really help others until by the power of just such sympathy as the Master Himself felt we have put ourselves in their places. Thus one teacher in the school is more successful than the other. They may have the same equipment and often have, but the first has learned in spirit to become a little child, to sit where they sit.

You want to help somebody. Then learn to sit where he sits. The last thing that the good Samaritan gave was his money.

GOODNESS.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Who is he that will harm you if ye be followers of that which is good?"—I. Peter, 3:13.

Some men hope to become good by going to church just as others hope to become wise by sleeping in a college dormitory.

Goodness is an acquisition, but it is not an imposition; it is gained, but it is not laid on any one. Saints are not made by sleeping in sanctified places any more than beauty may be gained by sleeping near some great painting.

The trouble with many people who think they want to be good is that they would be good if they could be good without its making any real difference to them. Goodness seems to be a matter of disposition or of accident, highly desirable as a gift, but not sufficiently worth while to pay a good price for.

Of course, there are many who would neither buy goodness at any price nor take it as a gift. To them it is wholly undesirable, it is synonymous with weakness, often with cant and hypocrisy. Yet the life of goodness is simply the life that sets the good above goods, the life that seeks the things that are supremely good, not for itself alone but for all.

Goodness is not a weak, sentimental feeling that comes over one when certain hymns are being sung or when the music of the organ rolls through the dim aisles of the great cathedral. Neither is goodness simply the negation of evil. A good man is infinitely better than a statue, though he may have some bad habits while the statue certainly has none.

Goodness is the determined search of the life for the highest good. Goodness is the power in character which is like health in the body; the result of right nutrition, proper labor, exercise and high thinking. It is seen in strength and not in weakness, in positive elements rather than in negative; it makes more of a man and not less.

Goodness is manifest in the qualities of healthfulness of the inner life, in tastes that crave the good and loathe the evil, that love truth and hate a lie, in habits and aptitudes that make themselves known in a thousand little ways rather than in single acts and in attitudes of professed piety.

You cannot hide the goodness of the good man any more than you can cover up the badness of the bad. Character is a light that sets itself up where all may see it. What you are always proclaims itself so much more loudly and clearly than what you want folks to think you are that there is little chance of mistake.

But if one would find this life of goodness, how shall it be had? It is had as the physical goodness which we call health is to be had, by right living, right habits, right nutrition. Every act done because we know it is the good thing to do from the high motive of its moral and spiritual values is a contribution to the life of goodness. Steadily choosing the best of all things is the way to the possession of the best always.

The good life is as much a matter of habit as the bad one. Every act determines habit. It is no use sighing for the life of goodness while persisting in the deeds of darkness. Neither may we find that life while cherishing the thoughts of evil; you cannot be hosts to devils within and hope to shine as an angel of light without.

The life of goodness is not for the pious prig. The man who thinks that he only is good and all others are hopelessly bad is about the only hopeless case the moral physician meets. One has to believe in the good in others to find the good in himself. We are never any better in ourselves than we believe others may be.

Life's highest prizes have high prices, yet they are its greatest bargains. No possession is so well worth the gaining as this of goodness, the clean heart, the clever eye, the keen taste for the right and true, the high delight in that which is best, the love of the things that have come down to us as the great heritage of our past, the labor for the future that glows before.

After all, this right life may be the most that any one can give to his world. The grandest contribution to the physical well being of the race is to be well and strong yourself. The finest contribution to the moral and spiritual wealth of our times is to cultivate this life of normal soul health. He who thus is strong gives strength and is fit to give good service to all.

THE GIFTS OF THE LORD.

By Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon.

Text: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."—Job 1:21.

Some of the rarest pearls have been found in the deepest waters, and some of the choicest utterances of believers have come from them when God's waves and billows have been made to roll over them. The fire consumes nothing but the dross, and leaves the gold all the purer. In Job's case, I may truly say, with regard to his position before God, he had lost nothing by all his losses, for what could be purer and brighter gold than this which gleams before us from our text, revealing his triumphant patience, his complete acquiescence in the divine will? "The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

If we are believers, all the comforts and mercies that we have are to be viewed by us as coming from the hand of our gracious Heavenly Father. Job confessed that the Lord had given him his seven sons and three daughters; everything which he had ever possessed he looked upon as having been the gift of God. Job did not say, "I worked hard to obtain all that stock that I have now lost." He did not complain, "I spent many weary days and many anxious nights in accumulating all those flocks and herds that have been stolen from me." He did not ascribe any of his wealth either to his own wit or to his own industry, but he said of it all, "The Lord gave it to me." In his mind's eye, he took an inventory of all that he once had, and of all that he had lost, and he said of the whole, "It was all the Lord's gift to me."

Now, beloved, whatever may be the possessions which you have at the present time, whatever may be the number of those who are the comfort of your life—husband or wife, parents or children, kinsfolk of any sort—say of all of them, "The Lord gave them to me;" and as a Christian learn the wisdom of never ascribing any earthly comfort to any earthly source. The worldling may not always be able to say what Job said concerning his possessions. Some of what he has may not have been obtained honestly; the Lord did not give any of that to him. Some of what he has may turn out to be a curse rather than a blessing; but the believer in Christ may say, with the utmost truthfulness, with regard to all that he has, "It is all the gift of my loving and tender Heavenly Father."

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Love does not stop at the boundaries of liking.

It's easy to get tangled up in truth's cast off clothes.

He has no force with men who has no faith in them.

Your use of leisure throws a light on the whole of your life.

People who are true blue never suffer much from the blues.

Smiles of the Day

Still Vacant.

He was a dude of the would-be masher type, and, tripping down the aisle of the parlor car, he dropped into a seat beside a pretty girl.

"Nobody—er—occupying this seat with you, miss?" he queried.

With a disdainful look, she replied in a tone redolent with sarcasm: "No, sir; nobody yet."

Good Ruse.

"But, Benjamin," said the good minister's wife, "now that you have installed electric fans in the camp meeting tent you should certainly grease them to prevent that squeaking."

"No, Maria," responded the minister; "the squeaking comes in handy to keep the drowsy members of the congregation awake."

Oh, This Modern Life!

Wife—Boo-hoo-hoo! That child has provoked me terribly to-day. I just can't stand it.

Husband—Why, what has she done now?

Wife—Boo-hoo! She ate those three charlotte russes I had in the refrigerator, and I intended them for Fido's supper.

Flying Steak.

"Fine airship you have, old man," said the friend. "What do you call her?"

"The 'Porterhouse,'" replied the sky pilot.

"Named after a beefsteak. Well! Well! Isn't that rather unusual?"

"Not at all. I named her that because she is always rising."

No Tobacco There.

"Why don't you try one of those tobacco cures for your son?" asked Gaddie.

"That wouldn't have any effect on him," replied Popley.

"Oh! yes, they simply kill all appetite for tobacco."

"But he smokes cigarettes."—Philadelphia Press.

His Objection.

"What is your objection to a man who tries to seem bigger than his party?" asked the political amateur.

"He's too much like a man trying to look at himself through a microscope," answeerd Senator Sorghum. "Not only is the effort ineffectual, but the attitude is grotesque."—Washington Star.

True Enough.

"I tell you," said Subbubs, enthusiastically, "if you'd only move out to Swamphurst you'd never live anywhere else."

"I guess that's so," replied Citiman. "I see poor Lunger, who used to live there, died recently on his way to California."—Philadelphia Press.

Very Particular.

Johnnie—Please, ma'am, is that me you're drawing milking that cow in the pasture?

Artist—Why, yes, but I didn't know you were looking."

Johnnie—'Cause if that's me, you've put me on the wrong side of the cow and I'll get kicked over."

Example Not Contagious.

Uneasy Passenger (on ocean liner)—Does not the steamer tip frightfully?

Steward—The steamer does, ma'am; but I don't notice as the passengers are following her example.—Boston Transcript.

Under Another Name.

"They didn't have peace congresses when you were young, did they, grandma?"

"Yes, we did, child, but we called them quilting parties."

How It Happened.

"Please, ma'am," said the husky hobo, "would youse help a poor feller wot wus caught on a ellervator an' laid up fer six months?"

"Certainly, poor man!" replied the kind lady. "Here's a dollar for you. How did you happen to get caught in an elevator?"

"De perlice wus too quick fer me," explained the h. h. as he hastily beat it.

Unlucky for the Umpire.

Greening—I had no idea you were superstitious.

Browning—I'm not.

Greening—But you were carrying a horseshoe when you entered the ball park yesterday afternoon.

Browning—Oh, that was to heave at the umpire in case he got gay.

From His Own Experience.

"Have you 'What Can Be Done with a Chafing Dish?'" asked the customer in the book store.

"No'm," replied the haggard-looking clerk, who had attended a welsh rarebit party the night before, "but I can tell you what should be done with a chafing dish."—Philadelphia Press.

Obstacles Removed.

"It's all right, prince," said the American woman, "my relatives have written me permission to marry you."

"Excellent! And did they say nothing else?"

"They added a superfluous postscript to the effect that I would be a fool to do it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Vivacious Damsel.

"Your daughter," remarked the new neighbor, who was making a duty call "seems to have a buoyant disposition."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Meadowgrass with a sigh; "that's her only fault She's a bit too fond of the boys."

Free Advertising.

Green—I hear you have been offered a big salary to go to Panama. Everybody is talking about it. Was there an account of it in the papers?

Brown—Oh, no; I merely told my wife and requested her not to tell any one.

His Experience.

"I suppose," said the bachelor, "that it is easy to get a wife."

"It is," replied the ex-bachelor, "but it's not so easy to keep one. A wife is an expensive luxury."

Lying Low.

"Your wife appears to be perpetually grieving over something."

"I know it."

"What is it?"

"I don't know."

"Why don't you ask her?"

"Because I'm afraid it's about something I've done or forgot to do, and I dassen't"—Houston Post.

His Retort.

Lady of the House—I suppose you're looking for a plate of ice cream or a piece of pie.

Tramp—No—I ain't one of these here joke-book tramps. I want some bread and meat.

No Use for Him.

"I've got you down for a couple of tickets. We're getting up a raffle for a poor man in our neigh——"

"None for me, thank you. I wouldn't know what to do with a poor man if I won him."—Philadelphia Press.

Complimentary.

"I'm afraid Miss Pepri has a poor opinion of my intellect."

"On the contrary, I heard her paying you a high compliment last night."

"Indeed? What did she say?"

"She said she had no doubt that there were bigger idiots in the world than you."—Cleveland Leader.

Breaking Off Gradually.

Stern Parent—See here, Eleanor, I thought I told you to give young Snippen his walking papers?

Pretty Daughter—And I did, papa.

Stern Parent—But he still comes to the house.

Pretty Daughter—Oh, he's only been here seven times this week, papa.

Stern Parent—Only seven times! Great guns! Why——

Pretty Daughter—Now, don't be harsh, papa. He is trying to break off gradually.

Two Ways.

"A good way to keep from lending money to your friends is not to have any friends."

"Another good way is not to have any money."—Houston Post.

Others Considered.

She—Singing is awfully hard on my throat.

He—And how much harder it must be on the ears of your neighbors.

Precisely Speaking.

"I understand he has entered the state of matrimony."

"Why, yes. He is traveling in Utah."—Bohemian.

Sad Termination.

Said She—Did the story you were writing when I last saw you end happily or unhappily?

Said He—Unhappily. The publishers refused to accept it.

Couldn't.

"My daughter isn't going to sing any more."

"I know it."

"How'd you know it?"

"There are only twenty-four hours in a day."—Puck.

He Didn't Know.

"I wouldn't let my wife bully and bait me," said the bachelor, scornfully. "I wouldn't let her be master in the house if I could help it."

"That's it!" sighed the married man. "Neither would I if I could help it."—Baltimore American.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Semi-Fitted Jacket.

Half fitted jackets are among the favorite wraps of the season, and they are to be noted in a variety of materials, in all-over lace, in fancy braids held by lace stitches and in silk, in soutache, in cloth and in material to match the costumes, while later they will also be worn in linen and in embroideries. This one suits every one of the materials mentioned and is chic and jaunty, while it is perfectly simple and very easy to fit. The sleeves being cut in one with the side portions, do away with all difficulty on that score and the whole effect is one of grace and smartness combined with simplicity.

PATTERN NO. 5982.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5982.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Eleven Gored Skirt.

The many gored skirt that can be made to fit with perfect smoothness over the hips, yet to flare gracefully at the lower portion, continues a favorite one for walking length. It is absolutely comfortable as well as smart in effect, and just now the fact that it is desirable for washable materials means an added advantage. This model is novel, one being made with a front

PATTERN NO. 6002.

gore, which is laid in plaits and lapped over onto the succeeding ones, and gives a panel effect, while it allows effective use of buttons as trimming. Also the closing can be made at the left of this gore or at the back as liked. The model is made of linen and is trimmed with stitched bands of the same.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6002.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The average woman carries fifty miles of hair on her head.

Of the 46,216 employes in the postal and telegraph service of London, 7,557 are women.

Ice melts at 32 degrees, wax at 149 degrees, lead at 626 degrees, and platinum at 3,032 degrees.

The biggest farms in the world are in South Australia, where the average squatter holds 78,000 acres.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE.

Just as Distinctively American a Dish as Pie.

Travelers say you may make the round of the globe without encountering a strawberry shortcake worth mentioning, outside of America. If you don't believe the saying, just make the tour and convince yourself.

The French have a "shortcake"—sponge cake with a few berries pressed into the top. England has a sort of soggy biscuit crust interspersed with a little fruit, but in the United States you get the real thing. Made of Michigan berries, and this recipe, there can be none better:

When making a strawberry shortcake use a very light biscuit dough from some old and tried recipe, roll out into two thin layers, brush one over with a coating of melted butter, put the other layer on top of it and bake. A shortcake put together in this way was found less heavy than when the cake was split open while hot. The two layers are easily separated. There is also not so much hard crust as when the layers are baked separately. After removing from the oven separate the layers and spread each with butter. Turn the top layer upside down and cover with sweetened berries that have been standing in the sunshine for an hour, or until they begin to look rich and juicy. Then over them place the other layer. Ornament the top with the same kind of sun cooked berries. Decorate the cake with whipped cream, or serve the cream in a separate dish. Send the cake to the table hot.

Do not use whipped and flavored egg whites instead of the cream, as so many cooks insist on doing. If you cannot obtain cream use a sauce made from the juice of a few berries that have stood almost long enough in the sunshine to melt, or the same juice mixed with butter and sugar until thick. If the latter sauce is used do not sweeten before putting them in the sunshine. A shortcake should not be so sweet that it is insipid.

Tasteless berries may occasionally be improved with a few drops of lemon juice. Avoid any and all of the insipid hot sauces that are sometimes used.

Benny on the Armadillo.

The armadillo is a small animal that looks like a nutmeg grater with head, feet and legs. It lives on grass and insects and is of a retiring disposition. In a menagerie you can see one for nothing if you have already paid to see the other animals. The armadillo is not bloodthirsty. It seldom attacks man unless greatly enraged. In its wild state it is good for food, but very tough. Once there was a man who bought an armadillo for a pet. He could not teach it to love him and he traded it for an icebox, which is much more appropriate in summertime. We should be grateful that we are not an armadillo and always strive to be truthful and courageous. When the armadilla is attacked it rolls itself up into a ball and the natives play golf with it. I know this is true, because an old man that used to be a sailor told me so.

BENNY.

—Chicago Tribune.

Ask Your Dealer for Allen's Foot-Ease

A powder to shake into your shoes. It rests the feet. Cures Corns, Bunions, Swollen, Sore, Hot, Callous, Aching, Sweating feet and Ingrowing Nails. Allen's Foot-Ease makes new or tight shoes easy. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Still Had Them.

The woman of the house eyed him suspiciously.

"You've been here before, haven't you?" she asked.

"Not lately, ma'am," answered Waresam Long. "You prob'ly reco'nize me clothes. This is an old suit o' yer husband's you wus kind enough to give me when I wus here two years ago."

The Modern View.

Wife (greatly pleased)—Doesn't my new spring gown make people gaze? They probably think I got it from Paris.

Hubby—More likely they think I've been grafting somewhere.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Standing and Sitting.

She sat for an oil portrait of herself, did she not?"

"Yep, Jinx was the artist."

"How'd it come out?"

"She sat for it but when she saw it she wouldn't stand for it."—Houston Post.

In the Concrete Age.

First Government Officer (a few years hence)—Anything particular on hand to-day?

Second Government Officer—Yes; I've got to go this afternoon to take part in the molding of the corner stone for a new battleship.

If you wish beautiful, clear, white clothes, use Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents

He Explained.

"How many horse power is she?" he mirthfully inquired.

The stranded automobilist was working over his car. Up came a sarcastic follower of the plow.

"Sixty," replied the automobilist.

"Then, by heck, why don't she go?"

"Because, my friend, thirty are pulling each way." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Defined.

"Uncle Henry, what are pajamas?"

"Pajamas my boy, are the masculine substitute for the bloomer costume."

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

AUGUST

0305

L 903

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Altogether Too Good.

That a "good thing" is sometimes too good was shown the other day in Little Rock, Ark., when a clothier, to attract a crowd to his store, scattered 500 $1 bills in his show window and stuck up a sign offering them for 95 cents each. Strange to say, however, the market was dull. Passersby whose attention was attracted by the display of bank notes either hurried on after taking a look at the display or else studied them carefully, as though wondering how any one had succeeded in making such a perfect counterfeit of a dollar bill, for they were too wise to believe that they were real. This recalls a wager made by a western man that he could stand at a busy corner in his home town, offer a $20 gold piece for $5 and get no takers. Luck was against him, however, for one of the first men to pass was a bank cashier, who promptly snapped up the bargain.

Explained.

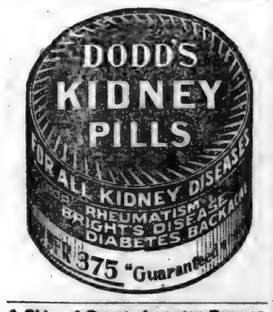
"They don't care for expense here," said the regular summer boarder at the summer resort hotel. "When you call for lemonade they give you a stalk or two of macaroni with it instead of a straw."

"I was just wondering," observed the new boarder, after a pause, "why this baked macaroni tastes so strongly of lemon juice."—Chicago Tribune.

For Sale—One Brougham (Germantown), single and double harness. First-class condition. Very reasonable price. Address W., 93 South Jefferson St., Chicago, Ill.

Circulation of the Blood.

The idea of some sort of movement of the blood in man and the lower animals was possessed by Aristotle and other Greeks and by the physicians of the Alexandrian school, as well as by the doctors and surgeons of the middle ages. In fact, even the village barbers knew of such movement. But no one, not even the wisest of men, had any conception of a continuous stream returning to its source—a circulation in the true sense of the word—or of the functions of the heart as the motor power of the movement of the blood until it was demonstrated by Harvey in 1628.



A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Oreqm' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

JOS. DUCHAC & CO.
FINE WISCONSIN FARM AND TIMBER LANDS $25.00
92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

AGENTS WANTED to sell lots in new county seat town in Texas. Low prices, easy terms, liberal commissions, free R. R. tickets and berth. Fine sandstone quarries. This vicinity produced fruit that took first prize at the World's Fair; best climate and soil on earth; vegetables grow all winter. Reports climate, no better place for the home seeker or investor. Descriptive printed matter free. Write today. E. L. Brereton, 836 Masonic Block, Chicago, Ill.

ORANGE GROVE FOR FARM
Must be good farm and free from incumbrances; if interested, write full particulars, stating value of property, and ask for particulars as to grove proposition.
Address Owner, Look Box 687, OCALA, FLORIDA

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"I guess that's right, too. So you had to lock up Stembridge?"

"Yes, I found it advisable one day after he had tried to steal the ship—while I was ashore in San Juan," Constable explained ingeniously. "I'm glad you came, because it will save me from taking him back. That is, unless you decide that I'll have to go back, too. I did play pretty rough with you, but your man had me going strong about that time. You've got to acknowledge that he's an artist. Let's get out of this. What do you plan to do?"

"Go out and get Stembridge, and settle with you."

"The word 'settle' usually refers to dollars up in the States," Constable said delicately.

"It doesn't pay to buck the detective bureau, Constable, and I'm—authorized to take cash for your part—this time."

"How much?"

"Five thousand dollars and expenses."

"It costs money to keep you off one's ship."

"I'm Crusoe of the detective bureau, and I usually go where I please," was the dulcet answer.

"I'll have to go out to the ship to get so much money," Constable declared resignedly.

"I'll have to go out to the ship to get Stembridge," said Crusoe. "We'll go together."

"Where are your men?"

"I'm working alone this trip."

"You can pick up a couple of gendarmes to help you, if you think you'll need help," Constable suggested. This was the galvanic instant.

Crusoe glanced at him keenly. He had been able to pick no flaw in the moment's talk. He was a shrewd man in his line and schooled, but Constable had rung true. There is no inclination on the part of the public at large to concede brilliance of acumen to the heirs of millions, unless the sparkling quality has been exposed in a strong light. The suggestion concerning the gendarmes, and a last glance into the face of the young man, vanquished Crusoe's final doubt.

"I can handle Stembridge very tidily, having your moral support," he declared. "He's too old a bird to resist arrest when he's once cornered."

"Just as you say," Constable said swiftly. "Turn your rig about and follow on. My launch is ahead, at the Sugar Landing."

It was not until the other was behind, and the back of his own carriage shutting off the view, that Constable realized he had lost his headache, and was drenched with perspiration. It was now eight. The ladies had agreed to be ready at nine, in case Uncle Joey had returned with the mail by that time. His several errands must wait. The present matter would take the entire time, and must be done decently and in order. The driver was commanded to make good speed to the launch, which was in readiness. Crusoe dismissed his rig; Constable bade his driver wait, and the two men boarded.

"Make her buzz, Ernst," the owner said to the sailor in charge. "I'm expiring for a drink and a mouthful of clean air."

Crusoe was deeply interested in the present manifestation of Martinique's climate, and was not readily diverted to the subject which challenged his companion. Once launched, however, upon the dealings of Nicholas Stembridge, alias Hayden Breen, he became fluent, and Constable learned that his guest was "the Rajah's Diamond" among the swindlers of civilization.

Stembridge, according to Crusoe, had started a Central American revolution in order to seize a range of rich silver hills; had made good, worked the mines, and sold them, a year later, "salted to a brine," to a syndicate of New York capitalists. He had engineered the Yarmouth-Leams oil syndicate which disordered London financiers for a day. Of these and other interesting engagements Constable learned as the launch sped across the fouled harbor.

"What does this prince of manipulators do with all his money?" he asked finally.

"Well, you see," Crusoe replied, "he has his army to pay, and he must pay the men pretty well, for the rumor is abroad that they would go on the cross for him. And then he is a golden glory of a spendthrift. I've heard that Paris looks for his second coming as for a Messiah, since he has promised the Tenderloin a punch from the Milky Way. * * * Here we are. Perhaps you don't think I was pleased to see your craft lying here this morning when I came in on the Panther?"

"I presume you were," Constable replied idly.

They were on the ship's ladder, Crusoe walking ahead. The sailor above, on the main deck of the Madame, caught a strange gesture from Constable's hand, and a stranger expression from the eye of his owner. The sailor did not understand exactly, but he stood ready for anything that might occur, and accordingly made haste to assist when Constable sprang forward and pinioned the newcomer about the waist. Crusoe accepted his defeat nervily, but when his gun was removed and his wrists enclosed for the time being in his own manacles he regarded his captor with eyes of hate, in which a little reproach was mingled.

"What's your lay, Constable?" he inquired almost steadily. "You're smarter than I thought, and a deal more crooked."

"Listen," the other said hurriedly. "I didn't like to do this, but there wasn't any way out of it. I've got a lot on my mind this morning, and you complicated matters. It may be that I'm saying your life. The mountain yonder looks as if he were about to blow his brains out, and I couldn't be interrupted until I get certain ladies safely aboard here from the town. As for the fascinating person you call Stembridge, he ma, be my guest, and he may not. I'll see you about that later on. He's been square as a plumb-line to me. You're a good man, Crusoe, and Breen is, too. Your lines are different, that's all. You'll get your five thousand that I promised to-day. Just sit tight, and call for anything you want. We'll be good friends yet. * * * Captain Negley, have Mr. Crusoe quartered pleasantly aft, and tell Macready to serve him with anything he desires. I'll be back with the ladies in about an hour. You'll of course have the ship keyed for a sprint to Fort de France."

Constable hurried down the ladder, and an instant later was again in the launch, which was aimed at the low-hanging pall, back of which lay the tortured city. It was now twenty-five minutes to nine. He could make the plantation house slightly after the hour.

It was but a moment from the pier to the carriage, and then the half-strangled ponies struggled gallantly through Rue Victor Hugo and up the morne toward the plantation house. Uncle Joey's rig was at the gate, good evidence that the mails had been brought.

Constable entered the house hastily at ten minutes past nine. There was a word of cheer upon his lips. No one was in the library or the music room; no one but a maid servant was on the lower floor. She was gathering up the litter of broken envelopes and newspaper wrappings upon the library table. Constable imagined that the maid servant regarded him strangely. He ran to the stairway and called:

"Are you almost ready, ladies?"

He heard footsteps above and low voices; then a door opened and Mrs. Stansbury crossed the upper hall and appeared at the head of the stairway. Already he was filled with a confusion of alarms.

"Pardon me for calling you, but everything is ready—as soon as you can come."

"We are not going on your yacht, Mr. Constable," the elder woman said coldly.

He sprang up the stairs and faced her in the dim light. Two or three times in his life he had become cold like this, some trait of his breed equipping him with an outward calm, when the issue of the moment was won or lost, but lifted from his hands.

"What is the latest difficulty, please?"

"I would rather not discuss the matter, Mr. Constable."

"May I speak with Miss Stansbury?"

It was not given to the mother to accede or refuse, for the door behind her was opened and the girl stood in the aperture, her anguished eyes intent upon him.

"I returned to announce that everything is ready," he said quietly, "and your mother tells me that you are not going."

"No, we are not going," she repeated in a lifeless voice.

"Is it too much for me to ask why?"

She did not answer at once, but seemed trying to penetrate his brain with her eyes. "Then, you have not seen the New York papers?" she said. "You may have this. The others are below."

She handed him the front page of a daily journal, dated three weeks before. His own name was there, and not in honor. When he looked up from the paper the door was shut. Constable went below.

"Where is Mr. Wall?" he dully inquired of the maid servant.

"He went out to the plantation, sir, immediately upon bringing in the mails."

"Where is Mr. Breen?"

"He went down to the city, sir."

Constable left the house and walked rapidly out the driveway, turning toward Saint Pierre. Here the man's pride intervened. He had committed a folly, perhaps, but no broad evil. The statements of the press were farcical. Lara Stansbury should not have allowed her mother and the New York reporters to shake her trust. With reaction piling upon him its most bitter and tragic phases, Peter Constable conceded his failure as a lover, and turned to his secondary passion—Pelee.

CHAPTER VIII.

Breen was not wholly unconscious of danger when the large bundle of New York papers was brought with the mails into the library. The ladies had busied themselves over a joint epistle from Mr. Stansbury, and were scanning the front pages of the journals, when a sudden exclamation from Mrs. Stansbury intimated the ugly truth. Breen was changed from guest to outlaw. Miss Stansbury followed her mother upstairs, the former bearing the paper with her. A second account of the demoralising incident was not difficult to find. Breen read the following hastily:

"The Madame de Stael, Mr. Peter Constable's splendid private yacht, cleared for West Indian ports this morning, having on board the young millionaire-owner and, it is alleged, Nicholas Stembridge, the notorious revolutionist, adventurer, and swindling promoter.

"The purpose in common of the capitalist and fortune hunter cannot be told. Mr. Constable has figured in the public prints on several occasions, but chiefly through his eccentric ideas of practical philanthropy. So far as is known, he has never before allowed himself to be subjected to the attention of the police. It is feared that he will lose at both ends as a result of his present affiliations.

"Mr. Constable's friends aver that the young millionaire could not have understood the character of his companion for the voyage, and point out that Nicholas Stembridge, at his best, is a man of fascinating manners and rre personal accomplishments. It has been added also that Mr. Constable is of a most impulsive temperament, and apt to choose his companions from queer arteries of society. The young man's innocent intent, however, might more readily be accepted, were it not for the important fact that Nicholas Stembridge, who is known to have been in hiding for several days in New York, was seen on board the de Stael shortly before she sailed; positively recognised, it is said, by an astute and reliable member of the local detective force."

A spirited description of the episode on the Brooklyn pier followed; also a portion of Nicholas Stembridge's police record. The conservative character of the paper in which the foregoing appeared led Breen to believe that the account which had fallen into Mrs. Stansbury's hand might be considerably more emblazoned and embellished. His first thought was that he had become a source of horror to the women, and that he must put himself out of their sight.

Breen was not a conscienceless man. A fatalist, a spendthrift, a power that preyed upon the powers that prey, a polished reveller—all these he might be, but his blood was clean from the taint of personal treachery. He had come to like Constable. The friendship was guileless. He had even thought, with a trace of humor in certain moments, that it was worth being called back from the Brooklyn pier for such a large and clear emotion. It is possible that he had never in his life been troubled as now, having brought a vital hurt to the man he wished only to serve. His face showed nothing, not even the heat of the day, as he left the house.

His own body had felt all, even the moral dissolution which crawls into the brain to prepare a place for the sinister guest, suicide. The law of cause and effect, unable to find any hold upon himself nor inspire any fear this side of death, had linked him with another, and made that other suffer through him. Breen was smitten with the ugliest punishment that clean fiber is given to writhe beneath—that of seeing a friend beaten to the ground by the rebounding volley of one's own sins.

Half way down the Morne d'Orange, he saw Constable's launch turn shoreward from the ship. Constable was probably aboard. Breen wasn't ready yet to meet the man he had hurt. He must think. Moreover, by no means did he ignore the possibility of the Panther bringing one of his logical enemies, nor was he ready to face an accumulation of consequences in the shape of a man hunter. He turned to the right at the base of the morne, and made his way up one of the winding paths to the terraced streets. That his steps led him to the fruit shop, where he had planned not to go again, seemed now but a paltry addition to the incubus which had so suddenly possessed him.

At the first terrace he turned and stared back through the smoke. The launch had just touched the pier at the Sugar Landing. The tall figure of Constable stepped forth and hastened to the carriage, which was driven rapidly toward the morne. Breen smiled, because it was easier for him to smile than to cry for mercy. Constable was being driven swiftly to the plantation house, where he would find the ugly work that had been done there. Mrs. Stansbury would not board a ship that had been a thief's refuge.

Rue de Rivoli was white and empty. The door of the shop was shut but not locked, and the little round window darkened with a cloth. Breen entered, slamming the door quickly, to keep out the hot, poisoned air of the street. The dark shop was as empty of humans as the thoroughfare, but a quick step sounded in the rear. Pere Rabeaut entered from the ash-quilted court.

"What a day, M. Breen! The birds are dead and dying. Soronia is ill unto death——"

"Soronia ill!" Breen said under his breath.

The old man hastened away. At the rear doorway, Soronia pushed by him. Her hair was unfastened, and the loose white garment that she wore was open at the throat. The father stared as if she were a specter. His lips moved, and he turned suddenly to the man standing in front of the shop. She moved toward the American.

Her eyes aroused him. The darkness had no power to divest them of expression, for the passions were burning there—fear lest this was not flesh which filled her gaze; ecstasy in that he was there at all, in life or death or dream. His act of yesterday had wrought the ghastly pallor; the deathly illness was heart-starvation. She touched his shoulder and his cheek with chilling hands; there fell from her lips strange, low words of no language that he knew. Suddenly she caught his hand to her breast, whispering that she had feared she was dreaming.

"What were you dreaming, little one?" he questioned.

"I thought I was dying when I heard your voice. You said—you said you would come no more."

"But did I not come, little fairy? Who could remain away from you?"

She seized his face in her cold hands, whispering, "Do you mean that you will stay?"

(To be continued.)

Loading Freight by Cards.

"I don't know whether the practice is still kept up in the far south, but I remember how tickled I was at seeing the method used in loading goods into freight cars down in Mississippi some while ago," said a railroad man of St. Louis.

"A lot of strapping black fellows will be on the job under the supervision of a white man, who will be issuing orders with great volubility. 'Put this aboard the king of diamonds; take this to the ace of hearts; load this on the ten of spades; this to the jack of clubs,' and so on, and then you'll notice each one of the long line of freight cars has tacked on it some one of the fifty-two cards composing a full deck. The Senegambian loafers for the most part were ignorant of letters and figures, but every man of them knew the pasteboard emblems which he had often handled in games of seven up. That next to craps is the chief diversion of the colored sports of Dixie."—Baltimore American.

The Reason.

"I was sitting in a crowded car today when Mrs. Nabor got on."

"Did she thank you for your seat?"

"Er—no."

"That's funny! She has such a reputation for being polite; I wonder why she didn't."

"She didn't get it."—Houston Post.

His Jonah Number.

Bleeker—Do you believe that thirteen is an unlucky number?

Meeker—You bet I do. My wife was the thirteenth woman I proposed to.

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfuly say I am cured. Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

Her Superb Disdain.

But there was one young woman in the box party at the theater who took no part in the noisy chatter and giggle.

With her gaze fixed upon the stage she watched the progress of the play, indifferent to the gayety around her, except that her delicate, aristocratic, finely chiseled features bore a look of weariness, and a scornful smile curved her lips.

At last, however, she turned her head slowly and looked at the other members of the party.

Then she spoke to the elderly matron sitting by her side.

"That girl in the blue kimono," she said, "thinks she's the whole custard!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Wisdom of the Serpent.

"Down in Bermuda," said a Cincinnatian, "I heard Mark Twain make a speech about snakes to a group of little girls. The speech was great. The only trouble was that the little girls could not appreciate it. It flew over their heads.

"I remember the humorist's conclusion:

"'Never warm a serpent in your bosom,' he wound up. 'It is far easier to warm it by placing it under the pillow of an intimate friend.'"

Are Your Clothes Faded?

Use Red Cross Ball Blue and make them white again. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

EXPECTANCY OF LIFE.

How Many More Years Do You Think You Will Live?

Of 100,000 male and female children selected at random, nearly one-tenth died the first month. The number living at the end of the month was 90,396. At the end of the second month 87,936 were living. At the end of the third 86,175; at the end of the fourth, 84,720; at the end of the fifth, 83,571; at the end of the sixth, 82,526, and at the end of the first year, 77,528. The next four years reduces the number to 62,448, which shows that 37,552 die before the completion of the fifth year.

At the end of twenty-five years 49,995 remain; at fifty-two years, 33,334; at fifty-eight and one-half years, 25,000; at sixty-seven years, 20,000; at seventy-six years, 10,000; at eighty-one years 5,000; while between that age and 100 all but ten die.

From statistics of insurance companies, it would appear that if a boy lives until he is 10 years of age, he may reasonably expect to live fifty years longer. At 15 he may expect to live 46.6 years; at 20, 43 years; at 25, 39.5 years; at 30, 35.8 years at 35, 32.2 years; at 40, 28.5 years; at 45, 24.8 years; at 50, 21.2 years; at 55, 17.8 years; at 60, 14.5 years; at 65, 11.6 years; at 70, 9 years; at 75, 6.3 years; at 80, 4.8 years; at 85, 3.4 years; at 90, 2.2 years.

Girls of 10 may expect to live forty-eight years. From this time until they are 40 their expectations are a little less than those of a man. From 40 to 53 a woman has a little better chance than a man, and at 53 both may expect to live 19.15 years. Then her chances diminish more rapidly than a man's until at 90 she may expect to live only 1.85 years longer.

FRIENDLY TIP.

Restored Hope and Confidence.

After several years of indigestion and its attendant evil influence on the mind, it is not very surprising that one finally loses faith in things generally.

A N. Y. woman writes an interesting letter. She says:

"Three years ago I suffered from an attack of peritonitis which left me in a most miserable condition. For over two years I suffered from nervousness, weak heart, shortness of breath, could not sleep, etc.

"My appetite was ravenous but I felt starved all the time. I had plenty of food but it did not nourish me because of intestinal indigestion. Medical treatment did not seem to help, I got discouraged, stopped medicine and did not care much whether I lived or died.

"One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Grape-Nuts, stop drinking coffee and use Postum. I had lost faith in everything, but to please my friends I began to use both and soon became very fond of them.

"It wasn't long before I got some strength, felt a decided change in my system, hope sprang up in my heart and slowly but surely I got better. I could sleep very well, the constant craving for food ceased and I have better health now than before the attack of peritonitis.

"My husband and I are still using Grape-Nuts and Postum." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 SHOES $3.50

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world, because they hold their shape, fit better, and wear longer than any other make.

Shoes at All Prices, for Every Member of the Family, Men, Boys, Women, Misses & Children

W. L. Douglas $4.00 and $5.00 Gilt Edge Shoes cannot be equalled at any price. W. L. Douglas $2.50 and $2.00 shoes are the best in the world

Fast Color Eyelets Used Exclusively.

Take No Substitute. W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on bottom. Sold everywhere. Shoes mailed from factory to any part of the world. Catalogue free.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 157 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N.Y.

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 35—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

AUGUST

L 903

0306

Hardware Suggestions.

Just a few seasonable articles to which your attention is called. You want them now or will need them soon. Here they are:

Granite Ware, Complete Line of Tinware, Tin Cans, Corn Cutters, Washing Machines, Cream Separators, Tubs, NEW FURNITURE

2 special bargains

A few articles of shop worn Furniture which will be closed out at cut prices.

Iron ware to be sold at an extra large reduction in price.

H. V. KINSEY & SON.

FAIRVIEW

Ira Bowen and wife spent Sunday with Will Keelers.

Mr. Gray Hay wife and baby spent Sunday at Edward Basset's.

Ralph and Letha Rolland are spending the week with their grandparents.

Harold Houser returned home Tuesday after an absence of over four months. His Aunt accompanied him.

Ethel Houser entertained as her guests Friday her cousins Elsie Houser of Huntertown and Wesley McBride of Tacoma, Washington.

Mrs. Dan Baker was the guest of her daughter Mrs. Gifford of St. Johns, Saturday and Sunday. They spent Sunday in Ft. Wayne.

SPENCERVILLE R. F. D. No. 1.

Henry Grill was married to Pearl Gmerich last week.

Miss Della Devilbis is visiting her Aunt Mrs. Frank Horn.

Mr. Will Cummins of Harlan is quite sick with blood poison.

Harry Grill returned home from Ohio where he had been working.

The Misses Margaret and Bertha Jenkins of Iowa, returned home last Friday.

E. L. Dilly returned from Peru last week where he had been visiting his daughter.

Miss Zona Horn with her friend Miss Reed of Texas visited Miss Minnie Nelson of Georgetown last week.

Last Friday, Randolph Slater of Lagrange took dinner with E. L. Horn and in the afternoon took a ride viewing the old home of the Slater's that John McNabb now owns and called on others that he once knew.

Nervous or Sick Headache will yield quickly to the influence of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. 25 doses 25 cents.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No 2.

Miss Eva Miller who has been quite sick is now able to be out again.

Corma and Vernie Kelly made a business trip to Hicksville Friday evening.

Harvie Kimes Jr., wife and children spent Sunday with her parents E. Fales and wife.

Miss June Volkert of Grand Rapids, Michigan was the guest of Pluma Kimes, Thursday.

Rev. Walters, wife and children took supper with her sister Mrs. Minnie Tyndall and family.

Clarence Kelley who has been working at Woodburn spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Lake accompanied by Mrs. Esther Schoffer of Auburn spent Sunday with Wm. Lyons and wife.

Mrs. Claud Shutt and children and Mrs. Minnie Tyndall and children spent Sunday with their Aunt, Miss May Provines of Auburn.

Ray McIntyre is on the sick list.

The following were Sunday visitors with Wm. Davis and family: Mr. and Mrs. Tony Snider and daughter of Harlan, Mr. Hunt of Kansas, Mrs. Lewis Davis of Huntington and Miss Effie Case of Hicksville.

Mrs. Lewis Davis of Huntington came Saturday evening to visit with her husbands parents, Wm. Davis and family. She returned home Sunday evening accompanied by her two sons, who have been spending the summer with their grandparents.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasion," writes Mr. W Stone, of East Portland, Maine. It is the proper thing too for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman drug store. 25c.

We are Now Ready

To show you the New Fall Wool Dress Goods—in the new Cheron Weaves, Herring Bone, self fancies, plain weaves, etc in the New Blues and Browns that are the thing for this fall Popular prices 50c to $1 25 and extra good values

Ladies and Gentlemen

New W L Douglas Fall Shoes in the Up-to-date Lasts and Leathers such as Browns, Oxfords and Patents Price $2 50 $3 00 and $3 50

School Shoes

We've never been able to show a better line of School Shoes than this fall; our Buster Brown Lines are the BEST HARD WEAR SHOE made, you'll make no mistake in insisting on getting the Buster Brown Shoe for your boy or girl. Prices $1.50 $1.75, $2.00

500 YARDS EXTRA FINE UNBLEACHED MUSLIN, YARD WIDE, AT ONLY $ .75 PER BOLT OF 25 YARDS. AN EXTRA GOOD BARGAIN.

We pay 20 cts. per doz for eggs.

The Big 4 Store.

MYSTERY OF DREAMS

Whence Come the Warning Visitors We See In Sleep?

TWO VERY PUZZLING CASES.

One Where Mother and Son Both Got Tidings of Disaster at the Same Time and One Where a Child Saw Her Father Saved In a Shipwreck.

Out of 149 dreams of a very striking kind investigated by one of the leading psychic research societies no fewer than seventy-nine related to a death, and perhaps the rarest of all these dreams is the case where two persons dreamed the same thing on the same night, and the episode came true. This striking instance is reported by the Rev. R. B. Elrington:

"A woman parishioner of mine," he says, "whose husband was a fisherman, at that time on the sea, dreamed one night in terribly vivid fashion that his little craft had been cut in two by the towering steel bows of a great liner. Her eldest son was with the husband, and as she woke she screamed out, 'Oh, save my boy, my boy!' This was remarkable enough, considering the sequel, but almost at the very moment the poor woman was in her distress, yet still asleep, another son was pounding at her door, half asleep and half awake, and crying, 'Oh, mother, where is father?' The terrified woman now rose and let the boy in. He was crying. He told her he had distinctly heard his father's heavy tread coming up the stairs and his ponderous kick with sea boots against the door, as had been his manner when returning abruptly from a long cruise. Next morning the alarmed mother and wife told all the neighbors, and before the day was out the dreadful news came that every detail of her dream was true. The little trawling lugger had been run into by a coasting liner, nearly cut in two and sunk with all hands, including her husband and son."

Premonitory dreams occupy a large part of the psychological records, and the following case is a very puzzling one: A Mrs. Spruit lived at Balmain, one of the suburbs of Sydney, Australia. Her husband was a sea captain in command of the Atacama, a wooden ship of 1,300 tons, which had arrived in Sydney in a leaking state and was picked up cheap by a firm known as Cowlishaw Bros. for $3,500. Twice as much was spent in repairs, and then the Atacama was sent up the coast with a cargo of coal. She delivered this and next set out for San Diego.

But when 500 miles out from Sydney she sprang a leak, and Captain Spruit decided to put back. In spite of the pumps the water gained, and soon there was a depth of eleven feet in the hold. Spruit now resolved to abandon the ship and launch the three boats. The captain himself, with one seaman, the steward, boatswain and an apprentice, was in the twenty-four foot lifeboat, while the rest of the crew, twelve in all, were in the other two boats. Heavy seas were running, and the boats were nearly swamped. As Spruit could not swim, he was nearly drowned. Some of his men were lost. Their situation was indeed fearful in boats half filled with water and exposed to a fierce gale 400 miles from land. Again and again was Spruit washed out, but at last his boat was picked up when its occupants were in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue, exposure and lack of food. A reporter of the Sydney Morning Herald called to interview the captain and found him barefooted, with terribly swollen legs, covered with severe cuts and bruises.

Now consider Mrs. Spruit's report to the Psychical Research society, which is most remarkable.

"Last Thursday week," she writes, "at 3 o'clock in the morning my thirteen-year-old daughter Lily came into my bedroom and woke me by a tap on my forehead. 'Oh, mamma,' she cried in a breathless whisper, 'I'm so frightened!' I tried to soothe her, but she only covered her face with her hands and whispered trembilingly: 'Oh, look! My papa's ship is all wrecked! Papa's come home all in rags, with his feet and legs cut, and I see two or three of his men drowned out of the boat.'

"I told Lily sternly it was all nonsense.

"'It isn't!' she said passionately. 'I've seen it in my dream, and I know it's all true!'

"But I coaxed her off to bed. The girl kept worrying about it until the next Sunday. A week after her dream my husband returned, and Lily found me crying when she came in from school.

"'Oh, mamma,' she cried sharply, 'is the Atacama wrecked?'

"I told her evasively her papa had come home.

"She was not to be denied, however, and asked, with strange persistance, 'Are papa's legs cut?'

"I said they were.

"And the very first thing she said to her father was: 'Why, you didn't have those clothes on when I saw you! The ones you had on were all torn in the shipwreck.'"

Lily Spruit herself furnished a report to the Psychical Research society. She said she woke in terrible fright, having seen every microscopic detail of the shipwreck and its sequel. She saw her father get into the big boat and keep close to his ship for some time. She watched his boat capsize and the boy Allen drown. What woke her, she said, was the howling of the wind about the wreck, and the last she saw was the other men pulling her father back into the waterlogged boat.—William T. Fitz-Gerald in New York Tribune.

WABASH CORNERS.

Harry Maurer, is sick at the home of Walter Moffett, in Auburn.

Mrs. Irvin Hadsell, of Peru, called on Mrs. O. K Shull, Friday forenoon.

Orange Herrick and son Ray and Rodgie Tryon, spent Wednesday at Auburn.

Horace Herrick and wife of Harlan, ate dinner Thursday with Orange Herrick and family.

William Wolff, of Edon Ohio, spent Thursday night with his brother Sherman Wolff and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Toby of Grand Rapids, Mich., spent Sunday night and Monday with Sherman Rickett.

Dan Knisley, wife and three children of Harlan, were the guests of Mrs. Rachel Knisley, last Sunday.

Dr. Shook and the stork were out Tusday evening and left a fine baby girl at the home of George Pervines.

Roy White and family went to Mongo, Indiana, Monday morning to be guests in the home of Walton Bradfield for a few days.

Deo Dermott, wife and baby of Coldwater Mich., spent Thursday with Emanuel Ulm's and wife, and J. R. Shilling and family.

Charlie Herrick, wife and three children of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio spent Thursday night with his brother Orange Herrick and family.

J. B. White and wife, and George Kinsey of St. Joe, Dennis Burley and wife, Gene White and family, and Mrs. Wm. Pervines, and daughter Pearl, were Sunday guests at Sherman Wolff's.

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, of West Franklin Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

Coburn's Corners

Miss Lena Coburn of St. Joe, took dinner with Anna Wilmot, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Trostel attended the Old Soldiers reunion at Sherwood, Thursday.

Alva Perry and family of St. Joe spent Sunday afternoon with Rev. Brown and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Abel spent Sunday with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Widney.

J. M. Milliman and family visited with Henry Milliman and family, north of St. Joe, Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Oberholtzer and daughter Elsie, of near Butler, took dinner with W. F. Maxwell and family, Thursday.

Nellie Blackburn and Lola Reichelderfer of Harlan, spent Saturday evening and Sunday as the guests of Mae Hamilton.

Mrs. J. N. Scholes and daughter Myrtle, who have been visiting relatives here, returned to their home at Newark, O, Tues.

Clyde Hart who has been seriously ill with remittent fever, is much better. It will be some time before he can be about but all are glad to know that he is on the way to recovery.

A pleasant evening party took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Hamilton, last Wednesday night. Besides a number of invited young people from the home neighborhood the following from a distance were present: Dio Dermott, wife and daughter of Coldwater, Michigan; Frank Rhoads and wife of Concord; Lela Shilling of St. Joe, and Nina Hadsell of Peru.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

A number from this way attended the yearly meeting at Butler, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clem Treece were guests of Fred Hart and family, Sunday.

There will be preaching at the Corners next Lord's Day, both morning and evening.

Mrs. Nina Hadsell and daughter Maurine, returned to their home in Peru, Sunday evening.

W. W. Hollopeter and family of Blytheville, Arkansas, arrived Tuesday for an extended visit with L. Gee and family.

NEWVILLE

The U. B Aid Society meet with Mrs. Bell Miller, Wednesday.

Ethel Miller of Waterloo, came Saturday to visit a few days with friends.

Jess Benner of Peru, Ind., visited Sunday at the home of Maurice Headley.

Mrs. Andrews of Auburn, is spending a few days at her farm, south of town.

Charles Thomas of Omaha, Neb., is visiting with old friends around Newville.

Frank Akins and wife of Detroit, Mich., is visiting relatives at this place.

Hazel Whitehurst spent a few days last week, at Auburn with her aunt, Mrs. C. C. Dean.

Mrs. Florence Conner and son of Hicksville, visited with Margaret Nichols, Wednesday of the week.

Alfred Smith of Bryan, Ohio, visited a few days last week, with his mother, Mrs. Philander Smith.

Several from this way went to Auburn, Friday, to hear the speeches of the governor and congressman.

Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Tarney and Mrs. Yarnel are at Warsaw, where they are attending the Winona conference.

Mrs. Ellen Clark of Hicksville, is visiting friends at this place.

Horace Enzor and family attended the Spangler reunion at Edgerton, Thursday.

Emma Young of Iowa visited a few days last week, at the home of Rufus McDonald.

There was no Sunday school at the Christian church, Sunday, on account of the Annual Meeting held at Butler.

The insurance agent was at Harry Weaner's, Saturday, adjusting the damage done to his barn by lightning.

At the Republican caucus held Wednesday, John Whitehurst was nominated trustee and Geo. Engle, assessor.

Grace Headley, who has been spending a couple of weeks with her parents, returned to her work in Peru, Sunday evening.

Clarence Wyatt and wife of Fairview, have moved in the house with Mrs. Charles Ryan. Mr. Wyatt will farm the place for Mrs. Ryan.

John Davis had the misfortune to get his arm broken, last Friday morning, while caring for his horses. Dr. Brunson was called to set the broken bones.

The following teachers of this place went to Auburn, Monday, to attend the Teachers Association; Herbert Webster, Ova Enzor, Goldie Hobbs and Grace Magginis.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 22.

St. Joe, - Indiana.

A Few Snappy Buys In Real Estate.

One store or office building in good condition; about 16 x 24 with good lot; located on the best part of Main street, near postoffice in Spencerville.

One four room house and a good business lot. A choice location in Spencerville. For sale at a low figure on terms or will give the purchaser a bargain for cash.

A fine 90 acre farm with black soil, level land and extra good improvements, located three miles from Spencerville.

One 90 acre farm with black soil and good buildings, located three miles from Hicksville. Will trade for Fort Wayne property.

One good 80 acre farm with fine soil and good improvements, near Kimmel, Indiana.

Eighty acres of land with a five room house, good barn, sheds and a fine bearing orchard. Located 4½ miles out of Oklahoma City, a city of 50,000 inhabitants, fifty miles of asphalt pavement, fine street car system and only 19yrs old

If you wish to purchase either or any of these places at bargains between now and September 1,

SEE

H. N. RUMMEL, at Spencerville, Ind.

AUGUST

0307
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS

SUPPLEMENT WEDNESDAY AUGUST 26, 1908

INSURANCE..

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

New Photo Gallery.

Commencing Tuesday September 1st., and each Tuesday thereafter, I will be at Photo Gallery at St. Joe. All work will receive same care and choice of materials as at my gallery at Butler, and will guarantee entire satisfaction both in quality and price. A. L. SPURGEON.

Local Briefs

Saturday, Sept. 5, is the date of the Davis and Baker Sale Watch for bills

Valparaiso University will open its Thirty-sixth year September 8th. This school makes it possible for every young person to obtain a thorough education. It not only offers a high grade of instruction, but also makes the expenses the lowest.

The singing of Miss Gladys Smith was the sensation of the Northern Indiana Log Rolling Association program at Auburn last Saturday. She was in good voice and received the most enthusiastic reception and favorable comment of any number given.

Chastine Johnston goes to Tiffin Ohio tonight to fill a concert engagement as special solo pianist on a recital program to be given by a professional dramatic soprano soloist from New York.

A special train will run over the Wabash to Toledo, September 2 on account of the G. A. R. encampment. The train will leave Spencerville at 6:29 a. m. and St. Joe at 6:34 a. m. Fare from St. Joe for the round trip $3.00. The day's program will contain many special attractions among which is Pain's celebrated military spectacle, Sheridan's ride at Bay View Park.

Wm. Knight

Passed Away at His Home Aug. 21st. 1908.

William Knight was born Jan. 2nd, 1832, in Marrow county, Ohio, and died in Concord Township, DeKalb county, Ind., Aug. 21, 1908. Aged 76 yrs. 7 mo. 19 days. The deceased came to Indiana with his parents in 1836, and located in this county. On the 22nd of Sept. 1853 he was married to Miss Mary Ann Miller, with whom he shared the joys and trials of life till Jan. 24th, 1883 when she departed this life. Their union was blest with twelve children, four of them having preceded him to the Spirit world. For years he was a member of the Concord M. P. church, but afterward transferred his membership to the Fairview class of which he was a charter member and when the church was built he furnished the ground besides rendering other substantial help. He remained a consistent member of the church till he was called to his eternal reward. He leaves to mourn their loss, one son, seven daughters, two brothers, three sisters, eighteen grandchildren, eight great grandchildren. Funeral was held in the Fairview M. P. church, August 24, 1908, conducted by Rev. S. Helsinger. Interment in the Concord cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

Aaron S. Watkins, candidate for Vice president on the Prohibition ticket will speak in the court house park in Auburn. Wednesday evening Sept. 2nd. The modern Woodmen band will furnish music and the "Hoosier Quartette" will sing. Every Prohibitionist in the county is urged to attend this meeting and others have a cordial invitation.

A. L. MOUDY, Dist. Chr.

Drink Moxie these days. It makes you eat better, sleep better and feel better. For sale at KAGEY'S

FOR RECORDER.

EDITOR NEWS:

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Recorder, subject to the Republican nominating convention. J. R. SHILLING.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

RESTAURANT

CHANGE.

Having purchased the Barney Restaurant I am now ready to do my best to please the people, by running a first class restaurant We desire to merit your trade and

You are Invited to make our place your headquarters A full line of candies, cigars, and all the staple articles a restaurant carries Lunches, Short orders and Ice cream

Come in and see us.

John Sechler,
St. Joe, Indiana.

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

A Party.

Mrs. Retta Hathaway and Mrs. Russia Langley gave a party at the latter's home, Monday evening in honor of their cousin, Miss Bonnie Seiler of Auburn. A number of invited young people were present and enjoyed the occasion greatly.

Institute.

The teachers from this way are attending the institute at Auburn this week. The attendance is good and the instructors are pronounced fine. Supt. Coe is unable to be present on account of sickness and Prof. Hippensteel has the convention in charge.

A public sale will be held on the John Koch farm two and one half miles north of St. Joe, Thursday, September 3. Samuel Squires is the propietor.

The Samuel Squires public sale will be held two and one-half miles north of St. Joe, Thursday, September 3.

Chas. Thayer spent Saturday and Sunday with friends at Rome City. He returned home Tuesday.

John Sechler has purchased Barney restaurant. He took charge Monday and is now endeavoring to serve the public in an acceptable way.

Keep cool by using our Ice Cold Drinks and Ice Cream at KAGEY'S.

Mr. Umstead of Harlan is the guest of his son William, today.

Come to the Lutheran church, tonight and hear Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley

Rolla Wiers of this place, visited with his sister, Mrs. Albert Schaaf of Ft. Wayne, Sunday.

The Sheffer reunion will be held Thursday of this week, at the home of Dr. B. S. Sheffer.

Frank Bishop of Garrett, was in town, Monday, and ate his birthday dinner at the home of his father.

Mrs. H. V. Kinsey and daughter Violet, spent Saturday and Sunday with W. E. Baxter and family at Garrett.

Mrs. C. A. Patterson, county president of the W. C. T. U. attended the county convention at Auburn, Tuesday.

FOR SALE:-Two young brood sows with pigs. One with nine, the other eight. Chester White and Poland China. DAVID ANDRESS. 35-3.

I have one New Superior nine hoe pin drill with grass seeder, also one second hand top buggy. Both will be sold cheap for cash.

D. J. BAKER.

Rev. J. C. McCain has been appointed to have charge of the St. Joe circuit of the Methodist churches. Mr. McCain has been a pastor here previously and has many friends in St. Joe and vicinity.

Mrs. Emma Hadsell and daughter Emma, of Ft. Wayne came to this place, Saturday evening and spent Sunday with Dr. Sheffer and family. They will remain in the vicinity a week visiting with relatives.

Shoes For Fall Wear

We now have our new fall line of shoes on the shelves and are making no boast when we say it is one of the most complete line of shoes in DeKalb county. "Seeing is believing", so come in and look.

Men's Shoes $1.50 to 4.50. Ladies Shoes 1.00 to 3.50

Children's Misses' and Boy's Shoes from 50 cents to $2.50
A waterproof working man's shoe at $4.00 that can't be beat.

See Our New Line of Soft and Stiff Hats for Fall Wear.

SOL BARNEY

AUGUST

0308

L 903

4 %

INTEREST

Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.

Three (3) Per cent

Interest paid on certificates of deposit if left for two months.

The above savings propositions are the most liberal of any banking house in DeKalb County.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.

Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid
$50,000

Security to Depositors
$100,000

Does a General Bank and Trust Business.
Has money to loan on Farm and City Property.

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Fred J. Nebelung Price D. West
George Shoner David S. Ober
Wm. B. Sible Monte L. Green
Fisher C. West

News Items

S. J. Bowen, wife and son Walter are visiting this week with Mrs. Nancy Widney.

Chas. Wilcox and wife of Cleveland, O., are spending the week with Chris Savlor and family.

Last Thursday, the threshing outfit of Wm. Gloy made six settings and threshed 968 bushels of grain.

Asa Shuff of Reading, Michigan, has been visiting several days with his parents. He expects to return tomorrow.

Mrs. Frank Henderson and daughter Lucile, of Allen, Mich., arrived Sunday morning to visit with relatives here and at Spencerville.

Rev C. S. Johnston and family of Tiffin, Ohio, came Saturday evening to visit with relatives. On Sunday evening he preached to a good sized audience in the M. P. church. They expect to return to their home today.

C. A. Woodcox was at Garrett, Monday.

O E. Tarbox of Butler was in town, Saturday.

Curtis Craun of Butler, was in town, Thursday.

Heinz's pickles in bulk, sweet and sour at KAGEY'S.

Jess Copp of New Haven spent Sunday at this place.

Hazel Perry left Saturday for Antwerp, where she will remain a week.

George Bleeks and wife returned from the Illinois visit, Saturday evening.

Jacob Amstutz of Harlan, was the guest of Wm. Umstead, Saturday and Sunday.

Elmer Hart is able to be about town after several weeks illness with typhoid fever.

Miss Zella Baker of Hicksville visited with the Andress and Monroe families at this place.

Freeman Miller and family of Pinkstaff, Illinois, are visiting the families of F. M. Monroe and David Miller.

Mrs. Otto Ginther returned Saturday evening from Ft. Wayne, where she had been visiting relatives for a couple of weeks.

Orangeville flour stands at the head of the list. Makes more and better bread; does not dry out or make coarse rough bread. At Barney's.

The U. B. Sunday school at Newville will give a picnic in Hamilton's grove, east of town, on Saturday, Sept. 5th. Preparations are being made for a jolly good time.

Miss Bertha Hart returned to South Bend today, after a weeks visit with her parents. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. W. Z. Hathaway and daughter Fern.

A large lamp has been placed at the B. & O. depot which lights up the platform and tracks for a considerable distance. This improvement makes it much more convenient for those getting on and off the evening trains.

Business College.

Many DeKalb County people owe their present position and standing in life to the training received in the International Business College of Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Twenty years of continued success has brought this school to rank among the highest of its class in the United States. Ft. Wayne is a great city, almost at your door, and many opportunities are to be had, if you possess a first-class Business Education.

Write for our large handsome catalogue.

Shoe Repairing.

First class work repairing shoes and boots. Will be at Sechler's lunch room every Monday. Leave work there. FRANK STEVENS, SPENCERVILLE, IND. 35-2.

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, of West Franklin Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at H. Milliman's drug store, 25c.

ANOTHER ONE.

My last letter chronicled our arrival at Glazier, Texas. This town is situated upon the Santa Fe railroad in Hipscomie county; the North East corner of the Pan Hanle. It is eighteen months old and about half the size of St. Joe. It is a great distributing point for goods, and shipping point for agricultural products. While I was there over 5,000 bushels of wheat were received in a single day. Among shipments I noticed twenty-eight car loads of broom corn. Such quantities of agricultural products from a sparcely settled country seems impossible perhaps, but remember this is a country of big distance. I talked with a man at the elevator from Oklahoma seventy miles away, he had wheat.

By the way, I will try to explain just what is meant by the term Pan Handle. It is situated in the north west corner of Texas; it is bounded on the north by Oklahoma and East and New Mexico on the west, it is 150 miles square and contains three-fifths as much land as Indiana. If the Handle has such generous proportions, how about the pan or the rest of the state. Well as the crow flies from Texline to Brownsville the distance is greater than from St. Joe to New York City and from Texarkana to Elpaso is farther than from Texarkana to Chicago, so the Pan Handle and the Pan is not so disproportionate after all.

The country around Glazier is a gently rolling plain until the banks of the Canadian river are reached, where it is quite bluffy and broken and is known as "The Brakes." Around Glazier the soil is a sandy loam producing fine corn, wheat, potatoes, onions, alfalfa, Kaffir corn, milo maize, corghum and cotton. Little of the latter however is cultivated. We drove about twenty miles west of Glazier to the Tandy ranch. This ranch comprises eighty-five sections in Schultree and Roberts counties with a frontage of twelve miles upon the Canadian river. It was from this ranch that Dr. W. H. Nusbaum of Auburn and Mr. Vorp of Van Wert, Ohio purchased twenty of the best sections and are cutting it into quarter sections and placing it upon sale. These lands are selling for from $7 to $25 per acre.

The soil is a dark loam from two to ten feet deep and so nearly alike that the difference between any two sections is hardly noticable. The depth of soil is so great that tile or even open drainage is wholly unnecessary, the greatest rainfall is readily absorbed and held by it. Water is abundant and of excellent quality, showing no traces of alkali, iron, sulphur, or gypsum. It is a little warmer than our Indiana wells in general, it is about like the fountain water on the court house yard at Auburn. It is found at about 130 to 200 feet any where. Road making is a simple matter. You can drive a dozen miles in any direction and never see a trace of work upon the roads and they are good.

The production of wheat, corn and oats will average higher than DeKalb county and requires much less labor and expense. One half bushel of wheat per acre is the amount of winter wheat sown and is sown from Oct. 1st to Dec. 1st. Plowing may be carried on every week in the year. When I was there wheat was selling at 93 cents the day I arrived and 91 the day I left. It was of the finest quality testing from 60 to 63 pounds, oats 45 cents, potatoes $1.00 to $1.25, eggs 15 cents.

One of the peculiar things is that no annual weeds grow in the fields. In a hundred acres of corn you can find no weeds of any kind except now and then a milk weed or some stalks of native grass which has not died out. Cultivation is only for retaining the moisture and they do little of it. Corn was not fired in the least, but it was pretty dry. Since my return I received word they had had two heavy rains since I left. I think the rain fall during the growing months is equal to our rainfall but is much less in the winter months.

The question is often ask why such a country has not been settled long ago. A glance at the map will show that Oklahoma bounds it on the north and east. Up to nineteen years ago Oklahoma was closed to settlement and there was no way of reaching the Pan Handle without passing across that then territory from the north and this was prohibited by U. S. troops or through the south and immigration to southern ports always has been small. Oklahoma now has a million people and the conquering of the last large tract of good land in the west is now on. There is another reason why the settlement has been delayed. Texas came into the Union as an independent nation and retained its public lands for its own use. There never was any land in Texas subject to homestead, preemption or soldier claims. Men do not buy land as long as they can get it free. I think these two facts sufficiently answer the question.

The climate, strange as it may sound is the most delightful I ever saw. Cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter. The elevation of 2,300 feet above the sea more than compensates for the difference in distance south. The air is pure, soft, bracing and invigorating with none of the oppressive heat of lower attitudes. Ninety degrees was the hottest day this summer. The nights are cool and you have use for a blanket any night. It is rare that Zero weather is reached in the winter. One surprising thing to me was the absence of insects and reptiles. In the three days on the ranch I saw, felt nor heard no mosquito, flea, bed bug or snake of any kind. House flies are not numerous and there is no green heads. Only one thing this country lacks and that is people and these are rapidly coming. Those now there are largly northerners. Germans and Swedes are also represented.

The wild animal life of the country is deer, antelope, coyote, jack rabbit, prairie dogs and ground squirrels. Not many of the three first named. Game birds are prairie chickens, quail and plover. In these letters I have written of the country exactly as I saw it and anyone visiting this section will find the country better than the description.

J. W. Sherer

Local Items.

For a change why not go to KAGEY'S and try a glass of Liquid Force.

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building. This roof is lightning proof.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,
Roofer & Tinner.

Bring Your LAUNDRY
TO
Milliman's Barber Shop
He sends every Wednesday to Hicksville.

Old papers at News office.

Harry Jenkins of Auburn, called on relatives here, Thursday.

Pauline Owen from Springfield, Ohio, visited Ralph Patterson, Saturday and Sunday.

Merritt Barney has purchased an automobile. It is a neat machine, large enough to carry five passengers.

Ern Jenkins has rented a berry farm east of Waterloo and with his family will move to that place, next week.

Prof. R. L. Dixon, wife and child of Ann Arbor, Mich. visited Thursday and Friday with friends in St. Joe. Mr. Dixon now holds a position as instructor in the medical department of the Michigan state university. He was at one time superintendent of the St. Joe schools.

PATENTS

and TRADE-MARKS promptly obtained in all countries, or no fee. We obtain PATENTS THAT PAY, advertise them thoroughly, at our expense, and help you to success.

Send model, photo or sketch for FREE report on patentability. 30 years' practice. SURPASSING REFERENCES. For free Guide Book on Profitable Patents write to 503-505 Seventh Street, WASHINGTON, D. C.

D. SWIFT & Co.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.
WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

0309
L 70

SEPTEMBER

SEPTEMBER

0310
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 2, 1908. NO. 36

Every Man of Means

Saved Some of His Money

He layed by in days of plenty that he might be able to meet his obligations in days of adversity. The secret of success is not so much in knowing how to make money as in knowing how to save it. A bank account makes a man feel more independent, he knows he has something to fall back on and learns to be careful of his savings. Suppose you save only $2 per week, it will amount to a considerable in time. Learn to be economical and deposit your savings with the

St. Joe Valley Bank.

CANNED GOODS

FOR THE SUMMER TABLE.

Just a few articles of canned goods, fresh and full of flavor that will help the meal wonderfully: Pink Salmon, Salmon Steak, Imported Fresh Mackrel, Herrings in Tomato Sauce, Pork and Beans, 5 and 10 c size, Vienna Style Sausage, Dried Beef in sealed glass jars, Cold Cooked Ham, Domestic and Imported Sardines, Extra Red Kidney beans.

DRESSINGS.

Horse Radish, Horse Radish Salad, Heinz Mandalay sauce, Prepared Mustard, Old English Worcester sauce, celery, salt, catsup

CHAS. F. KAGEY.

POST CARDS.

Until further notice I will make post cards for 50c per doz.

Here Every Day. Phone No. 20.

W. C. DeLONG, Photographer.

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

SCHOOL DAYS.

They will soon be here and with books, pencils, writing paper and pens, the boys and girls will be off to school. We desire to call attention to our line of

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for every purpose,

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

SCHOOL BOOKS and BAGs.

Republican Convention.

The republicans of the county met in convention at Auburn, Friday. The attendance was large, in the afternoon the Coliseum being so crowded that many were compelled to stand.

The convention was called to order by county chairman, J. W. Brown. Committees on resolutions, rules and organization were chosen. These committees retired. John Moorman of Knox, was called upon and made an address which was followed by an address by State Auditor Billheimer. Each of the speakers devoted much of the time to the local option question. Their addresses were well received and greeted with more or less enthusiasm.

After the calling to order after dinner the ladies quartette of Huntington with Miss Laura Rose as accompanist sang several songs that were heartily enjoyed and were encored twice. Philip S. Carper read the report of the committee on rules and organization which named Judge James E. Rose as the permanent chairman and J. Edgar Buchanan of Auburn for secretary with the republican editors of the county as assistants. They also provided for the order of bussiness. Upon taking the chair James E. Rose made a short but eloquent address full of wit and logic.

J. E. Pomeroy read the report on resolution which was unanimously adopted. Announcements were made for candidates as follows: Representative—J. W. Henderson, Auburn, and Chas. Arford of Stafford township. Clerk—Thadieus Thomas of Smithfield. Treasurer—Albert N. Thrush, Butler township. Sheriff—J. G. Philbrick of Keyser township. Recorder—J. R. Shilling and Franklin J. White of Concord township and R. C. Campbell of Wilmington township. Surveyor—B. L. Bailey of Union township. Coroner—E. K. Shurtz of Grant township. For commissioner southeast district—Solomon Shearer of Jackson township and I. M. Deihl of Stafford. For commissioner of Southwest district, T. F. Elson of Jackson township. This closed the nominations and the balloting for representative was commenced.

Henderson was made the party's nominee by a ballot of 216 to 58. The following nominations were made by acclamation as there was but one candidate for the office: For clerk, Thad Thomas; treasurer, A. N. Thrush; sheriff, Jack Philbrick; coroner, Dr. Shurtz; surveyor, B. L. Bailey; commissioner southwest district, Thos. F. Elson.

There were three candidates for recorder: Shilling, White and Campell. On the first ballot none of the three received the requisite number of votes. On the second ballot F. J. White of St. Joe, received a majority of the votes and was declared the nominee. In the vote for commissioner of the southeast district Mr. Deihl received the nomination over Mr. Shearer, the present incumbent.

The Huntington Ladies quartette created a wave of enthusiasm in the convention with their singing. They were talented singers and sang songs about the democrats that touched the funny spot of the republican delegates.

Road Expert.

It is probable that M. O. Eldridge a governmental good road expert will speak on one of the days of the Free Fall Exhibit. He is sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture in the interests of better roads. He was heard at Columbia City a short time ago and four hundred people listened to his talk. The people of DeKalb county should not fail to hear this man who understands the art of successful road building as it is a subject in which a large majority are interested.

Local Briefs

Miss Emma Hadsell returns to Ft. Wayne, today after spending some time visiting with friends and relatives.

Herm Grubb and family of New Haven, passed through here early Tuesday morning in their automobile enroute from Hamilton lake, where they had been since Saturday.

Miss Eva Ridgway returned Tuesday from Republic, Ohio, where she had been visiting with friends since Sunday.

A street lamp has been placed on 4th street by Dr. Lake and William Leighty.

Eight new cement crossings are being placed this week, in the streets about town. This will greatly improve the streets.

Better have that cement water tank put in now. Henry Milliman will do it right. Phone 76 12. 36-2.

Mrs. W. E. Baxter of Garrett, came Monday to assist in caring for her mother, Mrs. Kinsey, who has been quite sick.

Milliman & Son built a twenty-five barrel cement water tank for Emilus Case, Monday.

William Maxwell left a small branch off from one of his peach trees at our office, this week. It contained thirty good sized and nicely colored peaches.

Cucumbers for pickles, by the bushel. Order at once. Phone 76-12. 36-2 MILLIMAN & SON.

Miller Family in Reunion.

The Miller family met in reunion, Thursday, in the Will Miller grove, west of St. Joe. The day was a very pleasant one and eighty-three were present to enjoy the day's program. The forenoon was spent in visiting and renewing acquaintances. At the noon hour a big dinner was served on tables made purposely for this occasion.

After dinner a program was carried out. Speeches were made by Freeman Miller, of Pinkstaff, Ill., John Smith, Marshall Andress, Ira Bowen and others. Vocal and instrumental music was furnished by the two daughters of John Miller, also a song by Miss Groover. Music was given by other members of the family, making the program a most enjoyable one.

The business meeting was held after the program and officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Abner Miller; Vice Pres., John Miller; Secretary, Goldie Miller; Treasurer, Orval Miller. The reunion then adjourned to meet at the same place next year.

School Opens.

School will open Monday for an eight months term with the following efficient corps of teachers to impart instruction: Prof. Ely, of Fayette, Ohio, Principal. Miss Provines, of Auburn, Grammer, C. C. Woodcox Intermediate, Mrs. Nettie Baker, Primary. St. Joe can well pride herself on her excellent schools. The standard will be maintained and pushed even higher this year. The standard High School course is the only complet High school course in the township and students can complete a High School education here. The large Alumni society of our High School is composed of many young men and women who are well up in educational work and in the other walks of life. Parents wanting their children to receive instruction of a high standard please bear in mind that our schools afford this standard.

Commendatory.

The following is a clipping from the Tiffin, Ohio, Tribune which shows the reception our hustling music teacher, Mr. Johnston receives at the hands of strangers:—The Mid Summer concert given at the Methodist Protestant church, Wednsday evening by Miss Marie Marguerite Miller, soprano of New York and Prof. Chastine Johnston, pianist of St. Joe, Ind. was a rare treat to lovers of good music. Miss Miller has a rich soprano voice and sang a number of selections in a manner that proclaimed her an artist, Ich Liebe Dith by Greig and The Lark now Leaves his Watery Nest by Parker being her best selections. Prof. Johnson is a pianist of great ability, his musical skill and excellent execution making his playing a treat. His left handed solo Zxywotusrpqo by Soghkalinski being the feature of the evening program.

Farewell Party.

A farewell suprise party was given Ralph Patterson at the parental home, Monday evening. About thirty guests were present from in and out of town. The evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. A number of choice recitations and musical selections were given and other social events enlivened the occasion. Ice cream and cake were served as refreshments. Ralph will go to Springfield, Ohio, Monday to take up his second year's work in Wittenberg College.

RECITALS. Butler M. E. Church Friday Night. Newville Christian church Saturday night. Auburn Coliseum Sept. 12, All 8:15 p. m. Chastine Johnston.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO—

THE BEST OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Best Staple AND Fancy Groceries

By the best we mean everything that is good. When you buy from us staple or fancy you get the best. Whether you phone your order, send the children, or come personally, your order receives the same careful attention, and you get the best we have. There is some satisfaction in that—don't you think?

Soap.

The only place in town to get 8 bars of good soap for 25c

OLD MILL SOAP

...As good as the Best...
"That's Sufficient."

Pure Spices.

Mustard seed, all spice ginger, cinnamon mustard, cloves.

Pure Cider Vinegar.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Sheffer Family Hold Reunion.

The Sheffer family met in their eighteenth annual reunion at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Sheffer in St. Joe, last Thursday. After a bountiful dinner, the guests listened to a short program of addresses, recitations and select readings interspersed with music, both instrumental and vocal.

The business session was called after the evening lunch and after reading letters from Mrs. Rosa Sheffer Davis, of Knox, Ind., and Mrs. Ida Sheffer Pike, of Cedar Run, Mich., sending greetings and regrets at not being able to be with the family at this time. A letter of sympathy and condolence to Mrs. G. M. Davis and family was adopted on account of the death of their husband and father. The following officers were elected for the coming year. For President, Clark Sheffer of Helmer, Ind.; Secretary and Treasurer, Ora Sheffer of South Bend, Ind. Those present from out of town were; B. R. Sheffer and wife, Wm. Golden, wife and son Frank, of Kendallville; Miss Ora Sheffer of South Bend, Ind.; Roy Sheffer of Albion; W. H. Sheffer, wife and daughter Ethel, and granddaughter, Ruth Pulver, S. E. Sheffer, Waldo Sheffer and wife of Angola; Clark Sheffer wife and two daughters, Joy and Margaret, of Helmer; S. S. Sheffer of Bucyrus, Ohio; Earl Sheffer of Toledo, Ohio; J. R. Knight, wife and daughter of Fairview, and Craig Sheffer of Waterloo.

Most of these remained over until the next day and expressed themselves as well paid for their attendance and fully determind to always attend these reunions.

For a nice white flake loaf use the Orangeville flour at Barney's.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, administrator of the estate of William Knight deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
August 28, 1908. Administrator.
John W. Baxter, Atty.

Parlor Meeting

The W. C. T. U. held a parlor meeting last Wednesday afternoon, at the home of C. A. Patterson. Besides the regular members a number of visitors were present. After the opening exercises, Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, state vice president and lecturer of the W. C. T. U. delivered a fine talk on what had already been accomplished by the organization and also what they expect to accomplish in the future. A number of new members were gained for the local union. Light refreshments were served.

Rebekah Reception.

Friday night after the regular lodge session the Rebekahs gave a farewell reception to Mrs. Edna Jenkins and Mrs. Cadmir Woodcox. Mrs. Jenkins will shortly go to their new home near Waterloo and Mrs. Woodcox will go to Garrett. A goodly number of the members were present. The time was spent in a social way and a well prepared lunch was served. The favors of the evening were full roses to each guest, presented by the Noble Grand, Mrs. Pluma Hamilton. Those who were present pronounce the evening an unusually pleasant one.

John Sechler,

St. Joe, Indiana.

Next Monday

The school bell will ring the first time to announce the beginning of a new term. Between now and that time, the children will be equipping themselves for the school work, and will be all ready early Monday morning waiting for the teacher at the schoolhouse door.

New School Supplies.

This week we are showing a new line of
Tablets, Pencils and Erasers,
Pens and Ink, Colored Crayons,
Examination paper and School bags.

Get your Supplies Here.

SEPTEMBER

U311
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - - Publishers

1908 SEPTEMBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 3rd — F. M. 10th. — L. Q. 17th. — N. M. 25th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Thirty Miners Suffocated.

More than thirty miners were suffocated in Hailey-Ola coal mine, No. 1, at Haileyville, fourteen miles east of McAlester, Okla., when fire destroyed the hoisting shaft and air shaft and cut off air from the men below. Twenty-eight dead bodies have been removed from the mine following a three hours' successful battle with the flames. Explorations in the channels revealed that none of the men met death by burning, but that all of them were suffocated. It is impossible yet, for the rescuers to get far from the base or the main shaft, and it probably will be twenty-four hours before a thorough search of the entire mine can be made. Some of the channels are three-quarters of a mile long. The Hailey-Ola is owned by Dr. H. W. Hailey, James Elliott and a number of Chicago and St. Louis capitalists. The property loss may reach $50,000.

Augusta, Georgia, Under Water.

The floods in the Carolinas and Georgia culminated in the breaking of the big dam six miles from Augusta, which diverts the water from the Savannah river into the canal at that point. The great flood of water let loose soon found its way into the city and from Fifteenth street to the eastern boundary of Augusta is under from six to twelve inches of water, which is gradually rising. The big bridge across the Savannah river went down in the rush of water and the dam at the locks, seven miles above the city, collapsed adding to the flood. Estimates place the financial loss close to the half million mark.

Seven Men Killed by Falling Wall.

Seven men were killed by the collapse of a brick wall on which they were working in Chelsea, Mass. Without warning a thirty-foot wall went down and buried a score of workmen in the ruins. The building was being erected on the site of one burned in the fire of last April. Three bodies were taken out in the first half hour and fifteen men, more or less injured, were removed to the United States Marine Hospital, where it was reported that several would not recover from their hurts. Nearly all the workmen were foreigners.

Big Fire in Philadelphia.

Fire destroyed the building of the Overbrook Carpet Company on the outskirts of Philadelphia, Pa. About a dozen firemen were injured when a wall fell. Only one was seriously hurt, however, District Engineer Vollinger being taken to a hospital with a broken leg. The loss is estimated at $350,000.

Count Tolstoi is Near Death.

The St. Petersburg newspapers state that Count Leo Tolstoi's condition is very grave. He has been suffering for some time past with dilation of the veins of his feet, which more recently became complicated by an attack of influenza. He is suffering greatly from weakness.

Waukegan Postoffice Robbed.

Safe blowers cracked the safe in the postoffice at Waukegan, Ill., and got away with all the money and stamps and everything of value in the office. It is believed the haul will net the robbers between $1,000 and $2,000.

Hoosier Horse Wins Famous Race.

The American trotting handicap of $50,000 was won by Allen Winter at Readville, Mass.; Prince C, second; San Francisco, third; Ralph Wick, fourth; The Huntsman, fifth; Peter Balta, sixth. Time 2:46.

Leader of Riot Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Kate Howard, one of the leaders in the recent riot in Springfield, Ill. committed suicide by swallowing acid while being placed under arrest. She died as she was being led into the jail.

Troops Leave Springfield.

The Seventh Infantry, I. N. G., the last complete regiment to remain on riot duty at Springfield, Ill., has left for Chicago. No excitement attended their departure.

Narrow Escape from Fire.

Fifty persons narrowly escaped death, half a dozen were overcome by smoke, one woman was injured and a child seriously burned as a result of a fire in a three-story tenement building in Cleveland, Ohio.

Tony Pastor is Dead.

Antonio (Tony) Pastor, the theatrical manager, died at Elmhurst, N. Y., after an illness of several weeks. He was 71 years old.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

A CONDENSED RECORD OF THE EVENTS OF SEVEN DAYS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

LEPER FOUND IN WASHINGTON.

Discovery of Diseased Pension Applicant Causes Alarm in Capital.

Washington is greatly agitated over the discovery of leprosy in the city. A victim of the scourge has been stalking the streets, eating in lunchrooms, riding in street cars and generally rubbing elbows with the residents for five days. By accident his condition was discovered when a physician was called to treat him for a trifling illness. The plague victim is John R. Early, whose home is in Lynn, N. C., and who as a veteran of the Spanish-American war came to Washington to apply for a pension. He is 35 years of age and has a wife and one child. Upon his arrival Early rented a room in a cheap boarding-house on Pennsylvania avenue, and then proceeded to see the town. For days he moved around untrammeled. On Friday, however, he called in a physician, who, upon seeing the patient, immediately pronounced him a leper. The local health authorities were summoned without loss of time and hastily transferred the victim to a detention tent on the outskirts of the city. There he is held under guard. Apprehensive that the scourge may have been spread by Early the authorities are keeping a vigilant watch for developments.

FIGHT WITH HAMMERS.

Two Men Fight Till Arms Are Broken.

A dispatch from Keota, Okla., tells of a four-handed fight in a blacksmith's shop at that place, in which two of the participants, Sam Shores, Sr., and Sidney Stockton, received wounds which probably will cause their death, and the others, Sam Shores, Jr., and Boss Laflore, were badly wounded. The weapons used were heavy sledge hammers. The fight originated at the trial of a civil suit before a justice of the peace, whose court room is on a floor above the blacksmith shop, in which Shores, Sr., and Stockton were the principals. After fighting their way down the stairway and into the shop the two men were joined by Laflore and the younger Shores. Then for ten minutes the fight waged fiercely, several times the men being knocked to the floor by blows of the sledges. For the larger part of the time the two elder men fought after each had suffered a broken arm. Although several hundred spectators gathered they were powerless to end the fight until the men were exhausted.

KILLED IN FIGHT WITH POLICE.

Footpads Attempt to Hold Up Detectives Searching for Them.

Detectives Harry Hayes and Andrew Crummy of the Minneapolis police engaged in a deadly revolver battle with two bandits who have been terrorizing South Minneapolis. Walter Miller, one of the bandits, was fatally wounded, and died in a hospital. The other bandit escaped, though it is believed he also was wounded. Miller, whose home is at Fort Madison, Iowa, refused to tell the name of his pal. Neither of the detectives was hurt. The detectives were searching for the bandits when the tables were turned and the highwaymen attempted to "hold up" the officers. At least twenty shots were fired.

Six Dead in Ranch Fire.

Six children are dead and two others are burned so seriously that recovery is doubtful as the result of a fire at the H. W. Schultz ranch, between Colfax and Palouse, Wash. Four of the dead children were those of Schultz and two were those of W. W. Fox, a brother-in-law. The men were away harvesting and the mothers were attending a theatrical performance.

Auto in River; Two Escape Death.

William H. Winney and John Ginsberg were speeding in Mr. Winney's touring automobile along the Mouse river near Minot, N. D., when the steering gear of the car became unmanageable and the machine headed for the 20-foot embankment. Both jumped in time to escape being carried over with the machine. The automobile went to the bottom of the river.

Lake Shipping Increases.

Five big lake freighters which have been idle since navigation opened went into commission the other day. The increased activity in ore shipping by the United States Steel Company gives some of the independent boats a chance for cargoes and the grain trade will begin in a few days. Vesselmen predict a busy trade on the lakes.

Candidate Kills His Rival.

Henry Frecka was killed in Ironton, Ohio, by Robert Frowine, a rival candidate for Republican Central Committeeman. The two men met on the street and Frowine was seen to draw his revolver and commence shooting. He was arrested at his home.

John V. Farwell Dead.

John V. Farwell, Sr., founder of the dry goods house which bears his name, and one of the pioneers of Chicago, died at his home in Lake Forest Thursday.

More Large Battleships.

Two more British battleships of the Dreadnaught type will be launched in the next few months and work will soon begin on two others of the same class.

Negro Strike-Breaker Shot.

Anthony Davis, a negro non-union miner, whose house at Pratt City, Ala., was destroyed by dynamite Wednesday, was fired upon from ambush near his home and fatally injured. Davis has been working steadily since the strike.

Highwayman Gets $12,000.

A lone highwayman in Yellowstone Park held up eleven coaches one at a time and secured over $12,000 in booty, the law forbidding the carrying of weapons by tourists aiding his work.

NIGHT RAIDERS FIRE TOWNS.

Forced to Let Firebugs Escape in Order to Fight Flames.

Revenge for the arrest of several suspected horse thieves is believed to be the cause of the attempt to destroy the towns of Lowry and Akaska, S. D., by night raiders at an early hour Monday morning. Both towns narrowly escaped being wiped out by fire. All the buildings are of frame structure and furnished good fuel for the flames. The towns are in Walworth county on the river extension of the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad and only a few miles apart. Lowry was the first town raided. A general merchandise store was fired by the raiders and the flames spread rapidly to adjoining buildings. Seven masked men were seen riding away, but no attempt was made to follow, for the town was in danger of being destroyed. While the citizens were fighting the fire a telephone message was received from Akaska asking for aid and stating that the town had been fired. Similar messages were received at Hoven and other nearby towns. Six buildings were destroyed in each town, including the Farmers' State bank at Lowry. The hotel at Akaska was one of the burned buildings. No robberies are reported. The loss probably will reach about $100,000.

LOOT WAUKEGAN POSTOFFICE.

Thieves Perpetrate Daring Burglary and Get $3,000 Plunder.

Dynamiters descended the other night on the Waukegan (Ill.) postoffice and in a spectacular raid carried off everything of value the place contained. Forcing open the safe they found plunder worth $3,000 in postage stamps and cash. They sawed their way into the office through a stairway, the top of which rested on the ceiling, and dropped twelve feet to the floor. The way in which the safe had been opened mystified the postmaster, Charles G. Watrous, when he arrived in the morning. Dynamite had been used, but the locks had been turned as neatly as if the burglars knew the combination. A fresh supply of stamps had just been received by the postmaster and the police are working on the theory that the daring robbery was committed by some one who had a knowledge of this fact. A widespread man hunt was began at once following the discovery of the robbery.

BURIED HIS LIVING FATHER.

Now the Old Man Is Trying to Have Son Arrested.

Tiring of carrying his grandchild, Samuel Reed, aged 65, tried to shift his burden to his son, Rover W. Reed, aged 27, its father, while they were walking to Tyrone, Pa., and a quarrel between the two followed. The son struck the father on the head with a stone, knocking him down the bank of Tipton run and into the stream. When he found the old man bleeding from the nose, mouth ears and eyes, he thought he had killed him, and, to conceal the crime, buried him under sand and leaves. Some hours later the old man recovered consciousness and crept from his cerements. He came to Altoona, reported the assault to the police, and they are looking for Rover.

Girl of Ten Commits Suicide.

The 10-year-old daughter of John Stoltz committed suicide at Arthur, S. D., shooting herself with a double barreled shotgun. She evidently had contemplated the deed for some time, having made diligent inquiry as to details. Andrew Gogoloin, who committed suicide several months ago, had owned the gun with which the girl slew herself.

Frees Boys for Spanking.

On condition that the boys get a sound spanking United States Commissioner Mitchell in St. Louis released Sam Bogerslaw, 9 years old, and David Schwartz, 15, charged with passing counterfeit money. The parents promised Mr. Mitchell that the order would be executed and the prisoners were discharged.

Son Born to A. J. Beveridge.

A son has been born to Senator and Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, who are stopping in Manchester, Mass., for the summer. Mrs. Beveridge, who was Miss Catherine Eddy before her marriage, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus N. Eddy of Chicago and a niece of Marshall Field.

Frost Nips Corn in Iowa.

Jack Frost made his first visit of the season to Iowa Sunday night. Early reports indicate that in the lowlands of Northern Iowa corn got more of a nipping than is good for the crop at this time of the year, but the full extent of the damage cannot be told at this time.

Feud Ends in a Death Duel.

George Britton and Frank Davis met at the Louisville & Nashville depot at Shawnee, Tenn., and engaged in a duel. Britton was shot five times, the fifth bullet penetrating his heart and killing him instantly. Davis is not expected to live. The shooting was the result of a feud.

Custer Design Accepted.

The design of William O. Potter for an equestrian statue of Gen. George B. Custer, who was killed in the battle of the Little Big Horn, to be put up at the Custer home in Monroe, Mich., has been accepted.

Alabama Bank Cashier Gone.

Cashier N. A. Alston of the Bank of Stevenson, Ala., has mysteriously disappeared, and it is alleged that he is short in his accounts from $20,000 to $24,000. It is alleged that his downfall is due to his having gone beyond his means in following the stock market.

Finances Are Improved.

A decided improvement in financial conditions is shown by the reports of national banks, says Acting Comptroller Kane in Washington.

HONESTY OUTWEIGHS HUNGER.

Penniless Men Find Woman's Lost Fortune and Return It.

Mary Viotilla appeared at central station in Pittsburg the other day and distractedly announced that she had lost her hand satchel, containing the savings of many years, two $50 notes, a bank book showing $800 deposits, a passport and a ticket to Italy. She intended to sail in a day or two, and was frantic over her misfortune, declaring that if the money could not be found she would drown herself. A few minutes later B. R. Burgoon and E. J. Carter entered the station and handed the satchel to Sergeant Charles Lanker. The men explained that they had been in the postoffice and had found the satchel on a desk, where it had been left by the owner after writing a letter to her friends. The finders of the money said they were both hungry, out of money and looking for work, but concluded that some one who needed the money more than they did had lost it, and so turned it over to the police. Later the owner received it with tears of joy and insisted on rewarding the finders with a present of $50.

HEART IS STITCHED UP.

Man with Lung Gone, Three Ribs Broken and Pneumonia Will Live.

With six stitches in his heart, to close a gaping stab wound, with his left lung consumed by tuberculosis, with three broken ribs, suffering from pneumonia, Luther Johnson, a negro, is convalescing rapidly in a hospital in Washington, confident that in a few days he will be discharged. The operation upon the heart was performed by Dr. Charles W. White, visiting surgeon. The patient was brought to the hospital by the police after an affray in which he was stabbed. Dr. White quickly determined that an immediate operation was imperative. To reach the heart it was necessary to break three ribs, which were laid back. The heart was raised slightly and six stitches were taken in it. While the cavity was open it was noticed that the man's left lung had disappeared and that he had a slight attack of pneumonia. The operation was performed in eighteen minutes.

POOR GIRL HEIR TO MILLIONS.

Restaurant Cashier Entitled to Part of Soldier's $50,000,000.

Miss Flossie E. Singleton, cashier in a restaurant on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, has received word that she is one of the heirs of Joseph Ball, a Revolutionary soldier, whose estate is said to have accumulated until it amounts to $50,000,000. "This seems altogether too good to be true, of course," said Miss Singleton "In fact, I do not even know my great-grandmother's name. What would I do with a few million dollars? Well, it will be time enough to talk about that when I find some evidence that the money is coming my way." The Ball estate is said to comprise now $1,850,000 in cash and some 5,250 acres of land, containing iron, in Meadville, Pa., and other towns in Pennsylvania and the Carolinas, Kentucky and Virginia.

CLEVELAND TRACTION PAYING.

Report for July Shows First Surplus for Municipal Company.

The Municipal Traction Company of Cleveland made $19,096 clear in July. The gross earnings for the month were $437,174, or 22.81 cents per car mile, leaving the net earnings of $154,511, or 8.06 cents per car mile. The taxes, interest, rental and dividend requirements amount to $134,815, or 7.03 cents per car mile. This leaves the surplus of $19,696, or 1.03 cents per car mile. This is the first surplus the company has shown since it took over the lines. The deficit for June was $23,829 and for May $54,916.

Threaten to Lynch White Man.

James Cartwright, a white man who, it is charged, shot and killed his wife at their home near Conway, Ark., several days ago, was removed from the county jail and hurried to Little Rock to prevent summary punishment being meted out by a mob of farmers.

Kern Knows of Nomination.

John Worth Kern was notified formally at Indianapolis of his nomination for Vice President by the Democratic national convention and replied outlining the issues. W. J. Bryan made a speech, discussing trusts and analysing Taft's speech of acceptance.

Can't Go Fishing; Boy Ends Life.

Piqued because he was refused a trivial request, John, the 14-year-old son of Mr. Calkins of Ekalaka, Mont., committed suicide at Belle Fourche, S. D. The boy wished to go fishing, and when his mother said no, he went to his room and put a bullet in his brain with a rifle.

Bull Wrecks Train; Four Dead.

Four persons were killed near Eugene, Oregon, when the Cottage Grove local train of the Southern Pacific struck a bull on the track and was piled up in the ditch.

State Militiaman Surrendered.

Private Joseph B. Klein of the Illinois National Guard, who killed Earle Nelson in Kankakee, has been surrendered to the civil authorities and immediately gave bond.

Gold Medal for Aeronaut.

Wilbur Wright, the aeronaut, was presented with a gold medal for himself and one for his brother at a luncheon given by Baron d'Estournelles de Constant at Clermont, France, yesterday.

Joy Kills Gen. Miles' Sister.

Overcome by the excitement and joy of meeting her brother, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, whom she had not seen for a number of years, Mrs. Mary Jane Merriam, 77 years of age, died of heart disease at her home in Leominster, Mass.

BRYAN FLAYS TRUSTS AS KERN IS NOTIFIED

Head of Ticket Charges Abuses of Corporations to Inaction of Republican Party.

GREAT COLISEUM IS CROWDED.

Huge Concourse of People Sees Parade and Attends Ceremonies in Hoosier Capital.

Indianapolis correspondence:

John Worth Kern, Democratic candidate for Vice President, was notified formally Tuesday of his nomination. The meeting was held in the elaborately decorated Coliseum at the State fair grounds and was attended by many thousands of people, regardless of party, attracted by the noted speakers on the program. The weather was ideal, clear and cool, with a pleasant breeze that swept over the grounds.

While the notification of Mr. Kern was the occasion, William J. Bryan was the central figure in the proceedings. The Nebraskan delivered an important speech on trusts. He charged the Republican party with responsibility for the growth of harmful corporations. He contrasted the platforms of the two parties, contending that while the Republican platform was evasive on the subject, the Democratic platform was specific. He asserted that Mr. Taft's speech of acceptance was weaker than the platform.

JOHN WORTH KERN.

Traction Lines Crowded.

Ten traction lines and fourteen railroads brought the people on regular and special trains to the ceremonies. Five hundred cars transported the crowd from the city to the fair grounds and back. The Coliseum, recently built of brick and steel, holds 15,000 people and arrangements were made early in the day to hold overflow meetings if necessary. Mr. Bryan and other speakers, members of the notification committee appointed at the Denver convention, members of the national committee, headed by Norman E. Mack and others of the official party, arrived Monday night and on early morning trains. A conference was held Monday night between Mr. Bryan, Mr. Mack, Mr. Kern, members of the national and congressional committees and others, at which campaign matters were discussed.

The morning hours Tuesday were devoted to conferences by party leaders, while a band concert at the Denison Hotel assisted in amusing the crowds that poured through the corridors. Later a reception was held by Mr. Bryan and Mr. Kern in the hotel parlors.

Drive to the Fair Grounds.

The program for the day included luncheon at the hotel by the speakers and members of the national and notification committees, after which the official party was driven to the State fair grounds in automobiles, Mr. Bryan Mr. Kern and Chairman Bell of the notification committee riding together.

The ride through the city to the fair grounds was through the principal business streets and past the Kern residence. The doors of the Coliseum were thrown open to the public several hours before the exercises began.

Thomas Taggart, national committeeman from Indiana, had been selected to call the meeting to order. He immediately handed the gavel to National Chairman Mack, who introduced Theodore E. Bell of California, chairman of the notification committee, who formally notified Mr. Kern that he had been selected by the Democratic party to go on the national ticket with Mr. Bryan. The Vice Presidential nominee in his speech of acceptance asserted that the people do not rule because their will has not been given effect by the party in power.

NUBBINS OF NEWS.

A strike which will affect from 25,000 to 30,000 workers, including 10,000 women, is being planned by the cloakmakers in New York, owing to the low wages now being paid, which run from $3 to $8 a week.

John Summers, alias Frank Engle, and Theresa Ziler, alias Mrs. Engle, were arrested in Pittsburg charged with the murder of Mrs. Ziler's husband in Milwaukee almost two years ago. The couple have been in Europe since the crime was committed.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

The indications of recovery in business activity appear to be well sustained. Further decline is seen in the comparative shrinkage in volume of payments through the banks, and there is increasing demand for industrial outputs and heavier operations in general merchandise.

Dealings in leading retail lines run close to the aggregate at this time last year; the buying being augmented by many visitors who spend freely, and the early demand for fall apparel and household needs expands to seasonable proportions.

There is a general expression of confidence in the outlook for extending consumption. It is also made clear that stocks throughout the interior are at an unusually low average and that liberal replenishment is likely, although that process may be conducted gradually. Prices generally stand upon an attractive basis in staples and some heavy buyers secure their needs in lines which continue under curtailed production.

Encouraging agricultural conditions and high values of the crops, rising pay rolls at manufacturing centers and the improvement in iron and steel branches in this section afford substantial reasons for the healthier tone which now characterizes commerce.

The total movement of grain at this port, 8,554,630 bushels, compares with 9,828,205 bushels last week and 9,490,117 bushels in 1907. Compared with last year there is a decrease in receipts of 26.1 per cent, and increase in shipments of 27.6 per cent. Live stock receipts were 243,035 head, against 267,851 head last week and 273,637 head last year.

Bank clearings, $215,300,013, are 2.6 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 24, against 16 last week and 14 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 6, against 8 last week and 2 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

While conservatism still rules purchasing, the number of buyers in leading northern and western centers is very large, and there is a distinct gain in the jobbing distribution of fall and winter dry goods, shoes, clothing, hats and millinery. Optimism as to the future is noted, and the practical completion of the small grain harvests, especially of spring wheat, and the advance of the corn crop toward maturity have made for an accentuation of the more confident feeling.

Southern markets are slower to feel the impetus of prospective good crop yields, and the strike in the Alabama coal fields seriously affects trade in and near Birmingham. Collections show signs of improvement, especially where the early crop movement has begun, but there are a number of reports of lagging settlements, and payments as a whole are not yet up to normal.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Aug. 20 number 236, against 249 last week, 153 in the like week of 1907, 155 in 1906, 176 in 1905, and 185 in 1904. Canadian failures for the same period number 39, which compares with 31 last week and 19 in the corresponding week of 1907.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.75; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.85; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2, 93c to 94c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, standard, 47c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 78c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $13.00; prairie, $8.00 to $9.50; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 22c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes, per bushel, 60c to 69c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $6.95; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 93c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 47c to 48c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.85; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 95c to 96c; corn, No. 2, 75c to 76c; oats, No. 2, 46c to 47c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.90; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 96c to 97c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 79c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.10; hogs, $4.00 to $6.50; sheep, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 93c to 94c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 3 white, 48c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.07 to $1.09; corn, No. 3, 77c to 79c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 76c to 77c; barley, No. 2, 74c to 77c; pork, mess, $15.25.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.50; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.15; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.55; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.65; wheat, No. 2 red, 99c to $1.00; corn, No. 2, 89c to 90c; oats, natural white, 55c to 56c; butter, creamery, 20c to 24c; eggs, western, 19c to 22c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 92c to 94c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 47c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 76c to 77c; clover seed, October, $6.37.

Paper Trust Strike On.

The employes of the International Paper Company, or trust, which operates mills in many places, were ordered out recently as a protest against the reduction of the wages of some of the members of the union. Most of the 30,000 workmen responded, and the mills were idle.

SEPTEMBER

0312

L 903

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY. All rights reserved

CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued.)

Here was another issue of Nemesis, the curse of another life through his coming back from the edge of the water. In the crush of self-hate, he smiled at the woman. * * * Until a moment ago the wrecking work of the morning had put thoughts of Soronia from his mind. He had come to the shop partly to marshal his final resources in an out-of-the-way spot and arrange the last line of action, and partly to avoid the possibility of arrest for the moment in case the Panther had brought an emissary of the law. His end was a matter of hours at best; his cruising and his friendship with Constable were over. Saint Pierre, of the lesser islands, was the last station of his traveling. During three days he had passed many hours in the shop. What those hours had accomplished was dramatically revealed now in the anguish of the maiden as she waited for the answer to her question.

"I have been thinking a great deal since yesterday. I found that I couldn't do what I tried—at least, without seeing you again, Sonoria." Breen spoke vaguely. He had sufficient honesty not to be deft with the forces he was now employing. "The future, I cannot tell yet. I may have to leave Saint Pierre for awhile, but I shall leave my heart here, and if I live—I will come back! To-day I must see my friend and tell him that I cannot cruise farther south with him."

She would have fallen had he not held her, but her eyes were shining. The old man ran for restoratives. Breen would have put the girl into a chair, but she clung to him.

"I have waited for you so long, my maker of pictures," she whispered.

Pere Rabeaut stood beside them with medicines. The veneer of shop servitude was gone from the gray old face. The sharp black eyes were directed steadily upon the stranger, who saw that they were ready to soften or burst into flame. Breen saw, too, that he was less in the presence of the father of a creole girl of Martinique than the father of an old-world household.

"I am waiting for you to speak, monsieur," said Pere Rabeaut.

"You have not waited long, sir," Breen answered. "It was just an instant ago that I had the honor of hearing from your daughter's lips—that she would wait for me until I could come back permanently to Saint Pierre."

"I know you will forgive an old soldier of France. So many people do not understand—don't try to understand—that I deemed it a privilege to marry the mother of the maid in your arms—not because a governor general of Martinique was her father—but because she was worthy the worship of an old soldier of France. The girl is like her mother, monsieur."

"It is an honor I do not deserve, sir—the daughter of a country woman of Josephine and a soldier of France," said Breen, grateful that one of his utterances contained or covered no lie.

The bow from the veteran was a gracious thing. He held a glass to the lips of his daughter.

"I do not need it now, father," Soronia said softly.

There was a knock at the door. The maid hastened to her room, and Pere Rabeaut, once more the master of the shop, greeted a gasping patron. Breen was left to his thoughts. * * * That which he had done was unchangeable.

"Nicholas Stembridge, rejoice! this is your wedding day!" he muttered. "What a time you've had down the years! You have lived long and freely, taking what you saw and daring consequences and prattling like a defective to keep up your spirits! Nick, do you recall the prime sentence of your philosophy—'There is nothing which Doctor Death cannot cure'? Isn't it a wonderful saying? So wonderful that it has exceptions! No, Death will not put Peter and his lady out to sea! * * * The police are after you; your lips are hot with lies; you sit in the gloom. Nick Stembridge, you are whipped, cornered. You go out a coward and a liar. Where is your laugh of yesterday?"

And yet he smiled at the perfection of the pride-humbling trap the Fates had laid for him this day; smiled at the words he had uttered to Soronia and her father, who had bristled into a soldier of France.

And yet there had been no other way. After what he had done to Constable, it was not in him to deprive Soronia of what she seemed to need—not under her pitiful eyes! His own part did not enter. He conjured no golden haze as the mate of this creature of ardor, fragrance, and gentleness. Nor, on the other extreme, did he reflect that to spend one's days in a torrid shop with a woman of black blood was a fitting end for a brutalized life.

He put the woman out of his mind, and turned to the sorry business of the wounded friend. He must find Constable and say the last words; then take the blame from his friend in the presence of the women. If he were taken into custody on the way—there was no help for that. All remnants of justice and whitemanship demanded that he set out at once. He hurried to the court.

"Soronia," he called, "I'll have to go now. Mr. Constable expects to leave with his ship to-day, and I must talk with him before he goes."

She appeared in the dress in which he had first seen her. There were tender remonstrances which he scarcely heard, but he answered gently. His mind was with the man.

"And you will be back this afternoon?"

In the hollow of the universe there seemed no reason that he could utter why he should not be back that afternoon.

"Yes, little fairy," he answered.

"And I shall watch from the upper window, if the smoke clears, for your friend's ship to sail. * * * Ah, don't stay long from me!"

The sun could not shine through the ash-fog which shut out the harbor distances and shrouded the great cone, but volumes of dreadful heat found the earth. Though the Madame lay well in the harbor, she was invisible now, even from the terraces. There was no line dividing the shore from the sea, nor the sea from the sky. It was all an illimitable mask, whose fabric was the dust which had lain for centuries upon Pelee's dynamos.

There was no carriage for hire. The day had driven the public drivers to cover. Breen walked to the plantation house. The servant was long in answering his ring. Mr. Wall was in the hallway. The fall from guest to an enemy of the house pulled hard upon Breen's philosophy.

"Come in, sir," said Uncle Joey. His tone was repressed as he added: "Had I known your address, I should have sent your effects to you."

"I wasn't thinking about that, but looking for Mr. Constable," Breen declared.

"You are Nicholas Stembridge?"

"Yes."

The elder man stared at him savagely. "Don't you think you have done enough damage?"

"More than enough, Mr. Wall; but there remains, from my point of view, an unfinished sentence."

"He is not here."

"Then I need trouble you no further."

Breen had not the heart that instant to ask to see the ladies. At the pier he learned from Ernst, who had charge of the launch, that Mr. Constable was not aboard the ship, and had given up the idea of sailing for the day, apparently. At the Roxelane, Breen found that Constable had made his way beyond toward the River Blanch, which had flowed black and boiling yesterday. At the Hotel des Palms there was definite word of M. Constable, American. The proprietor bore witness that the gentleman had stopped at the establishment long enough to procure food, mules and guides—the last at great cost, since the natives were in deadly fear—for a trip to the craters of Pelee.

CHAPTER IX.

The morning which broke through the defenses of Breen, and crumpled the dearest purpose of Constable, also drew Miss Stansbury into the vortex of intense emotions. Whatever dominant traits and impulses she had inherited from her mother, it had been her self-training to repress. Ample opportunity had been afforded her to note in her mother the career of an indomitable mistress of affairs. The result of her observations was a positive distaste for stiffness of views in any sphere, and a conviction that the display of masterfulness in woman did not make for woman's happiness.

As a girl, it had not occurred to Lara to exert an authority counter to her mother's. When she became a young woman she carefully avoided any extremity which might lead to the breaking of either her own or the more visible will of the house.

Now, in the midst of painful developments, it was borne home to Lara that she had progressed too far in the way of amiability; that she had unconsciously outstripped her intention, and passed into the boundaries of self-effacement. In the crisis of the newspaper revelations, she had followed her mother's initiative without question. The creature of indecisions that she had become grew more and more odious to her as the forenoon passed, and in her contrition she realized that the man whose first wish was to spare her from harm had been repaid with a lack of courtesy and a greater lack of courage.

Nothing that she had said or done, it seemed to her now, carried the stamina of decision. She had implored him not to speak; she had run from him, like a frightened child to her mother, when he had told his love and begged her to seek safety aboard his ship. In none of her dealings had she shown the strong womanhood which marked her ideals; and in singular contrast stood out his graciousness and patience. The thousand little things in which she had subserved her own inclinations to the maternal will had dulled the delicate point of personality, without which a man cannot stand valiantly through the crux of harsh days. It was all plain now, so hideously plain.

The chief of the acts she regretted had to do with the morning itself. What manner of "friendship" was this which accepted as authoritative the testimony of a newspaper's suspicions? She had done more than this, in handing Constable the document that witnessed against him, and shutting the door upon his possible defense. There was an added poignancy in the knowledge that her mother would not have thus used one of her favorites. Her distaste for the American caused Mrs. Stansbury so readily to accept newspaper evidence as a triumph of her judgment. As if such thoughts of wretchedness were not sufficient to start tears of vexation, Lara's mind finally added to the inventory of its miseries by reverting to her conversation with Constable in the carriage on the day of his arrival. How she had berated the essayist for declaring that the stuff of friendship stirred not womankind! How vigorously he had agreed with her!

She sought her own room when the tumult mounted to the point of tears. Presently she went to the door and locked it, for the inevitable thought had come. What did the name of Peter Constable mean to her? She had felt his strength. Long ago she had dreamed of such strength and put the dream away. Whether or not he was to be the conqueror, she knew that mastery like his could rouse her heart. She was evading the substance of the question. Before the mirror she frowned severely at the Lara there.

"Tell me this," said the woman, "do I want him to go away?"

"No, no!" said the image.

"No," repeated the woman; "not if he be innocent."

The image scowled at her conservatism. "You deserve to suffer. You sent him away without a tithe of your trust, without a morsel of your mercy."

Standing in the upper hallway, she heard what passed between Breen and the planter at the front door. Why did not Uncle Joey demand extenuating circumstances? She was sure that Breen would have dropped some hint, at least, of Constable's part in the mysterious alliance, had it not been for the barbed iron of the other's words. Lara's palms ached from the pressure of her nails.

She did not go downstairs to luncheon, but often crossed the hall, entering Constable's room to look at the mountain and cityward along the smoky highway. In one of these watches she saw the little black carriage of Father Damien approaching. He would have driven by, but she ran below and called to him from the veranda:

"Come in and rest a minute, father. Is there any good to tell?"

"Very little, Lara. The gray curse is on Saint Pierre, indeed. I have grown afraid for my people, and am warning them to seek refuge in Fort de France. Your guest suggested this step, and has helped nobly with money to care for the people fleeing to the capital."

She drew from him an account of his meeting with Constable on the highway in the morning. He told her, too, how the young man had sent sick native mothers and their children out to the ship for refuge from the heat and sulphur fumes, and of the large sums of money he had volunteered for the care of the favored few who fled to Fort de France. Lara bent her head forward toward the priest.

"And what do you think of this man, father?" she questioned suddenly.

The old man's mild gaze fell before the glowing eyes of the girl. "I did not think when I first met him that he was gifted with such zeal," he answered weakly.

"Where is he now, Father Damien?"

"That I cannot tell, dear. We have not seen him since morning. Some say that he has gone to Morne Rouge; others that he has ascended to the craters of Pelee."

She sprang up, but repressed the exclamation upon her lips. Her mother had entered.

"Good morning, Father Damien," Mrs. Stansbury said pleasantly. "Is Lara rehearsing private theatricals for you?"

The priest made haste to depart, saying that he was on the way to Fort de France with the money Constable had given, to make the refugees there as comfortable as possible. The ladies followed him to the door. It happened that the old man faced Lara as he said:

"I hope it may be a false rumor that your friend has sought the craters of Pelee. Such services as his we cannot afford to do without. There is power in the man——"

"I think I have felt it, father," the girl answered quietly.

"What does this mean, this talk of 'friend' in connection with the confrere of a thief?" Mrs. Stansbury asked.

"I did not quibble in the use of the word——"

Do you count as a friend one who would try to put you aboard a ship which bears the reputation of the Madame de Stael?—one who would bring to our house the notorious Nicholas Stembridge?"

"You were also invited to go, remember."

"My dear child, you are overwrought. I cannot believe that you are appealed to by this sudden interest of his in your welfare; nor that you dreamed of accepting terms that would have frightened our Domremy saint who braved wars."

"I do not like your talk of terms, mother. There were no terms. Mr. Constable asked me to board his ship, that I might be safe. His care for my welfare is not important in this talk."

"Do you think you would be safe to go with him?"

"Safe as the sea—safe as the black women and their babies now crowded upon the terrible de Stael! I do not care to talk further. You have followed your inclinations regarding Mr. Constable, and until now I have allowed your inclinations to be mine. I am guilty as you are of outraging the sensibilities of a man who deserves at least the consideration of a gentlewoman. I shall learn the truth about these reports, and if they are as false in substance as I believe, I shall make up for my incivilities."

Mrs. Stansbury felt that here was a resistance no less formidable than sudden. It must be crushed, of course, but the present moment was not propitious. She laughed gently.

(To be continued.)

Spoiled Their Waltzing.

In her memoirs Mme. de Boigne gives some interesting glimpses of English social life. For instance, she writes:

"In 1816 no young English lady ventured to waltz. The Duke of Devonshire returned from a tour in Germany and observed one evening at a large ball that a woman was never seen to better advantage than when waltzing. I do not know whether he was anxious to play a trick, but he repeated this assertion several times. It was passed from mouth to mouth, and at the next ball all the young ladies were waltzing. The duke admired them greatly, said that it was delightful and gave proper animation to a ball. He then added carelessly that he, at any rate, had decided never to marry a lady who waltzed. It was to the Duchess of Richmond and at Carlton House that he saw fit to make this revelation. The poor duchess, the most clumsy of matchmaking mammas, nearly fell off her chair with horror. She repeated the statement to her neighbors, who passed it on, and consternation spread from seat to seat. The young ladies continued to waltz with clear consciences. The old ladies were furious, but the unfortunate dance was concluded. Before the end of the evening the good Duchess of Richmond was able to announce that her daughters felt an objection to waltzing which no persuasion of hers could ever overcome. Some few girls of more independence continued to waltz, but the majority gave it up."

The deposit of dew is greatly influenced by color. It will be found thickest on a board painted yellow, but not at all on red and black.

FITZGERALD ARRESTED FOR $173,000 THEFT

Former Assorting Teller of Chicago Subtreasury Released on Bonds of $10,000.

CRIME EIGHTEEN MONTHS OLD

Taking of Former Official Follows Detectives' Investigation Offer to Sell Big Bills.

George W. Fitzgerald, who was discharged as assorting teller of the United States subtreasury at Chicago a year ago following the mysterious disappearance of $173,000 from the vaults of the government treasury house, was arrested early Sunday on a state warrant charging him with the crime, and was arraigned before Judge Arthur H. Chetlain Monday.

Fitzgerald was released by Judge Chetlain on $10,000 bonds, the hearing being continued for a week. The bondsmen are James Ralth, 3729 Wabash avenue, formerly in the cooperage business, and John C. McCafferty, treasurer of the United States Tent and Outing Company.

Arrested at His Home.

Fitzgerald was arrested at his home, 943 Chase avenue, on a warrant sworn out before Judge Chetlain by Herbert F. Young, head of the Young agency. The detective manager acted under the orders of Subtreasurer Boldenweck when he made the arrest.

The arrest of the former teller took on some of the spectacular. No warning was given him until Detective Joseph Kinder of State's Attorney Healy's office and Detective Young dashed up to the house in an automobile. When the bell rang at his new home early Sunday morning, the former assorting teller responded in person. The pressing of a button had flooded the porch with electric light. Fitzgerald opened the door and the detectives announced their mission.

"I know what you want," he said. "Never mind reading the warrant."

"I prefer to read it," said one of the detectives.

The prisoner's wife appeared suddenly and intuitively she grasped the situation.

"My God, they have got him," she cried, the detectives say, and swooned, but soon recovered herself. Fitzgerald was granted permission to kiss his children good-by, and was then taken to the La Salle street offices of the Young Detective Agency in an automobile. He was held in the offices of the agency until 2 o'clock in the morning, when he was taken to the county jail and locked up.

It is said that representatives of the government secret service department in Chicago are skeptical and inclined to discredit the evidence gathered by the Young Agency, operatives of which have trailed Fitzgerald for months. While Fitzgerald was long under suspicion and was dismissed following the failure of the government detectives to detect the thief, evidence against him strong enough to warrant his arrest was never unearthed by the federal authorities. Herbert F. Young, head of the agency which caused the arrest of Fitzgerald, is confident, however, that he has landed the man responsible for the theft. Mr. Young has hinted that one of two prominent men suspected of being accomplices in the gigantic theft has made a partial confession of his part in the crime.

Alleged Offer to Sell Bills Stirs.

The alleged offer of Fitzgerald to dispose of two $1,000 bills to Col. Harry C. Gano, superintendent of A. Booth & Co.'s cold storage plant for $500 each, is the newest link in the chain of evidence against the former teller according to operatives of the Young agency. Much of the money which disappeared from the subtreasury was in bills of the $1,000 denomination, and Young declares that he had indisputable evidence that Fitzgerald had some of these greenbacks in his possession. While he did not make good his offer to dispose of the large bills, the detectives say that others overheard his offer to Col. Gano.

On the other hand, Attorney Edward R. Litzinger, who has been retained by the prisoner, laughs at the idea that his client is guilty and says that the affair is likely to turn out seriously for those who caused the arrest. The fact that the Federal authorities knew nothing of the hunt for the man who took the $173,000 and the fact that the State's Attorney's office was cognisant of the whole case for weeks before Fitzgerald was arrested is looked upon by the lawyers as a further complication.

More Troops for a Strike.

Gov. Comer of Alabama has ordered two regiments into camp in the mining section around Birmingham, following the lynching of a negro striker, Will Millen, accused of dynamiting the home of a strike breaker.

Officers Fear Lynching.

The Pensacola (Fla.) sheriff and deputies who fired into a lynching party with fatal effect, have been threatened with violence and one deputy has fled the city. The sheriff says he will stand his ground.

MILITIAMAN KLEIN IS SURRENDERED.

National Guard Officers Procure Bond for Slayer of Boy in Kankakee.

Private Joseph B. Klein of the First Regiment of the Illinois National Guard was surrendered to the authorities at Kankakee by Captain Henry Barrett Chamberlin, personal representative of General E. C. Young.

Private Klein, who killed Earle Nelson with a bayonet in Kankakee, while the First Regiment was passing through the city en route to Springfield, was released in bonds of $10,000 furnished by the Illinois Surety Company and went to Chicago with Captain Chamberlin, Major James Miles, Captain Percy B. Coffin and Signal Sergeant C. H. Leichliter. He was taken to the First Regiment armory and later permitted to proceed to his home.

General Young, in command of the troops at Springfield, returned to Chicago and discussed the Klein case. He declared that the evidence before the military tribunal showed conclusively that Private Klein, in forcing young Nelson from the regimental train at Kankakee, acted solely from a motive of military duty.

"When the State's Attorney of Kankakee demanded that I deliver Private Klein," said General Young, "I refused to do so. I exercised my discretionary power, advised by the Attorney General, on the ground that to deliver Klein at that time to the civil authorities would be destructive of the morale of the troops. I might as well have sent them back to Chicago had I complied, because they would have felt that they had no right to use the weapons given them.

Twenty more indictments returned by the special grand jury in Springfield inquiring into the recent race riots brings the total of the three days' inquisition to thirty-one. One is against George Richardson, whose alleged assault upon Mrs. Mabelle Hallam precipitated the uprising. The remaining thirty are against alleged participants in the work of the mob.

J. W. Bechtel, William W. Sage and "Fergy" O'Toole are under arrest, charged with complicity in the rioting and are awaiting grand jury investigation. The authorities will endeavor to fasten the crime of murder upon Bechtel, alleging that he participated actively in the lynching of Scott Burton. Sage is alleged to have fired five shots into the body of Burton as it swung from the tree to which it had been strung. O'Toole's offense is alleged to have been the throwing of bricks. William Sutton has been singled out as the man who made the attack upon Mayor Reece when the Mayor attempted to address the mob during the attack upon Loper's restaurant.

It is understood that residents of Riverton, Sherman and other villages and the towns in the vicinity of Springfield will be caught in the net. It is said that several of them were in the front ranks of the rioters.

The local authorities have the situation so well in hand that the First Cavalry Regiment was sent home, leaving only the Seventh Infantry on the ground.

The coroner's jury in the case of Louis Johnson, who was killed in the riot at Loper's restaurant, decided that the boy was shot, but the jury is unable to fix the responsibility. The belief has been that Johnson died from injuries sustained by falling glass.

BELGIUM TO ANNEX THE CONGO.

Deputies Pass Bill 83 to 55—Financial Responsibility Open.

After several months of bitter struggle, the Belgium Chamber of Deputies adopted the Congo annexation treaty by 83 votes to 55, and although this action probably will insure the solution of the great Congo problem, there still remains open the important question of Belgium's financial responsibility.

KING LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM.

The passage of the treaty by the Chamber of Deputies means that the annexation of the state to Belgium is now practically assured, as the Senate and King Leopold are ready to indorse the bill.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

Failing to meet her husband at the Minneapolis Union depot, Mrs. Leftin, a Russian woman, wandered aimlessly about the streets until she was half starved when the police took her in charge, found her a home and sent her baby to the hospital, where it died. For three weeks husband and wife hunted for each other before they met accidentally. The reunited couple, together with their only remaining child, a boy 8 years old, have established a household in northeast Minneapolis.

HIGH COURT IS STUNG IN OIL CASE PETITION

Government Flays Federal Appellate Tribunal in Rehearing Demand.

MAKES WILL-O'-WISP OF LAW.

Reversal of Judge Landis' Ruling Held to Nullify Interstate Commerce Act.

In a petition bristling with criticism of Judges Grosscup, Seaman and Baker, the government has asked a rehearing of the Standard Oil case. The document was filed with the clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

It describes the reversal of Judge Landis' $29,240,000 fine against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana as a "misinterpretation of the law" and asks the right to submit the entire matter to the United States Supreme Court.

The government contends that the Court of Appeals, in its opinion, has laid down an erroneous rule and that Presiding Judge Grosscup did Judge Landis a "great injustice" by misstating what he did in connection with the imposition of the fine.

Wipes Act from Statute.

The document, signed by Attorney General Bonaparte and Government Attorneys Frank B. Kellogg, Edwin W. Sims and James H. Wilkerson, reaches a climax when it declares that no court short of the Supreme Court should undertake to practically wipe from the statutes the interstate commerce act.

The proceeding attendant upon the filing of the petition was devoid of ceremony. The papers were taken to the office of the clerk of the Court of Appeals by Chief Clerk William A. Small of the district attorney's office.

Clerk Hallowell, in behalf of Judges Grosscup, Seaman and Baker, receipted for the 5,000-word document and later mailed a copy to each of the judges, all of whom are out of town. Mr. Sims and Mr. Wilkerson also are away.

Formal hearing on the plea will not be had for several weeks, as, under the law, Attorney John S. Miller for the oil company has twenty days in which to file an answer. The Appellate Court judges then may reconsider their decision, assess a fine satisfactory to them, pass the entire matter to the Supreme Court or ignore the government's pleading.

Judge Landis Defended.

There is no mincing of words in the government's defense of Judge Landis. That he did not exceed his discretion in assessing the maximum penalty is declared, and it also is vigorously denied that he attempted to punish the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, as maintained by Judge Grosscup.

"The opinion as it stands," the government's petition concludes, "erroneously states material portions of the record; does injustice to the trial judge; leaves doubtful in a new trial the rule of law to be applied, both as to knowledge on the part of the shipper and as to the number of offenses; appears to be in conflict with the language of the Supreme Court and with the previous language of the presiding judge of this court, and with the great weight of legal authority, and, if permitted to remain unmodified, will tend to encourage disobedience to law, to impede the enforcement of salutary statutes and largely to defeat their purpose."

These Contentions Made.

Following are the five principal contentions of the government:

That Judge Landis' proceeding, instead of amounting to "a strange doctrine in Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence," is in accord with the elementary principles of criminal law.

That the ignorance of lawful freight rates, if due to negligence, is not a valid defense for the acceptance of an unlawful rate.

That each carload shipped at unlawful rates in the case against the Standard Oil Company constituted a distinct offense, and that any other construction would provide a loophole through which the guilty could evade justice.

That an "innovation" is created by the Court of Appeals in holding that a defendant cannot be fined more than the amount of the property he possesses, the government denying that the penalty imposed by Judge Landis is excessive.

That the amount of the fine alone does not necessitate a new trial; that if the Appellate Court holds Judge Landis abused his discretion it is called upon to name a proper fine.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

The county commissioners of Blue Earth county, Minn., have voted to have the county pay half the cost of repairing bridges, roads and culverts damaged by the recent floods. The cost is estimated at $40,000.

A company is being organized in Boston to operate aeroplanes or dirigible balloons between Boston and New York. According to the present plans the first experiments will be made with small dirigibles, with a carrying capacity of two passengers in addition to the operator.

SEPTEMBER

0313
L 903

Agonies Of Pain

Never give up, and think that all women, yourself included, have to suffer pain.

Thousands of women have written to tell how they have cured their womanly ills, and relieved their pains; and over a million have been benefited, in various other forms of female disease, during the past 50 years, by that popular and successful female remedy

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I believe I would now have been dead," writes Mrs. Minnie Lambe, of Lebanon Junction, Ky., "if it hadn't been for Cardui. I had suffered with bad cramping spells, pains in my back, sides and arms, and awful bearing-down pains. Now these pains have all gone, as a result of using Cardui."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 39

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

Our Schools.

While this paper has always been a warm friend to the schools of our town it intends to take a deeper interest in them during the ensuing year. We believe it is the duty of every citizen to take a live interest in our schools and do everything necessary to make them a success. Next Monday the public schools will open. Everything is swept, garnished and in running order and all children that are eligible are expected. Boys and girls, be there the first day, its the best day in all the year don't miss it but make the first days enrollment the greatest in the history of the schools.

The matter of teaching music in our public schools, is a feature that should not be overlooked. Schools about us have introduced this feature with marked success, and making melody in the heart is found to make better pupils, more studious pupils and imparts to them anacquisition to one of the greatest profitable pleasures in life. At this period there is no other avenue of acquiring this vocal art, and if not taken up here, it bids well to become one of the lost arts. We hope our school managers and faculty will consider this feature, and at no distant day make this one of the requisitions. A singing people are a joyous people, good natured people, more law abiding people, will make better citizens, live longer and die happier.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years with increasing satisfaction They take the kinks out of the stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or fiction," says N. H. Brown, Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4. East bound....4:55 a. m.
No. 16. East bound....12:40 p. m.
No. 17. West bound....11:58 a. m.
No. 3. West bound....8:42 p. m.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a. m
No. 3. Western Express 7:58 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:26 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - -	$1.00
Six Month - -	50c
Three Months - -	25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Why This Effort.

Why all this effort at getting an education? Why all this spending of money, erection of buildings, employment of teachers? What is to be gained? Is it to make a scientist who can go forth into the world and by his knowledge be able to control the elements and bring them subservient to man? No not this. Is it to produce men and women who can go forth into the field of Art, and be able to chisel from marble or draw on canvas, pictures as grand as those of Michael Angelo, or a Raphael? No not this. Is it to send forth men and women equipped with everything that goes to make them intelligent, who are able to answer every question as to the construction of the universe, and its age? No not this is the end of true education.

The object of the education of our country, the object of the common schools of our land is to produce men and women endowed with every element that will assist to make themselves and the world better. It is a saying of Ralph Waldo Emerson, that the prime object of education is to produce men and women. It does not mean walking machines; it does not mean intellectual machines; but it does mean men and women who have hearts, as well as minds; who look beyond the material things of this world and look to humanity and to God for the elevation and betterment of mankind.

The common schools of our country are its foundation stone; boys and girls today are attending the schools of our land who never will or can, enter any higher course. In 1890, there were over fourteen million boys and girls attending the public schools of our land, and not two per cent of that number have ever graduated from our seminaries and colleges in any one year. Then how necessary is it that the common school system of our country should be made better. How necessary is it that every person connected with the maintenance or support of our public schools should be a man or woman thoroughly equipped for the service, and should give to it their best thought. The world today is seeking men and women who are honest and upright. It will not make them honest to be educated. It will not make them upright to be intellectual. The training they receive must come from persons themselves who know what honesty and uprightness means, and who will, by precept, as well as example, instill this idea thoroughly into the minds and hearts of their pupils.

Splendid Lecture.

The lecture at the Methodist church by Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, Wednesday evening, proved to be one of the most interesting temperance lectures ever given in this town. Her subject, "At the Mercy of the State" was developed in a different manner from the ordinary temperance talk. She held the attention of her hearers by means of a well told story illustrative of the evil effects of intemperance. The story showed vividly how the happiness of social and home relations can be blighted by the use of strong drink. Mrs. Stanley's talk was sane—no attack on any party or institution but a conclusive and persuasive plea in behalf of the temperance forces. Everyone who heard her pronounce the lecture the best they have heard and have only complimentary words for Mrs. Stanley and the way in which she presented her plea.

Keep in mind the Sunday School convention to be held at the Christian church, Sunday afternoon and evening.

A Letter

A letter is here printed from John Wilderson who is a member of the naval engineering corps on board the U. S. S. Montana.

ROCKLAND, ME.
AUG. 20, 1908.

DEAR FRIEND:—

Arrived here yesterday Aug. 19, at 9:30 A. M. Rockland is a fine place and has splendid scenery of rocks and fine buildings. We had a fine trip at sea until the last two days when the weather changed and was very cold and stormy. We were obliged to wear our winter clothing. We left Norfolk, Va. Aug. 5th and went about twelve hundred knots north east and then back to Maine. Many were seasick on the trip, but we were on a vessel which could supply our wants. It is more like a floating town than a ship. It has a store where we can purchase clothing, tobacco, candies all things to make life pleasant. There is a hospital, druz store, a mill, a machine shop, blacksmith shop, and an ice plant where ice is made, a laundry, an electric light plant for the purpose of furnishing the light for the ship, an evaporater where salt water is changed into fresh water, barber shop, tailor shop, a telephone and telegraph station, and a police force of about sixty men. What more would we want? The navy is certainly a fine place for any young man. He can recieve great benefit from the travel he gets and also enjoy the reading of the many fine books in the ship's library which is furnished.

This vessel the (Montana) has cost over four million dollars and has over one million dollars worth of guns to be put on board yet. So I believe any young man should feel perfectly satisified with a home like this when Uncle Sam has given it to him and pays him for his time. We had bad luck on the first trip when two men fell over board and were drowned but we hope no more such things will occur. I will have to bring my letter to a close, I remain your most sincere friend.

JOHN WILDESON.

Public Sale

I will sell at Public sale at my residence 3½ miles south of Spencerville 3½ miles north of Maysville on the Spencerville and Maysville road on the Samuel Betz farm, on Thursday Sept. 10 at 10:00 a. m. the following to-wit: one yearling colt, one 2 yr. old bay horse, one roan 2 yr. old, two brood sows, two milch cows, fifteen head of breeding ewes, one Plano mower, Plano hay rake, horse dump; steel land roller, Oliver breaking plow, Oliver plow No. 405, riding breaking plow, riding 2-horse corn plow, steel drag, roller, Disc grain drill, side delivery rake, John Deer hay loader, heavy work harness, two-horse wagon, two-seated two buggy, pair of bob sleds, side delivery clover seed buncher.

JOHN WEBB.

I will sell at Public Sale at my residence on the John Koch farm 2½ miles north of St. Joe, Thursday, Sept. 3, 1908, at 10:00 a. m. the following to-wit: bay gelding 4 yr. old weight 1,250, black gelding 4 yr. old weight 1,200, bay horse 10 yr. old weight 1,400, 6 yr. old Jersey cow fresh in February, giving milk now, 4 yr. old Durham cow fresh in March, 7 yr. old Durham cow fresh in March, four pigs weighing about 30 lb., six shoats weighing about 70 lb., five shoats weighing about 90 lb. Poland China brood sow 2 yr. old, Durock brood sow 2 yr. old full blood, 35 or 40 good hens, 30 young chickens. Thomas hay loader, nearly new; hay rake, Disc harrow with wheels, John Deer cultivator, New Turnbull wagon with top box and spring seat 3½ in. tire Turnbull wagon, narrow tire, 2 seated new surrey, single buggy, Bryan breaking plow No. 2, Oliver breaking plow No. 404, single and double shovel plow, hay rack, hog rack, bob sleds, spike tooth harrow, dump boards, two log chains, hay fork, rope and pulleys, set heavy work harness, set of light work harness, two set of single harness, set of light double harness, set new light double harness, buggy pole, 15 acres of good corn in the field, two ton timothy hay, eight ton mixed hay, ½ bbl good cider vinegar, pork barrel, forks shovel, hoes and some household goods.

SAMUEL SQUIRES.

We the undersigned will offer at Public Sale on the J. Y. Davis farm in St. Joe., on Saturday Sept. 5, 1908, at 10:00 a. m. the following property to-wit: bay mare 14 yrs. old weight 1,200 lb., mare 5 yr. old wt. 1,200 colt by side, colt 11 month old, five yearling cattle, 2 yr. old steer. 30 head of sheep, from one to three years old Shropshire ram, 3 yr. old, 22 head of last spring pigs, top buggy, one Webber wagon, as good as new with box and all complete, one other two horse wagon, hay rack, loader and tedder, a drill as good as new, two set dump boards, McCormick mower, 2-horse corn plow, spring tooth harrow, spike tooth harfow, one drag, Bryan steel plow, single shovel plow, two set of double harness, one set of single harness. Terms made known on day of sale.

J. Y. Davis & Mahlon Baker.

J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

How to get Strong.

P. L. Daily, of 1247 W. Congress St Chicago, tells of a way to become strong He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe. Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

GENERAL ITEMS

Attend the Concord township Sunday school convention, next Sunday.

Auburn was the real county hub, last week, with a teacher's institute, carnival and republican convention.

Rev. J. C. McCain began his work as a pastor of the St. Joe M. P. circuit. His first appointment was at St. Joe Sunday morning. He preached at Fairview, Sunday evening.

The Northern Indiana Firemen's Tournament held at Garrett, Thursday, was largely attended. A number of bands were present and contested in the evening for a cash prize.

The Great Fort Wayne fair has set aside Wednesday September 16, as Northern Indiana day this year and excursion rates and trains have been arranged for on all the steam and trolley lines. There will be a thousand-dollar stake race, two $500 purse and races and a running race, the biggest lot of live stock in the history of the association and some interesting amusement features including the Igorrotes, a queer race of brown savages a man-catching lion in a hair-raising battle with a woman, a big balloon ascension and plenty to amuse

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

Why Suffer?

If you suffer pain from any cause, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve it—and leave no bad after-effects. That's the important thing. Neither do they create a habit. More often the attacks become less frequent, or disappear altogether. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no other effect except to relieve pain and quiet nervous irritation.

"We are never without Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. My husband and son, aged 15 were always subject to sick headache until we began using these Pills, and they have broken them up entirely. Don't think they have had to use them for six months. I recommend them to every one. A few weeks ago I heard an old lady friend was sick. I went to see her. She was down with LaGrippe, and nearly crazy with awful backache. I gave her one of the Anti-Pain Pills and left another for her to take in a short time. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again. Last winter my husband was taken with pluerisy on both sides, and I knew he would have died if it hadn't been for the Pills. In less than half an hour he was sweating, and went to bed and slept." MRS. G. H. WEBB, Austinburg, Ohio.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and we authorize him to return the price of first package (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

Sunday School Convention

CHRISTIAN CHURCH, ST. JOE, SUNSUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

Afternoon Session

2:00 Song service led by a chorus composed of the singers from all the schools of the township under the direction of Lee O. Tustison.
Devotional services led by F. A. Dressel.
Special Music.

2:40. How Can a Teacher Draw out a Class that will Neither Study nor Ask Questions?
D. J. Baker, Mrs. E. S. Sheffer.

3:20. Short Address by George N. Burni, State Sunday School Worker.
Question Box, Rev. J. A. Brown.
Benediction, Rev. J. C. McCain.

Evening Session

7:20 Chorus and Special Music.
8:00 Address by George N. Burni.
Song and Adjournment.

C. C. Woodcox, Pres.
Lora E. Hull, Secy.
Bessie Tustison, Organist.
Lee O. Tustison, Chorister.

Governor Hanly has issued a proclamation setting aside Monday September 7, Labor Day, as a legal holiday.

The celebration of the silver anniversary of the organization of the Maccabees of the world will be held at Forest Park, Auburn Junction, September 10.

Seventy-five men returned to work in the B. & O. shop at Garrett last week. This indicates that business is increasing and will make better times for the Garrett laboring men.

The printer who set the first stick of type for the first issue of the Chicago Tribune, now lives on a farm in DeKalb county. His name is Oscar Holcomb and he is now 78 years of age. His home is on the Butler—Waterloo road.

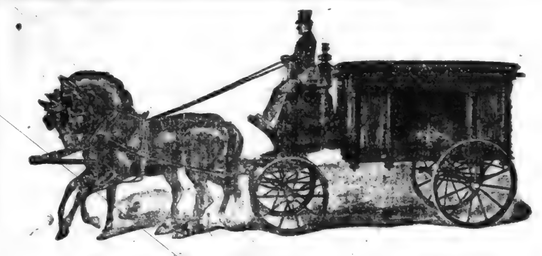
The Angola Magnet will be consolidated with the Steuben Republican on September 1st. This will be an advantage to the owners and to the people of the town and county. There is really no need of two papers of one party in a town.

Alfred Moudy, the prohibition lecturer, is getting to be somewhat famous as an orator. Sunday he gave three addresses, in the forenoon at Pleasant View, afternoon at Barker's Chapel and in the evening at Maple Grove.

The new Auburn Foundry company began operation last Wednesday, by turning out some manholes for the city. This new industry will employ quite a force of men and will add much to the business enterprise of our county seat.

The reunion of the Houlton family will be held next Friday at the old historic home on the banks of Fish creek, two miles east of Hamilton. This family is the one pioneer family of pioneers among the many residing in this densely populated county.

The premium list of Auburn's Third Annual Fall Exhibit is now out. The list of premiums are better than ever before and the business men of the county seat have certainly outdone all previous contributions toward the success of the Auburn's Fall Festival.



WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Eliz Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

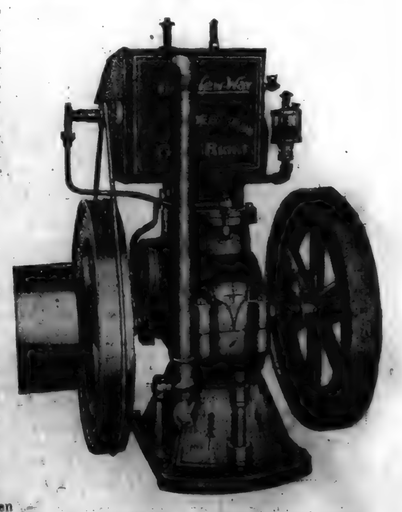
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



So SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.

Exclusive Agent.

SEPTEMBER

L 903

0314

Chute & Butler Company

PERU, INDIANA.

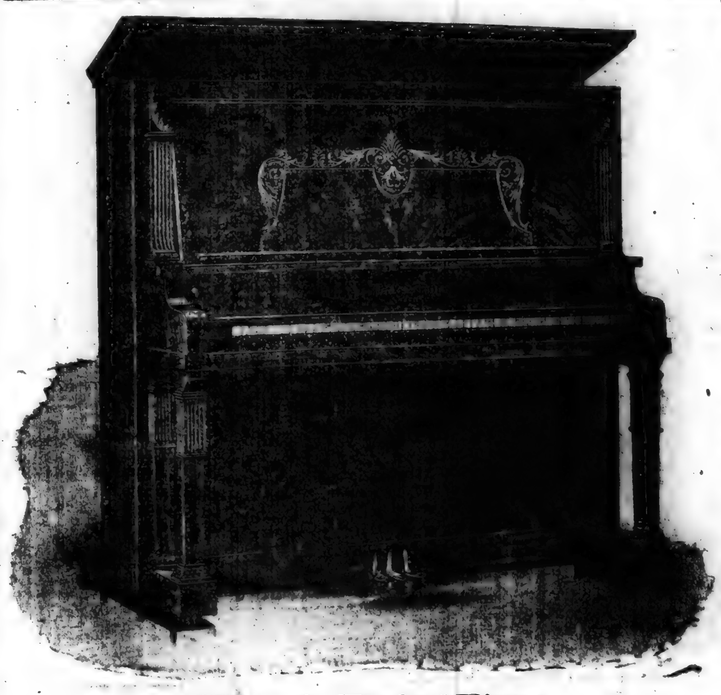
Factory Representatives

Hadsell & Coburn,

ST. JOE, — INDIANA.

Manufacturers of

ARTISTIC PIANOS and ORGANS.



Chute & Butler Piano

A Favorable Impression

is created by the Chute & Butler when ever or where ever they are seen. They are instruments possessing all the elements of an artistic success. The cases are original in design, marked by a strength and richness characteristic of the products of a first-class concern.

The tone quality of the Chute & Butler piano is unsurpassed. The action is responsive to the most delicate touch. From the time this piano was first placed on the market it has constantly won distinct favor with the trade and is being handled by many and prominent dealers. They are a high grade instrument designed for the discriminating trade and will please the most critical buyer. The attention of those who are about to purchase an instrument, is called to the Chute & Butler, Organ, Piolian and Piano. Hadsell & Coburn, the local representatives will be glad to show one of these instruments at any time.

Chute & Butler Organ

What the Presto Buyers Guide Says of the Chute & Butler Piolian

"Piolian is the name of a remarkably fine Piano-cased Organ, manufactured by The Chute & Butler Co., of Peru, Ind. The Piolian is a handsome instrument presenting the appearance of an Upright Piano, and affording all the effects of the best reed Organ.

What the Organ Purchasers of the United States has to say About The Chute & Butler Co.

"Incorporated with a capital of $80,000, of which $65,000 is common and $15,000 preferred.

Factory at Peru, Ind. Manufacturers of the "Chute & Butler" reed organ, including parlor, chapel and 7⅓ Octave Piolians. This business was begun at Lafontaine, Ind., in 1901, and continued at that place until January 1, 1906, when the company moved to Peru, Ind., where they now operate the large new brick factory, which they built and extensively equipped in 1905. Their specialty in the organ line is a 7⅓ Octave Piolian, a piano-cased organ, pipe like in tone, easily and successfully operated without the use of stop-knobs or knee swells.

The organization of the Chute & Butler Co., was brought about by Mr. H. E. Chute, who has been from the beginning the Secretary-Treasurer and General Manager of this company. The instruments of this company are artistic, thoroughly reliable, of excellent tone quality, and of a high standard of manufacture. They are handled by many reputable dealers. Concern in first-class commercial standing."

Chute & Butler Piolian

A LIST OF LOCAL PARTIES WHO HAVE PURCHASED CHUTE & BUTLER PIANOS.

Ask their opinion of the Chute & Butler piano. They have been tried in their own homes and they know the satisfaction of this high grade instrument. Their testimony is reliable.

J N Scholes
Dr C B Price
Henry Shaner
Will Shull
Alonzo Arape
G W Wort
Addie Koch
Mrs Grant Mason
Miss Luella Celler
David Moore
George Baker
Frank Horn
Arvilla Gallop
Henry Krabill
Grace Sechler
Maud Schooley
Dr J H Lake

Auburn Buyers.

Mrs Cora Smith
C S Smith
Sam Gordon
Florence Hendershot
Peter Cartright
H A Coburn
Frank Bricker, Hicksville
George Seibert
Gem Theatre
Arthur Allen
Ben Crary
Christian Church, Newville
U B Church
Christian Church, Harlan
U B Church, Montpelier

Henry Dellinger
Allen Lindenmuth, Antwerp
George Lindenmuth
Allen County, Ft Wayne
J P Bonnell
Cal Brown
Prof E L Coburn, Supt Public Schools St. Louis, Mo
Miss Annie McGuire, St Louis, Mo Director music in public schools
Chas N Hart, Uniontown, Pa

Remember

Hadsell & Coburn,

Selling Agents.

SEPTEMBER

0315
L 903

The Popular Pulpit

BLANK PAGES IN LIFE'S BOOK.

By Rev. Ernest A. Tappert.

Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.—James iv. 17.

St. James speaks of the blank pages in the book of our lives. They teach a lesson which is often overlooked. Whenever we go over our book of life we are mostly attracted by the pages written in gold that tell of our good works. But of these pages there are but few, and in most cases the "gold" is only brass. Most of the pages are full of spots and stains, and written on them are the works of darkness. There is scarce a day on which new pages of this kind are not added.

But in between there are pages with nothing written on them ,and most people look at them without any disturbance of conscience. They even regard these with a certain quietude of mind, saying: "Thank God, there is a day on which I have done no evil!" Is that true? St. James in our text says no. And then he opens our eyes to the meaning of the blank pages in the book of our lives, saying: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

Here we must look back and note the many shortcomings and neglects of our lives. The Roman emperor, Titus, used to regard a day as lost on which he had not accomplished something good, and oh, how many lost days and hours must we confess to our God when we look back on idle hours and wasted days spent in the pursuit of foolishness and not of godliness. Here we think of neglected work as responsible for many a blank page. Life is but short, and even if our years be three score and ten, yet it is true what we sing in that beautiful hymn: "Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day, earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away." We have certainly no time to lose in order to fulfill the Scripture's command: "Let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good." A Christian should never be guilty of that grave sin of "killing time"—that precious time which God has given him and which is his time of grace.

Many regard themselves as highly respectable as long as they have not come into collision with the law. But that is very little. The priest and the Levite did no harm to the victim of thieves, but they did him no good. That was their sin; so it was with Dives; he had not driven poor Lazarus away from his door, but he had an opportunity to do good and did not do it. And if we look back into our own book of life we can find many pages that have remained blank for our neglect of love.

However, it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment. Then God will judge us firstly according to our works; secondly according to our words, when we must give account of every idle word; lastly He will look at all the blank pages in the book of our lives and say: "Why are they blank? Didst thou not have an occasion to fill them? Why hast thou not done it? For I was hungered and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsted and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger and ye took me not in; inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of them, ye did it not to me." This is what the apostle wants us to remember in regard to the blank pages in the book of life when he says: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

THE ORTHODOX ATHEIST.

By Henry F. Cope.

God is not in all his thoughts.—Psalm x, 4.

There are at least three kinds of atheism—that which denies the existence of any infinite and eternal spirit; that which, while affirming, with much emphasis and elaboration of detail, the existence of such a spirit, yet lives as if there were none; and that which, whether affirming or denying the fact, puts nothing of the divine into actual living.

One's intellectual conclusions as to the existence of such a God as men of the past may have been able to picture may have little importance. The fact is that, as to the specifications of the Deity as conceived by others, and particularly as pictured by the past, we must all be, if we are living thinkers, atheists.

The important thing is not whether we can all agree as to the precise details of the Deity; the important thing is whether we will see somehow the divine in our lives and somehow come to express that in our living. Many a man says in all honesty that he cannot believe in a God simply because he has failed to cramp his intellect into conceptions long since outgrown, which have been offered to him as essential to faith in the divine.

Yet the man who cannot believe in a God in that way may still have the sense of a higher life that somehow wraps us all in itself; of reaches of being far beyond our discovering and charting; of a life from which all our life springs, and of a goal and ideal of life to which all our best life turns.

The divine is not a matter of details. God is not a matter of grammar. Faith in the divine is always the consciousness and hope of that which defies description. You have no right to call yourself an atheist or so to label another simply because old descriptions are rejected. He is the true atheist who seeks to bury his life in the dust and away from the divine. He may be well informed on theories of the divine; he may be that dangerous person the piously orthodox atheist.

The man who makes this life of ours an empty thing, who robs this world of its beauty and glory, who steals from life's song the note that the morning stars sang together, the heavenly chord, is simply he who despoils life of the divine, of its ideals, its hopes, its sublime sacrifices, who casts the cynics sneer over youth's dreams, over love's devotion.

It may make little difference whether you can agree with your neighbor in your descriptions of the divine. It would be an unfortunate thing if your idea of that infinite life and love could be so localized and stationary as to permit of satisfactory description. The thing that matters is whether to that neighbor you yourself are revealing something of the divine and the eternally good and true.

We need to pray to be delivered not from intellectual atheism; that will hurt no one. We need to pray to be delivered from practical atheism, the life that denies the divine; the heart that empties itself of the high and holy by its avarice, its passion for the things that are low and debasing. We need to seek to escape the diabolic delusion of the life that acknowledges the fact of a God and yet denies his likeness in the living.

You and your neighbor might quarrel forever as to your conceptions of God, but let each one seek to express that ideal of the divine in the daily doing, and you shall find yourselves walking in the same way, bound on the same errands, and your feet shall carry you together to heaven's door as you seek the ways of the needy and the sad and suffering.

This world needs God. It never will be satisfied with pictures of that great spirit of love and life. It will know God only as we show that love and life. We might well spend less time preaching about God if only we would practice that for which our ideals of God stand. If that word means to you, as more and more it must mean to men, infinite goodness, tenderness, helpfulness, affection, then the measure of your faith in such a being and such qualities is your own projection of them into the world. It is time that we ceased to quarrel over definitions and descriptions of the divine and began to do the deeds divine.

"VISIT THIS VINE."

By Rev. S. L. Grigsby.

Text—"Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts; look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine."—Psalm 80:14.

In appealing to God there is an implied turning unto him. This is a necessary condition, if help and healing are to be secured. "Turn ye unto me, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the Lord of hosts." So the church awakened to a sense of her shame and neglect, and her great need, turns; and then her appeal proves not in vain, as she pleads, "Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine, and the vineyard which thy right hand hath planted."

The church owes its existence to his agency. This vine he himself hath planted. On another occasion, as he expostulated with Israel, the Lord said, "I had planted thee a noble vine wholly a right seed; but then art thou turned unto a degenerate plant, of a strange vine unto me." But not only does the church owe its existence to him; he has made it the object of his special care. He "gave himself for it;" "purchased it with his own blood;" he is the king and head thereof, and by him were its officers and ordinances appointed.

If the condition of the church, locally, or in general, should at any time be such as that described by the psalmist, if there should be a lack of efficiency, or fruitfulness, if divine favors should be turned into judgments, as an expression of God's displeasure on account of the unfaithfulness of his people; then let her be quick to recognize her desolation, and prompt to appeal for help to him, who "loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." If, as a church, success has attended our efforts in the past, if we have experienced growth in grace; if we have been spiritually prospered; then we should thank God, and take courage, and henceforth give the more earnest heed to every call of duty.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

No perfection apart from pruning.
Only those who love really know.

Definitions cannot go beyond experience.

The love that springs from heaven sweeps men back there.

The keenest condemnation of impurity is the silent pure life.

The best fitting for divine work is faithfulness in daily work.

The open mind is the only one that can stay in the open way.

The lights of the world do not invite the world to watch their smoke.

Smiles of the Day

Some Phenomena of Nature.

They were talking it over in the Pullman of an overland train.

"We had a severe storm in our country," said the Texan, "in which it rained tadpoles."

"Huh," snorted the Missouri man, "up our way it frequently rains mud turtles."

The third man sat silent, indicating that he had something up his sleeve.

"Probably you've heard of something more remarkable," they said to him.

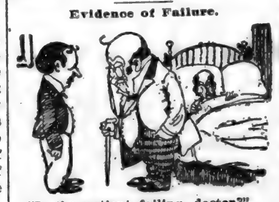
"Yes," he answered, "when it rains in Alabama it invariably rains just rain. Ours is now a prohibition State."

Not a Kiss.

"I heard him behind the door pleading for just one. They must be engaged."

"Naw, they're married. It was a dollar he was pleading for."—Washington Herald.

Evidence of Failure.



"Is the patient failing, doctor?"

"Yes, he hasn't made a single reference so far, to-day, to the score of yesterday's game."

Prudence.

Theater Visitor (at box office)—I don't know how I shall like the new play. Can't I in the meantime have part of a ticket for the first act?—Kleine Witzblatt.

When She Cooks.

Young Husband—So this is the new soup which tastes so good, but what is that floating on the top?

Wife—O—that is the—cooking recipe.—Kleine Witzblatt.

A Moderate Request.

Lady (to doctor)—These are the same pills as you lately prescribed for our cook. I would ask at least that you treat me a little differently from my servants.

All for Him.

"Your fiancee seems to have a will of her own."

"Yes, and sometimes I half regret that I'm sole beneficiary."—Philadelphia Press.

Hard to Tell.

Millions—Do you think you will learn to like your titled son-in-law?

Billions—I don't know; I can't tell where to place him in my expense account. He is neither a recreation nor an investment.

Spared the Necessity.

"I hope," said the rich man, "that you will never appropriate to your own use that which belongs to another or tell a lie."

"As you have made my fortune for me, father, I won't need to."—Houston Post.

Small Variety.

The inquisitive stranger stopped in front of the cottage by the roadside.

"Who lives here, children?" asked the inquisitive stranger.

"Mr. and Mrs. Stone," responded the youngsters in the yard.

"Indeed! And who are you?"

"Oh, we are the little pebbles, sir."

A Wonder.

Percy—What is the best record you ever made at golf?

Kitty—Well, I had three proposals in four games one day.

Exact.

"How old are you, Fraulein?"

"I was 29—last year."—Figaro.

Smooth Business.

Lady (about 40)—I want to see some quite new hats.

Saleswoman—For yourself, madam?

Lady—Yes.

Saleswoman—Marie, go and get out of the window the three new hats for ladies from 18 to 25. (Lady bought all three.)—Wiener Salonwitzblatt.

A Shade of Regret.

"Are you happier now that you own your own home?" asked the solicitous friend.

"Of course," answered Mr. Meekton, "there is a proud satisfaction in having my own place. But occasionally I can't help longing for the time when my wife kicked to the landlord for repairs instead of coming to me."—Washington Star.

By the Old Gate.

"When the old farmer asked you where you were last night I heard you tell him you were playing with two farm hands," remarked the first boarder from the city.

"You bet I was," laughed the second boarder from the city.

"What were you playing? Cards?"

"No, just playing Cupid's game of hands. You see, these farm hands belonged to the pretty daughter of the old farmer."

Yes, Indeed.

"This article on diet says the onion has many virtues."

"They are strong ones, too."—Houston Post.

No Room for Doubt.

Miss DePlayne—I wonder if Mr. Wiley knows that I'm an heiress?

Miss Peachley—Was he attentive to you?

Miss DePlayne—Unusually so.

Miss Peachley—Then he knows.

Why He Never Spoke.

There was a man in our town, and he was wondrous wise; he never spoke unto his wife of his mother's cakes and pies. The secret of his wisdom—guess it if you can; but if you can't, behold it—he was a bachelor man.

Modern Miracles.

Tom—Mrs. Potter tells me her hair turned gray in a single night.

Jack—Nothing remarkable about that. I know a girl whose hair turned yellow in less than an hour.

On the Cards.

She—Do you believe in fortune telling by cards?

He—No; but I know a man who lost a fortune that way.

Not for Him.

"You are all run down," the physician said. "I advise you to go to Pazzazza Springs to recuperate."

"That is impossible," answered the patient.

"Why?"

"I run the hotel at Pazzazza Springs."

Speculative.

Seppel—Gee-whiz! It's 7 o'clock; we must run home.

Fritz—No, if I come home now, I shall only be whipped for staying out so long; now I shall stay out until 9, and then I shall get bonbons and kisses because I am not drowned.—Wiener Salonwitzblatt.

Only One.

Mr. Slicer—I was reading the other day that there are 800 ways of cooking potatoes.

Mrs. Slicer—Yes?

Mr. Slicer—Well, my dear, don't you think if you tried hard you could learn one of them?

Of the Relief of It!

"I had a friend," said the patient listener, finally, "who used to talk and talk——"

"I see what you mean," interrupted Borem. "I'm just like him, eh?"

"Not quite, but I wish you were. He's dead."—Philadelphia Press.

Early Dissipation.

"I wonder, Maria, you let the children go to parties so young. That wasn't the way you were brought up."

"I don't know about that, ma. I wasn't more than a day old when I gave my first ball."—Baltimore American.

Philosophy.

"Papa, can you tell me what an optimist is?"

"Yes, my dear child. An optimist is a man who is married, and in spite of it declares that he is fortunate."

Where, Away?

Cholly—Yes, I have turned many a woman's head.

Freddie—The other way?

Side Stepping as an Art.

"What did the eminent virtuoso say when he was asked to play?"

"Said he hadn't brought his music along."

"Did you provide him with music?"

"Yes; and then he said he couldn't play, after all."

"What was his excuse?"

"Said he hadn't brought his piano along."

Evidences of Wealth.

"Father seems impressed with your talks about coupons," said the maiden. "Have you really any?"

"Sure," answered the guileful youth. "Got 500 saved up toward a piano for our little flat."—Exchange.

Sister Won.

"Well, Bobby, how is your sister?" asked the parson.

"Oh, she's sick in bed; hurt herself terrible," replied the youth.

"I'm sorry to hear that. How did it happen?"

"We were playin' who could lean farthest out of the window—and she won!"—Lippincott's.

Strictly Consistent.

Conservative Wife—I see where a woman has constructed a flying machine. Do you believe a woman could make a success of such an idea?

Cynical Husband—Why not? Most of women's ideas incline to the flighty.—Baltimore American.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Child's Bishop Dress.

The dress that is made in bishop style, that is with the sleeves extending to the neck edge, is always an effective one for the tiny children, and is absolutely simple, while it is pretty and becoming. This one is made of one of the cross-barred dimities that are being so much used this season, with collar and cuffs of embroidery, but it would be found just as appropriate for lawn, batiste and all materials that are thin enough to be made full with success.

PATTERN NO. 5974.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5974.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Tucked One-Piece Waist.

So few blouses close in the front in these days that when one appears which includes that feature, and at the same time is smart and attractive, it is quite certain of its welcome. Here is a model which in addition to such practical advantage shows several novelties, and which is as graceful and charming as well can be. The sleeves and the over blouse are cut in one, while there are close-fitting under sleeves that are faced with lace, and there is a girdle

PATTERN NO. 6031.

arranged over the lower edge, so that the whole garment is made in one and is closed together at the front. In this instance crepe de Chine is titched with belding silk and trimmed with applique, the chemisette and under sleeves being of filet lace. All the seasonable materials are appripriate.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly.

Order Coupon.

No. 6031.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

UNFAMILIAR FACTS.

As many as 4,061 muscles have been counted in the body of a moth.

The average amount of sickness in human life is ten days per annum.

Eyes that are wide apart are said by physiognomists to indicate great intelligence and a tenacious memory.

Two other Italian streams, the Aniene and the Colterna, are to be harnessed in order to generate electrical power.

CURED HER CHILDREN.

Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema —Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too —Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

The Land of the Free.

"There's eight nations represinted in this ward of ours," said Mr. Halloran to his wife on his return from a political meeting. He began to count them off on his fingers.

"There's Irish, Frinch, Eyetalians, Poles, Germans, Roossians, Greeks an'——"

Mr. Halloran stopped, and began again:

"There's Irish, Frinch, Eyetalians, Poles, Germans, Roosians, Greeks—an' ain't it queer I disremimber the other wan? There's Irish, Frinch——"

"Maybe 'twas Americans," suggested Mrs. Halloran.

"Sure, that's it," said her husband. "I couldn't think."

HER GOOD FORTUNE.

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly disordered. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

Sold by all dealers, 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A palm which grows in South America has a leaf measuring 50 feet long and 12 feet broad—the largest in the world.

Clear, white clothes are a sign that the housekeeper uses Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

ROYAL COMPOSERS.

Henry VIII's Anthems Sung by Cathedral Choirs.

"The first of the English sovereigns who won fame as a composer was Henry VIII. Many of his anthems are sung to-day by cathedral choirs. He also wrote a melodious effusion. 'Now Fayre, Fayrest off Every Fayre,' to quote the original title, for the marriage of his sister, Margaret, with James IV of Scotland," said Miss Alys Lorraine, in the London Chronicle.

"Charles I was another composer, and I am including in my program his effective setting of Thomas Carew's poem 'Mark How the Blushful Morn.'

"I think everybody knows that Queen Victoria was a fine singer and a good pianist, and the late Prince Consort was most zealous in popularizing the art in this country. The majority of Prince Albert's compositions have been collected and published. Of the present members of the royal family the most distinguished as a composer is Princess Henry of Bottenberg.

"Turning aside to foreign courts, the German emperor has won some fame for his 'Song of Aegir,' which is included in my program. The late Duke brtoeh thpforeceirn cmf rhpranhip brother of the prince consort, composed several operas.

"Marie Antoinette will be represented in the program by her setting of Florian's 'C'est Mon Ami,' and from the many works of the Saxon monarch Anthony the Good, who died in 1836, I have chosen a song he composed in celebration of the birth of his nephew, Prince Clement.

"Who was the greatest royal composer? Well, I should think that honor might fall to the nephew of Frederick the Great, Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia, who was killed at the battle of Saalfeld."

REMAINS THE SAME.

Well Brewed Postum Always Palatable.

The flavor of Postum, when boiled according to directions, is always the same—mild, distinctive, and palatable. It contains no harmful substance like caffeine, the drug in coffee, and hence may be used with benefit at all times.

"Believing that coffee was the cause of my torpid liver, sick headache and misery in many ways," writes an Ind. lady. "I quit, and bought a package of Postum about a year ago.

"My husband and I have been so well pleased that we have continued to drink Postum ever since. We like the taste of Postum better than coffee, as it has always the same pleasant flavor, while coffee changes its taste with about every new combination or blend.

"Since using Postum I have had no more attacks of gall colic, the heaviness has left my chest, and the old, common, every-day headache is a thing unknown." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

SEPTEMBER

0316
L 903

What is Pe-ru-na.

Are we claiming too much for Peruna when we claim it to be an effective remedy for chronic catarrh? Have we abundant proof that Peruna is in reality such a catarrh remedy? Let us see what the United States Dispensatory says of the principal ingredients of Peruna.

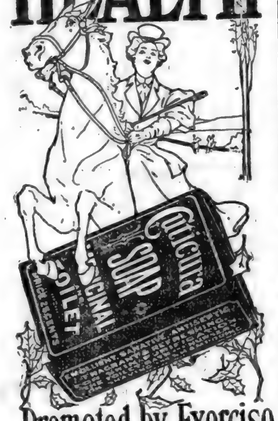
Take, for instance, the ingredient hydrastis canadensis, or golden seal. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes lining various organs of the human body.

Another ingredient of Peruna, corydalis formosa, is classed in the United States Dispensatory as a tonic.

Cedron seeds is another ingredient of Peruna. The United States Dispensatory says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a substitute for quinine.

Send to us for a free book of testimonials of what the people think of Peruna as a catarrh remedy. The best evidence is the testimony of those who have tried it.

SKIN HEALTH



Promoted by Exercise and Cuticura Soap

In the promotion of Skin Health, Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, is undoubtedly superior to all other skin soaps because of its influence in allaying irritation, inflammation, and clogging of the pores, the cause of disfiguring eruptions. In antiseptic cleansing, in stimulating sluggish pores, in emollient and other properties, they have no rivals.

Sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27, Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5, Rue de la Paix; Austr.; Ils, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; India, B. K. Paul, Calcutta; China, Hong Kong Drug Co.; Japan, Maruya, Ltd., Tokio; Russia, Ferrein, Moscow; So. Africa, Lennon, Ltd., Cape Town, etc.; U. S. A., Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Post-free, Cuticura Book on Care of the Skin.

SICK HEADACHE

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND WATERPROOF OILED GARMENTS

are cut on large patterns, designed to give the wearer the utmost comfort

LIGHT-DURABLE-CLEAN AND GUARANTEED WATERPROOF

SUITS $3.00
SLICKERS $3.00

A. J. TOWER CO. BOSTON, U.S.A.
TOWER CANADIAN CO. LIMITED, TORONTO, ONT.

Get your Letter Paper and Envelopes printed at this office. We can give you the

EAGLE LINEN PAPER and ENVELOPES

It is fine and will suit you. Try it.

If afflicted with sore Eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

REVIEW OF INDIANA

The docket for the September term of the Whitley Circuit Court shows a total of 515 cases, of which seventy-eight are criminal.

A deal is on between J. H. Johnson & Sons, who purchased the Wawasee Inn at Lake Wawasee, from Clinton G. Wiggins, two years ago, to sell the property to a Chicago syndicate, composed of wealthy capitalists. The syndicate has planned extensive improvements, and will make the place a summer resort for Chicagoans.

The eight-room house of James Nelson, of Brazil, the stable and a number of small buildings on adjoining property were destroyed by fire. The fire, which is believed to have been of incendiary origin, started in the stable. Two valuable horses and two carriages were burned in the stable. The loss on the house and contents is about $800; only partly covered by insurance.

Ruth Kelley, 12 years old, daughter of Robert Kelley, near Princeton, accompanied her father to the barnyard to feed the cows and one of the animals became frightened and suddenly turned. The father threw his hand out to protect the child, forgetting that he had a knife in his hand. The blade penetrated the child's abdomen, making an ugly wound from which she may not recover.

Muskogee, Okla., in a six-foot rowboat is the destination of Frank P. Bowman and Albert Nichaud, of Indianapolis, who recently passed Cannelton on board the very diminutive craft in which they left Louisville, Aug. 3, for their long journey down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, later going up the Arkansas and smaller streams. They expect to reach Muskogee Christmas at the latest.

Fred Tucker, State pure food inspector in Goshen, has caused the arrest of Solomon Uirey, a dairyman, on three charges—placing borax in milk as a preservative, selling milk with 20 per cent. added water and filling bottles without first returning them to the dairy for proper cleaning. The dairy of W. Troub, east of Goshen, has been condemned because it is alleged to be unsanitary.

During a severe wind and rain storm near Sunman the large barn owned by Adam Sohm, Sr., was struck by lightning, destorying the structure and contents. A daughter 16 years old, while milking, was struck by a lightning bolt and killed, while another daughter was dangerously shocked. Much damage was done in the neighborhood by the wind. The storm was the most destructive of the season.

Ten carloads of window glass were shipped from the warehouses of the Johnston Glass Company, in Hartford City, to the Pacific coast, making the largest single shipment in the shortest time ever recorded in the city. The ten carloads consist of 5,000 boxes and the total cost is more than $15,000. The product was sold on the present increased schedule and the Johnston Company by holding its product made a big profit.

For a short time Hartford City's 200-pound probation officer, Dr. W. L. Scott, was almost frozen, while other people were being overcome by the heat. Preparing for bed he lay down on the floor and directed the cold air from an electric fan on himself. He soon fell asleep, and when he awoke he was numb and felt like a Rip Van Winkle. He managed to pull himself to the fan and turn it off, and thus probably saved his life.

Figures showing the number of horses in Indiana, March 1 last, and the number sold during the last year have just been compiled by the Indiana Bureau of Statistics. The number of horses on hand March 1 was 635,942, and the number on hand at the corresponding date of 1907 was 636,975. The number of horses sold during the year ending March 1, 1908, was 83,907, and the number sold during the previous year was 104,197.

Gwendolyn Washburn, of Elwood, had a narrow escape from drowning in White river. In trying to emulate Mahar and Dolliher, who took several hundred pounds of carp from the river by feeling around logs with their feet, she suddenly disappeared. Bubbles marked the spot where she sank. A young man at once dived into the water and found the girl being dragged along the bottom of the river by an unseen force. Rising to the surface and holding to the girl's hand, he called for help. The half drowned girl was assisted to shore, where it was found that an immense turtle had resented her interference with his midday sleep and had seized her by the toe. Before she could cream for help the turtle had dragged her under the water, and it was by the sheerest good luck that her absence was noted in time to save her from drowning.

The five-room residence and store building combined, together with contents, owned by Frank Sales, at Buddha, near Bedford, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $2,500, with small insurance.

Northern Indiana farmers are worried over a new disease which is destroying their hogs as fast as the cholera. The disease appears in the form of a stiffness in the limbs, which in a few hours communicates to the body and kills.

The Citizens' Gas and Oil Mining Company, of Portland struck one of the largest producing oil wells that has been drilled in the Bear Creek Township field for many months.

Albert Cook, 35 years old, was arrested at Bedford charged with chicken stealing. Cook, who is the son of one of Bedford's best-respected citizens, has been a source of much trouble to his parents. He has served one term in the Reformatory for horse stealing. When arrested he had the "goods" with him. He stole to buy liquor.

Seeing the gasoline stove in his home at Muncie ablaze and fearing it would explode, Ephraim Peake threw it out of doors. It had scarcely touched the ground when it let go with a noise that was heard several blocks. The firemen were called but the stove had done no damage to anything but itself and not even a piece of it could be found.

Mrs. John Lightfoot has just ended a fast of thirty-three days at Terre Haute. She weighed 230 pounds when she began the fast, but now she tips the beam at 33 pounds less. In the time that she was fasting she attended to her duties as cashier in a grocery store. She says she experienced no discomfort after the first two days of abstinence.

Because, his friends assert, they have knowledge that in recent years he has saved the lives of nine people, Frank Scott, a blacksmith of Digdon, is being considered by Andrew Carnegie for a medal and allowance in recognition of his services. The ninth life saved by Scott was that of Miss Carson, of Rigdon, who was drowning in a gravel pit full of water, two weeks ago.

Warren McDaniel, of Wilkinson, lay down on his back in the woods while watching for a squirrel, and another hunter, thirty steps away, seeing a movement in the grass and weeds, fired on the supposition that game was concealed there. Nearly thirty shot entered McDaniel's body between his hips and head. His condition is critical. Neither hunter knew the other was in the woods.

What is believed to be the next largest fresh-water pearl ever discovered, has just been found in the waters of Sugar creek by Peter Coffman, near Thorntown, northeast of Crawfordsville. The pearl weighs fifty-seven grains. The largest fresh-water pearl weighed sixty grains, and was on exhibition at St. Louis during the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Mr. Coffman has sent the pearl to New York City experts to have its value determined.

Four times in as many weeks a burglar with a peculiar sense of humor and a skeleton key has entered the real estate office of John C. Eiler, in Muncie, ransacked the desks, stolen what money he could find and then departed, after carefully locking the door by which he entered. Each time he has been rewarded by obtaining a few dollars. He makes one visit each week. "If I only knew on what night to expect him, I'd sit up and wait for him," said Eiler.

Reports compiled by the Indiana Bureau of Statistics show a decided decrease in the poultry raised in the State during the last year. The number of dozens of fowls raised in 1908 was 1,355,669. The number in 1907 was 1,638,403. It would seem from the nature of the reports that poultry raisers are turning their attention to quality more than to quantity, as there was an increase in the number of eggs produced in Indiana in 1908. The number of dozens of eggs produced in 1908 was 62,648,508, while the number in 1907 was 62,410,103.

Samuel Derford, northwest of Hopkins Park, has an old diary in which was kept a record of high wheat prices from 1811 to 1889. The highest price for wheat, according to the diary, was $5.60 a bushel in 1812. The writer of the diary explains that this extraordinary price was due to the failure of the English crops and to a high tariff on cereals. In November, 1886, wheat sold at $2.03, and during the following spring a "corner" sent the price to $2.85 by May 1. The last high price noted in the diary is $2.00 in 1888 as the result of a corner.

Frank Young, of the White River Mussel Company, found a most valuable ball pearl. It is about the size of a small grape, perfectly round, white and a beautiful golden luster. Its value is variously estimated from $200 upward. J. Harry Montgomery found another ball pearl twice as large but the luster was lacking. The company has found many pearls ranging in price from $15 to $75 besides gaining a profit on the shells, and has paid out $1,000 for day labor. This is the first season the mussel hunting has been pushed. The season is now over.

While over a hundred chautauquas went to the wall this year, Madison closed its sixth assembly recently with gratifying success. Sixteen hundred and seventy tickets have been sold for the 1909 assembly.

George Ade's new town, south of Morocco, was hit hard during a recent storm. Both the general store building and the coal shed were wrecked beyond repair. The grain elevator, the tallest in that part of the State, was not injured.

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

BORAX IN THE DAIRY.

A Matter of Profitable Interest to the Farmer and Dairyman.

The problem of keeping sweet all the utensils used in connection with milk and cream selling, and butter making, has been a serious one with the farmer.

He has come to realize fully that the slightest taint or hint of staleness left in a can, tin or churn may ruin a whole output; that the taint which is left is in the form of bacteria which grow and multiply in milk or butter, producing disastrous results.

The farmer has learned that hot water won't rinse away the greasy residue in dairy utensils.

He has learned that soap leaves a residue of its own which is, if anything, worse than the milk or cream residue, and it is little wonder that there has been a constant clamor for a dairy cleanser and sweetener that will meet modern requirements.

A few of the largest creamery establishments have called experts into consultation on this problem and have with this scientific aid hit upon a product of nature which exactly fills the bill—borax.

Scientists have long known borax as a cleanser, a sweetener and an antiseptic destroyer of bacteria and germ growths. Destroys all that is harmful and promotes and preserves freshness, sweetness and purity, relieving the dairyman and dairy housewife of drudgery and of needless work and worry.

Its cheapness and value should give it first place in the necessities of every dairy.

The cow's udder is kept in a clean, healthy and smooth condition by washing it with borax and water, a tablespoonful of borax to two quarts of water.

This prevents roughness and soreness or cracking teats, which make milking time a dread to the cow and a worry to the milker.

The modern cleanser of all dairy utensils consists of—one tablespoonful of borax to every quart of water needed. Remember—a tablespoonful equals four teaspoonfuls.

Be sure that you get pure borax. To be sure, you must get "20 Mule Team Borax."

All dealers. A dainty book in colors, called "Jingle Book," sent free to any Mother sending name and address of her baby, and tops from two pound cartons of "20 Mule Team" Package Borax, with 5c. in stamps.

Address Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

Forgot.

"Remember not to forget" is an injunction familiar to every age and walk of life. A writer in London Opinion gives the following as a specimen of what even the most cautious may come to:

"What's that piece of cord tied round your finger for?" asked Mr. Church.

"My wife put it there to remind me to post her letter," answered Mr. Chappell.

"And did you post it?"

"No; she forgot to give it to me."

Excitement on 'Change.

"Hello, Graynes! I haven't seen you here for several days. Been out of the city?"

"Not particularly, Stox. I might have been farther away than that, however, for all you know. I might have been out of my mind."

"Huh! You might have been out of that without even leaving your house."

One Thing that Will Live Forever. PETTIT'S EYE SALVE, first box sold in 1807, over 100 years ago, sales increase yearly. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

Borrowing Trouble.

"She fears her husband has lost his mind."

"He hasn't lost much."—Houston Post.

FITS St. Vitus' Dance and Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ld., 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

R-r-revenge.

Trusty Henchman—Well, what are your plans for the future?

Defeated Candidate (with exceeding bitterness)—I am going to start a weekly newspaper! By gad, I'll show 'em!

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

INCOME OF TRINITY CHURCH.

Estate Derives Revenue from Disgraceful and Unhealthy Tenements.

Trinity church is the holder of one of the greatest estates in New York or in the country, says Charles E. Russell in Everybody's. It owns in the city property worth, according to different estimators, from $39,000,000 to $150,000,000, from which it draws an enormous revenue, the amount of which is never made public. For many years no investigator has been able to obtain any more definite knowledge of these matters than that this is the wealth of Trinity which she holds for good purposes. How comes it that on the east side of New York have been built in recent years bright, clean, fireproof and sanitary flats, in such numbers that certain regions have been transformed by them, and life for those that dwell in them has been changed from dirtiest misery to something almost suggestive of decency, while Trinity has done nothing of the kind?

How comes it that the Astor estate, owner of hundreds of tenements, has pursued for years one settled policy of improvements for the benefit of the tenants, and the Trinity tenants have been left to shift for themselves?

The Astor estate maintains no charities, it has no missions, no hospitals, no beds and no Sunday school extensions; yet I am perfectly certain that the balance of actual good in the world is in its favor; I am perfectly certain that to obliterate one court that breeds tuberculosis is better than to spend $70,000 a year on organ music, and that to provide a tenement with fire escapes is better than to preach a sermon of remote and genteel theology. The management of the Astor tenements indicates what even a small measure of civilization can do in the midst of barbarous conditions; the management of the Trinity tenements shows what callous neglect can do to further and aggravate barbarous conditions.

To be sure, all tenement houses are bad, I know that; all tenement houses are terrific indictments of the conditions of grab and gain and splendor and shame that we tolerate.

And if the tenement, speaking generally, works ill, Trinity's tenements must be a matter of grave concern to us all. Trinity's tenements must work more than common ill, for they are the worst tenements in New York.

Handwriting.

As a rule, clear handwriting is more common with persons who do not write for a living than with those who do. Authors, for example, are creating something when they write; their mind is concentrated on this creative work; their thoughts are generally ahead of their hand, sometimes a whole sentence, and they hurry to keep pace with them. The result is bad handwriting, but handwriting with individuality in it, if not character. There is a theory that plain writing is most easily forged. This is not true. Obscure signatures are most easily forged and the so-called freak signatures, which nobody can read, easiest of all. The best signature and the safest for a man who signs checks is neither too prim nor too involved; just plain, everyday writing, done in the easiest way, according to his temperament. Such a signature expresses as much character as any handwriting can, but it doesn't tell us a thing about the man's moral makeup; not a thing.—Boston Globe.

The Inevitable Joke.

Governed by the ruling passion for giving sweet, poetical names to country places, a man who lives in the central part of Pennsylvania, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, built a handsome little villa and called it "The Nutshell." Thus was the home introduced to his friends, and it became widely known; but to the surprise of all it was one day suddenly changed to "Sylvan Nook," and naturally a flood of inquiries soon began to pour in.

"Say, old man," remarked one of his neighbors, on noting the change, "why have you given your home a new name? What was the matter with 'The Nutshell?'"

"Why?" responded the man, with some warmth. "Because I was tired of being joked. There isn't a boy for a mile around who hasn't stopped and rung the door bell every time he passed to ask if the colonel was in."

Do Your Clothes Look Yellow? If so, use Red Cross Ball Blue. It will make them white as snow. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Too Suggestive.

The prospective purchaser was taking a trial trip in the motor car that had been the most highly recommended to him, and was speeding along in the country.

"What clump of buildings is that over there on the right?" he asked.

"That's the county poorhouse," answered the chauffeur.

"Well, don't stop here," he rejoined nervously. "I don't want to add another to the list of men whose automobiles have taken them to the poorhouse!"—Chicago Tribune.

An Awakener.

"Good gracious, what an early riser that Mrs. Gadd is!"

"There must be a bargain sale somewhere."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Almost Cheerful Over It.

Care had just killed the cat.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity!" exclaimed Caro, smiling wanly.

For many an exasperated neighbor had tried in vain to do it.

Apportioning the Year.

Now strolls the youth beside the sea,
No longer grimly thrifty,
For just two weeks' vacation he
Must save up coin for fifty.
Washington Star.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

He Knew.

"Why is it," asked the teacher of the class in chemistry, "that there is more nutriment in beans, for example, than there is in pork?"

"Because," answered the boy with the bad eye, "when you order 'em at a lunch counter you get a plateful of beans and only half a bite of pork."—Chicago Tribune.

Involuntary Contributions.

Ordinary Individual—I see President Roosevelt has been offered a dollar a word for the story of his hunting adventures in Africa next year. If he had been paid at that rate for his message to Congress—gee!

Predatory Trust Magnate—Huh! They cost a lot of us a good deal more than a dollar a word!

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
RHEUMATISM, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, BACKACHE, DIABETES.

375 "Guaranteed"

Paxtine TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

JOS. DUCHAC & CO.

FINE WISCONSIN FARM AND TIMBER LANDS $10 to $25 AN ACRE

92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y.

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 36—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG CO., Quincy, Illinois.

SEPTEMBER

0317
L 903

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY READ." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. ring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

SHOE REPAIRING

Neatly and substantially done.

Half Soles 40 and 50 cents.

Work Done Promptly.

George Milliman

WABASH CORNERS.

John Dull, wife and children ate Sunday dinner at J. R. Shillings.

Mrs. Steel and brother of Butler spent Sunday at Wall Wasson's.

O. K. Shull and family spent Sunday, guests at Benjamin Hamilton's at Coburntown.

Ray Herrick spent part of last week in Ft. Wayne, the guest of Mr. Wilkinson.

Ed Plummer, wife, and children of Coburntown were Sunday guests of Cal Loux and wife.

J. B. White and wife and Sherman Wolf and wife spent Sunday with Gene White and family.

Eggs 20c. per dozen at the BIG FOUR STORE.

Windfield Provines cut his finger severly last week while cutting bands on a threshing machine.

Helen Arnold of Auburn Junction, spent Sunday night and Monday with Sherman Rickett and family.

Miss Blanch Wineland of St. Joe who is working for Mrs. Pearl Provines spent Saturday night and Sunday at home.

Mrs. Maggie Thomas of St. Joe, Mrs. Cora Herrick, Anna Rickett and Angelia Wolff, assisted Ida Herrick in cooking for threshers, Friday afternoon.

Buy school shoes at the right place this time. Buster Brown and W. L. Douglas shoes for boys. Tans and black. THE BIG FOUR STORE.

Flour that bakes is flour that takes. Orangeville at Barney's.

Mark Shull from Coburn's Corners neighborhood brought some fine specimens of garden huckleberries into the office Monday morning. You can see them in the window.

The St. Joe schools begin next Monday. Parents and children should all be ready when the first bell rings.

Mrs. Charles Benjamin is sick with typhoid fever.

Vera Andress went to Auburn Monday, to complete her course of millenery. She took three months of the work last spring and will now finish.

Mrs Emma Hadsell of Ft. Wayne returned to her home Saturday evening after visiting a number of days with relatives at Hicksville, St. Joe and Coburns Corners.

Grace Leighty and Chloe Rhodenbaugh attended a picnic at Dutch Ridge Saturday and spent Sunday at the home of the latter's grandparents at Leo.

Merritt Sechler and Ralph Patterson were members of a party of young folks from Harlan who enjoyed a picnic at Shirley City, along the banks of the Maumee, last Saturday.

Miss Dora Williams of Huntington and Miss Ruth Hartzell of Republic, Ohio visited last week in the family of J. L. Rhodenbaugh.

Mack Leighty and family with Mrs. Yarnell were guests of Ed Leighty and wife, Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Leighty spent Sunday with her father, H. H. Sales at Spencerville.

Jay Harrod and sister Gertrude, of Mansfield, Ohio, came Friday night and will spend a week visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Ora Sheffer of South Bend has been spending the week since the Sheffer reunion visiting in the families of Dr. M. S Sheffer and John Knight.

Cabinet photos $2.00 and up at Spurgeon's Studio, every Tuesday.

Try a sack of Orangeville flour at Barneys. Once used, always used. There is none better.

Lost: A coat between St. Joe and Hicksville. Return to News office if found.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Lutheran church will meet with Mrs. Kate Leighty, Saturday, Sept. 5th at 2 p. m. The annual election of officers will be held at that time. All members are requested to be present.

Our new fall wraps will be in, in a few days. Wait for them. BIG FOUR STORE.

New lot of dress goods just received New shades, 25c, 50c, $1.00 and $1.50 per yd. THE BIG FOUR STORE.

Commencing Thursday, September 10th. I will make cider every Thursday. HARRY KEES.

The Democrats will have a big day at Auburn in the Coliseum, Saturday, September 5th, where the Bryan & Kern club will open the campaign in DeKalb county.

Band concert next Saturday night. Come and hear it.

John Smith and son, Harry, and Charley Henderson, wife and daughter Ruth, went to Mansfield, Ohio, Tuesday to attend the Smith family reunion, next Thursday.

Mrs. John Johnson and two daughters, Goldie and Ida, came Tuesday and will remain until Friday visiting friends.

Shoe Repairing.

First class work repairing shoes and boots. Will be at Sechler's lunch room every Monday. Leave work there. FRANK STEVENS, SPENCERVILLE, IND. 35-2.

HARLAN ITEMS.

Will Cummings is seriously ill with lead poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. John Myres are spending a few days at Hope, Ind.

Miss Grace Bickhart visited with friends at Ft. Wayne last week.

Edna Fry of Leo, was the guest of Berdine James last week.

Jennie Charleswood of Garrett visited with relatives this week.

Mrs. John Stopher who has been ill for a few days is much improved.

John Bickhart is spending the rest of his vacation at St. Ignace, Mich.

Mrs. Elvira Roberst spent last week with her son Will at Warsaw.

Lucile and Louise Saylor of Huntertown spent the week visiting Freada Reichelderfer.

The Bauserman family reunion was held at the home of James Smith last Thursday.

Mrs. E. T. Julian and sons, and Mrs. Brady Miller are spending a few weeks with friends in Ohio.

A number from this place attended the yearly meeting of the Defiance county churches at Milford, Sunday.

H. W Stopher left Saturday night for Delphi, where he will do the music work in the county institute.

There was no preaching at the M. E. church Sunday morning on account of the death of Mr. Foot of Scipio ts.

Our town was very much improved the past week by several new cement street crossings and many new walks.

Word was received here Friday of the death of Mr. Trmmel of Woodburn The body was brought here for burial.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Fosnile and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Shirley are attending the Killian family reunion and visiting friends in eastern Ohio this week.

The following persons attended County Institute at Ft. Wayne this week: Misses Bertha Bickhart, Beryl Boshon, Frances Hartzell, Nellie Wilson, Cora and Florence Henderson, and Lyle Swift.

Ella Page returned home last Friday from a weeks stay at Winona Lake.

Lola Rachelderfer returned home Saturday from a weeks visit with friends at Ft. Wayne and Auburn. Miss Joy Shutt returned home with her for a few days stay.

A picnic at Shirley's grove Saturday afternoon, was enjoyed by the following persons: Misses Lyle Swift, Ella Page, Bertha and Grace Bickhart, Nellie Blackburn, Joy Shutt and Lola Reichelderfer: Messrs. H. W. Stopher Ora E. Blackburn, John C. Hoffman, of Ft. Wayne, M. E. seceler and R. W. Patterson of St. Joe, and O. E. Tarbox of Butler.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 82.

St. Joe, - Indiana.

COBURN'S CORNERS

H. A. Coburn is on the sick list.

Charley Freeburn went to Toledo, Monday.

Clyde Hart is much improved at this writing.

Miller Dermott is giving his house a new coat of paint.

Hear George N. Burni at the Christian church, St. Joe, Sunday evening.

Philip Carper and family visited with W. M. Ables and wife Sunday

Mrs. W. H. Northup spent part of last week with her husband near Ft. Wayne.

Harry Driver, of Hall's Corners took dinner with Sax Hadsell and family, Sunday.

Walter Abel left Monday morning for Toledo to attend the soldiers encampment.

Wm. Hamilton and wife, Mae Hamilton, and Lee O. Tustison spent Sunday at Hamilton Lake.

W. F. Maxwell and wife took dinner with Theil Wilson and family, of near Auburn, Sunday.

Benj. Hamilton and J. M. Milliman went to Toledo Monday morning to attend the soldier's encampment.

Wm. Able and wife, and Mrs. Ross Able attended the Nelson Reunion at Hicksville Fair Grounds, last week.

Esther Karn of Ft. Wayne visited with her sister Mrs. Walter Able and family last Wednesday and Thursday.

I have one New Superior nine hoe pin drill with grass seeder, also one second hand top buggy. Both will be sold cheap for cash.

D. J. BAKER.

The Sunday School at this place voted to attend the annual picnic of the Newville U. B. Sunday School, next Saturday.

The mother and an aunt of Mr. Smith Kain visited with him last week. They went to New Haven, Thursday.

FOR SALE: Two young brood sows with pigs. One with nine, the other eight. Chester White and Poland China. DAVID ANDRESS. 35-3.

Mira Conine entertained to dinner Wesley Hart and wife, Matie Gee, Effie Schoolmaster and Mrs. Winnefred Hart, Tuesday.

Swell tan and oxblood shoes for men. Just arrived. THE BIG FOUR STORE.

Dorris, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Shull, was injured Wednesday when the raised cutter bar of a mowing machine fell on her head, cutting a gash about four inches long. Dr. Sheffer was called to dress the wound. She is getting along nicely at present.

Our entire stock of poultry for sale at prices which will surprise you. Strong, healthy and in the pink of condition, bred for winter laying and ready for active business in October. Just furnishing them moulting and only a year old—what do you think of them at fifty cents each? Take them in bunches of five, fifteen and fifty—as you want them. Buff Orpingtons, Buff Rocks and a few Rhode Island Reds—you know how they layed last winter—if not come and I will show you their egg record.

Remember 50c. apiece for anyone or all of them, none reserved they all go. Fine Rhode Island Red roosters from the Siegel yards of Poland, Ohio, at one dollar apiece. One exceptionally good male bird of the above strain for which I refused five dollars for last fall, yours for $2.50.

They must be sold this week. Leave your order at my home.

C. A. WOODCOX.

CAUCUS

The Prohibitionists of Concord township will meet in caucus in the skating rink at St. Joe Saturday, September 12 at two o'clock P. M. for the purpose of reorganization and nominating a towship ticket.

P. A. SHUETS, Committeeman.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

FAIRVIEW

Harold Houser is on the sick list.

Dock Brown spent Sunday with Russell Houser.

Mark Eselburn, wife and children spent Sunday with Lankey Morrs'.

Laura Baker, Floyd Maurer and Fred Elson spent Sunday with Vera Coyle.

Miss Sheffer of South Bend, Ind., was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. John Knight, over Sunday.

Hazel and Mabel Bassett, who formerly lived in this vicinity, are visiting relatives and friends here this week.

Will Moudy and wife moved last Thursday to Churubusco, where Mr. Moudy will teach school this winter.

Norman Rolland had a horse die last week with blood poison. It was one he purchased about a year ago and is quite a loss to him.

Letha Coyle is spending a few day at Fairfield Center.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Koch spent a few days last week in Busco helping their daughter to get things straightened in her new home.

S. S. Kimes

—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.

Spencerville, Ind.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,

Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

The Roof Question

is completely solved in the use of

Forest Galvanized Shingles.

They give you a storm, wind and fire proof roof. The strongest metal roof in the world and one so perfectly ventilated that it will not rust on the under side. A very ornamental covering for any building. This roof is lightning proof.

$6.25 per square on the house.

Per square on the barn $5.75

We handle all kinds of metal roofing and spouting. Call and get prices before buying elsewhere. All work guaranteed.

FRANK KINSEY,

Roofer & Tinner.

Shoes For Fall Wear

We now have our new fall line of shoes on the shelves and are making no boast when we say it is one of the most complete line of shoes in DeKalb county. "Seeing is believing", so come in and look.

Men's Shoes $1.50 to 4.50. Ladies Shoes 1.00 to 3.50

Children's Misses' and Boy's Shoes from 50 cents to $2.50

A waterproof working man's shoe at $4.00 that can't be beat.

See Our New Line of Soft and Stiff Hats for Fall Wear.

SOL BARNEY

SEPTEMBER

L 903

U318

Spencerville Page of the

ST. JOE NEWS

SUPPLEMENT WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 2, 1908

Local Items.

Rev. and Mrs. Sweeney were visiting the latter's people last week.

Mr. and Mrs. King took Sunday dinner with Henry Murray and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevy spent Saturday and Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank House.

Ed Hull has joined the Tecumseh, Mich., ball team. His first game was a victory, allowing his opponents but two hits.

Mr. John Beams and son Robert, left Sunday night for Toledo, Ohio, where they will spend a few days visiting relatives.

The stork and Dr. Shook visited the home of Mrs. Nettie Stewart and presented Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stewart with a fine baby girl, Monday.

The Auburn ball team defeated our boys, last Saturday, on the home grounds in a fast played game. The score resulted 2 to 3. Allen pitched a good game for the locals.

The Lutheran's have improved their church property putting cement walks from the corner, past the church to the parsonage. There has also been a walk put in from the Drug Store to Furniture Store.

Miss Stella Harter of Hall's Corners, visited relatives here, Friday.

Alvin Keesler took sick Sunday and Dr. Kimes services were called.

Uncle William Henderson who has been sick is just about the same.

F. R. Bowman and wife left Friday for a couple days outing at the lake.

Mr. James Value was called to the bedside of his sister Mrs. McCorry who was seriously ill.

Mrs. Benninghoff and son, Golden and Mr. A. F. Heyman and wife were at Ft. Wayne Thursday.

Mr. Jack Moody, who has been suffering for a couple of weeks with paralysis seems to be slowly sinking. The doctor reports that there is little hope.

Mrs. O. W. Rummel entertained at Sunday dinner, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Shurtz and daughter Pearl, Hullie Rummel and family, Misses Armintа and Jennie Steward and Golden Murray.

Dorothy and Maxime, the two youngest children of W. W. Fisher, who have been ill with whooping cough were in a serious condition Sunday and the services of Nurse McDonald of Hope Hospital at Ft. Wayne were secured. The babies are some better at this writing.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also urnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Chas. Markle attended the carnival at Auburn, Thursday

J. W. Henderson of Auburn, visited relatives here, last Thursday.

Perle Hilbert was the guest of relatives here Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. Gertrude Carey and children of Ft. Wayne, visited relatives here, last week.

Miss Mary Comesky of Leo, will be night operator of the telephone exchange. She will begin work Sept. 1.

Mrs. Lydia Jane Steward and Mrs. Samuel Steward were the guests of Mrs. Rosella Wilson of Moris Chapel, Tuesday.

George Henderson, mailcarrier, started on his route Monday morning and was taken suddenly ill. He returned to his home and Morton Shutt completed the work.

Rev and Mrs. P. W. Barton returned to their charge in Ridgeville, Friday. Little May Shoemaker accompanied them. They expect to keep the child in their home for an indefinite time.

Political Announcement.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

Picnic.

Thursday the Lutherans and Methodists will hold their picnic in the Baltz grove. It is expected that everybody have a general good time. All are invited to enjoy the day. In the afternoon the second ball game of the married-single series will take place. This will be a good game. Ladies free, gentlemen 15 cts. The proceeds of this game are to go for sidewalk improvements in our town. Come and help this work along.

Horse Hurt

While running in the pasture with other horses, Sunday, a very valuable yearling thoroughbred belonging to Carl Grill was severely injured. In attempting to jump a fence, the right front foot was broken in two places. The horse was taken to St. Joe. Monday and an attempt made to reset the broken member but nothing could be done and it was necessary to kill the animal. The colt belonged to racing stock and Carl intended to begin training it for the track next summer.

You Should Try Our

PURE OLIVE OIL

There is nothing quite so good that we have found.

$1 quart. 50c pint. 25c ½ pint.

Bowman's Drug Store

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and
Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

George Beam was at Auburn, Tuesday, on business.

Rev. Johnson of Tiffin, O., called on Mrs. Rebecca Bowman, Tuesday.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman, who has been ill, is improving very slowly.

John Dove and Clyde Wilson made a business trip to Auburn, Thursday.

Lavinia Strong of Bear Creek, is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Steward.

Mr. Lemuel Bair and daughters, May, Fern and Merl, of Anderson, were the guests of Daniel Metcalf and family, last week.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER

CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

We are actually giving away these dishes to our cash customers. There is no lottery about this, You get a dish free at our expense. With every ten cent purchase you get a ticket which is to be turned in exchange for dishes. With every $1.00 purchase you get a cash ticket which you can use in exchange for a China Closet worth $15. Call at the store at any time and learn the particulars. We are doing all in our power to convince you that it pays to trade at our store.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience

Spencerville, Indiana.

SEPTEMBER

L 903

0319

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 9, 1908. NO. 37

Every Man of Means

Saved Some of His Money

He layed by in days of plenty that he might be able to meet his obligations in days of adversity. The secret of success is not so much in knowing how to make money as in knowing how to save it. A bank account makes a man feel more independent, he knows he has something to fall back on and learns to be careful of his savings. Suppose you save only $2 per week, it will amount to a considerable in time. Learn to be economical and deposit your savings with the

St. Joe Valley Bank.

GOOD SERVICE

Ready for you when you need anything in the grocery line. A complete assortment of good groceries always on hand. It is not too much to say that as well chosen and complete a lot of groceries as are shown in large city stores can be found

AT

CHAS. F. KAGEY'S

It can also be said that they are pure groceries. They come into the store clean and are kept clean. Kagey does everything possible to satisfy his customers. Should you purchase any article in his store and find it unsatisfactory all you need to do is to return it. He guarantees to make it right, and he means it.

You may be certain of good service at Kagey's

Grocery and

RESTAURANT.

Bring Your Produce Here.

POST CARDS.

Until further notice I will make post cards for 50c per doz.

Here Every Day. Phone No. 20.

W. C. DeLONG, Photographer.

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

SCHOOL DAYS.

They are now here and with books, pencils, writing paper and pens, the boys and girls are off to school. We desire to call attention to our line of

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for every purpose,

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

SCHOOL BOOKS and BAGS.

School Books Sold for Cash Only.

Tustison-Whitehurst.

Wednesday evening September 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehurst in Newville, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Hazel, to Earl W. Tustison of Concord township. The ceremony was performed by Elder Fred Thomas and was beautiful in its simplicity. The parents and a few of the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Orley Woodring were the attendants with the bride and groom. Shortly after the ceremony and congratulations, the young men of Newville and vicinity let loose with their noisemaking machines and treated the newly weds to a tremendous belling. After the noise had ceased and the merry makers retired; the wedding guests were seated to a bountiful supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Tustison came Thursday to the home of the groom's parents. On Friday evening the people of the Coburn's Corners neighborhood to the number of forty gave them another old fashioned belling and a liberal shower of about twenty-five presents, all of which were well chosen. The band boys were also present and assisted in making the evening a pleasant one. The contracting parties certainly received their share of bellings, serenades and useful presents and surely recognize the enthusiastic good will of their many friends in their respective home neighborhoods. The married couple will remain during the winter with Mr. Tustison's parents, and he will continue to assist with the farm work.

Special Music.

Music will be a special feature in the morning service at the Methodist church, next Sunday. J. E. Sturgis of Butler, will be present to assist. Mr. Sturgis is a singing evangelist of great repute, having sung with some of the most noted evangelists in the United States. Our people well remember the musical ability of Mr. Sturgis as he worked among us in previous years and all will be glad to hear him at the Methodist church Sunday at 10:30. Rev. J. C. McCain will give the sermon of the morning.

S. S. Workers in Convention

The Sunday School workers of Concord township held their convention Sunday afternoon and evening in the Christian church. The attendance was good but schools outside of St. Joe were not represented as well as had been expected. A number were present from Newville township.

The program was begun with a special song service and the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Dressel. The topic for afternoon discussion was, How Can a Teacher Draw out a Class that will Neither Study nor Ask Questions? The topic was first presented by D. J. Baker followed by Mrs. Dr. Sheffer. Both speakers touched upon excellent points and a number asked questions and gave added ideas during the discussion.

George N. Burni, state worker, was present and gave a short talk on the importance of the Teachers Training Course. In the few minutes alloted to him he conducted a model lesson with the audience as pupils. A question box was conducted by Rev. Brown and a number of questions were helpfully answered. After a song, Rev. J. C. McCain pronounced the benediction.

The evening service began with a half hour song service, at the close of which Ralph Patterson and Foraker Ferrill favored those present with a cornet duet. Mr. Burni used the evening in an address whereby he showed the supreme excellencies of the Bible as a literary work. Mr. Burni is a very interesting talker and his earnestness inspired his hearers to want to know more about the book of books. Those who failed to hear Mr. Burni missed the best treat in the way of a Sunday School address, that has been heard in our midst for many years. His ideas were practical and attractive.

An offering was taken in the interest of the state extension work. The audience was dismissed with a song, and a prayer by Rev. Brown.

Monday was labor day.

G. M. Barney and family spent Sunday at Bryan.

Charles Robbins and wife of Battle Creek, Mich. went from here, Thursday, after visiting a number of days with his brother, Cliff Robbins.

Concord's Candidate.

F. J. White, Republican Candidate for Recorder, the only Nominee from Concord Township.

The Republicans of DeKalb County in their convention at Auburn saw fit to nominate F. J. White of St. Joe, as their candidate for recorder. Mr White was born in Concord township in October of 1857 and for fifty-one years has been a resident of this community. During that period he has been in the occupations of farmer, miller and hotel keeper.

Mr. White has ever been straightforward and honest in all his dealings with his fellow men. He is well and favorably known throughout the county and especially does he enjoy the confidence of his home people

F. J. White, Republican Candidate for Recorder.

In presenting himself as a candidate both before the local caucus and in the county convention he declared in favor of the "drys", and now looks to them for their support. Should the voters of DeKalb county through their ballots elect Mr. White, next November, they will have chosen a man qualified for the office of recorder and one who will be found working in the interests of the people.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, administrator of the estate of William Knight deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
August 28, 1908. Administrator.
John W. Baxter, Atty.

Rugors honed at MILLIMAN'S

Hazel and Nelle Todd of Defiance, Ohio, visited from Monday until Wednesday with Carrie Bleeks.

Sylvester Widney returned home Sunday evening after a ten day visit with relatives in Ft. Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Simpson of Hicksville, were visitors in the homes of the Patterson families from Saturday until Monday.

Ribbons on everything—on hats they are simply indispensable, while for ornaments for the hair or dress trimmings its use is unlimited. See the new ribbons at

WARNER'S

SKATING.

RINK WILL BE OPEN ON SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 12, 1908.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO—

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

Breakfast's Ready.

Are you ready? Is your appetite all right, or do you feel as if you wanted no breakfast? In either case you need something. Something that is nourishing and something you can eat with a delightful relish.

Breakfast Food

is what you need. It will relieve your hunger and you will leave the table with that peculiar satisfied feeling that is so pleasant in the morning.

They're All Here.

Post Toasties, X-Cel-O, Grape Nuts,
Empire Rolled Oats, Quaker Wheat Berries,
Quaker Puffed Rice, Shredded Whole
Wheat, Banner Oats, Cream of Wheat, Postum.

Our Grocery Line is Complete.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

U. B. Picnic.

The United Brethern Sunday School of Newville held their picnic in the Hamilton grove, Saturday. The day was a beautiful one, but as the roads were very dusty and many of the farmers busy with their crops, the crowd was not so large as had been expected.

The program of the day was very good. The Mooresville orchestra furnished the music which was very good. Other special music both instrumental and vocal helped to make the day an enjoyable one. Addresses were given by Rev. Hill of Newville and Rev. Miller pastor of the U. B. church at Hicksville. A dinner was served by the ladies which was well prepared and nicely served, being bountiful in the extreme.

New Blacksmith.

Craig Sheffer has purchased the blacksmith stock formerly owned by Chris Sailer, and will continue the business at the same shop. Craig learned his trade a few years ago under Mr. Sailer's direction and since then has had continuous experience in the trade. For two years he has been located at Waterloo, and lately sold his interest in the shop there to come to St Joe. Mr. Sailer will discontinue the business and expects to locate soon, in Texas.

Neva Andress spent last week in Hicksville, the guest of relatives.

The Satin Hat, is the accepted and most popular for 1908–09.

MRS. WARNER.

Literary Club

The Ladies Literary Club of St Joe held its first meeting of the year, September 3rd at the home of the president, Mrs. Bessie Tustison.

The following program was carried out: Instrumental music, by Mrs. C. R. Price followed by the president's greeting. A brief outline was then given by all members of the best things read during the summer. The constitution was then read. Mesdames Curie and Sechler favored the club with a duet.

The remaining hour was spent in a social way. The hostess served dainty refreshments consisting of cocoa, angel food and melon. The club adjourned to meet in one week.

Suprise Party.

Monday evening a suprise party was given by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Widney at their beautiful rural home in honor of their son, Dale. Thirty-two invited guests were present and all assembled to give him a genuine surprise when he returned at nine o'clock from a trip to Butler. The surprise was all the guests had anticipated and somewhat more than its victim was expecting.

The following young men from Auburn were present: Oak Hesselman, George Emanuel, C. H. Weaver, C. Hebel and Harry McIntyre. These five were schoolmates of Dale when he attended school at Auburn. He had not seen them since 1905.

The evening program consisted of piano music, a vocal duet by Foraker Ferrill and Flossie Capp and social games. The guests were served with ice cream and cake, also water melon and musk melon. Everyone present report a good time.

John Sechler,

St. Joe, Indiana.

New School Supplies.

This week we are showing a new line of
Tablets, Pencils and Erasers,
Pens and Ink, Colored Crayons,
Examination paper and School bags.

Get your Supplies Here.

Fresh Canned Goods.

Many of them here and more on the way.
Cove Oysters, Salmon,
Apples, Peaches,
Corn, Etc.

Come In and See.

SEPTEMBER

U320
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 SEPTEMBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 3rd. F. M. 10th. L. Q. 17th. N. M. 25th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Shorthorn Kills Man.

Penned up alone with an infuriated shorthorn bull in a cattle car, William Calder was gored to death by the animal near Libertyville, Ill. The bull was the property of Arthur Meeker, general manager of Armour & Co. The body of Calder, terribly mutilated, was found by Joseph Flanagan, foreman of Meeker's stock farm near Libertyville. The bull was standing with its fore feet on the body. That Calder fought desperately with the animal for his life was indicated by the fact that he tore the bull's eyelids away in his frantic efforts to blind it and escape. The bull, a young animal, had never been in a stockcar before and was rendered frantic by the motion of the train.

Parents Die on Son's Wedding Day.

The death of the father and mother of a family within a few hours was disclosed when the only son, Edward Gruminger, of Brooklyn, N. Y., announced the postponement of his marriage to the daughter of a Brooklyn merchant. Conrad Gruminger, the father of Edward, and his wife, Marchie Schrey Gruminger, died at their home the day set for their son's wedding. Mrs. Gruminger's sudden death so affected her husband, who was ill, that he expired shortly afterward.

Trains Held Up by Floods.

Fifteen passenger trains, beside all freight and stock trains on the Canadian Pacific between Winnipeg and Fort William are held at way stations and side tracks between these two points as a result of the cloudburst that flooded the main line between Horner and Ignace. It is stated by railway men to be the most disaster of the kind that ever has occurred in wetsern Canada. Fully 10,000 people are being kept waiting at points along the line.

Kermit Going Hunting.

The president's son, Kermit Roosevelt, who will accompany his father on the hunting expedition into the wilds of Africa, has left Oyster Bay for a hunt of his own in the northwest. He will join John Greenway, the president's friend and former rough rider, who is now in charge of the United States Steel Corporation's mines in the Lower Mesaba range and together they will hunt over the big game region of the northwest.

Straw Hats for Bryan and Taft.

A. F. Wilson, of Posey county, Ind., made a straw hat from straw grown on his farm and sent it to William J. Bryan. The latter wrote his thanks and said he had worn the hat, finding it "very light and comfortable." Wilson is making another hat, which he will send to William H. Taft.

Two Fatally Burned.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mohr, aged 62, and Frank Mohr, aged 33, her son, were probably fatally burned and two others suffered serious injury in a fire which partially destroyed the two and a half story tenement house at 1895 Central avenue, Cincinnati, O. The property loss is about $1,200.

Bloody Battle Near Tabriz.

A special dispatch received in St. Petersburg says it is reported from Tabriz that Satar Khan has inflicted a decisive defeat on the troops of the shah in which the government soldiers lost eight hundred men in killed and wounded. Civil war is raging anew in Tabriz province.

209,000 Immigrants Come to America.

There was a net increase of 209,000 in the population of the country as the result of immigration during the last fiscal year as shown by the reports of the department of commerce and labor.

$100,000 Lumber Fire in Cleveland.

Fire at Cleveland, Ohio, destroyed lumber valued at $100,000 in the yards of the Saginaw Bay Lumber company. The flames swept over two acres covered with lumber piles.

Fell 500 Feet From an Airship.

Charles O. Jones, of Hammondsport, N. Y., operator of an airship at the central Maine fair grounds, fell a distance of 500 feet and died of his injuries. The accident was caused by the collapse of the airship.

$60,000 Fire at Urbana.

The plant of the Baker Egg Case company at Urbana, Ohio, was totally destroyed by fire. The loss is $60,000, with $35,000 insurance.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

A CONDENSED RECORD OF THE EVENTS OF SEVEN DAYS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

And now it is Bryan's lead in the great game of vote coaxing with a week of speechmaking. At Des Moines he had played the tariff card, charging the Republicans with being disqualified for revision because of alleged past favors from the protected interests, and proposing a gradual change to the basis of a revenue tariff. Tuesday at Indianapolis, when Kern was notified, the Nebraskan was the center of attention, with the trusts as his chopping block. Next day, before an uproarious throng in his native town of Salem, Bryan insisted that political reforms could not be conveyed by will, and that since there were no Republican heirs to the Roosevelt policies, those reforms should revert to "the one from whom the Republican party got them," meaning himself. Finally, he played his trump card at Topeka, Thursday, in a speech devoted to lauding the bank guaranty proposal, which Kansas Republicans had just indorsed.

Kern, in his acceptance speech, hit out at Cannon. Later the Speaker was singled out by another Bryan champion, Gompers, who promised to concentrate his force so as to prevent the re-election of Cannon if possible.

Taft spent the week quietly at Hot Springs, and in a talk for publication proposed that he would call an extra session immediately after his inauguration to deal with the tariff.

President Roosevelt gave out the report of the Panama canal investigators and expressed unbounded delight with the progress thus indicated. He also made a characteristic speech at the dedication of the library at Jordanville, N. Y., given by Douglas Robinson, his brother-in-law.

Two of the West Point hazers were let off with one year's suspension, but the other two were fired.

The result of the conference of the naval men at Newport was in favor of lowering the armor belt on future ships.

Wade Ellis, author of the Republican platform, was appointed Assistant Attorney General under Bonaparte.

New York's Attorney General began suit against the coal trust.

Gov. Fort, of New Jersey, threatened to send troops to enforce the Sunday closing laws at Atlantic City, or to call the Legislature, owing to the defiant course of the saloon interests and the failure of the grand jury to indict law violators.

District Attorney Jerome, of New York, was cleared by the Governor's commissioner.

Artist Earle, of Monroe, N. Y., was jailed for abusing his "affinity" wife.

The Hains brothers were held for the murder of Annis.

Threescore of indictments were returned against Springfield rioters, one for murder being against a woman, who poisoned herself when arrested.

A lone highwayman held up and robbed 125 stage coach passengers in the Yellowstone Park.

Disastrous floods occurred in the South, Augusta, Ga., suffering the worst. Another mine explosion in Oklahoma killed thirty miners.

Mulai Hafid, the Moroccan pretender, scattered the Sultan's army and was generally accepted as the new ruler.

Venezuela's highest court fined the French Cable Company $5,000,000 on the charge of aiding the Matos revolt.

INCREASING IN PRODUCTION.

Statistics of Forty Years Shows Soil Is Not Wearing Out.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says that after forty years' investigation the Department of Agriculture was ready to say conclusively that American land is not wearing out. On the contrary, he said at the Iowa State fair in Des Moines, that its productivity, on the whole, was larger to-day than ten years ago. This is the first information upon the matter given out by the Secretary. The department has just ended an exhaustive and scientific investigation on this subject, and Secretary Wilson regards the result as conclusive. Taking the productivity of the soil of the country of ten years, between thirty and forty years ago, as the basis measured at 100 per cent, the Department of Agriculture has discovered that the productivity for the next ten years was 97 per cent, for the next ten years it was 94 per cent, and for the last ten years it was 108 per cent. "While the investigation disclosed that the crops of between thirty and forty years ago were better than those of ten and twenty years ago," said Secretary Wilson, "during the last ten years there was a bigger average crop per acre than during forty years."

FLOOD DESTROYS FOLSOM, N. M.

Twenty-five Lives Lost in Raging Current of Cimmaron River.

Sweeping down from the mountains, a torrent of water devastated Folsom, N. M. A cloudburst swelled the Cimmaron river out of its banks and a flood of madly racing waters twenty feet high came tearing down upon the town, carrying everything in its path before it. Houses were caught up from their foundations to go swirling away like so many chips. No structures were strong enough to withstand the brunt of the flood. The best built railroad bridges were torn from their piers. The raging waters brooked no opposition. Iron and steel stringers snapped as if they were no more than cotton strings. Twenty-five lives were lost. The flood came upon Folsom without warning. Most of the population was asleep. Many woke to find themselves riding on the crest of the flood and with nothing more seaworthy beneath them than their fast disintegrating homes. Few houses in Folsom escaped damage. The property loss will exceed $100,000.

CUT OF $100,000,000 BY JAPAN.

Enormous Curtailment of Expenditures Part of Financial Plan.

The Japanese government's financial policy, decided upon by the cabinet in Tokio, involves the curtailment of expenditures by $100,000,000, of which 30 per cent will be taken from the army budget and 10 per cent from that of the navy. The postponement of the international exposition, Premier Katsura says, is not purely due to financial reasons, but is owing to the fact that the work of preparation has been insufficient, and it will be quite impossible to make a creditable exposition within three years on an appropriation of $5,000,000. Therefore the exposition will be held in 1917, the anniversary of the accession of the Emperor.

Oklahoma Beer Thrown Away.

Eight hundred barrels of beer, valued at $8,000, belonging to a local brewing company, were emptied into a sewer at Oklahoma City, Okla., in the presence of the State dispensary agent. Two thousand people attended the emptying, some with buckets and pitchers, hoping for a chance of salvage, which hope was disappointed.

Mrs. Chadwick's Husband Fails.

Dr. Leroy S. Chadwick, husband of Cassie Chadwick, who died in the penitentiary, filed a petition in bankruptcy in Cleveland. His personal debts he places at $1,750. While debts contracted through indorsing paper for his wife he places at about $650,000. Dr. Chadwick's assets are $175.

Saved by Kermit Roosevelt.

At Oyster Bay, N. Y., Kermit Roosevelt, second son of the President, stopped a runaway pair of horses after a wild chase on horseback along the shore road into Bayville and probably saved the lives of Mrs. Frank Hilton of New York and her two sons.

Chicago Milk Below Standard.

Government inspectors examined samples of milk shipped to Chicago from near by States and prosecutions will follow, because samples were below standard.

GAGGED AND TIED TO TREE.

Camp Meeting Organist Does Not Recover for Twelve Hours.

A couple driving home late Sunday night found Miss Josie Culp, organist for the camp meeting at Summerland beach, Buckeye lake, Ohio, and daughter of William Culp, a farmer who lives not far from that place, bound and gagged and tied to a huge walnut tree in Smith's grove, about 300 feet back of the hotel. She did not regain consciousness until 7 o'clock the next day. She had been drugged and said that she remembered nothing that happened after 6 o'clock in the evening, when she was in Newark. Miss Culp is 19 years old. She has been playing the organ for the camp meeting services in Smith's grove and left home for that purpose early Sunday. The only statement she made was that she was in Newark at 6 o'clock and remembers nothing from that time. She had no idea of the identity of her assailants.

10,000 SUFFER AFTER FLOOD.

Augusta, Ga., Cries for Clothes for the Army of Victims of Deluge.

As a result of the flood 10,000 people in Augusta, Ga., are in need of clothing and bed clothing. Augusta is battling bravely to ward off suffering, but declines to ask outside aid, though saying the city will accept all contributions. Thousands of men are at work cleaning up after the flood. In a petition to a local paper the white and negro populations on the Carolina side of the Savannah river opposite Augusta have appealed for aid. "There is, it is set out, the most severe destitution; homes and crops have been carried away.

Life Convict Walks to Liberty.

Frederick Proctor, a life convict from Oklahoma, serving a term for murder, made a daring escape from the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing. Proctor had been Warden Haskell's cook. The other night he donned a suit of clothes belonging to the warden's son and boldly walked out through the front door.

Four Hurt When Auto Upsets.

Out for a day's run to Atlantic City just after leaving a hospital, H. Walker, a contractor of Gloucester, N. J., was fatally injured when his big touring car upset near Egg Harbor City, N. J. In the car with him was his wife, mother and his little daughter, all of whom were severely hurt.

Arrested Visiting Sick Wife.

J. W. Rice was arrested in Lexington, Ky., upon his arrival from New York by local detectives charged with the embezzling of $18,000 from the bank at Morehead, Ky., about a year ago. Rice came to be with his wife, who is to undergo a serious operation.

Attempt to Wreck Passenger Train.

An attempt to wreck an Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe train was made near Deerfield, Kan., when a heavy obstruction was placed on the tracks. Henry Welber, a worker in the beet fields, was arrested charged with the crime.

Ends Life in Jail Barber's Chair.

Herbert Woodbury, a hotelkeeper confined in the county jail in Dover, Me., awaiting trial for the alleged murder of his wife, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor while being shaved. He died within two minutes.

Woman Exonerates Negro.

The negro whose alleged attack on a woman started the recent riots at Springfield has been declared innocent by the victim of the assault and a warrant has been issued charging the son of the man lynched with the crime.

Canadian Packing Plant Burns.

The plant of the Canadian Packing Company at Pottersburg, a suburb of London, Ont., was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $150,000, covered by insurance. There is a branch of the company at Port Huron, Mich.

Pastor to Wed Divorcee.

It is announced that the Rev. Dr. William H. Lawrence, pastor of Trinity Episcopal church, Richmond Hill, New York City, will marry Mrs. Frances Mary Gurney Edwards, who obtained a divorce from Julius A. Edwards two years ago.

Balloon Takes Unfortunate Plunge.

A balloon bearing Aeronaut A. S. Mueller and two sons of Charles Gregory of Chicago plunged down at Niagara Falls and the occupants of the basket were severely injured.

WATCHMAN BRUTALLY SLAIN.

Blackhand Blamed for Murder at White Plains, N. Y.

Clubbed until his skull was pounded into a pulp, choked with a strap tied tightly around his throat, and then thrown into a brook to make death trebly certain, was the fate which was meted out to Frank Brady, a lonely watchman on the State road between Tarrytown and White Plains, N. Y. Sheriff Charles M. Lane, who is working on the case, has one suspect under arrest. That Black Hand agents were responsible for the death of Brady there is no doubt. Revenge is believed to have been the motive. Brady was employed as night watchman by Contractors Mallory & Murray, who are building the new State road between Tarrytown and White Plains, which will form a boulevard between the Hudson and the county seat. Friday night Brady had a day off, and an Italian was placed on guard. Saturday night Pasquale Giovani was made watchman, as it was not known whether Brady would return, but he did come back to work. He ordered the Italian watchman away, and that was the last seen of him alive.

BIG VALUE IN KANSAS FARMS.

Assessed by the State Tax Commission at $1,204,426,913.

The people of Kansas have practically as much money invested in farm lands as in all other forms of property combined. The tax returns, made public by the State tax commission, show that the taxable value, which is the cash value under the new law, of farm lands alone aggregates $1,204,426,913. The value of public service corporations, which includes railroads, telephones and trolley systems, but excludes the Western Union's property, amounts to $401,161,030. The Western Union is excluded because of a suit pending in the courts enjoining the tax commission from assessing its property. All the town lots in the State are valued at $368,621,877, and all personal property at $474,191,255.

RACE WAR IS AVERTED.

Killing of a Negro by a Policeman Causes Some Trouble.

A race war was narrowly averted in Parsons, Kan., Sunday morning when Policeman John Williams shot and killed Math Matthews, negro. The better class of the negroes dissuaded the leaders from rash action, and a gathering mob was dispersed. Matthews was a train porter on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, who resisted arrest. Matthews was considered a bad man. He killed a negro in Parsons four years ago.

$2,000,000 FIRE IN SOUTH.

Flames Sweep Through New Orleans Business Section.

Fire which broke out in the center of the commercial district of New Orleans, swept over portions of three blocks, destroying a large number of wholesale houses, manufacturing plants, and small stores. Originating at Bienville and Chartres streets, the flames worked their way north as far as Conti street, and west toward Royal, causing a loss of $2,000,000 before they were finally subdued.

Explosion Kills Man and Woman.

George Bailey, a soldier, aged 70, and Miss Lida Dana, his sister-in-law, aged 40, were fatally burned in an explosion of natural gas that wrecked their home in Wellington, Kan. The woman, who was an invalid in bed, was blown across the room. Bailey was blown out of the door.

Alabama Strike Called Off.

An official order calling off the strike of coal miners in the Birmingham, Ala., district has been issued to all the camps in that section. The end of the strike means that practically all of the mines in the Birmingham district will be on a non-union basis.

Hangs Herself from Balustrade.

Tying one end of a clothesline about her neck and the other to a third floor balustrade in her Philadelphia home, Mrs. Annie H. Riddle, a widow, jumped over the rail, breaking her neck. It is believed ill health prompted the act. Mrs. Riddle was 52 years old.

Considering Mr. Wu's Recall.

The Chinese government is considering the recall of Minister Wu Ting Fang because of alleged indiscreet talks, according to advices from Peking.

RESULTS OF 1ST STATE BATTLES AT THE POLLS

Republicans Win in Vermont by a Plurality of About 28,000.

RETURNS FROM THE PRIMARIES.

Michigan, Wisconsin and Nebraska Hold Significant Nominating Elections.

Returns from the gubernatorial election in Vermont indicate that George H. Prouty, the Republican candidate, is elected by a plurality of about 28,000 over his Democratic opponent, James E. Burke.

The State election was watched with the most intense interest by all of the national political figurers. In the minds of many of them the final reports on November's election night were to be foretold by Vermont's voting. Whether the Republican plurality was to reach up to the landslide figures of 1896, 1900 and 1904, or whether it was to drop below the danger line of 25,000, absorbed the attention of Republicans everywhere.

The Republican vote is more than 8 per cent short of that cast for Governor Bell in 1904. The Democratic vote was 2 per cent short of that of 1904. Practically the entire voting strength of the State was registered at the polls.

Lieutenant Governor Prouty, who has been elected Governor, was opposed by James E. Burke, formerly known as the "Blacksmith Mayor" of Burlington. The Republicans made a strenuous campaign in the State, and the National Committee sent in a strong battery of speakers. Mr. Burke made his fight practically alone, and while the Democratic national organization took a strong interest in the turn of affairs, they sent in few spellbinders.

For the first time the Independence party had a gubernatorial candidate. He ran ahead of both the Prohibition and Socialist nominees.

Vermont's vote has been one of the shining constellations in the political heavens by which political pilots have steered in national campaigns, so soon as the towns and cities of the State had reported themselves on the night of the September election. But once since the wartime period has Vermont failed correctly to forecast the political color of the succeeding national administration, the entire proposition being based upon the axiom that if Vermont gives less than 25,000 Republican plurality in September the Democrats will win in the nation in November. That once was in 1876, when Vermont slipped up. There are plenty of Democrats who are still confident that Vermont was right at that exciting political period. Vermont's September plurality dropped to 23,735, and Rutherford B. Hayes was declared elected President by a majority of one electoral vote.

Vermont's Past Record.

Year.	Rep. Plu. in Sept.	Rep. Plu. in Nov.	President Elected.
1876	23,735	24,078	*Hayes, R.
1880	26,603	27,251	Garfield, R.
1884	22,702	22,183	Cleveland, D.
1888	28,905	28,405	Harrison, R.
1892	19,242	21,067	Cleveland, D.
1896	38,391	40,490	McKinley, R.
1900	31,812	29,719	McKinley, R.
1904	31,537	30,682	Roosevelt, R.

*Victory given to Hayes by electoral commission, though Democrats claimed returns showed election of Tilden.

Wisconsin.

Early returns in Wisconsin indicated the defeat of the La Follette forces by a decisive vote. Senator Stephenson, formerly an ally of La Follette, but now hostile to him, defeated his nearest competitor for the senatorial nomination, Francis E. McGovern, by a plurality of 10,000. McGovern and Samuel A. Cook, who ran third, both claimed the support of La Follette.

Nebraska.

In the contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor in Nebraska early returns showed Shallenberger leading Mayor Dahlman of Omaha. Ninety-eight precincts out of 1,780 gave Shallenberger 1,830, Dahlman 1,280, and Berge 1,069. Dahlman is Bryan's personal friend and the presidential nominee had exerted himself in his behalf.

Michigan.

At the Michigan Republican primaries, where Auditor General James W. Bradley was contesting the nomination for Governor with Fred M. Warner and Road Commissioner H. S. Earle, unexpected apathy was displayed. Early meager returns seemed to indicate the nomination of Bradley.

Volunteers Against Night Riders.

A number of prominent business and professional men of Lexington, Ky., have volunteered to form a cavalry company to be used in awing the night riders of the tobacco belt.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

Robert Hunter, the wealthy New York Socialist author, has been nominated for the Assembly by the Sixth District.

North Dakota and northern Minnesota are calling for thousands of harvest hands at wages ranging from $1.75 to $3 per day and board.

The elevator men of the country north of Thief River Falls promise to deliver to the Twin Cities and other wheat centers 1,500,000 bushels of wheat this season.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Trade generally exhibits a more cheerful tone under the stimulus of sustained improving conditions. The returns as to volume of payments through the banks and business failures show close comparisons. Recovery becomes more distinct in the leading industries, outputs being increased and new demands larger. Iron and steel branches secured important orders this week, and there were also notable operations in wholesale staples.

Contracts for freight and passenger cars, light rails and structural shapes rose to the best aggregate for some time. Much of the new business involves early deliveries, and this permits additions to machinery and hands employed.

The building interests have much work in sight, and this injects further strength to dealings in lumber, mill stuff and quarry material. Structures for mercantile purposes are planned in larger cost than at this time last year.

Distributive demands have advanced to the expected seasonable proportions. Outside buyers assembled in greater numbers than a year ago and, although many yet pursue cautious methods, the bookings make a gratifying total in dry goods, apparel, millinery and food products. Collections show more promptness in the West and South, and credits occasion but little difficulty where the harvests have been good.

Corn growth continues to be satisfactory, live stock is in better supply and the markets for breadstuffs and provisions are mainly higher.

Bank clearings, $201,649,490, are 4.9 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 24, against 24 last week and 24 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 5, against 6 last week and 8 in 1907.—Dun's Review.

NEW YORK.

Buyers are more in evidence and as a result business has expanded measurably at leading western and Pacific coast points and at a few southern centers. Some western cities note evidence of new life in buying by southern and southwestern merchants of fall and winter goods. Incidentally some new stocks are reported being bought at Chicago, which is rather in contrast with a year ago, when coming depression had already begun to make for precaution in embarking in new enterprises.

Despite the improvement, however, the volume of business doing does not equal that of last season and conservatism and caution still are visible. Retail trade is dull the country over. Industry tends to increase in activity, though slowly, but current production is still below anticipations in many instances.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Aug. 27 number 232, against 236 last week, 167 in the like week of 1907, 138 in 1906, 161 in 1905 and 189 in 1904. Canadian failures for the same period number 27, as against 39 last week and 29 last year.—Bradstreet's.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.80; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $7.10; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2, 95c to 96c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, standard, 48c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 76c to 78c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $12.00; prairie, $8.00 to $10.50; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 22c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes, per bushel, 65c to 72c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.10; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $6.85; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 93c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 white, 47c to 48c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.50; hogs, $4.00 to $7.17; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 96c to 97c; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 80c to 81c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.75; hogs $4.00 to $7.05; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 97c to 98c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 79c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.20; hogs, $4.00 to $6.50; sheep, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 94c to 95c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 81c to 82c; oats, No. 3 white, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 73c to 74c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.00 to $1.03; corn, No. 3, 79c to 80c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 69c to 72c; barley, No. 2, 72c to 74c; pork, mess, $14.75.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.30; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.20; sheep, common to good mixed, $2.00 to $3.30; lambs, fair to choice, $3.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.80; hogs, $3.50 to $7.15; sheep, $3.00 to $4.65; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.01 to $1.02; corn, No. 2, 89c to 90c; oats, natural white, 55c to 56c; butter, creamery, 20c to 24c; eggs, western, 19c to 22c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 93c to 95c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; clover seed, October, $6.17.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Alaska will ship at least $8,000,000 in gold to the United States mint this year.

The Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association is due to meet at Clinton, Iowa, Sept. 22-24, to formulate demands to be made at the next session of Congress.

As a result of the board of review raising the value of their property from $88,000 to $250,000 the Eau Claire, Wis., Gas Light Company is up in arms and will fight any such assessment.

SEPTEMBER

U321
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1904, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER IX.—(Continued.)

"I confess I cannot understand you, dear," she said. "What consideration is due a gentleman who is rendered speechless by the accusation of a newspaper? What depth is there to his feeling for your welfare when he rushes away blindly and remains throughout the day, while you are here at the foot of a bursting volcano, as he pointed out. You will find that I am right, Lara. Mr. Constable is not even a worthy accomplice to the talented Stembridge. He is without speech or valor. What remains when a man is neither brain nor brute?" Her voice had not been raised, and Mrs. Stansbury left the library before Lara formed an answer.

The torturing hours crawled by. The gray afternoon turned to dusk, and the dusk to night. The north was reddened by Pelee's firelit cone, which the thick vapor dimmed and blurred. The rumblings were constant. Lara was suffering to fight out her battle alone. She asked no more than this. A thousand times she paced across her room; scores of visits she made to Constable's window, straining her eyes northward, along the road through the day and darkness, to the end of all things—the mountain! Uncle Joey came to plead with her, but she begged him to go away. Her brain was a livid track of flying, futile agonies. In the evening the intermittent rumblings gave way to a growling, constant and incessant. It was as if a steady stream of heavy vehicles was pounding over a wooden bridge. There was a pang in each phase of the monster, since the man had gone up into that red roar. It was nearly midnight when the girl in the upper room heard a step upon the veranda.

"Uncle Joey," she called at the planter's door, "make haste; there is somebody below!"

The moments of waiting assailed the very roots of her reason. The voice that she heard at last was Breen's.

"I beg that you'll forgive me, Mr. Wall, for arousing you at this hour, but it is necessary for me to have a few words with Miss Stansbury."

"Sir," the planter replied, "anything which concerns yourself is of no moment to Miss Stansbury. If your message is from Mr. Constable, you may tell him to come himself or send a native."

"I dislike to appear insistent, Mr. Wall," Breen replied, without irritation, "but I cannot count my errand accomplished until I have heard from Miss Stansbury. If she should refuse to see me——"

"I am coming down, Mr. Breen," Lara called over the baluster. "Uncle Joey, show Mr. Breen to a seat. I'll be there in a moment."

She turned to re-enter her room for a garment. Her mother's figure barred the open doorway.

CHAPTER X.

Constable had been physically unhurt in his thirty years, and the exertions of the past four days had worn little more than the polish from his vitality. Instead of relaxing in the crisis of the newspaper revelation, his body righted under the whip of pride, and he strode down into the city as one who has slipped a burden. He had been beaten in a battle with a woman. Blucher had come to Mrs. Stansbury's aid at the last moment, in the shape of newspapers from the north. From Lara, however, and not the mother, had come the most crippling blow of all. It was Lara who had handed him the newspaper. She did not wait, nor ask. Around this item, Constable built a gloom-structure of baronial proportions.

His attitude toward Breen was very simple. He would not betray his guest for all the newspapers and police in Christendom. Having waived Breen's offer to detail the particulars of his past, during the first night of acquaintance, Constable certainly could not reproach the other for misrepresenting himself.

It was ten-thirty in the morning when he sent a message out to Captain Negley, countermanding sailing orders, and enclosing a cheerful note to Crusoe, containing a draft for the stipulated amount. At the bank he also left a second sum for Father Damien, and procured considerable current paper for his own uses. His mind moved in a light, irresponsible fashion. It was as if he were obsessed at quick intervals, one after another, by mad kings who dared anything, and whom no one dared refuse. His brain kept the great sorrow in the background, and occupied itself with striking artifices. While aware that in losing Miss Stansbury and the privilege of protecting her, the meaning and direction of his life was gone, still Constable did not yet sense the fullness of the visitation. His was not a wound to heal by first intention; and in bad hurts pain assumes command leisurely and in order.

He plunged into a crowd in the market place, and began to talk to the natives whimsically, but to the purpose of starting them toward Fort de France, adding that Father Damien would care for them generously there. "I do not say that this is the last day of Saint Pierre," he exclaimed in French, "but I declare to you that if ever a planet looked as if she were about to spring a leak, Mother Earth has the symptoms localised in Pelee!"

Constable's eyes had fixed upon a carriage passing along the edge of the crowd. Now he moved toward it quickly and seized the bridle. Despite the protestations of the driver, he led the vehicle into the good view of all. His face was red with the heat and ashine with laughter and perspiration. Alarm and merriment mingled in the native throng. All eyes followed the towering figure of the American, now bowed before the swinging door of the carriage—and M. Mondet.

"This, dear friends," Constable resumed, as one would produce a rabbit from a silk hat—"this, you all perceive, is your little editor of Les Colonies. Is he not bright and clean and pretty? He is very fond of American humor. See how the little editor laughs!"

The Frenchman was really afraid. His smile was yellowish-gray and of sickly contour. His article relative to the American appealed to him now, entirely stripped of the humor with which it was fraught yesterday, as he composed it in the inner of inner offices. This demon of crackling French and restless hands would stop at nothing. M. Mondet pictured himself being picked up for dead presently. As the blow did not fall instantaneously, he amended the picture with the sorry thought that he was to be played with before being dispatched.

"This is the little man who tells you that Saint Pierre is in no danger—who scoffs at those who have already gone," Constable informed his hearers, now holding up the Frenchman's arm, as a referee upraises the whip of a winning fighter. "He says there is no more peril from Pelee than from an old man shaking ashes out of his pipe. Yesterday I proposed to wager my ship against M. Mondet's rolled-top desk that he was wrong, but there was a difficulty in the way. Do you not see, dear friends, that if I won the wager, I should not be able to distinguish between M. Mondet's rolled-top desk and M. Mondet's cigarette case in the ruins of Saint Pierre? You would not think that such a small white person could contain so much poison."

There had been a steady growling from the mountain.

"Ah!" Constable suddenly exclaimed, "Pelee speaks again! * * * Ugh, get in there!"

Constable's irritation against the entire tribe of editorial opinion breeders must have found an instant vent at last. M. Mondet was chucked like a large soft bundle into the seat of his carriage and the door slammed forcibly, corking the vials of his wrath. In any of the red-blooded zones, a stranger who performed such antics at the expense of a portly and respected citizen would have encountered a quietus quick and blasting, but the people of Martinique are not swift to anger nor forward at reprisals.

"Come!" Constable yelled, in a voice which jerked up his hearers. "Who has use for my offer? Who goes to Fort de France?"

A few came forward, perhaps a dozen in all, out of the fifty or sixty who had listened. Half in anger, half in admiration, which he did not seek to understand, he ran his eye a last time over the dusty, haggard, stifled crowd which he had failed to move.

From their eyes, sullen, startled and pitiful, he glanced beyond to the place where old Vulcan lay, muttering his agonies. The sight completed the circuit of rending voltage, made him think of Lara. With furious zeal he grappled the work at hand, forced his way out of the crowd, crossed the Roxelane and hurried toward the Hotel des Palms. His physical energy was imperious, but the numbness of his scalp was a pregnant warning against the perils of heat. The city was silent enough to act like a vast sounding board. Voices reached him from far behind, from the harbor front to the left, from shut shops and houses everywhere. At the hotel, after much difficulty, he procured guides and a small outfit for the journey to the summit of the mountain. It was after mid-day when the party rode into Morne Rouge. The ash-hung valley was behind, and Constable drank deeply of the clean east wind from the Atlantic. There was a rush of bitterness, too, because Lara was not sharing the priceless volumes of sun-lit vitality. All the impetus of his mad enterprise was needed now to turn the point of bereavement, and force it into the background again. The party pushed through Ajoupa Bouillon to the gorge of the Falaise, the northward bank of which marked the chosen trail to the summit.

And now they moved upward in the midst of the old glory of Martinique. The brisk Trades blowing evenly in the heights wiped the eastern slope of the mountain clear of stone-dust and whipped the blast of sulphur down into the valley toward the shore. Green lakes of cane filled the valleys behind, and groves of cocoa-palms, so distant and so orderly that they looked like a city garden set with hen and chickens.

Northward, through the rifts, glistened the sea, steel-blue and cool. Before them arose the huge, green-clad mass of the mountain, its corona dim with smoke and lashed by storm. Down in the southwest lay the ghastly pall, the hidden, tortured city, tranced under the cobra-head of the monster and already laved in its poison.

The trail became very steep at two thousand feet, and this fact, together with the back-thresh of the summit disturbance, forced Constable to abandon the animals. It transpired that four of the seven natives felt it their duty, at this point, to stay behind with the mules. A little later, when the growling from the prone upturned face of the great beast suddenly arose to a roar that twisted the flesh and outraged the senses of man, the American looked back and found that only one native was faltering behind, instead of three.

Fascination for the dying Thing took hold of him now, and drew him on. Constable was conscious of no fear for his life, but of a fixed terror lest he should prove physically unable to go on to the end. He found himself tearing up a handkerchief and stuffing the shreds in his ears, to deaden the horrid vibrations. With the linen remaining, he filled his mouth, shutting his jaws together upon it, as the wheels of a wagon are blocked on an incline.

The titanic disorder placated his own. He revelled in it, unconscious of passing time. He did not realise that he was alone, but knew well from the contour of the slope, learned intimately in past visits, that he was nearing the Lac des Palmists, which marked the summit level. Yet changes, violent changes, were everywhere evidenced. The shoulder of the mountain was smeared with a crust of ash and seamed with fresh scars. The crust was made by the dry whirling winds playing upon the paste formed of stone-dust and condensed steam. The clicking whir, like the clap of wings, heard at intervals, accounted for the scars. Bombs of rock were being hurled from the great tubes.

That he was in the range of a raking volcano fire did not impress this ant clinging to the beard of a giant. Up, knees and hands, he crawled—up over the throbbing chin, to the black pounded lip of the monster. Out of the old lake coiled the furious tower of steam and rock-dust which mushroomed in high air, like the primal nebulæ from which the worlds were made. Pockets of gas exploded in the heights, rending the periphery as the veil of the temple was rent. Only this to see, but sounds not meant for the ears of man, sounds which seemed to saw his skull in twain—the thundering engines of the planet.

The rocky rim of the lake was hot to his hands and knees, but he could not go back. A thought in his brain held him there with thrilling bands—the same thought which Hayden Breen evolved as he stood at the edge of the Brooklyn pier. * * * But it was only a plaything of mind—the vagary of altitude and immensity. "Did ever a man clog a live volcano? Did ever suicidal genius conceive of corrupting such majesty of force with his pygmy purpose?" * * * The irreverent query righted the balances.

There he lay, sprawled at the edge of the universal mystery, at the secret entrance to the chamber of earth's dynamos. The edge of the pit shook with the frightful work going on below, yet he was not slain. The torrent burst past and upward, clean as a missing bullet. The bombs of rock canted out from sheer weight and fell behind him. That which he comprehended—although his eyes saw only the gray thundering cataclysm—was never before imagined in the mind of man.

The gray blackened. The roar dwindled, and his senses reeled. With a rush of saliva the linen dropped from his open mouth. Constable was sure that there was a gaping cleft in his skull, for he could feel the air blowing in and out, cold and colder. He tried to lift his hands to cover the sensitive wound, but they groped in vain for his head. With the icy draughts of air, he seemed to hear, faintly, his name falling upon the bared ganglion.

"Peter! Peter Constable!"

He strained his face toward the sound. The lower part of his body would not move. He was uncoupled, like a beast whose spine is broken.

"Peter! Oh, Peter Constable!" he heard again.

(To be continued.)

INDIAN "WOOD FACES."

Strange Religious Rites Observed Among the Ancient Senecas.

Up in the northeast corner of Oklahoma there is a small band of Seneca Indians on a reservation of the same name, says the Kansas City Star. This is a remnant of a nation of Indians that can be traced from the original New England States, as they were forced west and south by the encroachment of the whites and the battle arm of stronger Indian bands that were constantly warring against them.

Among this little band of Indians, probably not more than 100 all told, there are some curious heathen rites that seem to be instinctive with the tribe.

Among them there is an old order known as "The Wood Face." Those who belong to the order can call in the "Wood Faces" in case of sickness, as is often done. They go through a performance that is calculated to drive out from the sick person the evil spirit that may be hovering around the bed. These faces are masks made out of wood, usually carved to represent a human form of some character, but sometimes made to represent the head of an animal.

They are painted red and black, with large silver eyes and a horse tail for hair.

Arrayed in one of these hideous masks, together with rattles made of turtle shells fastened together at the upper edges with small stones inside and tied to the legs of the "Wood Faces," as they dance, roll and kick, singing their incantations the while, the Indians present a scene calculated to drive away any evil spirit that might happen along and incidentally drive the life out of the patient. While all this is going on it is also customary to pour ashes on the head of the patient.

It appears that this organization has been in the tribe for many generations, the modes of procedure differing sometimes, but following the same general character. Its secret signs and symbols are guarded as closely as Masonry and its fraternal features are as binding. Its spiritual benefits are believed in as implicitly as does any white man believe in his religion.

No Time for Fireworks.

The mountainous waves threatened to engulf the struggling ship at any moment. The captain ordered a box of skyrockets and flares brought to the rail and with his own hands ignited them, in the hope tht they would make known his distress to some passing ship.

Amid the rocket's red glare a tall, thin, austere individual made his way to the rail and reproved the captain as follows:

"Captain, I must protest against this unseemly bravado. We are now facing death. This is no time for a celebration."—Everybody's Magazine.

Lack Right Qualities.

Mrs. Hix—Mrs. June strikes me as being entirely too masculine for a woman.

Mrs. Dix—Yes, indeed. Why, every time she has an ache or pain she makes as much fuss about it as a man would.—Smith's Weekly.

Building Note in 1925.

In order to complete the 410th story of the Skyndicate building, the contractors will have to raise the sky three or four feet.—Harper's Weekly.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Several grafters were in Elwood during fair week. One got away with about $200. He sold "phony" rings, watches and chains, and after he had duped a large number of people, his victims chased him out of town.

Miss Majorie Starr, prominent in Goshen society, en route home from a visit in Detroit, received the wrong suit case for her baggage check. She found a complete baseball outfit but is minus an elaborate gown valued at $1,000.

The 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Fisher, at Mt. Carmel, is dead from the effects of terrible burns sustained in pulling a pot of coffee from the kitchen range, causing the boiling liquid to pass over its head and body.

Fishermen say that more and larger catfish are being caught in the Kankakee river this season than in any previous season within their recollection. A number of catfish weighing from seven to thirteen pounds have been caught within the last week. Pickerel and bass are taking the bait readily and some exceptionally fine catches are reported.

C. M. Short and Mrs. L. M. Hanna, of Greencastle, have been notified by the government that their buildings on the ground recently purchased for a new federal building must be razed within thirty days. The lots are on the corner of Walnut and Vine streets and are occupied by a feed warehouse and stables, owned by Mr. Short, and the Sims hotel and Dr. Hanna's office, owned by Mrs. Hanna.

While attempting to catch a supposed chicken thief, William Hayes, a transfer man of Bloomington, shot off the big toe of his left foot by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. Hays heard a suspicious noise among his fowls and was cautiously opening his kitchen door with one hand when the gun, in the other, was accidentaly discharged. The toe was blown off and the whole side of his foot badly lacerated.

While Roy Miller, of Yorktown, and a young man friend were driving a spirited horse near Cammack, the animal became frightened at a train and started down the track ahead of the locomotive and then fell down. The young men were thrown out and somewhat hurt, but they did not lose their presence of mind and succeeded in dragging the horse from the rails barely in time to prevent its being struck.

Passengers on a south-bound Big Four train were thrown into a mild panic a few miles north of Alexandria when the roof of the vestibule at the front end of the car was found to be in flames. The blaze is supposed to have been started by a spark which found its way under the metal roofing of the vestibule. The train was stopped and the passengers sought refuge in another car while the trainmen fought the flames.

Farmers in the vicinity of Morocco will use all lawful means to protect game this fall and winter and as the big ranch owners have declared their intention of doing likewise it begins to look as though hunting was practically at an end. A number of farmers have been victims of reckless hunters to the extent of having hogs, turkeys and chickens killed or wounded and to this fact is largely due the present effort to put a stop to hunting.

Fire was discovered in the roof of the home of former Marshal Richard C. Crusie, in Lawrenceburg, and an alarm was turned in. The fire companies soon had the blaze under control. The fire is believed to have been started by an English sparrow carrying twigs and pieces of string from the rear yard to its nest in the gable of the roof. The bird was seen by the children to make several trips from a heap of rubbish that was slowly burning, to its nest, and soon afterward the roof was discovered to be on fire. The loss is estimated at $500, which is covered with insurance.

A four-year-old daughter of Alva Chance, a farmer near Noblesville, is dying as the result of being attacked by hogs. The child was playing on the fence around the pigpen and fell inside. She was immediately attacked by six large hogs. She was bitten in a number of places on the face and most of the skin was torn from her back and shoulders. The screams of the child attracted the attention of the mother, who ran to the pen, jumped inside and rescued her daughter. Mrs. Chance was accompanied by Mrs. William Millikan, and they had a hard fight with the hogs before they succeeded in getting possession of the little girl. Both women had most of the wearing apparel torn from their bodies and were badly bruised in their encounter with the hogs. The child is not expected to recover.

William Zimmer, of Marshall county, sold 1,000 pounds of honey to one grocery firm, and has as much more to take from the hives. He is one of the largest bee-raisers in this part of the state, having more than 150 stands.

The Elkhart Poultry Association has begun active preparations for its first annual exhibit to be held next January 4-9. The premium list includes 135 prizes. C. A. Anderson has been appointed superintendent of the exhibit.

While walking in his sleep Claude Gardner, of Evansville, twenty-seven years old, fell from a second story window. His skull was fractured and he suffered internal injuries, which may prove fatal.

E. E. Earle, fish commissioner, has directed John Stotts, a depufy commissioner, of Logansport, to seine South and North Mud Lakes, next week, and remove all carp, gar and turtles. The other fish caught in the drag nets are to be returned to the lake.

George Newton, of Owensville, is suffering from an injury which he received while taking a fish from the hook. The fish "stung" Newton on the hand with its fins and the wound is so painful that Newton is unable to sleep. It is feared that blood poisoning may develop.

The infant son of Fred Bales is lying in a critical condition at the home of his parents in Linton as a result of a cat jumping into the cradle and biting the child. The child was not large enough to play with the cat and for this reason the animal's actions cannot be accounted for.

Jesse Murphy, living near Glenwood, found a pocketbook containing more than $500 along the C., H. & D. railroad. It is thought it fell from a car window as it was found early in the morning after a through train had just passed. No one has reported a loss to the railroad company.

Samuel Marks Trepeck, a traveling man from Chicago, is in the Kosciusko County jail awaiting a hearing on the charge of cruelty to animals made by former Sheriff William Mable, a Warsaw liveryman. He is alleged to have driven a horse into a sinkhole east of Warsaw where the animal was drowned.

Forty farmers, near Greenfield, chased a fox that was seen trying to carry off a shoat belonging to Charles Hutchinson. The fox has killed a litter of pigs and many chickens for John Caraway and an old time fox chase will be arranged and Reynard will have a chance to show his running ability.

An illness from milk sickness terminated in the death of Thomas Jefferson Hornady, assessor of Reeve township, Daviess county. He became afflicted with this peculiar disease several weeks ago. Mr. Hornady was sixty-three years old and was a well-to-do farmer. Three children and the widow survive. He was a native of Scott county.

William Reynolds, age seventy-five years, a farmer living eight miles east of Bedford, met with a peculiar accident whole on his way to Bedford to attend a show. While going down an incline in the road the buggy became uncoupled from the horse and the aged man was dragged over the dashboard with great force. His nose was broken and he received other severe bruises.

William T. Vanest, who was taken from his home at South Bethany about two years ago and whitecapped, is now a resident of East Columbus. Last week he took his wife and went fishing in Clifty creek, east of his home. The fish did not bite, so Mr. and Mrs. Vanest gathered mussel shells and both searched for pearls. Mrs. Vanest found a small but perfect pearl worth $20, while her husband found a large pearl valued at $100.

Out of the family of six in Shelbyville, Albert Platt and a grandson are the only ones not suffering from typhoid fever. Several days ago Mrs. Platt was taken ill with the disease. A week later her son Ben suffered an attack and he is now very ill. This week Belle Murphy, a daughter of Mrs. Ollie Murphy, took the disease and Mrs. Murphy has been pronounced a typhoid fever patient. Mrs. Platt is the mother of Mrs. Murphy.

Agitation since the shovel factory fire in Newcastle, resulting in a $40,000 loss, has been productive of good and the fire department of the city will be brought up to a modern point. The shovel factory fire developed that the fire department had not kept up with the growth of the city and that it was woefully lacking in equipment with which to cope with a big blaze. As a result of this discovery the council will equip the department with up-to-date apparatus.

Henry Grider, who was killed by a falling tree near Silver Lake, had a premonition of coming death. After he and his brother had started to the woods, he returned and told his wife that he felt that something terrible was going to happen to him. His wife tried to disuade him from going to work, but he persisted. After the brothers had been gone for some time Grider's wife became so much worried that she started to the place where they were cutting trees, and arrived just in time to see her husband killed.

Fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed the livery stable of Samuel Snell, at Sidney. Five valuable horses were burned, together with buggies and harness. Loss, $4,000 with insurance of $900.

A barn filled with hay, a granary, strawstack and a building, filled with farm implements were destroyed by fire on the Cyrus Rice farm, near Kentland. Loss, $1,500; no insurance. The fire was started by children playing with matches.

VETERANS IN PARADE ON TOLEDO STREETS

Remnant of Civil War Host Marches with Flags Flying and Bands Playing.

FORT MEIGS SHAFT DEDICATED.

Granite Monument, 82 Feet High, Commemorates Preservation of American Boundary.

Toledo correspondence:

With flags flying, bands playing, crowds cheering, and a bright sky overhead, veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic marched through the streets of an ecampment city for the forty-second time Wednesday afternoon At the official reviewing stand, where stood William H. Taft, Governor Harris, Senator Foraker and Mayor Brand Whitlock, the colors were dipped, and the department commanders joined Commander-in Chief Burton in the stand. The parade being the leading feature of the encampment, many timed their arrival for the event, and the crowd of visitors was augmented by thousands during Tuesday night.

It is estimated that, including the veterans and their wives, there were 150,000 visitors in the city. Excursion trains brought them by hundreds from cities of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, and they poured in from the rural districts on the interurban lines.

It was well toward 11 o'clock when the van of the parade marched past the reviewing stand, where they were saluted with a bombardment of flowers, for which surprise the women of Toledo had been preparing for several days. They emerged from the floral shower to be greeted by an immense human flag, made up of nearly 3,000 children, who, in their dresses of red, white and blue, swayed their bodies so that the emblem seemed to sway as in a breeze.

Harrison Preserved Boundary.

Two events of the G. A. R. encampment Tuesday were the dedication of the Fort Meigs monument and the civic parade. In the latter 3,000 members of local organizations marched with bands playing and banners flying, while the veterans, whose parade was to take place Wednesday, looked on. It was at Fort Meigs that General William Henry Harrison checked the British advances under Proctor after the general had profited by General Hull's surrender at Detroit. With citizen soldiery gathered from Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Virginia, General Harrison succeeded in preserving the American boundary as it now exists. In those days Toledo was a mere collection of huts, which served as headquarters for French furriers and traders traveling from Montreal and Quebec to Cincinnati and New Orleans. Not many years ago the graves of the heroes of Fort Meigs lay unmarked. A church stands where there was formerly a British battery.

Tents Are Discarded.

The forty-second encampment will, veterans declare, go down in history with a most laudatory chapter devoted to a committee which abandoned the traditional tents and domiciled the old soldiers under real roofs and on real beds. The veterans in Toledo ran no risk of colds and rheumatism from sleeping on the straw strewn ground or from dew soaked canvas.

There was something in the tents of former reunions which appealed to the imagination of the veterans and stirred their memories of war days, but many of them paid for it with pneumonia and rheumatism, and they were unstinted in their praise of the arrangement this year.

President Heads Peace League.

The Peace and Arbitration League which was the outcome of the North Carolina Congress has made President Roosevelt its honorary president. The program includes the building of an adequate armament. Senator James B. McCreary of Kentucky is the active president of the league. Another peace organization has just been formed at New York known as the League of Peace. It proposes to unite the nations of the world in a great federation, with the permanent international Hague court as the judicial department of a world government, with the interparliamentary union composed of members of all the national parliaments as the legislative department and with a world executive having the title of peacemaker. To choose this executive they propose to have an electoral college made up of about 100,000 of the intellectual leaders of the world, the votes to be sent by mail and to be opened and counted by the first session of the full parliament following the meeting of the Interparliamentary Union at Berlin next September.

Negro Celebration Forbidden.

Race riots were barely prevented at New Orleans when Mayor Behrman, in response to popular sentiment as reflected in several of the daily papers, refused a permit for the holding of a meeting by negro citizens, who wished to do honor to the negro girl, Marie Bolden, who won over all white competitors in the national spelling contest during the recent sessions of the National Educational Association at Cleveland. Prominent negroes interfered and induced the promoters of the meeting not to insist.

SEPTEMBER

U322
L 903

For Female Ills

You should take, for female ills, a medicine which acts on the female organs and functions.

Cardui is not a man's medicine, it is for women. Its pure, healing, curative, vegetable ingredients, go direct to the womanly organs, relieve their pain and inflammation, and build up their strength.

"Tongue cannot tell," writes Miss Nola Smith, of Sweetser, Ind., "what has done for me. I am on my third bottle and am so much better. Before I began to take Cardui, I could not do a day's work. Now I can work all day. Mother took four bottles of Cardui before confinement, got along fine and has been real strong ever since."

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 69

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE.

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

Which "Bill"?

It was no difficult matter to predict the nomination of William Jennings Bryan and William Howard Taft, but we feel that it would not be wise to prophecy as to the next president of the United States. It will be necessary now to resign to a season of political excitement and industrial dullness, even refusing to sell wheat or buy shoes until we see the right William elected and the country saved from disaster. Mr. Taft brings into the contest an efficient record for public service, and the cordial endorsement of Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Bryan's assets are progressive, democratic ideas, and a loyal personal following. Mr. Taft is handicapped by his support of the financial powers. Mr. Bryan's handicap is the seemingly incurable habit of getting defeated. Earnest personal sincerity and a desire to promote the public welfare are common to both candidates. If platforms are to be considered the advantage would lie with the Democrats. The Republican platform on account of reactionary influences is weak and non-committal. The Democratic principles though illogical and disconnected are more progressive and acceptable to labor. Take your choice. It is efficiency or progress, action or principle, avoirdupois or vocal powers. Which shall it be?

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4. East bound.... 4:55 a. m.
No. 16. East bound... 12:40 p. m.
No. 17. West bound... 11:58 a. m.
No. 3. West bound.... 8:42 p. m.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a.m
No. 3. Western Express 7:58 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2. Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16. Toledo Acc & Mail 7:26 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

"Wet" or "Dry".

DeKalb county's political battle is on and from now until election day is past the voter will be the victim of the keen and solicitous politician. The political situation in DeKalb is a peculiarly interesting one. It is true that it has come about as a result of recent temperance agitation in the different towns of the county, and it would seem that the two parties have lined up in the interests of opposing factions. At this time we are led to ask as did the illustrious Shakespeare, "What's in a name"? Our republican friends call our democratic neighbors "wets", while from all outward appearances the republicans have arrayed their forces and chosen their leaders in response to the tremenduous popular sentiment in favor of temperance reform. "Wets" or "drys". What is the distinction? Does it mean that one of the old parties have so far strayed away from the democratic doctrines as to allow their progress to be hampered by an affiliation with that which the majority do not want? Or have all our republican friends really become temperance workers and are now out for the interests of those who are yearly suffering on account of the woes of intemperance? What we desire to know is this: What is the difference between the so-called "wet" or "dry"? Is a man who failed to sign a remonstrance to be looked upon as a "wet"? Perhaps the dictates of his best judgement told him that it was not best for him to sign a remonstrance. If so he would not have been an honest man had he done so. What is more we do not hesitate to say that if any man on either of the tickets, declares for or against the saloon simply to get in line without any deep regard for the principles that he is supposed to stand for, he is not an honest man, and does not deserve the independent votes of DeKalb county citizens. We hope that every candidate will be what they seem, and win or lose on the merits of the principles upon which they stand. They are going to find the voters very careful in the way they determine to vote this fall, and the independent voters are not going to be duped by any "wet" or "dry" agitation put up by either party. Not what a candidate is called nor what he seems but what he is will largely determine his success or failure at the coming election.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of the stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or fiction," says N. H. Brown, Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

Band Organized.

A new brass band has been organized at Garrett, with twenty-two pieces. Garrett has had no band for some time and feels the need of one. The organizer and leader is the Methodist pastor, Rev. Williams. Every band rehearsal opens and closes with prayer and no engagements are to be made where he a minister of the gospel would be ashamed to be seen leading. He organized a band in a similar manner at Eaton, his former charge, and when his band attended the firemen's tournament they serenaded him. He had reason to be proud of them as not one visited a saloon, and showed themselves as moral examples of the best type.

Adjudged Insane.

Sheriff Reed was called upon early last week to arrest Aleck Platter at his home, west of Fairview. He was lodged in the county jail on the charge of disturbing the peace and threatening to kill. For sometime he had been threatening members of the family and had already resulted in Mrs. Platter suing for divorce. The case was dismissed but trouble seemed to have its effect upon the man and lately he has been acting very irrational.

Many of the neighbors thought it to be nothing but downright meaness and were frightened until they feared for their lives. His threats had become so frequent of late that it was thought best to take him into custody.

An inquest was held Wednesday afternoon to determine whether or not he was of sound mind. Drs. Casebeer and Nusbaum and Justice of Peace J. C. Lochner held the inquest and found the man insane and a fit subject for Longcliff. Application will be made at once for his confinement. He is now in the county jail. Attorney D. D. Moody represented Mrs. Platter who filed the application for the inquest.

How to get Strong.

P. L. Daily, of 1247 W. Congress St Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

Public Sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale at her residence 3 4 mile west of Hopewell church and 6½ miles southeast of Auburn, on Tuesday Sept. 15, at 10:00 a. m. the following:- bay mare 9yr. old, with foal; one sucking colt, 2yr. old heifer, set work harness, corn cultivator, Osborne mower, hay rack, hay rake self dump, farm wagon, breaking plow, spike tooth harrow, dump boards, bobs, two stacks of timothy hay and other articles. Terms made known on day of sale.

MARY E. PAULEN.

J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Weak Heart Action

There are certain nerves that control the action of the heart. When they become weak, the heart action is impaired. Short breath, pain around heart, choking sensation, palpitation, fluttering, feeble or rapid pulse, and other distressing symptoms follow. Dr. Miles Heart Cure is a medicine especially adapted to the needs of these nerves and the muscular structure of the heart itself. It is a strengthening tonic that brings speedy relief. Try it.

"For years I suffered with what I thought was stomach trouble, when the doctors told me I had heart trouble. I had tried many remedies, when the Dr. Miles' almanac came into my hands, and I concluded to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. I have taken three bottles, and now I am not suffering at all. I am cured and this medicine did it. I write this in the hope that it will attract the attention of others who suffer as I did."
MRS. D. BARRON,
304 Main St., Covington, Ky.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

Local Briefs

C. E. Frederick and wife of Auburn visited Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Baker

Mabel and Edna Spoon of Defiance, Ohio, visited a few days last week at the home of Mrs. H. V. Kinsey.

Better have that cement water tank put in now. Henry Milliman will do it right. Phone 76-12. 36-2.

Herbert Sherer, who has been in South Dakota, this summer returned Thursday evening and started to school, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Walters had as their guests Friday evening and Saturday, their nieces, Bertha and Grace Bickhart of Harlan.

Mae Hamilton left last Thursday for Muncie, where she attended teacher's institute the remainder of the week. Monday she began her work as principal of the Yorktown schools.

O. E. Tarbox left Thursday for Conneaut, Ohio, where he has a position as teacher of science in the public high school. Conneaut is a city of about 11,000 and has eleven teachers in its high school. Mr. Tarbox was in charge of the schools at St. Joe last year and has made quite a jump.—Butler Record.

The farmers of the Central States have been extremely prosperous in recent years, a condition due to the fact that we have had good crops which have been in demand all over the world. This prosperity is not due to any party, neither will the future prosperity of the farmer depend upon the success or failure of any party.

A pleasant time was enjoyed at the home of Merritt Seehler, Friday evening by a number of invited guests. The evening was spent with music and social games. Ice cream and cake were served. Those present from out of town were the Misses Bertha and Grace Bickhart, Nellie Blackburn and Lola Reichelderter of Harlan, and Joy Shutt of Auburn.

Our entire stock of poultry for sale at prices which will surprise you. Strong, healthy and in the pink of condition, bred for winter laying and ready for active business in October. Just furnishing them moulting and only a year old—what do you think of them at fifty cents each? Take them in bunches of five, fifteen and fifty—as you want them. Buff Orpingtons, Buff Rocks and a few Rhode Island Reds—you know how they layed last winter—if not come and I will show you their egg record.

Remember 50c. apiece for anyone or all of them, none reserved they all go. Fine Rhode Island Red roosters from the Siagel yards of Poland Ohio, at one dollar apiece. One exceptionally good male bird of the above strain for which I refused five dollars for last fall, yours for $2.50.

They must be sold this week. Leave your order at my home.

C. A. WOODCOX.

THE SUN A PUZZLE.

We See Only the Outer Shells of the Great Blazing Orb.

The great ball of fire which we call the sun is not really the sun. No one has ever seen the sun. A series of concentric shells envelops a nucleus of which we know absolutely nothing except that it must be almost infinitely hotter than the fiercest furnace and that it must amount to more than nine-tenths of the solar mass.

That nucleus is the real sun, forever hidden from us. The outermost of the enveloping shells is about 5,000 miles thick and is called the chromosphere. It is a gaseous fluid, tinted with the scarlet glare of hydrogen, and so furiously active that it spurts up great tongues of glowing gas (prominences) to the height of thousands of miles.

Time was when this agitated sea of crimson fire could be seen to advantage only during an eclipse. Now special instruments are used which enable astronomers to study it in the full glare of the sun.

Beyond the chromosphere, far beyond the prominences even, lies the nebulous pallid corona visible only during the vanishing moments of a total eclipse, aggregating not more than seven days in a century.

No one has ever satisfactorily explained how the highly attenuated matter composing both the prominences and the corona is supported without falling back into the sun under the pull of solar gravitation. Now that Arrhenius has cosmically applied the effects of light pressure a solution is presented.

How difficult it is to account for such delicate streamers as the prominences on the sun is better comprehended when we fully understand how relentlessly powerful is the grip of solar gravitation.

If the sun were a habitable globe and you could transport yourself to its surface, you would find yourself pulled down so forcibly by gravitation that you would weigh two tons, assuming that you are an ordinary human being.

Your clothing alone would weigh more than a hundred pounds. Baseball could be played in a solar drawing room, for there would be some difficulty in throwing a ball more than thirty feet.

Tennis would be degraded to a form of outdoor pingpong.

From these considerations it is plain that gravitation on the sun would tend to prevent the formation of any luminous streamers and to pull down to its surface masses of any size.—Harper's Magazine.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,

Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

GENERAL ITEMS

FOR SALE:-Two young brood sows with pigs. One with nine, the other eight. Chester White and Poland China. DAVID ANDRESS. 35-3.

Hurrah for Bill. You cannot make a mistake by whooping it up this year no matter whether you put it old Bill or young Bill, big Bill or little Bill for as sure as fate it is bound to be Bill either way you care to make it.

Governor Hanly, Friday morning, called a special session of the state legislature to be convened September 18. This session has been called for the purpose of enacting legislation with regard to important public matters.

The National Circuit of Automobile Clubs at the Driving Club meet at Ft. Wayne Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 25th gave a very interesting series of contests of automobile and motor buggies. The Kiblinger company of Auburn were awarded the prize of the loving cup on account of their motor buggies being victors in a five mile driving contest.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

W. B. Westlake, publisher of The Hoosier, Indiana's Democratic organ, announces that his paper will present the most popular democratic county chairman in Indiana with a handsome big $1500 touring car. The present is to be given as a reward for effort in this campaign, the decision to be made by the democrats of the state.

Fred Jenkins, son of County Clerk Charles Jenkins, is a member of the regular army and is stationed now at St. Louis. He left home some time ago without giving any intimation of his destination and the first news has just been received from him. He has been made clerk to his captain. The command will go to San Francisco soon.

The corn crop in Ohio from appearances and inquiry gives promise of being one of the best in years. From Defiance east along the B. & O. there is little else to be seen and many places for miles there is no other crop in evidence. The stand is good and well eared; cutting has begun and unless there is a severe frost soon all will be ripe.

There are thirteen post offices yet left in DeKalb county. The rural delivery has played havoc with the small post offices and but few are yet left. Of these yet remaining there is Summit, Concord, Moore's Auburn Junction and Altona. Those offices which have succombed to the inevitable are Sedan, Fairfield Center, DeKalb, New Era, Arctic and Newville.

WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Eliz Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

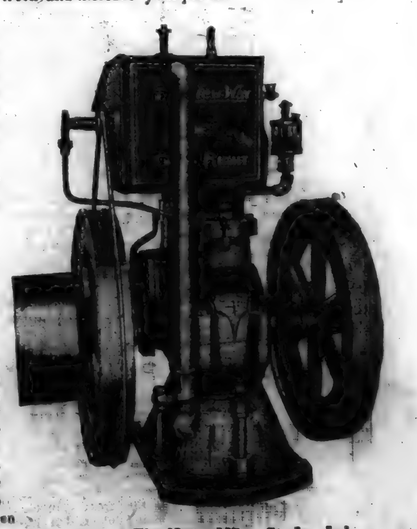
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken.

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.

Exclusive Agent.

SEPTEMBER

U323
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all-around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

Local Items.

J. W. Henderson called on his father, Friday.

L. W. Steward made a business trip to Ft. Wayne. Tuesday.

George Mason of Harlan, formerly of this place, was in town, Thursday.

Alvin Keesler and Geo. Henderson have recovered from their recent illness.

Mrs. Nancy Chaney and Miss Ada Fales visited a few days of last week with relatives in Adgola.

Earnest Farver and wife of Auburn, visited the latters brother, George Wilson, Sunday. Wallace Wilson and wife of Moris Chapel, were also Sunday guests.

Frank Steward visited his family, Tuesday and Sunday.

Clyde Maurer of Auburn, was the guest of S. H. Maurer, Friday.

John Sturgis and son Dean, of Butler, were in town, Thursday.

Murray Erick jumped from a fence and sertously sprained his ankle.

Mortie Widowheld and family of Harlan, visited relatives here, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith, of Grabill, visited their daughter, Mrs. Mary Hollobaugh, Sunday.

John Beames returned from his visit at Toledo, Thursday and his son Robert returned.

Mrs. Flossie Wilson returned Tuesday from Hicksville where she visited a few days.

Mrs. Ford Kinsinger visited relatives in Ft. Wayne and Huntertown, Sat. and Sunday.

Lela Keefer of Hicksville, expects to make her home for present with her aunt Mrs. Hursh.

Miss Josephine Carnes left Monday of last week for Goshen, Ind., where she will work the coming winter.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE.
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

PRESCRIPTIONS

Bring them Here.

When the Doctor writes out the

PRESCRIPTION

He wants you to have it filled at a reliable store where the appliances are up-to-date and the drugs are pure and fresh.

We assure you what the doctor puts on paper we put in the medicine, no substituting goes here.

Bowman's Drug Store

Third Game

The last game of the series between the married and single men will be played next Saturday at the South Side Ball Park. The first game of the series was won by the single men after fourteen innings of terrific playing. The second was taken by the married men in an equally exciting game. Each team will now battle royally for the third and decisive game. Those who desire to see an interesting and exciting struggle should come out to this game next Saturday.

RECKLESS AARON BURR.

The Dramatic Story of His Marriage in Old Age.

The story of Aaron Burr's marriage in his old age to the widow of Stephen Jumel, who was well known in the early history of New York city, is a dramatic one.

Conceive, if you will, the picture of Burr, gifted adventurer that he was, broken in health, branded in the popular mind as the murderer of Alexander Hamilton and returning from a long exile to find himself an outcast in the city where he had once been the political monarch of all he surveyed and a distinguished figure in society and at the bar. Conceive, if you can, this lamentable old man, smirking through his wrinkles, bowing and prancing rather stiffly because of his rheumatic joints and with his mouth full of pretty platitudes, paying court to the widow of Stephen Jumel, herself in the prime of years and health. Remove from the picture its surface incongruities, and you have a bit of pure pathos unequaled in the annals of foolish great men.

But something of his old time power to charm the gentler sex must have stood by him in his years of mental and physical misery, for in his suit for the widow Jumel's hand and fortune he won gloriously, dramatically. Rebuffed repeatedly, Burr finally declared in passionate rage that on a given day he would arrive at the Jumel mansion accompanied by a clergyman, who should marry them on the spot. He would give his prospective bride no quarter, no chance of escape from the inevitable.

She was amused at the threat and dismissed the old man with more than her usual coldness of demeanor. Burr stuck to his avowal and one July day rolled up in a carriage, and with him was a minister, the same who fifty years before performed the marriage ceremony for Burr and the mother of his daughter, the beautiful Theodosia. There was something of a scene in the old house on this day. There were tears of anger on the part of Burr. Relatives remonstrated; Burr remained immovable. All feared a scandal. The minister, book in hand, stood unobtrusively in the background. There were more tears, more declarations of undying love, and the widow Jumel became Mrs. Aaron Burr.

They were married in the great drawing room of the Jumel mansion. Burr squandered with reckless hand the wealth acquired by Stephen Jumel and left for the enjoyment of his marital partner. There were many bitter quarrels between the ill mated pair, and they were soon divorced. Burr died in 1836, but madam lived until 1865, dying a recluse and a miser, the money received from the Jumel estate hoarded in an unused chamber.

Married's Win at Picnic.

The Lutherans and Methodists held a picnic in the Baltz grove, Saturday. Those present were mostly members of the two schools. Some came before noon and ate their dinner in the grove but the larger crowd came after dinner. Ice cream was served free to all who came. J. E. Sturgis of Butler was present and gave a musical selection. The event of the afternoon was the game of ball played between the married and single men. In the first of the series played two weeks ago, the singles won, but the married men turned the trick and won this second game by a score of 7 to 6. Although this game lasted but the regular nine innings, yet the excitement was intense throughout. Allen and Beams did the battery work for the "doubles" while Wearley held down the slab for the youngsters and Kelley did the receiving. Wearley struck out three men, while the veteran pitcher had eleven strike outs to his credit. The single men were in the lead until the seventh when the married men tied the score and won out in the ninth with one man out. Each side has now won one game. The third and decisive game of the series will be played in the near future. Every lover of excitement and a good game of ball should be ready to go to the next game.

A Paying Investment.

Mr John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "Have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a 50c. bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Limb Rebroken

The many friends of George Wilson will be sorry to know that he has had the misfortune to rebreak his limb. The first break had so far repaired that he was able to be about on crutches. One day last week while on the porch, his crutch slipped and in falling the bones were broken again. This is very unfortunate for Mr. Wilson as he was expecting to begin teaching in another week. Miss Zona Horn will now take charge of his school until he is able to teach.

Schools to Begin.

The schools of Spencerville and Concord township will begin, Monday. The following corps of teachers have been employed: Spencerville, Oscar Keating, Principal; John Reinoehl, W. W. Fisher and Flora Witz. The district teachers are O. K. Shull, Geo. Beams, Robert Ulm, George Wilson, and Lloyd Goldsmith. It will be necessary for the trustee, Mr. Provines, to hire a substitute to teach for Mr. Wilson until he is able to take up the work.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Erick & Company

You're Invited

We extend a cordial invitation to all to come in and inspect the splendid line of goods we carry. Many do come to our store daily and we are doing our best to send them away satisfied. We want you to come since we feel that you will receive good honest goods in return for your trade or money.

Premium Special

Don't fail to examine the
RED CROSS BAKING POWDER PREMIUMS

These premiums are valuable and one is given with each pound of baking powner. The baking powder is guaranteed to be as good as the best.

Come in and see these premiums.

Spencerville, Ind.

Wm. Henderson is about the same at this writing.

Merton Kimes spent Saturday with his father, Geo. Kimes.

Wm. Henderson and wife of Auburn visited relatives here Sunday.

Jack Moody who is suffering with a stroke of paralysis is improved some

John Hursh of Ossian, Ind., called on relatives here, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Raymond Bowser moved into the Rummel property, last week. He will be in business here.

Miss Keith Squires of Ft. Wayne is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Beam, a few days this week.

Bert Davis made a business trip to Auburn, Saturday.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman has not improved any. She was in a serious condition Sunday.

Jennie Moffett and daughters, Pauline and Jessie of Auburn were the guests of relatives here last week.

Miss Inez Rhoads entertained at Sunday dinner the Misses Mintie and Jennie Steward, Frinkie Baltz and Pluma Kimes.

Miss Ethel Baker returned last week from Mansfield, Ohio, where she has been several months with her sister Mrs, Grace Carroll.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

10 YEARS AHEAD OF ALL OTHER

CREAM SEPARATORS.

In skimming efficiency, simplicity, durability and convenience, the new 1908 Improved DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS are fully ten years ahead of any other machine on the market to-day. Thirty years of experience, protecting patents, and the many valuable improvements devised and perfected by the DE LAVAL engineers in all parts of the world during the past three years, are responsible for this fact. Every feature of the DE LAVAL has been improved, from the supply can to the base. The new centre-balanced bowl with its separate spindle is alone a triumph in separator construction and must be seen to be fully appreciated. Then, there is the new one-piece "anti-splash" sanitary supply can, adjustable shelves for skim-milk and cream receptacles, new frame designs, and many other but less important improvements,—all combining to make the DE LAVAL an absolutely ideal separator for farm and dairy use. There is the proper size machine for every size dairy from the smallest to the largest and no cow owner can afford to be without one of these improved machines. It will cost you nothing to see and examine the new DE LAVAL, and right at your own home too, if you will but say the word. Call on us or let us know somehow that you are in need of a separator and it will be possible for you to have a free demonstration of the improved DE LAVAL at your own home. It will pay you to do so and your only regret will be that you did not investigate sooner.

Carnes & Co.

Spencerville, Indiana.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

We are actually giving away these dishes to our cash customers. There is no lottery about this. You get a dish free at our expense. With every ten cent purchase you get a ticket which is to be turned in exchange for dishes. With every $1.00 purchase you get a cash ticket which you can use in exchange for a China Closet worth $15. Call at the store at any time and learn the particulars. We are doing all in our power to convince you that it pays to trade at our store.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience.

Spencerville, Indiana.

SEPTEMBER

U324
L 903

The Popular Pulpit

SOUL MUST BE NOURISHED.

By Rev. Guy Arthur Jamieson.

How can the flag grow without water?—Job 8:11.

Life in its simplest forms is a mystery, an ever present miracle that has become commonplace, and in this ultra-practical age, if we stop to look beneath the surface of things, it is more often to estimate in terms of dollars and cents. But even at the risk of becoming visionary let us view for a moment the modest, fragile life of the flag.

If we could but understand the how and why of its existence, we would have solved the problem of the life of nature, man and God. Life, whatever its external expression, is a part of the great riddle of the universe. We know that life has its origin in life. It is not an accident, it is not self-created. We call the source of life God, but that is not a solution of the problem. It is but a confession that we cannot understand; it still remains the eternal mystery.

Life having been started, is not even self-sustaining. There is no form of life that is independent of all other life. The flag needs only a little earth, a little sunshine, a little moisture, and it comes into perfection. But the higher the forms of life, the more complex, the more dependent they become. When we reach man, "made in the image of God," in whom we find the highest expressions of life, we find him making demands upon all other forms. The physical, mental and spiritual must contribute to the needs of his triune nature. The elements of the mineral, vegetable, animal and spiritual kingdoms go into the texture of his soul, and as the flag cannot grow if one element necessary to its life be missing, so man cannot come into his best perfection if the demands of his whole man are not met. The physical is but the soil in which is to grow his best self.

So it is possible for a man to give his time and energy and talent to the needs of the dwelling while neglecting the dweller within. Man may grow into a perfect animal, possess a cultivated brain, become carefully religious and yet carry in his bosom a starved, atrophied soul. The flag cannot grow without water; the mind will not develop without thought and knowledge, and there can be no soul growth without God. Man does not develop in the highest sense until he comes into a conscious need of spiritual attainment—until there is a hungering and thirsting after the fruits of the spirit—gentleness, long suffering, goodness, temperance, love.

God has made provision for man's every need, but He has made it imperative that he put forth effort if he would attain it. And the struggle to fill the hungry mouth, meet the needs of the inquiring mind and quiet the insistent soul is what we call life. The measure of its success, the degree of its fullness, will largely depend upon the strenuousness of the individual's efforts.

SAVED FROM FEAR TO FAITH.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Who by the power of God are guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."—I. Peter, 1:5.

If a man steps up to you on the street, takes you by the buttonhole, and inquires: "Are you saved?" between surprise and resentment you hardly know what answer to give him. Yet, if it be true as we are still told, that without some definite, marked experience called "Salvation," we are all in imminent peril, the wonder is that the question is not asked more often.

There doubtless are many to whom the question has thrilling import. They live in a world of fear, for they are only partly delivered from that state of savagery in which the whole universe was peopled with demons, with spirits cruel, malignant, and malicious. They walk in trembling dread of devils that assail in dark places, of yawning hells waiting to ingulf them.

If this world is so ordered as to oppose our good, if the universe is our foe, we do indeed need to be saved, to be delivered from it. But it is strange that those who sing most loudly of the goodness of God should also insist so strongly on the diabolical character of the world He has created and ordered.

It is not long since we were practically all in a bondage of fear. Even little children are made to dread beds lest they should die before morning and find themselves unprepared in the presence of an offended deity, while strong men carried around the tormenting question, Am I safe if I should die?

Something within us has always turned against these conceptions of a God before whom we must cower, of a universe contrived to damn us and of man as a lost being, shipwrecked on the tides of eternity, who might be snatched from his doom if he would but acknowledge his intellectual subjugation to certain philosophical views of historical data.

As man has come to understand the universe better, as he has learned to subdue nature and harness her powers to his purposes, along with growing wonder at this world has come increasing confidence in the beneficent ordering of all things; fear has given place to reverence, reverence for law and reverence for the good that seems to be the final goal of all.

Superstition is retreating before science, fear has given place to a conception of a world ordered by infinite love and we have come to ask a new question: After all, is there anything in all the universe to fear? Does not every opening page of nature's great book disclose unvarying law working out purposes of immeasurable love?

The great question for us all is not whether we have been rescued from hordes of savage, hidden demons or snatched from imminent hell; the question is not whether we are ready to die because we have bargained for heaven; the great question is whether we are saved from the old life of fear, of dread, of cowardly slinking through the world into the full life of faith, into the life in harmony with God's universe.

Salvation is a process and not a place; it is a life and not a legal arrangement. It is continuous; it may be that it never will be completed, for it is the leading of a life out into its fullness, into harmony with its universe, into understanding of all its relationship, into efficiency in all its service.

We need to think perhaps not so much of what we may be saved from as of what we are saved toward, toward the highest living we know, toward full and perfect harmony with all being, here and everywhere, human and divine. Only by faith in a world ordered for good, only by faith in the great life in which we move and have our being can one come into such fullness of life.

Men are saved by faith, by faith in what they may be, by confidence in the right, good, orderly working of the world for the best, by simple trust in the great love of the infinite Father, by living on the working axiom that goodness and truth and kindness—the things that are best—are the things that are mighty and dominant.

We need to be saved from ourselves, from our fearful, abased, God libeling selves into our better, higher, aspiring, God loving selves by the faith in the goodness of God, in the love that lies behind all law, in the high possibilities of ourselves and the good purposes of all men. Fear of what might be only hinders, faith in what may be sublimely helps.

Short Meter Sermons.

Worry is half of weariness.

Paradise is not found by fleeing from pain.

You cannot hold down the man who looks up.

There is no gaining without some foregoing.

The golden heart does not have the brass face.

The hypocrite is only the chronic living liar.

An absentee God accounts for a prodigal world.

It takes more than a homemade halo to make a hero.

Nothing is sacred without some sacrificial service.

Experience is the best interpreter of any theology.

Work is always weariness when its goal is only wages.

Wisdom is in aging the head and keeping the heart youthful.

The best of all the churches is the temple in your own breast.

Nothing heals our own wounds quicker than helping others.

Paralysis of conscience is often mistaken for the peace of God.

Love is that which roots in sacrifice, grows in service, blooms in joy.

It takes more than the hatred of certain sinners to make you a saint.

It's no use believing in angels in heaven if you cannot discover any here.

It often takes the barrenness of the desert to teach us to look up to the stars.

Many a man who prides himself on his poise ought to regret that he is so pulseless.

The man who brags of his self-respect is often paying his respects to a mighty small object.

Our own sins grow fast behind our backs while we are gazing at the faults of our neighbors.

It's a poor faith that values its creed by its virulent power to hurt the sheep of some other fold.

The man who can make children smile does not need to worry over his inability to preach sermons.

It is better occasionally to do a foolish act of charity than to commit the folly of an uncharitable life.

No amount of poetic feeling for the human family will make up for lack of practical provision for your own.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't look upon your religion as a ticket to heaven.

Don't spend Sunday praying for God to enter your heart when you spend the whole week barricading it with bad business.

Don't judge your fellowmen by their attainments alone; take into account their ideals.

Don't keep your consicence in cotton batting six days in the week that it may be tender on Sunday.

Don't unduly seek preferment; there are frequently black shadows behind the life that seeks the limelight.

Smiles of The Day

Appropriate.

Stubb—There goes the park officer. He has been ordered to arrest all couples caught making love on the benches.

Penn—Indeed! And what do those letters "S. C." on his cap stand for—"special cop"?

Stubb—No, "spoon collector."

The Poor Poet Again.

The Poet—I know my verse has been rejected, but I have not lost hope. Would you like to see me carve my name, my dear?

His Wife—Yes, Omar, but I'd also like to see you carve a roast of beef sometimes.

The Laureate of Shantytown.

"Me beau is a great poet," boasted Shanty Sue. "Why, in his last love missive he spoke of 'de pipe of de bluebird.'"

"Gee whiz!" laughed Tommy Tuff. "Dat's de limit. I never knew dat bluebirds smoked pipes before."

They See Everything.

Sunday School Teacher—Who was it, Tommy, who saw the handwriting on the wall?

Tommy—The landlord.

Her Opportunity.

"I think," said the fair maid, "that you are a most singular person."

"Well, perhaps I am," rejoined the young man, "but I assure you it isn't from choice."

Whereupon she got busy and worked her leap year prerogative.

Ashamed of the Cat.

Mrs. Stubb (reprovingly)—John, I think you show a disregard for etiquette by appearing in your shirt sleeves.

Mr. Stubb—Bother etiquette! I'm thinking about comfort.

Mrs. Stubb—Well, Mr. Brown is a man of culture. You don't see him appearing in his shirt sleeves.

Mr. Stubb—Well, I guess not. Brown's wife makes his shirts.

Better Still.

"But," said a student of one college to a friend who was attending a rival institution, "your college never turns out gentlemen."

"Of course it doesn't," replied the other. "It allows gentlemen to go right on and graduate."

There Are Others.

"Some women are foolish. That convicted thug gets lots of flowers from women, I s'pose?"

"Yes," answered the warden. "But the lady murderer on the next tier has had forty-seven offers of marriage to date."

In Self-Defense.

"Great soil you have around here."

"You bet."

"Your corn must be twenty feet high."

"And we have to plant a dwarf variety to hold it down to that."

Willing, However.

The bachelor clergyman was showing a woman visitor through his church.

"Now, madam," he said, "you have seen the organ, the font and the nave. With your permission, I will now conduct you to the altar."

"Oh," she exclaimed after the manner of her kind, "this is so sudden!"

Something of a Horrible Example.

"My dear little boy, don't you know that cigarettes are very bad for you?"

"Shucks, I've been smokin' 'em all me life, loidy, an' look at me!"

Tall Chap.

"What is the height of happiness?" mused the philosophical girl.

"Well, in my case," laughed the pretty girl who is to be a bride, "he is about six feet two inches."

From Experience.

Ostend—Pa, what kind of ships are courtships?

Pa—Soft ships, my son.

Ostend—And what kind of ships sail the sea of matrimony?

Pa—Hardships, my son.

Exactly So.

"What then," asked the professor, "is the exact difference between logic and sophistry?"

"Well," replied the bright student, "if you are engaged in a controversy it's just the difference between your line of argument and the other fellow's."—Philadelphia Press.

Tommy's Tact.

There was a slight commotion under the sofa. The pretty girl and her fiance peeped under and were startled to see Brother Tommy's toes protruding.

"You, Tommy," said his sister with much emphasis, "what are you doing under there—watching us?"

"Naw," grumbled Tommy; "I ain't watching you."

"Then what are you doing?"

"Why, I'm playing that I am mending an automobile—that's what."

Worked Them All.

"And what occupation do you follow, my poor man?" queried the kind old lady as she handed out a gooseberry tart.

"Ah, mum," responded Faded Fagin, as he lifted his tattered hat, "I'm a settlement worker."

"Well! Well! I have often heard of them. And what are your duties?"

"Why, to 'work' every settlement I come to, mum."

Rather Watery.

"You have a new milkman?" interrogated the Throop street lady.

"Yes, indeed," responded her neighbor.

"What brand of milk does he sell?"

"Well, I call it the 'sky brand.'"

"And why such an unusual name, my dear?"

"Well, you see, one day it is blue and the next day it is cloudy."

Hobo Translation.

"Say, Mike," queried Plodding Pete, who was looking at the piece of paper that had come with a hand-out, "wot does it mean 'bout bein' between de devil an' de deep sea?"

"It's de same as bein' told t' take yer choice between goin' t' work an' takin' a bath," explained Meandering Mike.

Small Boy's Theory.

"I wonder why the bride is crying?" remarked one of the guests at the wedding. "Can it be because she is leaving home?"

"No, I guess it ain't that," answered the bride's small brother. "She's in love with the fellow she married and I guess she's crying 'cause she feels sorry for him."

Grand Larceny.

Eva—It states here that anyone returning stolen goods deserves clemency.

Edwin—Then I shall expect clemency from you.

Eva—From me?

Edwin—Yes, I am going to return those kisses I stole last night.

Danger in Fine Feathers.

The Sparrow—What d'ye think of my glad rags?

The Crow—Very gaudy. But ain't you afraid of getting shot for a bird of paradise?

Turned Down.

Dick—I didn't get much encouragement when I proposed to that haughty beauty.

Jack—Well, faint heart never won fair lady, old man. Maybe she thought you had cold feet.

Dick—H'm! She must have thought I had cold hands. She gave me the mitten.

The Bachelor's Question.

"This, Mr. Bachelor," said the proud mamma, "is just the sweetest, brightest, baby in the world."

"Bright, eh?" stammered the embarrassed Mr. Bachelor, "can it—er—sit up and beg?"—Philadelphia Press.

Get Under It.

"There is a mountain of evidence against you," said the lawyer.

"Well," rejoined the man in the tolls, "I'm paying you to tunnel the mountain."

An Excellent Reason.

"And what are you here for, my friend?" asked the visiting parson of convict No. 41144.

"'Cause I can't git out," growled the victim of circumstances.

Steady Job.

Mrs. Knox—Mrs. Peeper is certainly a tireless business woman.

Mrs. Blox—Indeed! What business is she engaged in?

Mrs. Knox—Everybody's.

No Love Lost.

"I suppose," said the fan on the homeward-bound car, "that you are a lover of the national game?"

"Not me," replied the stranger occupying the adjoining seat. "I'm one of the umpires."

Only a Short Trip.

Mrs. Meeker—Oh, doctor, my husband seems to be wandering in his mind this morning.

Doctor—Don't let that worry you he can't go very far.

Reconstructed.

"Has the man you married made a good husband?" asked the spinster.

"No," replied the woman with the square chin. "He merely furnished the material for a good husband. I did the making."

An Old Stand-By.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is a technicality?

Pa—A technicality, my son, is what lawyers quibble over when the evidence isn't satisfactory.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Nine Gored Skirt.

The plain gored skirt is an unquestioned favorite of the moment, but it is varied in a great many ways so that the fact means nothing like montony. Illustrated is a model trimmed to give the tunic effect and with ornamental buttons on the front gore. As illustrated it is made of lustrous mohair with bands of taffeta stitched with belding silk, but it is adapted to linen and to other washable fabrics as well as to wool; indeed, to all skirting materials that can be made in the plain gored style with success. It would be charming made of linen with either heavy lace or braiding in soutache between the bands, it would be exceedingly handsome made of pongee, and it is appropriate for all the wool suitings.

PATTERN NO. 6032.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6032.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Tucked Blouse with Yoke.

The blouse that is made with a yoke always effective use of contrasting material, and this one, in addition to that advantage, is trimmed in a novel and distinctive manner. As illustrated, this trimming consists of bands and medallions of lace, while the yoke is cut from tucking and the blouse itself is made of fine white lawn. But for the yoke lace or inserted tucking or any fancy material can be utilized, or plain lawn can be daintily embroidered by hand, while the banding can be lace or embroidery as liked. Figured materials as well as plain are being much used just now, and white Swiss muslin with embroidered dots of color would be both dainty and fashionable.

PATTERN NO. 6048.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6048.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

LITTLE ABOUT EVERYTHING.

Germany's medical students number 7,345.

The report of a cannon has been heard 146 miles.

The limit of mining operations in England is 4,000 feet.

Statistics show that the Englishman is the heaviest eater.

Too much food, exercise and education have serious effects on the memory.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna

Cleanses the System Effectually, Dispels Colds and Headaches due to Constipation; Acts naturally, acts truly as a Laxative.

Best for Men, Women and Children—Young and Old.

To get its Beneficial Effects Always buy the Genuine which has the full name of the Company

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

by whom it is manufactured, printed on the front of every package.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS.

one size only, regular price 50¢ per bottle.

Bought His Own Work.

To come across a bit of one's own work in print is an experience not ordinarily exasperating to an author, but a Washington writer on scientific matters was recently not very agreeably surprised by such a development.

It appears that the writer was collecting material for a monograph on electro magnetism when word came to him of a valuable paper on the subject not long before published in a Berlin journal devoted to science. Thinking that the paper would be of use to him in the work in hand, he had it translated. When the English version was laid before him, together with quite a bill for the translator's labor, what was the disgust of the writer to find that the article was nothing more or less than a German reproduction of an article of his own published the year before in an English journal. And he had paid twice as much for the translation as he has received for the original article!—Washington Star.

A TEXAS CLERGYMAN

Speaks Out for the Benefit of Suffering Thousands.

Rev. G. M. Gray, Baptist clergyman, of Whiteshoro, Tex., says: "Four years ago I suffered misery with lumbago. Every movement was one of pain. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the whole difficulty after only a short time. Although I do not like to have my name used publicly, I make an exception in this case, so that other sufferers from kidney trouble may profit by my experience."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Alphabet.

The great Phoenician alphabet, the parent of every form of European writing and of the scripts of Persia, Arabia and India as well, owes but little to Egypt. It is true that in the construction of their alphabet the Phoenicians made use of certain hieratic characters found in their trade dealings with Egypt, but this fact in no way detracts from the glory of the invention which belongs to the "Yankees of antiquity."—New York American.

Sleep Walking.

"Tiresome preacher, that Dr. Ninthly."

"My goodness, yes! Why, the vestrymen had to advertise for somnambulists to act as ushers."—Cleveland Leader.

Red Cross Ball Blue

Should be in every home. Ask your grocer for it. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

A Dream Superstition.

I heard what was to me at least a new piece of superstition the other day, and when I think of the risks I've run all these years because I didn't know of it my blood runs cold. I met a woman from Virginia in market, and the talk falling on dreams I recalled a most blood curdling nightmare I had had the night before.

"I must tell you what I dreamed last night," I said.

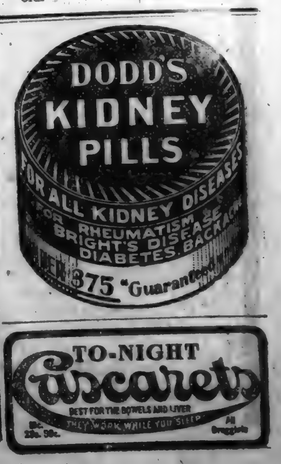
"Let me ask first whether it's a pleasant or an unpleasant dream?" said the lady from Virginia.

"Decidedly unpleasant."

"Then for mercy's sake don't tell it!" said she. "Never tell a bad dream on Saturday, for we say in Virginia:

"Friday night's dream on Saturday told
Is sure to come true, no matter how old."

—Washington Post.



TO-NIGHT Cascarets

BEST FOR THE BOWELS AND LIVER

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

10c. 25c. 50c. All Druggists

SEPTEMBER

U325
L 903

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

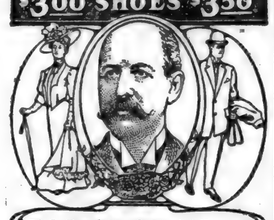
"I was not able to do my own work, owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 SHOES $3.50



W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 and $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world, because they hold their shape, fit better, and wear longer than any other make.

Shoes at All Prices, for Every Member of the Family, Men, Boys, Women, Misses & Children

W. L. Douglas $4.00 and $5.00 Gilt Edge Shoes cannot be equalled at any price. W. L. Douglas $3.50 and $3.00 shoes are the best in the world

Fast Color Eyelets Used Exclusively.

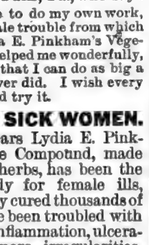
Take No Substitute. W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on bottom. Sold everywhere. Shoes mailed from factory to any part of the world. Catalog free.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 157 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

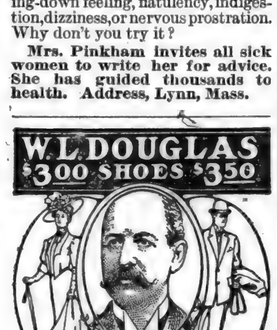
Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.



Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.



FOR SALE FINEST LANDS IN THE NORTH WEST 40,000 ACRES of choice land in the celebrated CLOVER BELT OF WISCONSIN, all within a few miles of three railroads; good roads and schools; terms and price on tracts of 40 acres and up reasonable. Write for information. SETTLERS ESPECIALLY DESIRED. John S. Owen Lumber Co., Owen, Wis.

THREE CURES OF ECZEMA.

Woman Tells of Her Brother's Terrible Suffering—Two Babies Also Cured—Cuticura Invaluable.

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. This lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. Lusk, Coldwater, Mich., Aug. 15 and Sept. 2, 1907."

Does Not Believe in Mad Dogs.

Having been bitten so often by dogs that he has lost count of injuries he received in that way, Frederick W. Ritchey, an agent for the S. P. C. A. in Jersey City, was not disturbed the other day when a mongrel bit him twice on the hand. He has been handling dogs for eight years, he said, and in his opinion a dog bite is of no importance unless it causes a serious hemorrhage.

The mongrel attacked him when he went among the 40 dogs in the society's kennel. He had the wounds cauterized in a drug store and was about his work until night. After he was bitten, he said:

"This hydrophobia scare is all imagination. When a man is nipped by a dog he worries, the worry makes him ill and he says he has hydrophobia. He is really ill, but not from hydrophobia. I have seen dogs with distemper, dogs in fits and dogs naturally vicious, but there was none I hesitated to handle when it was necessary. I never have seen a mad dog, and don't expect to find one."

The Power of the Ad.

Lillian B. Hill, the well known writer of humorous advertisements, said at one of the convention dinners in Denver:

"Advertising lends itself to almost any imaginable purpose. For instance, at Sea Beach the other week a confectioner found himself with a great number of stale tarts on hand. He rid himself of these tarts, and of all his fresh ones besides, by inserting the following advertisement in the local press:

"'PERSONAL—A young man of agreeable exterior and ample means desires to form the acquaintance of a lady. Object matrimony. Beauty and wealth are not so much in requisition as a good character and an amiable disposition. Young ladies who may feel inclined to look with favor upon this young man are hereby asked to call at Dough's confectionery on Atlantic avenue at 3 o'clock this afternoon and, as a means of identification, to purchase and eat a tart.'

"A few minutes after 3 that day Dough's tart shelves were quite bare."

Resented It.

Caller (trying to be complimentary)—I notice one interesting peculiarity about your little boy. He is ambidextrous.

Mrs. Struckoyle (with a frosty gleam in her eye)—Not at all, Mrs. Highsome. His legs are just as straight as any body's.

The greatest length of time which any bottle has been known to remain afloat is twenty-one years. A bottle containing a message, which was thrown overboard by an American sea captain off Newfoundland in 1878, was picked up off the west coast of Ireland early in 1899.

As a Safety Valve.

"Scorchley doesn't have any more of those terrible epileptic fits he used to have, does he?"

"No; whenever he feels one of them coming on he goes and takes a spin in his automobile.

The Ashantis of Africa are perhaps the most cruel and demoniacal of the races that people the earth. Their drums are decorated with human skulls and bones.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

Both Fully Nourished on Grape-Nuts.

The value of this famous food is shown in many ways, in addition to what might be expected from its chemical analysis.

Grape-Nuts food is made of whole wheat and barley, is thoroughly baked for many hours and contains all the wholesome ingredients in these cereals.

It contains also the phosphate of potash grown in the grains, which Nature uses to build up brain and nerve cells.

Young children require proportionately more of this element because the brain and nervous system of the child grows so rapidly.

A Va. mother found the value of Grape-Nuts in not only building up her own strength but in nourishing her baby at the same time. She writes:

"After my baby came I did not recover health and strength, and the doctor said I could not nurse the baby as I did not have nourishment for her, besides I was too weak.

"He said I might try a change of diet and see what that would do, and recommended Grape-Nuts food. I bought a pkg. and used it regularly. A marked change came over both baby and I.

"My baby is now four months old, is in fine condition, I am nursing her and doing all my work and never felt better in my life." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

—Good— Short Stories

Applying for a divorce, an old Georgia negro said to the judge: "Hit only cost me a string er fish ter git married, jedge, but, please God, I'd give a whale ter git rid er her."

Two men were discussing the trouble in India, and each had a deal to say about his notion of Hindu character. "They're such a bellicose set of people," said one. "Indeed!" exclaimed the other in surprise. "I was always under the impression that they were very spare men."

A splenetic Englishman, trying to badger a Scotchman who was something of a wag, declared that no man of taste would think of remaining any time in such a country as Scotland. "Tastes differ," replied the Scot, suavely. "I'll take ye to a place in Scotland not far frae Stirling whaur thretty thousand of your countrymen ha' been for five hundred years, an' they've nae thocht o' leavin' yet."

A meek-looking little man with a large pasteboard box climbed on the car. As he did so he bumped slightly into a sleepy, corpulent passenger with a self-satisfied look and two little dabs of sidewhiskers. As the car rounded a curve the box rubbed against him again and he growled: "This is no freight car, is it?" "Nope," returned the meek little chap with the box, "and when you come right down to it, it ain't any cattle car either, is it?"

Governor Oglesby once visited the state penitentiary at Joliet to hear complaints of prisoners and inspect the premises. The governor stopped before a cell containing an unusually ugly man. "My man," said Governor Oglesby, pleasantly, "how did you get here?" "For abducting a girl," growled the man. Governor Oglesby looked him over critically and then said: "Well, I'll pardon you as soon as I get back to Springfield. You could not get a girl in any other way!"

A boy in the State School for Dependent Children wrote his father thus: "Dear Papa: We children are having a good time here now. Mr. Sager broke his leg and can't work. We went on a picnic and it rained and we all got wet. Many children here are sick with mumps. Mr. Higgins fell off the wagon and broke his rib, but he can work a little. The man that is digging the deep well whipped us boys with a buggy whip because we threw sand in his machine, and made black and blue marks on us. Ernest cut his finger badly. We are all very happy."

The "colored lady" who entered service as cook gave her name as Julietta Price, but constantly referred to her husband as George Ledbetter. "How does it happen, Julietta," she was asked one day, "that you go by the name of Price, while your husband's name is Ledbetter?" "Well, you see, Mrs. Lawrence," she replied cheerfully, "it's this-a-way. I had n' been acquainted with George but fo' days when I married him, an' I did n' know how I was gonter lak him nor how he was gonter lak me. Now these divorcements betwix' married folks is a heap er trouble an' heap er expense, too; an' I 'lowed the safest way fer us to do wus fer George to keep his maiden name an' I to keep mine tell we see how our new experiment was gonter turn out."

THOSE LEMON PIES.

Which Shows What a Swain Will Do for Love's Sake.

If any one had asked little Mrs. Harribee, even after she had been married five months, if she remembered the first time that her husband tasted one of her mother's lemon pies, a quick color would have answered for her before any words.

Remember! Would she ever forget? It had taken her all the morning to screw her courage to the point of suggesting to her mother that she invite Will Harribee to supper Sunday night, and when her mother—her dear, blessed, understanding mother!—quietly agreed, and asked if she wanted a lemon pie—well, happiness is popularly supposed to be rose-color, but a strict examination of facts would doubtless prove that it frequently takes its hue from intimate circumstances quite regardless of convention. Certainly Mrs. Harribee's happiness frequently had worn the delicate golden-amber of her mother's lemon pies.

Mrs. Jewett was a "born cook," and her lemon pies were famous. Will Harribee had opportunity in the next year to know their quality well, for he frequently stayed to supper Sunday night, and always Mrs. Jewett made one of her lemon pies for him. When at the end of the year her daughter began her own pretty housekeeping, she carried no more cherished accomplishment with her than the secret of her mother's lemon pies.

Yet, curiously enough, for five months she never made one. There were so many new and wonderful things to think about, and besides, it was summer, and both she and Will were fond of fruits and ices; lemon pies could easily wait. But finally one October day the psychic hour struck. Will was worried over some business matter, and naturally little Mrs. Will was worried, too. Then suddenly she remembered the lemon pies he had been so fond of, and flew to the kitchen. The surprise would surely cheer him up.

The pie turned out perfect. Little Mrs. Will—who was only a girl—could scarcely wait for Maggie to bring it on at dinner that night. She cast a triumphant glance across the table, but the glance hung paralyzed by the look upon her husband's face.

"Is that a lemon pie?" he asked.

"Why, yes, Will—just like mother's," his wife answered.

"If there is anything upon the face of the earth that I abominate," he replied, "it is lemon pies. I always have. I ate them all last year for love of you, Betty, but I'll be hanged if I'll touch one in my own house."

For a moment there was silence—an awful silence. Then suddenly they both began to laugh.

"You poor boy!" Betty cried, through the laughter. "Oh, you poor boy!"

Then she rang for Maggie.

"Maggie," she asked, "do your people like lemon pie?"

"Indade an' they do that," Maggie responded.

"I think," Mrs. Will said, still struggling for composure, "you may take this one. Neither Mr. Harribee nor I care for any, after all. You may bring us some olives and wafers."—Youth's Companions.

A VIVID PICTURE.

An accident to one of Sammy Peters eyes had led the doctor to order a bandage and a dark room for several days. It fell to the lot of Sammy's patient mother to furnish the sufferer with amusement.

"What do you want me to read to you this morning, Sammy?" she asked. "Here's a nice book of adventure Aunt Elizabeth sent over after you went to bed last night. Shall I try that?"

"No, please, mamma," said the sufferer, politely. "P'r'aps later, but couldn't you begin with the baseball game? It was a very important one yesterday, and I think you'll find it on the ninth page."

"Certainly, dear," assented his mother, and started in, slowly making her way through the maze of strange terms.

"'Bates opened the first inning with a hot drive into the crowd in right field for two bases. Young sacrificed. Lewis to Jordan, and Binnie duplicated Bates' drive into the other corner. Bates scoring. On McGann's single Binnie went home. Lewis threw wide of Ritchey's hard one, and the latter got to first. Taylor flied to Hummel, and McGann tried to score on Sweeney's single.

"'About fifteen hundred persons then suggested that Smithy wallop it over the fence. Just at the moment when it appeared that he might not obey instructions, he lifted his club against one of Ritchey's fine ones and sent it two feet above the chocolate sign on the right side field fence. The top of the grand stand was lifted bodily about an inch by the glad yells of the Smithy association.'" She paused for breath. "I hope you understand this, Sammy, for I'm sure I don't."

"Understand! Why, mamma," exclaimed the sufferer, "can't you just see it, can't you just smell the peanuts? Please read that over—that about the chocolate sign."

Mountain Sickness.

Every Alpine climber notes his experience in the rarefied air of a high altitude. All accounts of mountain sickness agree. In every case there are the same symptoms, differing more or less in degree. The head aches, the heart palpitates, the nose bleeds. Some vomit violently, all gasp for breath. Every exertion seems more severe at great heights, and the symptoms of the sickness are sometimes mistaken for those of fatigue.

Dr. Workman, who has been climbing in the Himalayas, has made a study of mountain sickness. He experienced a constant gasping for breath which interfered with sleep. With one of his porters the symptoms of high altitude illness were so marked as to give warning of another danger besides that of discomfort. At the height of twenty-one thousand feet the man collapsed, and was helpless. He lost all sensation in his hands, and when his mittens were removed, his fingers were found to be white, stiff, and on the point of becoming frost-bitten. This experience shows the interruption of circulation, the balance of which is lost in the removal of the ordinary air pressure.

Swankers.

A number of our contemporaries appear to be somewhat exercised as to the precise meaning of the word "swank." Swank, though usually called by other names, is the leading characteristic of Englishmen. Frenchmen used to talk of "perfidious Albion." It was simply another way of calling us swankers. To swank is, broadly, to make the thing that is not seem as the thing that is.—London Globe.

Tit for Tat.

"We thought we'd rather move than clean house."

"An original idea."

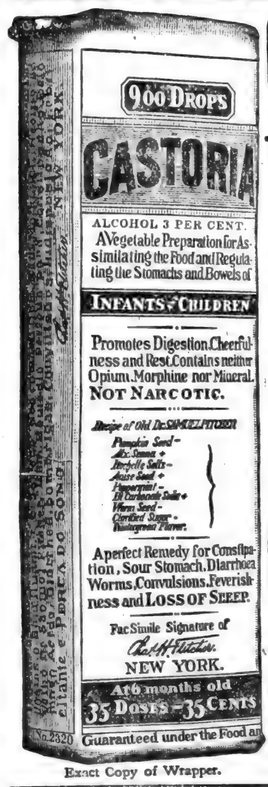
"Not so original. It had also occurred to the people who vacated the abode we leased."—Kansas City Journal.

Hot Talk.

Lovett—Yes, she rejected me. What of it?

Hadley—Nothing; only I'll bet you felt foolish about that time.

Lovett—Yes, I guess I felt just as foolish at that time as you look all the time.—Philadelphia Press.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Book of Plays of Charles I.

There was sold at Sotheby's recently a volume of plays once the property of King Charles I. It has his autograph initials, C. R., in monogram, on two blank leaves, and on a fly leaf he has written a list of the contents of the volume. Below the list of contents written by the king is a note in another hand, "With this booke the late king passed ye terryble lonely hours in his doleful restraint in Craisbrooke Castle in the Isle of Wight making that catalogue as above with his own hand." These notes were written by an ancestor of the late owner, a member of Parliament, who was in close attendance upon the king in his last days.

Rebuking His Presumption.

The proud beauty eyed him with regal scorn.

"I have told you before, Mr. Jordle," she said, "that the difference in our social position makes it exceedingly presumptuous on your part even to hint at a possible marriage between us. If you can't talk to me without doing the sentimental stunt just keep your face closed, will you?"

Utterly crushed, the young man promised to be good, and she laid her golden brown head down on his shoulder again.

Not Mentioned by Herodotus.

Xerxes was meditating upon his good luck in having been made king by his royal father in preference to the eldest son.

"Still," he said, "if the succession had been determined by a primary election I would have got it just the same. Naturally everybody would have marked an X opposite my name."

Subsequently, however, the Greeks gave him the double cross at Platæa.

You Can Get Allen's Foot-Ease FREE

Write to-day to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., for a FREE sample of Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder to shake into your shoes. It cures tired, sweating, hot, swollen, aching feet. It makes new or tight shoes easy. A certain cure for Corns and Bunions. All Druggists and Shoe Stores sell it. 25c.

Never Met One Before.

The butler, tired of having nothing to do, had gone out to the stables to commune with the coachman, and was nosing around in his usual dignified way.

"My word!" he exclaimed, looking with some curiosity at an implement he had just picked up. "That's the biggest safety razor I ever saw. How do you put the blades in it, Jawge?"

"Safety razor!" howled the coachman. "You bloomin' idjit, that's a currycomb!"

Worth Its Weight in Gold.

It's PETTIT'S EYE SALVE, strengthens eyes of the old, tonic for eye strain, weak and watery eyes. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

Not Hard to Do.

"George," asked Mrs. Ferguson, "if I should want to put some money in the bank while you are away how will I go about it?"

"That's easy, Laura," said Mr. Ferguson. "All you have to do is to go to the bank, make a noise like a depositor, and there will be somebody to see that you don't get away till you have got rid of your money."—Chicago Tribune.

All Up-to-Date Housekeepers

Use Red Cross Ball Blue. It makes the clothes clean and sweet as when new. All Grocers.

The Brute!

"Wasn't your wife awfully lonesome at that mountain resort while you were spending your time fishing for trout?"

"O, no; she found a place where there was a splendid echo, and she enjoyed nothing better than to go there and carry on a conversation with it by the hour."—Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Uncle Allen.

"I see the government is going into the airship business," said Uncle Allen Sparks. "Sooner or later the airship will get into politics, and then we'll have machine politicians and flying machine politicians."

The world uses at least 170,000,000,000 matches yearly.

A Dispenser of Smiles.

Her mother said: "Oh, dear! Isn't that awful? What will people think?" but the people themselves seemed to think it about the prettiest incident they had met that day.

She was a very little girl, white frocked, pink ribboned, brown curled. With her mother she left the subway train at the Grand Central station. The usual confusion prevailed. Timid travelers grabbed suit cases and bundles and exclaimed, "Oh, do we change here?" Trainmen on the platform shouted out directions for local and express trains and the guards of that particular car adjured the passengers frequently and vehemently to "Step lively!" and to "watch the step." Then all of a sudden there was a lull in the uproar. The little girl was leaving the car. She stopped at the door, looked back and waived her hand.

"Goodby, everybody," she said.

The words carried to the far end of the car. They made every one sit up. Two or three persons called out a responsive "Goodby," two or three said "Bless the child," and all smiled.—New York Press.

Wages in the machine factories of Germany advanced last year 10 to 15 per cent.

A Skin of Beauty Is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 69 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the hauteton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N.Y.

JOS. DUCHAC & CO.

FINE WISCONSIN FARM AND TIMBER LANDS $10 to $25 AN ACRE

92 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

SEPTEMBER

0326
L 903

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

3rd. Annual
FREE FALL EXHIBIT will be held at AUBURN
Oct. 7=8=9
$2,000 in Prizes.
Finest Free Attractions. Did You Get A Premium List?
If not write
C. H. NAPP
Assistant Secretary.
AUBURN, INDIANA

HARLAN ITEMS.

School begins here, September 14th.

Rev. Pothemus is entertaining his brother.

Florence James is spending a few days as guest of Hazel Swift.

Mrs. Harriett Metzger is slowly improving from her recent illness.

Mrs. Hannah Starr has returned from the Reichelderfer reunion.

Mrs. Morris Curie and children are visiting Geo. T. James and family.

Bertha and Herman Ricke spent Sunday the guest of the Misses Bickhart.

John Bickhart returned from a business trip to Ligonier and Fort Wayne.

Dr. Cosgrove is improving his property with cement walks, paint and slate roof.

Chas. Hartzell and family and Chas. Grubb and family are camping along the Maumee.

Fred Smith, the new high school supt., arrives Monday to look after school matters.

H. B. Hayes has returned from Guymon, Okla., and will locate in South Whitley.

Miss Grayce Bickhart returned to Ft. Wayne, Monday, to take charge of a department at Saul's.

After a severe illness caused by cancer of the stomach, Mrs. William Langham died last Tuesday.

Mrs. Sylvester Stopher returned Friday evening from a weeks visit with her son Emmett, at Noblesville.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No. 1.

Ort Wearley spent Sunday at Fort Wayne.

Vernie Kelley spent Saturday evening at Hicksville.

S. H. Maurer took dinner with Harvie Kimes and family.

Earl Lyons of near Branch, Mich., returned to his home, Friday evening.

John Emrick, wife and children of Huntertown, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Wearley and family.

Mrs. Chas. Lake and children and sister, Gladys Abel of near Newville, returned to her home at Ft. Wayne, Saturday.

Miss Hazel McIntyre, who has been visiting with Harvie Kimes and family, returned to her home at Fort Wayne, Saturday.

Geo Howey has a new kind of corn which is something fine one stock has ten ears; two large ones and eight small ones. This will be hard to beat.

Mrs. Effie Schoolmaster, who has been visiting with relatives for sometime has returned to her home at Fremont, Mich., accompanied by Lizzie Hart.

Joseph Saylor and wife, George Stafford, wife and daughter Edith, of Butler, Willis Baker and wife of St. Joe, spent Sunday at the home of Calvin Saylor and family.

L. A. Lake of Butler, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. Lake.

Bessie Hart and Corma Kelley attended the contest at Butler, Friday evening.

Fern Wearley and Clara Keesler spent Sunday with the latter's sister, Mrs. Bertha Furnish, near Auburn.

A Sure-enough Knocker.

J. C. Goodwin, of Reidsville, N. C says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve is a sure-enough knocker for ulcers. A bad one came on my leg last summer, but that wonderful salve knocked it out in a few rounds. Not even a scar remained." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns etc. 25c. at H. Milliman's drug store.

FAIRVIEW

Eggs 20c per dozen at the Big Four Store.

Mrs. Edna Moudy was a guest of her mother, last week

Lankey Morr and family visited with Howard Krises', Sunday.

Russell Houser had to take a few days lay off last week, on account of sickness.

Mrs. Alda Brown went to Ft. Wayne Saturday evening, to see her daughter, Mrs. Albert Ginther, who is sick.

Hazel and Mabel Bassett, who have been visiting here the past week, returned to their home at Lima, Ind., Saturday.

NEWVILLE

Fred Fusselman returned Sunday to his home in Ft. Wayne.

F. A. Thomas is improving the looks of his buildings with a coat of paint.

John Stafford of Hicksville, visited Saturday at the home of David Griest.

C. B. Brunson and wife of Garrett, visited Saturday with friends at this place.

Mrs. Charles Ryan and Jessie Headley made a business trip to Auburn, Friday.

The junior ball team played at Coletown, Saturday. Score 3 to 9 in favor of Coletown.

S. M. Hill, pastor of the U. B. church, preached his farewell sermon, Sunday morning.

A number from this way attended Chastine Johnston's contest at Butler, Friday evening.

S. M. Hill left Monday for Claypool, Ind., where he will visit with his parents a couple of days. From there he goes to Bourbon to attend the conference.

Charlie Harter had quite a streak of luck in the line of fishing, Monday morning, finding two large carp on his lines, one weighing 6½ pounds and the other 10½ pounds.

A number of the women of the Aid Society met at the C. G. Wartenbee's, Monday, and canned peaches for them. Tuesday they went to William Browns' for the same purpose.

Mrs. Harriet Leggett of Chicago, who has been spending the summer in Milwaukee, Wis. came home to make a visit with her mother and other relatives.

T. H. Williams and wife left Monday for Van Wert, Ohio, to spend a week with the latters parents and also to attend the Van Wert fair.

4 PER CENT
INTEREST
Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.
SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.
Capital Paid
$50,000
Security to Depositors
$100,000
PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

Willie Miller attended the Paulding Fair, Thursday of last week.

Swell tan and oxblood shoes for men. Just arrived. The Big Four Store.

Mrs. C. J. Hadsell of Hicksville, and Mrs. Curtis Craun of Butler, visited Saturday with Leslie Strong and family.

Henry Smith, wife and daughter, Iris, of Big Run, attended morning services at the Church of Christ, Sunday.

Mary Strong went Sunday evening to Butler, where she attends school this winter. The school beginning Monday.

Arthur Rhoads and son Homer, came Saturday from Peoria, Ill., and made a short visit with his parents at this place.

The picnic given by the U. B. Sunday school for the purpose of raising money for the church netted the sum of forty dollars.

Cora Harter left Monday for Van Wert, Ohio, where she expects to attend the fair and make a visit among friends and relatives.

The piano recital given by Chastine Johnston and pupils Saturday evening at the Christian church, was a rare musical treat to the people of Newville and vicinity. Every number was well rendered. The students were a credit to their teacher and each one deserves special notice. Mr. Johnston played with the same energy, animation and correct interpretation that characterizes all of his playing; his left hand solo was a revelation in its scope and execution. We are especially favored in having the Johnston School of Music and it is worthy of our heartiest encouragement.

WABASH CORNERS.

Wm. Provines spent Friday afternoon in Garrett.

Mrs. Ella Lucas, burnt her left hand quite severely, last week.

Flora and Emma Simangton called on George Wilson and family Wednesday.

Gene White and the correspondent spent Thursday with Roy White and family.

Dennis Burley, wife and granddaughter, were Sunday guests of Tom White and wife.

Benj. Hamilton and wife and Miss Jennie Shutt of Auburn, were callers at O. K. Shulls, Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Bartlett of Ft. Wayne, spent Sunday with her mother Mrs. James Dragoo and family.

Miss Pearl Braithwaite of Ft. Wayne, was the guest of her grandma Maurer part of last week.

Mrs. John Johnson and daughter, Ida of Auburn called on Emma Simangton, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Wm. Provines and daughter of Auburn, spent Thursday in Garrett with Perry Stafford and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Lepper and Maud Braithwaite of Ft. Wayne, were Sunday visitors of Mrs. Maurer and sons.

The Misses Cal and Emma Wineland of St. Joe spent Wednesday with their sister Blanche, at the home of George Provines.

George Wade and wife and Sherman Rickett and wife attended the Soldiers Encampment at Toledo, a part of last week.

Mrs. Younglove and daughter, Mrs. Hissong and two children from south of Spencerville were guests of Mrs. Mary Scott last Thursday.

Wm. Lucas and wife invited in seventeen of their neighbors Wednesday evening to eat melons. Those present were G. C. Lucas and wife, Will Miller and wife, Will Scott, wife and Inez Patterson, O. K. Shull, wife and children, Sherman Wolff and wife, P. A. Shurtz, wife and daughter, Pearl.

COBURN'S CORNERS

Postal cards at Spurgeon's Studio, 75 cents per dozen.

Frank Kinsey placed a new steel shingle roof on Miller Dermot's house last week.

There will be preaching at the Corner's next Lord's Day, both morning and evening.

Reed F. Place and family spent Sunday afternoon with George Wilson and family of Spencerville.

A number from this way attended Sunday School Convention at St Joe Sunday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gee who has been spending the summer in Newville will go to Peru the last of this week to remain during the winter.

J. M. Milliman who has been at Toledo the past week is now visiting with his son, John who is now located at Blakesly. Mr. Milliman will return home the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Kate Lehman of Defiance, Ohio, came Tuesday noon to visit with her cousin, C. A. Tustison and family... Miss Jennie Shutt of Auburn, spent Saturday evening and Sunday at the home of Beni Hamilton.....Clyde Hart has so far improved that he is able to be out of doors a part of the time. He expects to begin his school in two weeks.....Vernon Franks and family of Auburn, took supper Saturday evening at the home of Rev. J. A. Brown.....Mrs. Cora Maxwell was at Auburn, Friday, visiting her sister.... Meade Baker, who has been at Rittman, Ohio, came Saturday to visit with his father and sister....Mrs. Anna Franks, Meade Baker and Matie Baker visited Sunday with their brother, John Baker and family at East Springfield....Mildred Gee was bit quite severely on the arm and hand by a dog belonging to H. A. Coburn, and with which she was playing. Although the bitten places are sore she is getting along alright.....Ora Quance was overcome by a dust chill while hulling clover seed, last Monday. He was working in the barn taking care of the straw that had been threshed. The blower on the huller did not work and the dust completly overcame him. Tuesday he was better but still unable to be out of the house.

J. H. Lake M. D
has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.
Calls answered day or night.
BELL PHONE NO. 82.
St. Joe, Indiana.

Training Class Contest.

The Bible Training Class of the Christian Church will hold a contest next Thursday evening. The class has chosen sides and an oral examination will be held on the work that has been covered in the past six months. Each side will endeavor to surpass the other in this test. Those who are interested in Bible study will be interested in attending this contest

COMMISIONER'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Commissioner appointed by the DeKalb Circuit Court, in the case of Catherine E. Murphy et al. against Lydia A. Kees, et al., to sell the following described real estate, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, to-wit:—a part of the south west quarter of section fifteen, in township number thirty three, north, range fourteen, east, bounded by a line, commencing at the point where the west boundary line of said section crosses the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and, running thence south on said section line to the north boundary line of Washington Street in the Town of St. Joe; thence east on said boundary line of Washington Street eleven rods; thence north to the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and thence in a westerly direction along the south boundary line of said right of way to the place of begining, will sell said real estate at private sale on and after October 24th., 1908, at the office of J. E. and J. H. Rose in the city of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the following terms, to-wit:—One third cash in hand on the day of sale, one third in nine months and one third in eighteen months from the date of sale, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's promissory notes, with six per cent interest, and with attorneys fees, waiving relief from valuation laws, and secured by a mortgage on said real estate.

Dated, September 7th., 1908.

James E. Rose, Commissioner.

Students At Work

The St. Joe public schools began work Monday and will continue for an eight month's term. The enrollment on the first morning was not so large as had been expected. The enumeration of the pupils within the corporation showed a total of 127, but 93 have enrolled in the schools, and a portion of these come from the country. It is expected that more will enter soon.

The teaching staff consists of Prof. Howard Ely, Edna Provines, Clarence Woodcox and Nettie Baker. With this efficient corps of teachers the schools ought to prosper.

The Council Meeting.

The town council met Monday evening and transacted important business. A side walk ordinance was considered and laid over until next meeting. Bills were presented and their amounts granted to Smith & Co. for tile, N. Tustison for gravel, and Geo. Bleeks for services as marshall. On account of some difficulty which Mr. Bleeks had oad with the town board he tendered his resignation as marshall, which was accepted. C. B. Leighty was appointed by the council to fill the vacancy.

S. S. Kimes
—M. D.—
Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.
Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

Gospel Meetings

J. A. Brown will begin a series of meetings at the Church of Christ, Monday night, September 14. He will be assisted by a singing evangelist. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Political Announcement.

EDITOR NEWS:—

Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)

D. W. BAKER.

Local Items.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

The Misses Lela Shilling, Ethel and Hazel Berry were Sunday visitors in Ft. Wayne.

Wm. Sanders and wife of Wellsbury, Ind., visited several days last week with relatives and friends here.

Christ Sailor and family left Monday for Lake Gage, where they will spend two weeks in fishing and enjoying an outing. He expects to move to Texas after election.

Chas. F. Thayer and lady friend, Miss Jones of Ft. Wayne called Saturday at the home of Dr. Sheffer. They went to Ft. Wayne Sunday where Mr. Thayer expects to remain a few days.

Mrs. F. Buchanan returned Sunday from Butler, where she had been visiting her daughter. Upon her return she became seriously ill and has been confined to her bed since. She is better at this writing.

Buy school shoes at the right place this time. Buster Brown and W. L. Douglass shoes for boys. Tans and black. The Big Four Store.

FOR SALE:—9 head of Shropshire ews. D. D. Burley, St. Joe.

New lot of dress goods just received. New shades. 25c, 50c, $1.00 and $1.50 per yd.

Merritt Hull of Ft. Wayne spent Sunday and Monday with his parents.

Ralph Patterson left Monday morning for Springfield, Ohio where he will attend school.

Will Koch went to Cadillac, Michigan, Thursday to join his wife who is visiting their son Roy and wife.

Our new fall wraps will be in, in a few days. Wait for them. Big Four Store.

Roscoe Barney played third base for for the Auburn ball team at South Whitley in a double header, Monday.

Two large and perfectly developed onions were placed in the window last week, by Ed Berry. Some fine ears of corn were also put on display by Henry Abel. Geo. Milliman added a large head of sunflower seed to the collection. What have you for the display?

MRS. WARNER
Has returned from the Eastern Markets with all the new styles of the season. Beginning Monday,
September 14
we will have our
MILLINERY and PATTERN HAT DISPLAY.
We are looking for You.

SHOE REPAIRING
Neatly and substantially done.
Half Soles 40 and 50 cents.
Work Done Promptly.
George Milliman

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

SEPTEMBER

U327
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 16, 1908. NO. 38

TWO BARNS BURN

Barns on Simmons Farm--Fire Starts Sunday Afternoon -- Cause Unknown Valuable Stock, Machinery, and Hay Destroyed.

The farm of R. M. Simmons near Hall's Corners, Scipio township, Allen county, was the scene Sunday of the most destructive fire that has been in these parts for years. Two large barns which stood near each other were totally destroyed, the fire starting at four o'clock in the afternoon. The larger barn was 78x54 and the other 62x34. A large straw stack stood between the two barns and a second stack was back of the south barn. These burned with the barns and added to the ferocity of the flames. The windmill standing at the corner of the north building was also destroyed. The barns contained about seventy ton of hay, binders, wagons, plows, cultivators, harness, feed cutters, all the farm implements in fact excepting the hay tools. Nine thoroughbred Galloway cattle were in one of the barns and all were burned. This was the largest item of loss as these cattle were valued at $1200. One bull alone being worth $500. These were covered by no greater insurance than ordinary stock and will figure quite a loss to their owners. The herd represented five years of careful breeding and much care in order to get a perfect lot of animals and now just as the owners' ideals are realized and they were in a position to realize from them, the animals are all destroyed. The stock were in shape for showing purposes and were to have been taken to the fair this week. On this account, they were in the barn; otherwise they would have been in the pasture and have escaped burning. One brood mare was also burned.

The farm is occupied by G. A. Eager, who farms the place for Mr. Simmons, and with whom he owns the thoroughbred stock and farm machinery in partnership. At the time of the fire none of Mr. Eager's folks were at home and the blaze was not discovered by any of the neighbors until it had made such headway that there was no possible chance of saving anything. The heat was so intense that men could not stay near it. The wind was from the northeast and carried the flames away from the dwelling and smaller out buildings. Burning cinders were carried two miles southwest and fire caught in a manure pile near the barn on the McCurdy farm, one-quarter mile to the west. It was necessary to fight fire here to save the barn. Had the wind been from the west every building on the Simmons farm would have been burned

It is a mystery how the fire originated. It is thought the blaze started in the northwest corner of the larger barn, but it will probably never be known what started the blaze. Mr. Eager stated that he left home at two o'clock and when he returned the two buildings were blazing ruins. Monday morning, piles of embers were smouldering, and in smoking heaps the carcasses of the dead animals were still burning. The iron work of numerous pieces of machinery lay scattered all about the ruins, showing the enormity of the loss in machinery alone. The buildings and contents were covered by a reasonable insurance which will in a measure at least atone for the loss. Mr. Simmons intends building as soon as possible. He will erect a barn on the site of the other two, much larger than either of the burned ones.

The Banker's Attitude

The men who organize banks do not have selfish motives. Besides being a business proposition whereby a rate of interest is earned on the capital of the bank—a rate consistent with safety—the bank is a public institution. The banker's aim is to help customers financially Give each better facilities with which he may carry on business; furnish a system that insures more safety for business transactions; and render assistance to men, in giving them credit for doing business. The experience and position of the banker enables him to judge a man's problems accurately, and seeks the opportunity to help those who come to him for advice. The banker can diagnose a financial case and administer relief as well as the doctor in his field of work. He is in touch with business conditions; he knows the causes and reliefs for business ailments; he can tell you how to regulate your business pulse and bring it up to normal.

The bankers remedies and methods are not experiments; they have been administered to others and proven beneficial. Bring your business case to this bank for relief.

St. Joe Valley Bank.

KAGEY'S RESTAURANT

A Clean Place

You would rather eat in a clean place. The food tastes betfer and you receive more satisfaction when eating it. You need not be ashamed to bring your friends here for lunch as we do everything possible to give the best service.

BEGINNING TOMORROW

We are making specials in the way of

Hamburg, Frankfurts, Sausage, Steaks

We also serve in nice style

Cold Veal and Ham, Coffee and Lunch

ANY KIND OF SHORT ORDERS.

Call at our place when you want to eat.

House Burned

Home of A. J. Collins Destroyed by Fire, Friday.

Friday afternoon at 3:30 the residence of A. J. Collins, three miles north of St. Joe was burned to the ground. The house was very close to the railroad and it is thought that a spark from a passing engine flew through an open window and falling on a bed started the blaze.

Mr. Collins was absent from home but a daughter was present and endeavored to get the burning bedding from the house. She did not succeed and it was but a few minutes until the entire building was in flames. Some workmen nearby arrived in time to remove a few articles from the house, but were able to save but little. The best they could do was to keep the fire from running through the dry grass and igniting the goods already removed.

There was no insurance and the loss of his home is a severe blow to Mr. Collins. He is an honest, hardworking man, ever ready to meet his obligations and holds the respect of those who have had dealings with him. Subscription papers were started Saturday morning for his relief, one in his home neighborhood and one in St. Joe.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That I, JACOB D. LEIGHTY administrator of the estate of WILLIAM KNIGHT deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Thursday the first day of October 1908, at the farm near Fairview Church the following personal property, belonging to the estate of said decedent, to-wit: All the horses, cattle, hogs, corn in shock, farm implements, etc.

TERMS OF SALE:

For all amounts not exceeding five dollars, cash in hand. For amounts of five dollars and upwards, a credit of twelve months will be given. Note, bearing six per cent interest after maturity, with approved security, and waiving Valuation and Appraisement Laws, will be required.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
Administrator.

Literary Club

The L. L. C. convened at the home of Mrs. Benninghoff, Sept. 10, 1908. The text book for the new year is: Great books as Life's Teacher's. The President called the Club to order after which Mrs. Tustison conducted the lesson entitled Prophets of a New Era. The subject was very interesting and many fine thoughts were presented. After the usual preliminaries the club sang America, and then adjourned to meet in one week. The hostess treated the ladies to water-melon and grapes.

Blacksmith

Having bought out the Christ Sailer blacksmith shop, I solicit, your patronage. The shop will be open every week day from morning until night. All work guaranteed to be satisfactory.

Prohibitions Nominate.

The prohibitions of Concord township met in caucus in the skating rink, Saturday, and nominated township candidates. Wm. B. Lucas was put on the ticket for trustee and Frank Johnson for assessor. A resolution was passed to support these candidates in the coming election.

Our Barbers.

St. Joe now has four barber shops and our townsmen need not go with unshaven faces, long hair or dirty scalps. The two regular barbers, J. C. Hull and George Millman are at their old stands. George Kinsey has started a new shop in the east room of the Kinsey block and Freeman Abel has opened up a shop in the Case building. All were running full blast Saturday evening and each seemed to be as busy as when but two tonsorial parlors were in town.

John Dirk of, Montpelier, Ohio, visited with his brother-in-law, C. A. Patterson the fore part of last week.

Gospel services began at the Christian church Monday evening and will continue throughout the week and longer if it is thought best. The pastor J. A. Brown is conducting the services and Fred Thomas of Newville is assisting with the music.

Mrs. Chas. Kinsey.

Dies at Her Home in Auburn After Three Weeks Illness

Mrs. Chas. F. Kinsey well known to the people of St. Joe, died at her home in Auburn, Tuesday evening, September 8th. For almost three weeks she lay seriously sick and for several days past little hope was entertained for her recovery. Sunday, it was thought the end had come but she rallied again slightly but not conscious of the surroundings. Typhoid fever was the disease and hemorrhages the direct cause of death.

The deceased, Dora F. Kinsey, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson who reside on a part of the same lot. She was born June 3, 1873, on the old homestead, five miles south of Auburn in Jackson township and when quite young moved with her parents to this place where she met Charles Kinsey and to whom she was married December 13, 1890. After her marriage they continued to reside here until February 22, 1903, they moved to South Milford, remaining there till November 20, 1904, when they moved to Auburn where they have since resided. She was the mother of three children, Gladys and Keith who survive her, and one son who died in infancy.

In early life she joined the M. E. church at Auburn remaining a faithful and consistent member until her death September 8, 1908, at 7:40 p. m., aged 35 years, 3 months and 5 days. She leaves beside her two children, a husband, father, mother and one sister, Miss Kate Ferguson.

She was a lady highly respected and admired for her many traits of noble character, high ideals and fidelity to those near her.

The funeral was held at the M. E. church in Auburn, Friday afternoon, September 11, Rev. W. B. Freeland officiating. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

Special Service.

The service at the M. P. church, Sunday morning was largely attended. Special music was rendered by Prof. J. E. Sturgis of Butler, who is well known to our people. Mr. Sturgis has complete control of his voice and is able to move his hearers to tears. He also rendered some very fine violin music which added a peculiar charm to the beauty of the service. Mr. Sturgis is traveling as a singing evangelist and leaves Sunday, on an evangelistic tour.

The preaching service was excellent. Rev. McCain held the attention of his audience and developed some practical truths with reference to Christian living. The entire service was a most interesting one.

Caucus.

The Republican voters of Concord township, DeKalb Co. Ind., are requested to meet in caucus in St. Joe, at 2:00 p. m. Saturday, Sept. 19th, 1908, for the purpose of nominating candidates for township trustee, township assessor and the transaction of any other business that may come before the caucus.

Township Committee.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATION

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed by the judge of the DeKalb Circuit Court, of the State of Indiana, administrator of the estate of William Knight deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
August 28, 1908. Administrator.
John W. Baxter. Atty.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO—

THE BEST
OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

Baking Powder
White Lily, 10 cents per pound.

Cider Vinegar
Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Spices
A full line of the best.

A List of Soaps

FOR LAUNDRY WORK.

Easy Task, Star, Lenox, Procter and Gamble, Ivory, Fels Naptha, Wabash Naptha, Wool Soap, Old Mill, 8 bars for 25c.

Washing Powders

Ivorine, Rub-No-More, Pearline
Bar Boy's Friend and Sapolio.

All the good Toilet Soaps. Buy your soap Here.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Local Items.

Razors honed at MILLIMAN'S

FOR SALE:—9 head of Shropshire ewes. D. D. Burley, St. Joe.

George Swineford and wife spent last week at Mackinac Island.

Vera Copp and Laura Woodcox returned home from Battle Creek, Monday evening.

The W. C. T. U. meeting will be held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. T. Bishop.

Wm. Curle shipped three decks of hogs to Pittsburg, Saturday. He also sent a large shipment of fine cattle.

Mary Scholes went to Harlan, Sunday, where she will take the fourth year work of the commissioned high school course.

Over 100 Ladies, Misses and Childrens, Latest Style Coats just received. We can please you. The Big Four Store.

Harry Kees made cider on Thursday and Friday of last week. Load after load of apples came in and in two days over 3000 gallons of apple juice was squeezed out.

Mrs. H. C. Hathaway, Gladys Barney and Lela Shilling went to Auburn Saturday, and acted as judges at the concert given by pupils of Chastine Johnston, that evening.

WOOD FOR SALE:- Twenty-five cord of good mixed wood. Inquire of BOWSER & GLOYD. Spencerville Phone No. 44. Delivered at St. Joe for $2.00 per cord.

Mrs. Iona Woodcox and grandfather Mr. Moor of Clear Lake, S. D., and Little Lucile Woodcox, spent several days last week, with relatives at Montpelier, Ind., returning home Monday.

Miss Edna Provines, teacher of the Grammer room was sick Wednesday and was unable to go to the schoolroom. Roy Maxwell taught in her place. She was able to resume work Thursday morning.

A letter received from Mrs Clyde Woodcox brings the news of the arrival of a baby girl at the home of their son Dale last Wednesday Aug. 10.

School Items

Visit the schools.

Ethel Leighty started Monday, to review in both rooms.

Miss Flossie Copp visited the High Room last Friday afternoon.

Miss Mable Williams was absent from school last Friday on account of sickness.

Owing to the lack of books the High Room did not do as much work last week as they will in the near future.

The Seniors being very happy because they have to carry an extra study, adorned the room with their pennant and growing flowers.

School has been going one week. Although the attendance is not so large as usual in the High School department, it does not lessen the interest.

The attendance and punctuality for the first week in the Intermediate department, speaks well for both pupil and parent. Out of an enrollment of thirty-two, there was not a case of absence or tardiness

You can get all sizes floor Oil Cloth patterns for under your stoves, at the Big Four Store.

Jake Sechler brought in an ear of corn Friday evening that weighs one and one-half pounds. The corn was raised on his farm and is the average sized ear.

Ira and Emma Hadsell of Ft. Wayne came to this place, Thursday evening, and remained until Saturday evening visiting friends and relatives here and at Coburn's Corners.

Mrs. Sarah Richey of Omaha, Nebraska, who has been visiting George Woodcox's family and other relatives and friends for the last two days returned west Monday evening.

Mesdames J. C. Hull, Abner Copp and Blanche Leighty attended the funeral of Mrs. Kinsey at Auburn, Friday.

Otto Wise and wife of Garrett came Saturday and visited over Sunday and Monday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Alvin Reasoner.

John Sechler,

St. Joe, Indiana.

New School Supplies.

This week we are showing a new line of
Tablets, Pencils and Erasers,
Pens and Ink, Colored Crayons,
Examination paper and School bags.

Get your Supplies Here.

Fresh Canned Goods.

Many of them here and more on the way.
Cove Oysters, Salmon,
Apples, Peaches,
Corn, Etc.

Come In and See.

SEPTEMBER

0328
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY . . Publishers

1907 SEPTEMBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 3rd. F. M. 10th. L. Q. 17th. N. M. 25th.

PAST AND PRESENT

AS IT COMES TO US FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Telegraphic Information Gathered by the Few for the Enlightenment of the Many.

Big Fire in Huntington, Ind.

One of the most destructive fires that Huntington, Ind., has ever experienced broke out shortly after midnight in a small shed adjoining the Knudson-Mercer Lumber Company and spread with great rapidity to a larger shed about 150 feet in length, in which was stored thousands of feet of lumber to be dried. Before the firemen had secured control of the conflagration it jumped across the Wabash tracks and set fire to the large grain elevator belonging to Schulenberg & Weber and in a short time it was razed to the ground. Along the railroad tracks several Wabash trains were standing loaded with valuable merchandise and as the flames leaped across the tracks the cars caught fire, burning many of them to cinders, together with their contents. The firemen had stretched six lines of hose across the tracks from the east end of the city and it was impossible to handle the trains from that portion of the road. An Erie engine was rushed to the scene from the west, however, and succeeded in dragging many of the cars to safety. It is impossible to estimate the total damage at this time, but it is said to exceed $100,000.

Girl Is Kidnapped Twice.

Bessie Myers, aged 6 years, was twice kidnapped within a month—her father, David W. Myers, of Elkhart, Ind., having taken her from the mother, now Mrs. Claire Williams, of Kendallville, on August 12, and the mother, accompanied by her sisters, Mrs. John Stewart, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Gertrude Frock, of Kendallville, having reversed the trick last week. The child was willing to accompany the mother, and there was no legal obstacle, as the court decree gives her to the mother, but the three women resorted to the expedients of kidnappers to get the child out of the city while the father was trying to convince a justice of the peace that he should issue a warrant.

Negro Lynched and Shot Full of Holes.

"I led the mob which lynched Nels Patton and I'm proud of it," declared ex-United States Senator W. V. Sullivan, of Oxford, Miss., following the report that he had been implicated in the hanging of Nels Patton, a colored man, who was charged with having killed a white woman. Patton was taken from jail by a mob, shot to death and his body stretched up and riddled with bullets, following his crime when he murdered a white woman by slashing her throat with a razor.

Kansas City in Danger of Race War.

Since the killing of a white man by a negro in Kansas City, Mo., last week there has been a growing alarm of a race war among the colored population and the police have learned that many of them have purchased firearms. A pawnbroker reported that the negroes had purchased all the shot guns, rifles and revolvers in his store, besides a large amount of ammunition. Excited groups of colored men have been dispersed by the police, but no violence has occurred.

Cincinnati Has Bad Fire.

Fire destroyed the four-story brick sash, door and blind factory of the William Mayer Company, 642 to 646 West Third street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and for a time threatened adjoining property. The loss is estimated at $60,000 with insurance of $35,000. The fire was preceded by an explosion in a saw dust chute, which awakened many residents in the neighborhood who scantily clad hastily fled to the street.

Lived to Be 113 Years of Age.

Mrs. Sallie Ruthford died at Topeka, Kas., at the age of 113 years. She was born in Middleton, Ky., in 1795 and had never had a week's sickness in her life. Mrs. Ruthford came to Topeka forty-three years ago. Four generations of children gathered at her home there last week, believing it would be their last meeting.

To Sell Indianapolis Plant for $200,000.

The receivers of the Pope Manufacturing Company have received permission from Vice Chancellor Howell to accept the offer of $200,000, which they obtained for the company's motor car plant in Indianapolis, Ind.

Burned Eight Times in Six Years.

For the eighth time in the last six years the home of Alfred Helton, in West Washington, Ind., was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $1,000.

THE STORY OF THE WORLD

KANSAS IS MAKING CIDER.

Enormous Yield of Apples Has Swamped the Markets.

Implement dealers throughout Kansas are this summer being called upon by farmers for a kind of farm utensil for which the demand in former years has been very slight—cider presses. Two years ago there were a few presses sold throughout the State, but last year it is doubtful if a press was sold in the whole State of Kansas. This summer it is different, however, for the yield of both apples and grapes is phenomenal, and to take care of the large crop farmers are buying cider presses and making cider and wine. Apple trees are breaking down with the load of fruit, every variety of tree being filled as full of apples as the limbs will bear. It is the same way with the grapevines. They are loaded to the breaking point with great bunches of fruit. Of course a market is found for much of the fruit, but as the yield is much heavier than in former years and a market for such fruit has never been especially established by farmers in that section, some other method had to be devised to take care of the surplus. As a result the farmers are buying cider presses and making cider and wine. Some farmers are picking many apples to keep the trees from breaking and making them into cider at the present time. Others are making grape juice.

CROPS ARE FINE IN ALASKA.

Government Official Reports Eating Melons Grown in Far North.

Prof. C. C. Gorgeson, head of the agricultural experimental station in Alaska, who arrived at Seattle on the Victoria from Nome, says that Aug. 18 he ate watermelons grown in the open at Manley hot springs in the Tanana valley, was served with tomatoes grown in the open, had his picture taken in a cornfield where the stalks stood seven feet high, and traveled through farms along the Tanana and Yukon where wheat, barley, oats and rye were maturing. "Rampart, on the Yukon, the government station which started in 1900, is having one of the best seasons thus far enjoyed," said the professor. "There is no failure of the crop up there. When I left Rampart Aug. 6 it was almost matured. Barley had but a few more days to grow to be ripe. Almost every vegetable produced was perfect. At Fairbanks, where we have a 1,400-acre reserve, we have fifty or sixty acres cleared ready to plant next season."

Total Tonnage Tax $1,076,572.

The navigation bureau in Washington announced that the total tonnage taxes collected during the past fiscal year amounted to $1,076,572, the largest in any year since 1884. British vessels paid $629,644; German, $145,930; American, $82,680, and vessels of other nationalities the remainder. The port of New York collected 38 per cent of the total tonnage tax.

Lord Sackville-West Is Dead.

Lionel Sackville Sackville-West, second Baron Sackville, died at Knole Park, Sevenoaks, Kent, England. He had been ill for some time and since Aug. 15 had been confined to his bed. Lord Sackville was British minister to the United States from 1881 to 1888. At the request of President Cleveland he was recalled in October, 1888.

American Wife Tries Suicide.

An American woman known at the Paris hotel where she lived as Marian F. Colfelt of New York made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by shooting. She fired two bullets from a revolver into her breast. It is believed she will recover. She and her husband had quarreled.

Leader in Reform Is Fined.

C. W. Trickett, assistant attorney general of Kansas for Wyandotte county, and the leader of a recent reform campaign to prevent the illegal selling of liquor in Kansas, was fined $500 in the City court at Kansas City, Kan. Trickett was convicted of accepting an illegal fee in a joint case.

Death of Frank P. Sargent.

Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, Department of Commerce and Labor, died in Washington, of stomach trouble. Frank P. Sargent was born in East Orange, Vt., on Nov. 18, 1854.

Hanly Calls Special Session.

The Legislature of Indiana has been called to meet in special session on Sept. 18 to act on appropriations, make laws to protect tobacco growers from night riders, and to pass on county local option.

John D. a Real Aristocrat.

John D. Rockefeller is a descendant of barons in the south of France, the family dating from as early as 950, according to the report of an expert made to a family reunion at Albany, N. Y.

Deadlock in Iowa.

Forty-two Iowa standpatters bolted the nominee of the Republican legislative caucus and prevented the election of Gov. Cummins to the Senate.

Public Charge 85 Years; Dies.

The champion pauper is dead, after being a public charge for eighty-five years. Hezekiah Monk was born in the Herkimer county, N. Y., poorhouse eighty-five years ago, spent all his days there, and died in that institution.

Ohio Fire Costs $100,000.

Fire destroyed lumber valued at $100,000 in the yards of the Saginaw Bay Lumber Company in Cleveland. The flames swept over two acres covered with lumber piles.

FIVE DEAD IN HOTEL PANIC.

Guests Jump from Upper Floors of Hotel and Perish.

Five men lost their lives and a score of persons were injured, several of them severely, in a fire which destroyed the Belmont Hotel, a three-story building on Stout street, in Denver. The dead: Edward Moore, 55 years old, real estate agent, Philadelphia, killed by jumping; George Burtell, Pullman conductor, suffocated; John D. Kane, Colorado Springs, suffocated; George Bode, Middletown, N. Y., died at hospital of injuries sustained by jumping; George Ott, Dodge City, Kan., died at hospital of injuries sustained by jumping. Moore jumped from a third-story window and was killed when he struck the pavement. Guests awakened from their sleep by the cry of fire rushed into the halls and in a mad effort to escape fought and struggled while the rescuers were forced back by columns of smoke. For several minutes, while the fire worked its way to every corner of the structure, the terrified guests were helpless. Finally, as if moved by the same impulse, all rushed forward in desperation. It was estimated by the management that at least 100 persons were asleep in the building when the fire broke out. All of them had jumped from their beds. As soon as the victims reached the street they were taken to other hotels and given shelter for the night. It is believed that the fire started from defective wiring in the third story.

PAPER COMPANY CUTS WAGES.

Announces Reopening of Mills, but at Reduced Pay.

Officials of the International Paper Company announce in Glens Falls, N. Y., that several mills, which have been shut down for four weeks, will be started within a few days. The plants were closed because the men refused to accept a reduction of 10 per cent in wages. The International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, it is said, have signed contracts with the company by which a revised schedule of wages is established for a period of eleven months from Sept. 12. The reduction in wages brought about by the new schedule is approximately 5 per cent. The agreement affects about 10,000 employes.

WHEAT BUBBLE BURSTS.

Yield Instead of 200 Bushels Is 25 and Quality Poor.

An agent sent by the Department of Agriculture to Juniata, Idaho, to investigate the present status of the so-called Alaska wheat, said to yield over 200 bushels per acre, made the following statement by wire: "Alaska yielding twenty-five bushels per acre. Badly mixed. Grain inferior. Quality soft and white. Ordinary wheat yielding fully as much. Best varieties more." An analysis made by the Department of Agriculture shows that Alaska wheat contains only a little more than 9 per cent of protein, while soft winter wheats average 10 per cent, hard winter wheats 12 per cent and hard spring wheats 12½ per cent.

25,000 See Aeronaut Fall to Death.

In view of 25,000 spectators on the fair grounds in Waterville, Me., Charles Oliver Jones, an aeronaut of Hammondsport, N. Y., fell 500 feet to his death. Among those who saw the plunge were Mrs. Jones and her child. Jones' dirigible balloon caught fire from the motor and collapsed.

Frugal Millionaire Dies.

Judson M. Thompson, aged 77 years, one of the most frugal millionaires in the city, and for many years a conspicuous figure in St. Louis financial affairs, died at the home of his son in Old Orchard. It was his custom to buy clothing at little outlay of expense and wear the apparel as long as it would last.

Divorces H. Thurston Peck.

Mrs. Harry Thurston Peck, wife of a professor in Columbia university and a magazine writer, has been granted a divorce in Sioux Falls, S. D., on the grounds of desertion. She was given the custody of the couple's 16-year-old daughter, Constance, until the latter is 18 years of age.

Turk Flees from New York.

Zia Bey, Abdul Hamid's one-time favorite, tells of wholesale murders and atrocities in Constantinople, and has fled from New York to England, fearing the power of the young Turks.

Indiana Reports Frost.

Frost is reported from many points in central and northern Indiana. No great damage has been done.

New G. A. R. Commander.

Col. Henry M. Nevius of New Jersey has been chosen commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Ketchel Falls Before Papke.

Billy Papke knocked out Stanley Ketchel in the twelfth round of a furious battle at Los Angeles.

Chicago Widow Remarries.

Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., widow of the only son of the late Marshall Field of Chicago, was married at the Westminster registry office in London Thursday to Maldwin Drummond of London. Mr. Drummond is a member of a well-known Hampshire family.

Will Not Push Pensions.

G. A. R. delegates at Toledo withheld formal indorsement of pension bills, deciding that Congress needs a rest from that mode of procedure.

RAWHIDE, NEV., BURNED.

Business Section of City Destroyed by Flames Fanned by Gale.

Three thousand people homeless, a score or more injured, and a property loss of over $750,000 is the result of a disastrous fire which started at 9 o'clock Friday morning in Dr. Gardner's office, located in the Rawhide Drug Company's building in Rawhide, Nev. Fanned by a gale, the fire swept rapidly south and east to Balloon avenue, and up Rawhide avenue to within fifty yards of the People's hospital. At 11 o'clock the business portion of Rawhide was a smoldering mass of ruins, the flames being finally checked south of Balloon avenue. A partial list of the heaviest losers follows: First Bank of Rawhide, Bank of Rawhide, Mizpah Mercantile Company, Nevada meat market, the Northern, Texas Rickard's, E. E. Marks & Co., Nevada Club, Downer Hotel and Kelly's dance hall. The fire destroyed the hoisting works of the Bluff Mining Company, Grutt Hill properties and the Grutt boys' business office, the loss on these amounting to $10,000.

DROUGHT CLOSES MANY PLANTS

Lack of Water Causes Hardship in Western Pennsylvania.

A long-continued drought in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia is gradually reaching serious proportions and the lack of rain is causing the suspension of many industries. At Greensburg, Pa., several plants of the H. C. Frick Coke Company have been compelled to shut down. Farmers are hauling water for miles. Streams which have never before been known to go dry are so shallow that only here and there a stagnant pool is found. This water is scooped up, boiled and used for domestic purposes. At Johnstown, Pa., two large reservoirs which have supplied the city with water are practically dry. To-day many homes in the central part of Johnstown are without water. At Morgantown, W. Va., the large plant of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company has suspended operations. Many lumber, coal and coking industries along Decker's creek are also idle.

35,051 MAIL MEN PROMOTED.

Postal Department Announces Advancement of Clerks and Carriers.

The Postoffice Department has completed the readjustment of salaries of postal clerks and city letter carriers, effective July 1, 1908, 18,971 carriers and 16,086 clerks being promoted. The law provides that every clerk or letter carrier who has served for one year is eligible for advancement to the next higher grade, with increased salary. The large percentage of such employes promoted and the small percentage of promotions withheld because of unsatisfactory service gratifies the department, as it indicates a high degree of efficiency in the service.

Jim Crow Law Is Upheld.

Antagonism to the Jim Crow law in Oklahoma, compelling railroads to maintain separate apartments for negro and white passengers, suffered a rebuff in the case of McCabe vs. the Santa Fe Railway Company. Judge J. S. Cotteral of the United States District Court in Enid, Okla., held that the law was not in conflict with the constitution of the United States.

Armour Buildings Burn.

The destruction of two big buildings within an hour and injury to many firemen marked a blaze in the Chicago stock yards. The structures destroyed were two of the largest of the immense Armour & Co. plant, and one of them went down before all the engines summoned by a 4-11 alarm and two specials had responded. The damage is estimated at $500,000.

Forger Hits Big Bank.

The Bankers' National Bank in Chicago has been made the victim of five forgeries, aggregating $3,500, and Gustaf F. Baye, late of 309 Milwaukee avenue, a former bookkeeper of S. D. Childs & Co., was charged with having uttered the spurious paper. Baye, with his wife and infant, left the city several days ago, supposedly for San Francisco.

Low Water Stalls Boats.

Navigation on the Ohio river was closed Wednesday between Pittsburg, Gallipolis and Cincinnati for the first time in five years. The river is the lowest it has been for twenty years. Many boats have been damaged by striking rocks in the channel.

Yeggmen Rifle Minnesota.

A gang of five men rifled the bank at Blwabik, Minn., and one of them emptied a load of buckshot into a citizen who was passing the bank at the time. The robbers did not get to the main safe, but they did secure the contents of the safety deposit vaults.

Emanuel Mandel Dies.

Emanuel Mandel, first vice president of Mandel Bros. of Chicago, and one of the best-known merchants in the West, died at Basle, Switzerland, following a sudden stroke of paralysis.

Minnesota Town Burns.

Northern Minnesota is being swept by forest fires, the city of Chisholm being destroyed and many small settlements and hamlets are laid low. The loss is in the millions, with the flames still spreading.

Rustin Inquest in Omaha.

In the inquest over Dr. F. H. Rustin of Omaha a woman told a strange story of a suicide agreement in which she was to kill the man and then kill herself, but her courage failed and she said a man was secured to take her place.

DOUBLES RECORD FOR FLIGHT IN AEROPLANE

Orville Wright Stays in Air at Fort Meyer 57 Minutes and 31 Seconds.

HIGH SPEED IS MAINTAINED.

Aviator Has Perfect Control of His Machine and Says He Could Have Continued Flying.

A new world record in aeroplane flights was established at Fort Myer, Va., early Wednesday, when Orville Wright circled above the broad parade grounds there fifty-three times and remained in the air fifty-seven minutes and thirty-one seconds, official time.

Mr. Wright's smashing of all previous records carried out his promises, after his two remarkable ascents, when, at the maximum height of sixty feet, going ten and three-quarter miles in all and averaging thirty-six miles an hour, he spent eleven minutes in one flight and eight minutes in the other.

The achievement was accomplished under ideal weather conditions and in the presence of about twenty-five spectators aside from the soldiers. The ascent was made at 8:15 o'clock in the morning. It was an easy ride in the air, the machine was under perfect control and the aviator traveled at a speed approximating thirty-six to thirty-eight miles an hour.

Wright Is Highly Pleased.

Mr. Wright expressed himself as highly pleased over what had been accomplished by his machine, and declared that had he known he was so close to being in the air an hour he would have remained a little longer. He said that he came down because his motor slipped once or twice, and that he thought he had been in the air only half an hour.

Except for the slipping of the motor no trouble was experienced in the working of the aeroplane. Everything went as smoothly as the most perfectly adjusted clock, and the man who essayed to beat all records in this branch of aeronautics handled his invention with as perfect ease as a trained engineer would handle the throttle of his locomotive.

Record Broken Nearly in Two.

By his wonderful flight at Fort Myer Wednesday morning Orville Wright almost broke in two the best official record ever before made by a heavier-than-air machine. It was only the previous Sunday that Leon Delagrange, president of the Aviation Club of France, established a new world record by remaining in the air 29 minutes and 54 seconds. He circled the field at Issy, near Paris, fifteen and a half times and covered fifteen and a quarter miles. Monday Delagrange, after installing a fuel tank of increased capacity on his machine, made a flight of thirty-one minutes, but the record was not allowed to stand, three minutes being deducted because the aeroplane touched the ground while making its first round of the field.

American shippers in Mukden have made formal complaint to their consul of the fact that the Japanese railroad in Manchuria is discriminating against them. This discrimination is carried on by means of a rebate system in which foreign shippers are excluded from using the lines under the minimum cargo regulation, and that they are not allowed to combine their cargoes as are the Japanese.

In London the business session of the seventeenth universal peace conference was inaugurated with a speech by Lord Courtney, who emphasized the close connection between justice and peace. He declared that there would be no more wars if injustice were driven out of the world, and that the first step in this direction was to develop the strength, scope and purity of international law.

The conviction of Tilak, leader of the anti-British forces in India, by the high court at Bombay, on the charge of sedition, and his sentence to six years' banishment and a heavy fine, has brought on a fresh crisis. As a demonstration of sympathy, 20,000 mill hands in Bombay went on a strike. Rioting ensued, and Europeans were stoned and jeered, a magistrate's house attacked and a mail train held up. The troops were called out and had to fire solid shots into the crowd, with fatal effect, before order was restored.

The heirs of Antoine Siger, the Mayor of Fort de France, Martinique, who was assassinated April 29 during a political encounter, have entered a civil suit for damages in Paris against the government of Martinique, M. Lepeeux.

The new patent law, which allows any foreign patents to be revoked unless the article so protected is manufactured or the process operated in England, went into effect the other day, and in consequence the government estimates a rush of industrial establishments from foreign concerns to the amount of $125,000,000 capital the first of the year.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Favorable developments become more plentiful as a basis for continuing recovery in business. Confidence is more generally felt that the tide has turned for the better in production and distribution. This is confirmed by steadily increasing demand for mill and factory outputs and a more notable absorption of fall and winter merchandise.

Considerable strength is derived from the highly encouraging agricultural conditions, prices being maintained above those at times last year for the leading grains and assuring a further large addition to the purchasing power throughout the West. Movements of the breadstuffs exceed those of a year ago.

Some decline again appears in arrivals of hogs, causing smaller packing, but there is substantial decrease in accumulated stocks of provisions in store, and also gains in receipts of hides and wool while lumber received is but slightly lower.

Permits for business structures in Chicago during August numbered 41 and $1,567,000 in value, against 42 permits and $919,000 in value in same month last year. Investment is heavier in interest bearing securities, sales of choice bonds and local stocks being more active, and a new city loan was successfully negotiated. Money is yet quoted from 3½ per cent to 4½ per cent. Currency shipments to move crops do not equal those at this time last year, but are now more widely called for.

High-grade commercial paper remains in restricted offering, although mercantile borrowers increase. Bank deposits undergo but slight change, and there are ample funds available against the ascertained fall needs of the interior.

Bank clearings, $220,587,442, exceed those in corresponding week of 1907 by 3.5 per cent. Failures reported in Chicago district number 32, against 24 last week and 17 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 10, against 5 last week and 5 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Fall jobbing trade, and to a lesser extent, retail demand, has been helped this week by the advent of cooler weather, the opening of the season of fall festivals and the continuance of buyers' excursions. Hence the consensus of reports that distribution has expanded at leading northwestern and southwestern markets, while there is a farther gain shown at many southern centers.

Enlargement of crop movements, particularly in winter wheat and cotton, has also made for a further improvement in collections, which at many points are now classed as fairly normal. But the weight of testimony is that trade is still below the same period of last year, when contraction was already in evidence. Conservatism, in fact, still governs buying operations, and there is a disposition to order merely for immediate or nearby necessities pending a clearer view of the political outlook and the reaping of the later autumn crops.

Industrial reports show on the whole an expansion in output. Iron and steel production is from 60 to 80 per cent of full capacity, and the settlement of the Alabama coal miners' and the New England papermakers' strikes has made for a larger output.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Sept. 3 number 210 against 236 last week, 130 in the like week of 1907, 121 in 1906, 137 in 1905 and 144 in 1904, and Canadian failures for the same period number 17, as against 27 last week and 15 last year.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime $4.00 to $7.00; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $6.85; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 97c to 99c; corn, No. 2, 77c to 79c; oats, standard 48c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 74c to 76c; hay timothy, $8.00 to $12.50; prairie, $8.00 to $11.00; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 22c; eggs, fresh, 17c to 20c; potatoes per bushel, 62c to 76c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.10; hogs, good to choice heavy $3.50 to $6.95; sheep, common to prime $2.50 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2, 91c to 93c; corn, No. 2 white, 79c to 80c; oats No. 2 white, 47c to 48c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.50; hogs $4.00 to $7.10; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, 99c to $1.00; corn, No. 2 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 79c to 80c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.75; hogs, $4.00 to $7.05; sheep, $3.00 to $3.85; wheat, No. 2, 98c to 99c; corn No. 2 mixed, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 51c to 52c; rye, No. 2, 79c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.20; hogs $4.00 to $6.50; sheep, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 95c to 96c; corn, No. 2 yellow, 81c to 83c; oats, No. 3 white 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 73c to 75c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern $1.05 to $1.07; corn, No. 3, 78c to 79c; oats, standard, 49c to 51c; rye, No. 1, 75c to 76c; barley, No. 2, 72c to 74c; pork, mess, $14.75.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers $4.00 to $6.50; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.25; sheep, common to good mixed $4.00 to $5.30; lambs, fair to choice $5.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.00; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.40; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.04 to $1.05; corn, No. 2, 89c to 90c; oats, natural white, 55c to 57c; butter, creamery, 20c to 24c; eggs, western, 19c to 22c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 93c to 95c; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; clover seed, October, $6.02.

SEPTEMBER

0329
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER XI.

When Constable opened his eyes he was far down the slope, and Breen was bending over him.

"Hello!" said he. "What unhorsed me? I had just settled down comfortably to view that spout when—pluff! I began to lose track o' things and my head broke. What was it—gas, altitude——?"

"More likely old Pelee was up to something he preferred you shouldn't see," said Breen. "I know the racket turned me sick as a poisoned rat while I was dragging at your leg. I know that the natives wouldn't venture within two hundred yards; also, that you are a mortal heavy young person."

"And so you retrieved the fallen under the guns of the enemy? That was good of you, Breen. It was, indeed."

The natives were pressing in. Darkness was beginning. Breen was conscious of a catch in his throat.

"Peter," said Breen quietly, "I ran from you this morning."

"You didn't run from me this afternoon, the which is lucky for me. Take a little touch yourself, old playmate, and don't get moody. One needs a pal when one makes such a mussy dumping-ground of good chances. The engaging Mr. Stembridge never did me any harm, and all that the newspapers could accomplish in the minds of people at large would move me to no deeper emotion than to say, 'Dear folks be—hanged!'"

"Peter, if I hadn't been here, you would be a good daylight run out on the decent ocean by this time, with the lady!"

"Please don't goad yourself further, Breen. That matter is mine—all mine." Constable spoke in a low voice. Breen was bending over him in the dusk. "You didn't force yourself upon me. You didn't even come along by chance. I asked you to cruise with me. You volunteered to tell me about yourself. I said it wasn't necessary. 'This man has a mind, and he isn't a coward,' was the conclusion I came to that night, and I haven't seen fit to change my opinion."

"But the lady——"

"Yes, the lady has spoken. I am done—down and out. * * * The point is, you didn't turn on Pelee's throttle. You're not to blame because I'm a dub of a lover. I'm not on sick report."

"You're game, Peter," said Breen as he helped the other into the saddle.

"Not game enough to abduct one frightened little mother-handled girl," Constable replied.

They were riding together down the winding trail, apart from the guides. The lights of Ajoupa Bouillon were ahead, and the mountain carried on a frightful drumming behind. The coiling masses of volcanic spume, miles above the craters, generated its own fire, and, lit in the flashes, looked like billows of boiling steel. Constable was very weak, and Breen rode upon sheer nerve—nerve that men had often wondered at.

"Peter," he said at length, "you are not through trying to get the lady out of this?"

"To think that such a tone and such a question could come from the 'implacable Stembridge'!" Constable said, with a laugh.

"The 'implacable Stembridge' was never crucified before," Breen answered. "To you and me, together, it does not vastly matter that I am Stembridge, one of the bigger wolves. But others have come in. Because I am here, you stand dazed tonight, your heart torn out. Because I am here, you went up to the mouth of that horrible pit to-day, and lay down to die. I have played with men and women, Peter, but I never wrecked a white man before, or broke the heart of a friend."

A hand stretched across the dark and fell upon Breen's arm and tightened there. "I know how you feel; but what would you have me do?" Constable muttered.

"When I see a wisp of smoke on the horizon, and know that you and the lady and the Madame are wrapped in it——"

"For four days I have been dreaming that dream, Breen."

"It must come true this night. There will have been a reaction. Go there to-night. Speak to her alone. Tell her how you came to know me—how men look at these things—that the newspaper story was as new to you as to herself. Tell her of your trip to Pelee, and how the disorder they see and hear down in the city looks up there at first hand!"

It was at this instant that a full-rigged thought sprang into Breen's brain, which had known but the passing of hopeless derelicts throughout the day. He dared not trust the thought to words, lest the other should cancel it, but he called to the guides to increase the pace.

"Ah, she would not listen to words of mine," Constable answered hopelessly. "If she had any faith in me, words would not be necessary. A man knows when he is beaten. I have drawn my little quietus for one day. To-morrow——"

"There may not be any to-morrow for Saint Pierre."

"Of course. For that matter, we might be boiled out like a pair of tater-bugs before we can pick up a snack in Ajoupa Bouillon. Then, again, the people may be right, and I a frenzied alarmist. Pelee is throwing off pressure true and steady as a clock running down. It may be that he'll relieve his crowded chambers this way."

Such words, more than anything that had passed, revealed the extent of Constable's reaction. They were entering Ajoupa Bouillon, where food and fresh mounts were procurable.

"It's probably better for her that she did not give herself to me," Constable observed, when they were in the saddle again. His mind was deepening the bitter groove now. "We'll put all this behind us presently, Breen. We're mates, I guess."

"This is our last ride together, Peter. There are many reasons. One is—the law is on my trail! * * * Will you please inform me what you are laughing at?"

Constable carefully related the Crusoe episode.

Breen groaned. "Don't you see, Peter, you are winding yourself up tighter and tighter in my crimes?"

"Somehow, I can't get wrought up over trifles to-night. The detective matter disposed of, what are the other reasons why you and I must diverge after this night?"

Breen was silent a moment. "I was pretty hard-hit this morning," he said finally. "The rough weather broke down my idea about not going to the shop again. It seems incredible, but Soronia has never had a lover—before. I found her—if you'll forgive me—in need of me. You see, I had just come from the reeking stone of sacrifice where you lay; and I relit a pair of creole eyes—promised to go to sea no more."

"Suppose I had missed Crusoe?" Constable asked bitterly. "Suppose I had been a poor liar?"

"There are many Crusoes, Peter. They won't all fail. You can't keep this one off always. It amounts to just this for me—that I have found my little isle in the midst of the sea, like that other promoter who all but conquered Europe."

"But why could you not both go aboard with me?" the other persisted.

"I have told you that after this ride I cease to vampirize the career of Constable. If Crusoe finds the Rue de Rivoli, very well. If not, for the present, very well again. None of his ilk shall find you and me together. Two or three times, back across the forbidden tundras of years, I have met men who stack up something as you do in my thoughts to-night. I never hurt any of those fellows as I have hurt you. I'm too fond of you to hit you any harder. Let's talk about something else."

Constable had received a singular appeal. He knew that if there were any future for him, he would think of Breen's last words co-ordinate in memory with the quaking rim of the crater. It did not occur to him to answer at once. They were passing through Morne Rouge, so overcrowded now that people were sleeping in the streets. On the dark downtrail again, words did not come to him, and when the party re-entered the bank of falling ash and the sulphur stench, it was not good to open one's mouth in speech.

The guides were paid at the edge of the city. Saint Pierre was dark and harrowingly still. The hoof-beats of the two mules which the Americans retained were muffled in the ash, as if they were pounding along the sandy beach. Often the rousing fetor of death reached the nostrils of the riders, above the drying, cutting vapor of the volcano, and their beasts shied and snorted at the untoward humps on the highway. It was as if war and pestilence had stalked through Saint Pierre that day, and a winter storm had tried to cover the dreadful aftermath. A door opened at last before them, and there was a cry from Soronia. Pere Rabeaut hurried out and led the mules to shelter.

Constable sank into his old seat at the round table under the window. He watched Breen and the woman. His friend was huge and lean in the lamp light; his white clothing stained from the saddle, his hair and mustache white from ash, his black eyes burning in a face haggard unto ghastliness. The woman was in his arms as they stood together. What they said, Constable did not allow his mind to reason with, but the glory of her lover's presence which shone in the eyes of Soronia called down upon the watcher his own black vistas of desolation. She had found, for an hour, the true and the beautiful—the soul anchorage which he was never to know! * * * He would keep all craft of the Crusoe stamp from blundering into her sweet haven—this much he could do, was his thought. Food was placed before him, and he ate a little, for the sake of Breen. His eyes pained from the lamplight, and he dropped his face forward into his arms on the table. Close to the wood, the vibrations of the mountain boomed louder in his ears.

"But you must not go away again!" Soronia implored.

"Yes, for an hour—two hours at the most—little fairy," Breen whispered.

They were in the living rooms across the court, where the bird cages were tiered and covered with cloths. She clung to him pitifully.

"With you away—oh, my lover, no, no! * * * I cannot live again for hours and hours!"

"Hush!—he is in great trouble. He must not awake until after I am gone. Then he must not know where I have gone. I am going to the plantation house on the Morne d'Orange. It is for him. Two hours at the most, and the last—the last I shall ever leave you, little fairy."

Breen recrossed the court and entered the fruit shop on tiptoe. Constable did not move; his breathing was inaudible. At the street door Soronia joined him like a shadow. He kissed her and put her arms from him. It was eleven-fifteen by the old French clock.

Soronia, alone, stared for an instant at the figure sprawled across the table—the man who had caused her lover twice to be torn from her arms that day. Then she moved to a chair, in the shadows at the far end of the shop, and sat down rigidly to wait.

CHAPTER XII.

In the dim upper hallway, Lara read in the face of her mother, hard and white as ivory, that the clash of wills had come. A slender arm barred the door through which the daughter had to pass.

"Lara, what do you mean to do?"

"I mean to hear what this man has to say."

"At midnight—listen to an outlaw?"

"Yes; let me pass!"

The elder woman did not move her arm. Slowly, softly, she said: "I say that you shall not! Order Uncle Joey to send the thief away, or you and I—are estranged."

Lara faltered before the revolting possibilities of the moment. "Mother," she implored, "don't poison the years! I am a grown woman—I see my way clearly!"

She leaned against the arm that crossed the doorway. It did not give. The face close to hers in the feeble light burned away her self-control. The rigidity of the bar suffocated—as if it had pressed against her throat. Every fiber of her young body sprang tense to burst the insufferable bond. Not a tissue relaxed, although the bar was forced. Her mother's fingers scraped like wood across the casing. The sickening sound made an imperishable record in the girl's brain. Horrified at the thing she had done, Lara would have fallen at her mother's feet, praying forgiveness, had there reached her now a murmur of pain or relenting. But the face was not changed. The sovereign will would not have broken had she hewn her way into the room with a sword. Low-spoken, fressing utterances found the brain of the girl, promptings of the dread, imperfect faculty:

"Go, grown woman, who sees her way clearly! Go with the thief to your lover—who dares not come to you! Go out to the hunted ship, then—with the thief and his dull tool!"

Lara seized her hat and shawl and darted past the pitiless voice, shutting her ears with her hands. Down the stairway she sped, her one thought to flee. There was truce below; the awfulness of defeat behind. * * * The men had heard nothing. Breen stood by the door, his face whitened with dust. The planter waited near the foot of the stairs—another obstacle.

"Go to mother quickly—she needs you!"

"Where are you going, Lara?" the old man gasped.

"To the ship with the other refugees!"

"Not with this man, child——"

"He is Mr. Constable's friend."

"But I'll go with you, dear! I'll have a carriage brought——"

"In the name of pity, Uncle Joey—don't leave mother alone longer—up there!" she said desperately. "I am going out to the ship. Your nephew has asked me to be—his wife. This man will take me to him. Go to mother!"

The planter turned a last look at Breen and obeyed, his face a field of conflict. Lara threw the shawl about her shoulders and hurried to the door, which Breen opened in utmost amazement. She turned to him in the dark, with the burning question:

"Is Peter Constable dead?"

"No——"

"Is he hurt—lying on the ship?"

"No, he is reasonably well, and in Saint Pierre."

Reacting weakness rushed over her now, the doubts of an untried soul, and the loneliness of an outcast. The scene in the upper hallway was upreared in her brain. She had been borne throughout the day, unerringly by the processes of mind toward the expression of her own will; but the fruition was so sudden and horrible as forever to be beyond the shadow and circumstance of extenuation.

If Constable were well and in Saint Pierre, why did he not come to her, instead of sending this man? Even though Breen were all a man could be, had Constable the right to send him to her, after the allegations of the press? Could there be any truth in the suggestions of her mother? Might there not exist in the Constable character a war of the base and noble?

These big tangible terrors possessed her. She could not go back—the bridges were burned. The man at her side did not speak, save to answer her questions. Ahead were possibilities and fancies, beside which the rumbling menaces of the mountain were clean fears. She halted. Her body swayed a little, and the man put out his hand to steady her. A cry escaped her lips.

"I cannot go on!" she exclaimed brokenly. "I have done a terrible wrong in coming. Everything is different. Leave me. I—I shall go back toward Fort de France!"

(To be continued.)

Jewelry in an Old Tin Can.

A small boy went to the Walnut street police station last night. In his right hand he carried an old rusty tomato can, says the Kansas City Star. Lieut. Joseph Heydon was busy and did not notice the boy, whose head scarcely reached the top of the desk.

"Say, mister," he said, "I guess I got something I think you want."

Heydon looked at the boy and the can and smiled. He likes children.

"I guess if you don't want it I don't either," he replied. "But let's see it."

The boy walked around behind the desk. Heydon took the can and turned it bottom upward. Four gold watches, a locket, a cross, a necklace and one silver cuff link rolled out on the desk.

"Son, I beg your pardon. I do want this," the lieutenant said.

"Where did you get it?"

"Was digging for fishing worms down at 19th and McGee streets," the boy replied. "Had a dandy place picked out to dig. Right longside of some old ties near the northwest corner of 19th and McGee streets. Just got started to dig when I struck the old can. I looked into it and found that stuff. It was about half past 7 when I found it. I took it home and waited till my stepfather came home. He told me to bring it up here."

Odd Use for a Balloon.

It is said that an enterprising Parisian company has discovered a method of bleaching linen by balloon. A few hundred feet above the earth the atmosphere is nearly as pure over the city as in the open country, and it is in this higher region that the linen is dried by the aid of a captive balloon.

The linen is attached to bamboo frames and sent up. There are about six ascents in a day. An extra charge of from five to fifty centimes, or from one to ten cents, is charged for each article.

Just Cranky.

Smith—Isn't he rather eccentric?
Jones—Oh, no. He's a poor man.

Choice Fruit.

Tom—She's the apple of my eye.
Jack—She must be a peach.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Albert Leffler, aged 30 years, married, fell from a Pennsylvania train at Upland and was beheaded.

The clothing of the 3-year-old daughter of Robert Wiand, of Marion, caught fire when he was playing about a bonfire, and he was burned to death.

Roy Butt, 13 years old, son of a rich farmer near Goshen, was fatally injured when he fell 25 feet out of a tree. He was chasing a weasel.

Hope on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Carpenter, of Richmond, that they would live to celebrate their diamond wedding anniversary is about to be blasted, as Mrs. Carpenter is near death. They have been married more than seventy-four years.

Frank Wolf, aged 45, a farmer, was killed by the Chicago flyer on the Michigan Central railroad near Lake Station, with both of his horses. It is exactly a year ago that his father and mother were killed at Hobart by a Lake Shore train in the same way.

Farmers of Miami County say the corn crop will be badly damaged unless the drought is broken soon. Corn is not maturing as it should, and much of the late planted corn still needs several weeks of favorable weather to make it mature properly. Fields are so dry that plowing is impossible.

Benjamin E. Wallace, general manager of the Wallace - Hagenbeck shows, is at his home in Peru for a short time. He says the shows are doing the best business in their history, notwithstanding the combination has been fighting him at almost every turn. The shows will close the season October 19 in the south.

Charley Lindy, a ranchman, of near Los Angeles, came all the way to Petersburg to be married to Miss Mattie Patterson, a daughter of John Patterson, living just west of town. Miss Patterson is the second of twelve sisters, nearly all of marriageable age, to be married, during the last few years. The couple will live in California.

The first set of twins to arrive in Brazil this year came to Bedford Beatty and wife, both ardent Democrats. The twins are both boys and were named after the Democratic nominees for President and Vice President, one being named Bryan Beatty and the other Kern Beatty. They are big, strong, healthy babies and give promise of becoming future voters.

Called on for help by his nineteen-year-old brother, Eldon Virgil Lewis, of Hazelton, swam out to the rescue and went down in a futile attempt to drag his brother to safety. Both bodies were recovered later by Ollie Phillips and George McNeece. Three boy companions of the drowned lads stood on the bank and watched them perish and then raw away in fright.

Two large cans and a bottle of gasoline were found hidden in the woods near the home of Edward Nail, near Columbus. This find has strengthened the belief that Earl Stitt, who confessed that he wrote "Black Hand" letters to his uncle, Edward Nail, and forty-five other farmers, threatening to burn and murder if they did not deposit $500 each as he directed, intended to execute the threats.

If John Joslyn, janitor at the East Columbus school building, had not swept and cleaned the building there probably would have been a stampede when school begins. The janitor was at work sweeping the floor when a viper uncoiled itself from one of the school desks and came to meet the man with the mop. There was no time lost in getting into battle formation, and the janitor dispatched the snake.

State wide search is being made to locate relatives of Mrs. Anne Burge, who, physicians declare, became demented through the opium habit, induced by patent medicines. The woman, fashionably dressed and well supplied with money, was arrested at Logansport, but cannot remember where she lives or give any clew to her indentification, except that she came from the northern part of the State.

Frank McCulla, a prominent Spencer county farmer, and his wife and ten-year-old daughter Helen, were injured in a runaway near Boomville while on their way to the fair. McCulla's horse was frightened by two intoxicated men driving rapidly by them and shouting. The horse ran into the ditch, throwing Mr. McCulla headlong upon cinders, cutting four gashes in his forehead and rendering him unconscious. The horse ran for a quarter of a mile with the lines flying in the air and Mrs. McCulla and Helen helpless to stop him. When it ran past a wagon the buggy was overturned, throwing them out, breaking Mrs. McCulla's right shoulder and dislocating Helen's left shoulder and cutting her face very badly. All are in critical condition.

Mrs. Mary Gray, of Milton, says that thieves have entered her peach orchard at various times during the present season and carried off sacks of peaches. She estimates her loss at thirty bushels.

The new municipal lighting plant at Fort Wayne, which has been in course of construction for several years, was thrown open to the public recently. The plant is absolutely modern and a monument to the present city administration.

John Lowe, a mussel digger, of Francisville, on the Wabash, found a pearl worth $700, which is the most valuable find in this section in many years.

In search of a "want ad baby," John Cox, a well-to-do farmer living near Yorktown, went to Anderson. Mr. Cox read a small advertisement of an Anderson mother who asked some good family to adopt her baby because she was unable to support it. The advertisement touched the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Cox and they are now looking for the baby, but whether for the purpose of adopting the child or assisting the unfortunate mother, is unknown.

John McIntyre, an employe of the Columbus Canning Company, is now convinced that the use of tobacco is dangerous to life and property. He cut a gash on his right thumb and bound up the wound with turpentine. In a short time he filled his pipe with tobacco and lighted a match. The match set fire to the turpentine and it burned away the bandage, making a severe and painful burn where the cut had been.

The pearl fishing industry along the Wabash river is thriving and many valuable gems are being found. William Lambert found a ten-grain pearl which he sold to Dr. Pepper, of Mt. Carmel. Ernest Nations found another valuable pearl, for which a fancy price has been offered. George Buchanan found three small pearls in one mussel. Miss Ida Leathers, a bookkeeper, of Carmi, Ill., found a big pearl which she sold for $500.

Miss Mae Garnier, aged 19, granddaughter of the late John B. Garnier, millionaire brewer of Lawrenceburg, and Charles Munsch, machinist of Indianapolis, were married recently by Rev. J. F. Sonderman, of St. Lawrence church. This is the culmination of a romance that began when Munsch was coachman for the Garnier family several years ago. Miss Garnier will inherit over $500,000 upon reaching her majority.

Eva Long, aged 19, of Evansville, was whipped by her mother upon order of Police Judge J. G. Winfrey. The girl is an old offender. Her mother told Judge Winfrey in City Court that she could not make the girl behave. Judge Winfrey thought that a whipping might have a better effect than a jail sentence, and her mother took her down into the cellroom and applied the police whip to her. Twenty places were struck with the thirty-six-inch rawhide whip on the girl's shoulders and back.

Five thousand people crowded the streets of Monrovia last week to witness one of the most successful horse shows in the history of the state. The entries were above the average from every point of view, and the successful prize winners, as well as the people generally, were delighted with the fairness of judgment in every instance. It was a great day for Monrovia, and for the interests of fine horse breeding all over the state, many of the finest animals having been brought from a distance.

Sandhill cranes, once so numerous in the vicinity of Morocco as to be a nuisance to the farmers, are extinct save for two fine specimens of their species owned by James Potts, southwest of the city. The cranes, male and female, although more than twelve years old, have never reared any young. They are great weather forecasters, seldom failing to announce a storm twenty-four hours in advance by uttering loud and discordant notes. They are believed to be the only tame cranes in Western Indiana.

Farmers in the vicinity of Hammond find they have been victimized by two Chicago fake doctors, who have been doing a wholesale business in selling what they called electric belts. Those who bought and wore the belts endured great agony, due to a burning sensation. It was borne with heroism, the victims believing that the smarting was caused by electricity. An examination of the belts by a physician showed that they contained nothing but cayenne pepper. The belts sold at $1 to $5 each, and the Chicago men reaped a harvest.

From an eight weeks' sojourn in Switzerland and Italy, Louis Lauby, courthouse custodian, returned to Washington, having in his possession a little fortune, an inheritance, left by a brother, who was a banker in Gavenstorf, Switzerland, and who died several months ago, naming Louis Lauby as his sole heir. Mr. Lauby was apprised of his good fortune as soon after as his brother's death as he could be found. It had been more than twenty-five years since Mr. Lauby had heard from Switzerland, and difficulty was experienced in finding him. The inheritance amounted to nearly $25,000. During his stay abroad Mr. Lauby visited Rome, and in company with his son was presented to the Pope.

The country home of David McCullough, near Cloverland, was destroyed by fire while the family was away from home. The origin is unknown. Loss on house and contents about $2,800; partly insured.

Silas Gougal, of Wabash, aged 79, delirious from the use of cocaine to deaden the pain caused by the extraction of teeth, thought he heard a fire alarm and jumped through a second-story window. He was fatally injured.

1346—English defeated the French at the famous battle of Cressy.

1664—New Amsterdam surrendered to the British, who changed the name to New York.

1733—Brandt made the first accurate experiments on the chemical nature of arsenic.

1754—A disturbance of the French and Indians occurred upon Hoosick and Schaghticoke, which led to the breaking up of these settlements.

1776—British defeated the Americans in battle of Long Island.

1779—Gen. Sullivan defeated the Tories and Indians at Elmira, N. Y.

1798—James Wilson, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, died.

1804—Margaret, widow of Benedict Arnold, died in London, aged 44 years.

1814—The city of Washington burned by the British....British evacuated the city of Washington....Specie payments were suspended in Philadelphia.

1818—The Savannah, the first steam vessel to cross the ocean, launched at New York.

1829—First temperance society formed in Ireland....Warfare between Colombia and Peru ended.

1830—The steam locomotive was adapted to passenger service for the first time in America, on the Baltimore and Ohio railway.

1835—Sir John Gosford, Earl of Colborne, sworn in as Governor of Canada.

1836—Opening of the Buffalo and Niagara railroad.

1847—Republic of Liberia inaugurated.

1848—Trials of the Chartists began in London.

1851—The yacht America beat the iron yacht Titania on a race of forty miles by eight miles.

1855—The vessel engaged to lay the submarine cable between Cape Ray, N. F., and Cape North, C. B., began to pay it out.

1856—The Dudley observatory was dedicated at Albany, N. Y.

1857—Beginning of a financial panic in the United States, which culminated in an almost entire suspension of the banks.

1858—First treaty signed between Great Britain and Japan.

1860—Victoria railway bridge at Montreal opened by the Prince of Wales.

1869—First Confederate soldiers' monument unveiled at Griffin, Ga.

1872—Severe storm and high tide did great damage along the New England coast.

1878—The independence of Servia proclaimed at Belgrade.

1883—The Salvation army began operations in Canada.

1884—England closed a contract with a Chicago firm for 300,000 pounds of compressed beef for the Gordon relief expedition to Kharfum.

1886—William J. Kendall, clothed in a cork vest, swam through the Niagara whirlpool rapids.

1891—Decennial census placed the population of Canada at 4,823,344.

1894—A tornado swept the shores of the Sea of Asof and caused the loss of 1,000 lives.

1897—President Borda of Uruguay assassinated at Montevideo....Congress of Salvador adopted the gold standard....Gen. J. P. S. Gobin of Pennsylvania elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

1902—Monsignor Guidi was appointed apostolic delegate to the Philippines by the Pope.

1904—Battleship Louisiana launched at Newport News.

1907—The new cantilever bridge in course of construction across the St. Lawrence river, near Quebec, collapsed, causing the death of nearly 100 workmen....British House of Lords passed the bill legalizing marriages with a deceased wife's sister, thus settling a long pending question.

Patrick to Supreme Court.

Albert T. Patrick, serving a life sentence for the murder of Millionaire Rice in New York several years ago, has now appealed to the Supreme Court from the decision of Judge Lacombe denying his application for release on habeas corpus writ and a new trial. He makes the novel claim that the life sentence is an increase of penalty over that of the electrical chair which was formerly imposed on him.

ALL AROUND THE GLOBE.

King Edward purposes to pay a visit to Germany with the Queen early in 1909.

The New Zealand government has refused to enter into any arrangement to aid in the grant of a subsidy to a Canadian-Australian line.

The Missouri law requiring railroads to give free passes to shippers and caretakers of live stock, both to market and back home, has been declared unconstitutional.

SEPTEMBER

0330
L 903

These Bad Pains

which give you such exquisite suffering, every month, are caused, as you know, by female trouble.

Relief seldom or never comes of itself. It is necessary to cure the cause, in order to stop the pains, and this can only be done if you will take a specific, female remedy, that acts directly on the womanly organs.

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"Cardui did wonders for me," writes Mrs. H. C. Larson, of Olds, Ia. "I had female trouble for 8 years. I had displacement, which increased my suffering, the doctor could only relieve me at times. Now, I am so much better, I hardly know when my time begins or when it ends."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 33

J. A. PROVINES

TRUSTEE

of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

Ignorance would tear down existing institutions and breed riot and anarchy where there is now law and order. It makes no inventions no discoveries, nor does anything to better the condition of the human race. It goes from the cradle to the grave in a random way, with no pilot, no objective point, and its frail bark is often wrecked in this tempestuous sea of life. It fills the land with vice and crime, builds jails, alms houses and penial institutions, and is the servant of nature. Our school is here to counteract all this evil influence and to make it possible for every young man and young woman in this vicinity to fit themselves for some useful and highly profitable calling in life and that the world may be better for their having lived in it.

The commission recenly appointed by the President to study farming social conditions and to make suggestions for the improvement of the farmer, his wife, his son, his daughter and his hired man, will meet in Washington next week. These paternalistic schemes of the President are doubtless well intentioned and will doubtless do some good, if in nothing more than by calling world-wide attention to well known conditions, but it is scarcely probable that this commission will be able to make any discovery or any invention for the benefit of this class that has not long since been evolved and exploited. Many letters have been received by the Commission, pointing out some of the handicaps under which the farmers labor. Among them are bad roads, exorbitant commissions to middlemen, poor educational facilities and scarcity of laborers. These disabilities are old, but who will deny that there is constant betterment with reference to all of them. If attracting attention to them by the most conspicuous man of modern times will accelerate improvement, not only the farmer but all people will be glad and grateful. The field for improvement of farm conditions is almost limitless. Commissions might spend months collecting information but they will find nothing that is not already in agricultural journals and libraries.

There is much criticism of the paternalism in the President's plan to improve the life of the farmer. But what is the Department of Agriculture, if not paternalistic or socialistic, for that matter? The country has long since conceded that it is right to assist farmers to procure good seed, to improve the breed of their animals and to protect their crops from insect destroyers. Can it then be wrong to assist them to obtain reliable farm labor? If it is right through issues of publications from the Agricultural Department to teach farmers about the methods of farming, it cannot be wrong to teach the farmers' children.

The most important help that can be given to farmers is doubtless in the matter of improving the highways of the county, and this will not only benefit the farmers but will benefit all the people without reference to their pursuit in life. It may be said, in this connection, that motor vehicles have given a great impetus to road improvement. The Government has refrained from doing the work of the states in building good farm roads, but it has done many other things which might have been left to individuals or state accomplishment. Little objection has been made to this phase of paternalism, and it is not probable that any state would protect against Congressional appropriations for good public highways such as are common in Europe.

The man who edits the average country newspaper cannot well avoid treading on somebody's toes continually; must expect to be censured often for unintentional failures; must expect hard work and little thanks; must expect to be called a coward because he does not "pitch into" everything that somebody thinks is wrong, and a fool if he speaks out too plainly on public evils; he must expect to grind other people's axes—and turn the grindstone himself. Still we think it is one of the noblest professions on earth; the one in which the earnest man can do the most good to his fellow man, and in which an honorable man can wield much power for good.

Success.

"What is the secret of success?" asked the Sphinx.

"Push," said the button.

"Never be led," said the pencil.

"Take pains," said the window.

"Always keep cool," said the ice.

"Be up-to-date," said the calendar.

"Never lose your head," said the barrel.

"Make light of everything," said the fire.

"Do a driving business," said the hammer.

"Aspire to greater things," said the nutmeg. —Selected.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of the stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or fiction," says N. H. Brown, Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory at H. Millman's drug store. 25c.

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4. East bound....4:55 a. m.
No. 16. East bound...12:40 p. m.
No. 17. West bound..,11:58 a. m.
No. 3. West bound....8:42 p. m.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a.m
No. 3. Western Express 7:58 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 8:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:06 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Citizens, Attention.

Considerable talk has been occasioned of late as a result of the behavior of the boys on the street. Those who are down town night after night understand how the boys run up and down the street, darting in and out of alleys and from behind buildings, hollowing and making other unbecoming and wholly unnecessary noises. Especially is this noticable on evenings when the larger crowds are in town. On one Saturday when the band was giving concerts in front of the business blocks, an aggregation of youngsters with sticks and other noise-making articles followed them about, and gave a critical onlooker the impression of a lot of iggorotes attempting to take a band of civilized men.

Complaints are coming thick and fast from people in the country who come here to trade; so much so that some have declared they will stay away unless something is done to keep better order on our streets after dark. One driving into town must be ever on the alert lest he run over some boy, and after the horse is tied there is the constant danger that it be frightened by some thoughtless boy jumping suddenly out from his place of hiding.

This congregating of the boys on the streets is not only improper but altogether unnecessary and for the good of the town must be stopped. How much better it would be if our streets were free from these unpleasant noises and almost disgraceful actions, so that visitors might enjoy the full beauty of our town. It is not impossible to stop this. It is the duty of the parents to use their authority and influence to keep their boys off the streets. If they fail to do this the corporation has power to prohibit their appearance on the street after certain hours unless accompanied by their parents. It is the opinion of many that a curfew law in St. Joe would be a good thing. It is going to take some hard measures to improve the present condition. At this time of year the place for the boy is at home and not on the street. He is in school and should use a portion of his evenings in study. The remainder of the night should be spent in sleep.

The morals of the child need attention in the consideration of this matter. Those who hear these boys night after night know that they are not learning those things which are apt to make stong and noble men of them. As a town we should do all in our power to rear a class of young men of whom we are proud. This cannot be done by letting them run loose on the streets.

It is not necessary to say more just now, but citizens of St. Joe, something must be done. Parents, the appeal is to you in behalf of the welfare of your boy; business men, the appeal is to you for the good of our business interests; teachers and preachers the appeal comes to you for the intellectual and moral good of the child; officials of St. Joe the responsibility is yours in behalf of the town whose servants you are. Citizens of St. Joe, it is now time to act.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC

ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Are You Sick?

Much sickness is due to a weak nervous system. Yours may be. If it is, you cannot get well until you restore nerve strength Your nervous system is nature's power house; the organs of your body get their power from it. If the power is not there, the action of the organs is weak, and disease (sickness) follows. Dr. Miles' Nervine cures the sick because it soothes the irritated and tired nerves and gives the system a chance to recuperate. Try it, and see if you do not quickly feel its beneficial effect.

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Got one of Dr. Miles' books and found that Dr. Miles' Nervine fit my case. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for years, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."
JOHN JAMES, Riverton, Nebr.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.
Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

Reunion.

The following clipping is from a Mansfield paper of last week and was handed in by J. D. Smith:—

"The second annual reunion of the Smith family was held at Casino park Thursday. There were about 75 relatives and friends present.

A bounteous dinner was served and every one tried to do his best to put it out of the way, but the attempt was a failure.

The election of officers for the next year resulted in the re-election of the old officers, T. B. Smith, of Newark, O., president, and G. B. Talleutire, of Ashland, O., secretary.

The next reunion will be held the third Thursday in August, 1909, at Casino park, Mansfield, O. It is hoped all who were present this year can be with us next.

Here and There

One hole in a fence will cost ten times as much in the end, as it will to fix it at once.—Grabill Review.

Depends upon the size of the hole.

The election of Thomas R. Marshall to the governorship is a foregone conclusion.—Rochester Sentinel.

What's the use of holding the election.

In DeKalb county the political situation is such as to tax the wits of the most experienced workers.—Waterloo Dawn.

Hard to tell the difference between a "wet" and a "dry".

The Auburn Courier tells us that the county commissioners turned down John W. Brown, republican chairman. We wonder if it is another case of "John Brown's body lies a mouldering, but his soul goes marching on".

Mr. Watson climbed upon his party platform and planted both feet squarely on the county option temperance plank. He did not evade, he did not step sideways, he did not hurdle, he did not crawl under, he did not go around, and he did not make any species of attempt to do any of these things.—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

He just stood. What else could the poor man do.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Commissioner appointed by the DeKalb Circuit Court, in the case of Catherine E. Murphy et al. against Lydia A. Kees, et al., to sell the following described real estate, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, to-wit:—a part of the south west quarter of section fifteen, in township number thirty three, north, range fourteen, east, bounded by a line, commencing at the point where the west boundary line of said section crosses the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and, running thence south on said section line to the north boundary line of Washington Street in the Town of St. Joe; thence east on said boundary line of Washington Street eleven rods; thence north to the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and thence in a westerly direction along the south boundary line of said right of way to the place of begining, will sell said real estate at private sale on and after October 24th., 1908, at the office of J. E. and J. H. Rose in the city of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the following terms, to-wit:—One third cash in hand on the day of sale, one third in nine months and one third in eighteen months from the date of sale, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's promissory notes, with six per cent interest, and with attorneys fees, waiving relief from valuation laws, and secured by a mortgage on said real estate.

Dated, September 7th., 1908.

James E. Rose, Commissioner.

How to get Strong.

P. L. Daily, of 1247 W. Congress St Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at H. Millman's drug store. 50c.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $2.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,

Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

GENERAL ITEMS

The First National Bank of Hicksville, has supplied the position of cashier to succeed W. F. Horton, with Emery Lattaner of Fremont, Ohio. He has had eight years banking experience and been prominent in editorial circles.

Money to loan on farms at 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

There will be fifty-three Sundays in this year, an occurence that will not happen again for 110 years. This extra Sunday can be utilized in attending church, calling on your best girl; reading the scripture, playing with the children; breaking in a two-year-old colt or some other way. One hundred and ten years from this date you will probably be paying the penalty or enjoying the pleasures of the method in which you choose to spend this extra Sunday.—Wolf Lake Trolley.

George Baxter left Tuesday noon for Purdue University at Lafayette where he has accepted a position in the faculty of that well-known educational institution. Mr. Baxter will have charge of the work of the mechanical drawing in the freshman and sophomore years. The position came to him unsought and it is certainly a high honor to be thus called by his alma mater to return as an instructor to the institution from which he recently graduated.—Courier.

The state legislature convenes in special session next Friday. Wonder why?

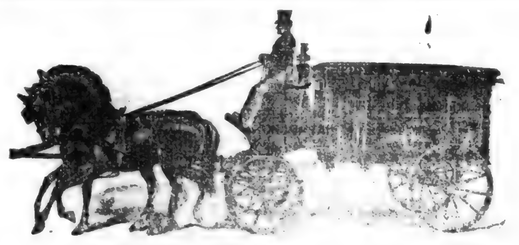
It is reported that 15,000 people attended the Angola fair, Thursday of last week.

County Supt. H. E. Coe has typhoid fever. A sample of his blood was sent to Indianapolis for analysis and it showed typhoid germs.

The republicans of Steuben and DeKalb counties will meet in a joint convention at Waterloo, Friday, to nominate a candidate for joint senator and one for prosecuting attorney of the circuit court.

Sup't Samuel Brown of the county farm in submitting his monthly report to the board of commissioners says there are twenty-two males and thirteen females confined in the infirmary at the present time. During the past month one was received, one discharged and one died.

The County Commissioners last week selected the precinct inspectors for the coming November election. The entire list of recommendations from Miles Baxter democratic chairman was accepted and that of John W. Brown, republican chairman, turned down. The responsibility for this lies with Solomon Sherer who was recently turned down in the republican county convention. The inspectors for the local townships are as follows:—Concord—Edward Berry, Samuel Munnaw, John A. Provines. Newville—Wallace Abel. Jackson—George Ditmar, P. P. Lochner.



WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Eliza Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

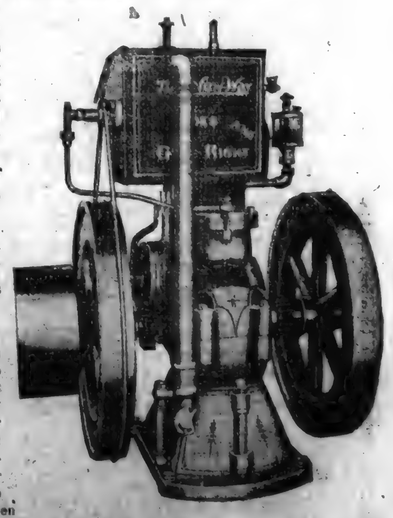
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



So Simple Your Boy Can Run It.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

SEPTEMBER

U331
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

J. F. BALTZ
Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing
is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

News Items

Charley Markle made a business trip to Auburn, Tuesday.

Dr. S. S. Kimes made a business trip to Ft. Wayne, Saturday.

Shoes for men, women and children, ERICK & CO.

Miss Ada Bair spent a couple of days last week, with friends here.

Mrs. Flossie Wilson is very sick and is under the care of Dr. Kimes.

Miss Viola Souders visited her sister, Mrs. Lottie Keesler, last week.

June Volkert was the guest of Mrs. Nellie Heyman a few days last week.

Mrs. Wise was very sick this last week but is somewhat better at this writing.

Miss Fern Metcalf visited last week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Metcalf.

Henry Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Paff and Charley Treece were at Ft. Wayne, Friday.

Don't fail to look at our premiums with the White Cross Baking Powder, ERICK & CO.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman is not any better but is very weak and the Dr. does not allow her to talk very much to visitors.

George Paff has sold his farm to Mr. Burthrottle of near Antwerp. Mr. Paff and his family expect to go to California in about eight weeks.

Miss Edna Wilson of Moris Chapel, will lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Lydia Jane Steward, and attend school at this place this winter.

Mrs. Samuel Steward and Mrs. Lydia Jane Steward were the guests of Mrs Eva Jane Read of near Auburn. Mrs. L. J. Steward prolonged her visit until Sunday.

John A. Provines, trustee of Concord township was in Auburn, Saturday and paid us a call. Mr. Provines is a business like trustee and looks afters the township's business in a methodical way. Forty seven years ago today Mr. Provines left Auburn with his company to go to war.—Auburn Courier.

Look at those new Stiff Hats, ERICK & CO.

Mrs. John Sturgis of Butler, was in town, Saturday.

John Hobaugh was at Auburn on business, Monday.

Dr. Shook is suffering with blood poison in his hand.

Gus Cupp made a business trip to Auburn, Saturday.

Mrs. Dr. Hull of Hicksville, was a guest in town, Sunday.

Mrs. Pernettie Steward and son Clarence, spent Tuesday in Ft. Wayne

Arthur Goeltzenleushter and wife spent Saturday and Sunday at Edgerton.

A cement walk will be placed in front of the Methodist parsonage, this week.

Glen Henderson and wife were guests of F. R. Bowman and wife, Saturday.

Mrs. Clara Lampman of Holgate, O. is here visiting with her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Wise.

Mrs. Florence Wintrode and two children are visiting her parents, Mr. Porter Baker and wife.

H. M. Rummell returned to Oklahoma City, yesterday. His family will return the first of the month.

Mrs. Mary Jane Silburg and Mrs. Pernettie Steward visited Frank Stewart at Garrett a few days last week.

Theodore Kressley and family visited relatives here last week. They were residents of this place several years back.

WOOD FOR SALE:- Twenty-five cord of good mixed wood. Inquire of BOWSER & GLOYD. Spencerville Phone No. 44.

The report in last week's paper that Ethel Baker had returned from Mansfield was a mistake, Miss Baker has not returned and it is not known when she will return.

The two children of Wallace Fisher, Dorothy and Maxime, who have been suffering with the whooping cough, are slowly improving. The nurse was dismissed Tuesday night.

Miss Frankie Baltz returned to her home Sunday night and her sister Grace came to stay with her grandmother. The girls take turns of four weeks staying with their grandmother.

Political Announcement.

EDITOR NEWS:—
Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the will of the republican convention. (Concord township)
D. W. BAKER.

Bring them Here.

When the Doctor writes out the

PRESCRIPTION

He wants you to have it filled at a reliable store where the appliances are up-to-date and the drugs are pure and fresh.

We assure you what the doctor puts on paper we put in the medicine, no substituting goes here,

PRESCRIPTIONS

Bowman's Drug Store

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also urnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

W. M. ALLEN,
BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

The Last One.

The final ball game of a series of three was played between the married men and single fellows Saturday. Each side had won one previously, and both teams had strengthened their forces in order to win the decisive game. Wearley and Kelley composed the battery for the singles while Allen and Beams worked for the married men. Wearley was very effective against the doubles and until the seventh inning the game seemed easily in the hands of the boys. At the close of this round the score stood 4 to 9 in their favor. The eight has a different story to tell. The first man up for the marrieds was G. Henderson the man of minor league fame. The pitcher gave him first base in an attempt to knock his pedestals from under him. By a succession of steals Henderson reached third base in safty. This cut the last string and the balloon went up taking the entire single team with it. Before they got to earth again ten of those domestic overseers had scored and not a man was out. One other run crossed the plate before the side was retired. O, woeful fate! The marrieds were now seven in the lead with no hope that the singles could overtake them. They were able to score but two runs in the remaning two times at bat and went down to final and decisive defeat with a score of 16 over 11.

These three games have been full of intense excitement for the local fans, and prejudice ran high. The last game was not such a fine exhibition of baseball as the other two games, but excitement and "rooting" was nowhere lacking. It was plainly evident that both teams were keyed up to a high nervous tension on account of of the enormity of the struggle before them. The occasional "unstringing" of a player was responsible for the surplus of scores.

Spencerville R F D No 2

The youngest child of J Koch and wife is quite sick.

When in need of school tablets call on ERICK & CO.

Clarence Kelly of Woodburn spent Sunday with his parents D. M. Kelley and family.

Mrs. Laura Sharpe and son from New Paris is here visiting her parents Wm. Roads and family.

Clint Wearley left Monday morning for Huntertown where he expects to complete a large job of plastering.

Harvie Kimes, daughter, Pluma, and Minnie Thompson spent Sunday with H. Aikins and family of Newville.

John Beninghoff, wife and son Golden spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. A. F. Heyman of Spencerville.

Miss June Volkert of Grand Rapids spent a couple of days last week with her cousin John Beninghoff and family.

Mrs. Alice Zimmerman, daughter, Bina and her mother Mrs. Gibson spent Sunday with Chas. Gibbons of near Auburn.

Wes. Zimmerman and family and Mrs. Gibbons and Clara and Frank Keesler called on C. M. Wearley and family Friday.

New line of Dry Goods, just received at ERICK & Co.

Lee Hollopeter wife and son spent Sunday with his parents Wm. Hallabaugh and family of Spencerville.

Mr. Clarence Hollopeter and Mrs. Coppus of Topeka Ohio came in their auto last Thursday and visited his brother Lee Hollopeter and family.

Perliminary Institute

The teachers of Concord township held preliminary institute at the school house, Saturday. All the teachers were present and took part in the day's work. Supt. Coe was unable to be present and the teachers missed the excellent advice he is always able to give previous to a new term. August Keating is president of the institute organization and Flyy Witz secretary.

A Paying Investment.

Mr John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "I have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a 50c. bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Farewell Reception

A farewell party was given by Miss Gladys Paff to a number of her young friends Thursday evening. The evening was spent in playing games and music. The luncheon consisted of ice cream and cake. Those present were: The Misses Bessie Hart, Vera Silberg, Leland Fales, Clara Keester, Fern Wearley, Jennie Steward, Ada Fales, Iva Zehner, Opal Miller, Francis Butler. The Messers Corma Kelley, Clarence Steward, Harry Hursh, Ort Wearley, Robert Beams, Conna Davis, Deloss Steward, Murray Erick, Ross Bear, Chas. Chapman, Pete Steward, Argil Beams, Lester Houk, Earnest Steward and Homer Carnes. The out-of-town guests were Miss Hazel Berry of St. Joe and Miss June Volkert of Grand Rapids, Mich. Miss Paff expects to go to California with her parents in a few weeks.

New Readers

Saturday at the ball game the News offered a one years subscription to any batter who would make a three-bagger and three months to the batter making a two-base hit. The pitchers kept all the batters from knocking the sphere far enough to cover four bases. Six months subscriptions were taken by Harry Hursh and also Roy Maurer each of whom made a clean three base hit. Geo. Beams will now receive the News three months for making the first clean two base hit.

There is another way to become a reader of the St. Joe News and many are taking advantage of it every week. A dollar rolled our way is sure to bring you the paper one whole year. There is no better time to subscribe than right now. Many are sending the paper to distant friends and relatives as the best means where by they get all the news every week. Our paper is a paper for the people, and the only newspaper in southeast DeKalb. We are making a special effort to reach all the people along the St. Joe valley for ten miles each way from St. Joe and are pleased with the response we are receiving. Get in line with us and help us to do all possible for the good of our home communities.

FRED THOMAS
THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No. 1.

Mr. Dwyer and children have the whooping-cough.

Mary Horn visited her aunt, Mrs John Betz of St. Joe, last week.

Venus Horn visited with her cousin John Dilley and wife, last Monday.

Sam Betz and family spent Sunday afternoon with Geo. Horn and family.

Roscoe Walter started Monday to Harlan High School, also Mr. Criswell's son.

Zona Horn will teach in DeKalb Co. for forty days as a substitute for Geo. Wilson.

Adrian Miller, wife and sons spent Sunday with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bair.

Will Goldsmith of Hursh, has been carrying mail for Albert Klopfenstein of Grabill, while taking his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith of Hursh, spent Sunday with Grant Winans and wife. They were accompanied by the latters parents.

Miss Della Devilbiss returned home, last Monday night. She had been staying with her aunt, Mrs. Frank Horn, for a few weeks. Her home is in Peru.

S. S. Kimes
—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

3rd. Annual
FREE FALL EXHIBIT will be held at AUBURN
Oct. 7-8-9
$2,000 in Prizes.
Finest Free Attractions. Did You Get A Premium List?
If not write
C. H. NAPP
Assistant Secretary.
AUBURN, INDIANA

Mrs. John Stover, who lived in Hursh town for many years, is lying very sick of typhoid fever at her granddaughter's, Mrs. Wm. Gruber.

Frank Vanzile of Hursh, has been very sick during the past week with hemorrhages of the stomach and bowels. Last Saturday eleven of his neighbors turned out and cut his corn. They cut six acres in one forenoon.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Paff regret very much that they are about to leave their farm for a more distant climate. While we will feel the loss of them here we sincerely hope the change will greatly benefit Mr. Paff's health.

Never in the 31 years history of the Hicksville Fair, has such complete arrangements been made, and such fine prospects been present for a record breaking event, as is the case this season. Sept. 22 to 26. Five days.

Perry Repp expects to move to Colorado this fall. He is troubled with asthma and has not been well for some time. His two brothers that were troubled with the same disease went to Colorado about two years ago and they are so much benefited by the change, that he is anxious to go that he may be benefited by the change.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

We are actually giving away these dishes to our cash customers. There is no lottery about this. You get a dish free at our expense. With every ten cent purchase you get a ticket which is to be turned in exchange for dishes. With every $1.00 purchase you get a cash ticket which you can use in exchange for a China Closet worth $15. Call at the store at any time and learn the particulars. We are doing all in our power to convince you that it pays to trade at our store.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience

Spencerville, Indiana.

SEPTEMBER

U332
L 903

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Condr. S. P. Ry., 717 Van Ness St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna.

"Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Everyone thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long.

"Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime.

"The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life.

"I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

How and Where to Register for a Farm in the Rosebud Reservation.

The President has signed a proclamation opening that part of the Rosebud Indian Lands in South Dakota, generally known as the Tripp County lands, and designated Judge James W. Witten, the Chief Law Officer of the General Land Office, to superintend and conduct the registration and drawing to be held in October, 1908.

Persons who desire to register for this drawing should go to CHAMBERLAIN or PRESHO, South Dakota, via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, between October 5 and October 17 and there sign and swear to an application for registration which will be furnished by the officer administering the oath.

These lands embrace 838,000 acres, part of which have been allotted to Indians, and are located on the south side of the State of South Dakota, and adjoin the lands in Gregory County which were opened in 1904. They are desirable for farming and stock-raising purposes. Similar lands in adjoining counties are selling for $35 to $40 an acre.

A Happy State.

A New York editor laid down a letter with a laugh.

"A letter from W. W. Jacobs, the English humorist," he said, "declining to write me a Christmas story at a dollar a word. That was not what made me laugh, though. Mr. Jacobs tells me in this letter about an American correspondent of his own name. The American W. W. Jacobs wrote to the English one recently. He said he, too, aspired to literary laurels, but so far without success. He had a proposition to make. He proposed that the two work in partnership, he supplying the ideas, the other writing the ideas up."

"The editor took up Mr. Jacobs' letter and read from it:

"'My American namesake then told me of a dream he had had in which this partnership arrangement evidently answered satisfactorily; so satisfactorily, indeed, that publishers' checks came in so fast and furious that the majority of them had to be returned as "unavailable"—a happy state which none of us, or very few, ever reach.'"

Cheering Him Up.

Little Elmer—Grampa, why do you look so sad?

Grampa—I was just thinking. Here I am sixty years of age, and I have never done anything that will be likely to make posterity remember me.

Little Elmer—Oh, well, don't worry. Mebby you'll still have a chance to live in history as somebody's grandfather.

An Unfortunate Misunderstanding.

"I had to leave my last situation because the missus said they were going to lead the sinful life, and they wouldn't want any servants about the place."—Punch.

"THE PALE GIRL."

Did Not Know Coffee Was The Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot, wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says:

"Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no 'life' in me.

"I was known as 'the pale girl' and people thought I was just weakly. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good.

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us.

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee.

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Popular Pulpit

INFLUENCE OF SMALL THINGS.

By Rev. Dr. Abram S. Isaacs.

For who hath despised the day of small things?—Zach. iv., 10.

The real things that tend to make or mar our careers are often the small things. The vital issues of defeat or victory may spring from the veriest trifles. The most fatal defects or weaknesses, too, can be apparently insignificant, escaping observation like the tiny worm which pierces the dock's massive foundation or cuts through the ship's side. The prophet does not always speak in rapt visions or restrict his message to a heavenly Jerusalem. His dominant motive is to arouse to a sense of each day's importance and to conduct as the essential factor in religion. And as the minutes control the hours, and mere fractions of time the months and years, so our character is the resultant of single acts and thoughts which become in their turn irresistible habits and impulses, like the separate delicate threads which can be welded into an unyielding chain.

The painter's canvas glows with life and beauty by his deft use of bits of pigment—small fragments of color that give rise to figure and landscape of surpassing charm. So the gentle traits, the modest qualities, the quiet tastes, the unobtrusive deeds, the unselfish attitude, the little attentions. It is just these small things which render our life fragrant, giving genuineness and character to our religion.

But there is another view of the text. We are judged less by the trend of our life in its vastness and sweep, by the aim and extent of our purposes and ambitions, than by the little acts that make up each day's passing record—the chance word we utter, the flash of anger, the burst of petulance, the whisper of wrong, the bitter taunt, the petty gratification—acts trifling and transient in themselves but expressive of character to the casual observer. How important, then, to be on our guard lest such things acquire the mastery over us. They must not be despised, for they may lead to traits and tendencies that may overwhelm our lives, leaving wreckage where once were smiling streams and happy homes.

The sage who knew the stars better than the roads of his native town, the philosopher so intent on the secrets of the skies that he fell into a ditch by the wayside—are not these but instances when in the vain grasp after the illimitable and vague we despise the small things that are real and near? So we narrow too generally our conception of religion to the atmosphere of church or synagogue, to swelling music, to stately ceremonial, the solemn litanies and holy vestments. But even these may fail in their purpose if we realize not the sacredness of small things which we ignore or despise—the deed that uplifts although it is unheralded; the word that inspires, although uttered so gently that your neighbors do not hear it; the hand clasp which puts your brother firmly on his feet without public applause.

The small things, then, which are usually vital and decisive for success or failure are not in the far heavens or across the distant seas. They are close to us, so close that they are indispensable for our growth, our discipline, our perfect development. Hence, they dare not be despised by those of us who wish to rise to higher things.

FELLOWSHIP, GREATER GOOD.

By Henry F. Cope.

"But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that better part which shall not be taken away from her."—Luke 10:42.

When you read that story of the Good Master commending the sister who seemed to slight her share in the household duties, especially when you hear the usual interpretation of the incident as showing that Martha was neglecting her soul while Mary was caring for hers, you cannot but wonder that the apparent laziness of the one should be praised over the kindly, hospitable activity of the other.

But the Good Teacher was not condemning the hospitality of Martha; he was commending the larger, deeper hospitality of Mary. To him, as to us all, there is but one thing that is absolutely necessary. That is not food and dainties; it is not furniture and luxuries—it is the open heart of friendship. There was greater refreshing in the friendship of the one who sat at his feet than in all the food that the tables might bear.

Do we not all need often to hear his saying—we who are careful and cumbered about many things, about food and tables, about clothes and houses—that we are likely to miss that good and imperishable treasure of friends and human fellowship? And when we would entertain our friends might we not well think less of the things we would set before them than of the riches of personality, our own selves, we can give them?

The great need of every life, that for which our hearts are hungry, is not food and drink, it is not even books or thinking, is not silver or gold—it is just folks, people, to know one another, to read open hearts, to taste the fruits of friendship. The one thing needful, that which gives happiness, peace, and prosperity, is just this openness of heart, this thoughtfulness of others that wins and makes friends.

The hospitable home is the one where people have time to know you, where there is always a place by the hearthside and an ear to listen, where the love light glows from face to face. We soon forget what we have had or eaten in the homes we have visited; but we never lose what our friends have given us of themselves.

The house that has the great treasure may be one where there is no plate to be stolen, but where hearts are rich through habits of soul communion. The weary man lifts himself with renewed vigor as he looks along the road to the home where love waits, where eyes will look deep into his; the woman knows not the toil and drudgery of the day's work for the thought of the fellowship with those she loves.

Many are making Martha's mistake, missing the riches of friendships in the machinery and ministrations of hospitality; we are so anxious to entertain our friends that we drive them away; we are so anxious to feed them that we starve their hearts. Whatever else people want this they want most of all and first of all, just to know people, just to have the open way into our real lives.

No matter how much work a man may do he will do nothing worthy if he is too busy to make friends. The value of our investment in the world depends largely on the manner in which our own self is drawn out and enriched through the touch of other lives. No man can be great by himself alone; all greatness is a gathering in to ourselves of other beings.

He who chooses to find friends has that better part. The snare of our modern living is that we are so busy here and there doing many things, most of them perhaps good things in themselves but bad when they stand before the better and higher things; we are so full of business that we miss life's real blessings.

He who chooses friendship chooses that which he can never lose. No man can take from you the memory of your friend; none can rob you of the enriching of mind, the enlarging of heart and sympathy that came as you lay with him by the camp fire under the far off stars or sat by the hearthside in the home. Friends become inseparable soul possessions.

So if you would show true hospitality to any, let your first concern be that his heart is fed. He who comes to your home wants you more than he wants your bread and butter, your dainties and guest delicacies. There is a feast wherever friendship freely flows; there is emptiness and hunger, no matter how the board may be laden, where hearts are closed to one another.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Hidden sins grow fastest.

Condemnation cures nothing.

Revenge never is so sweet as when foregone.

The critical eye remains longest in ignorance.

No man is undone as long as he has a work to do.

You cannot bless men until you believe in them.

He is lost already to whom sacrifice appears as folly.

The doors to heaven are often in earth's lowliest places.

Spiritually the most helpless are those who refuse to help.

Our neighbors are not lifted up by looking up their records.

Life barriers that resist all force crumble before friendship.

Keep the heart healthy and happiness will take care of itself.

Men are to be known by their aims rather than by their origins.

The weariest man in this world is the one who is running from work.

The man who has grit in his makeup will not throw it in his neighbor's face.

The enemy soon would be on the run if saints were not so strong on the rest.

Morality because it pays to be moral is simply the immorality of civilized selfishness.

Every time you beat your neighbor you may be sure your adversary has beaten you.

The pessimist is the man who always goes straight for the chair with a pin on it.

A man has no greater capacity of heaven than he has power to create heaven about him.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't try to define beyond your experience.

Don't attempt perfection without pruning your faults.

Don't shut out the light if you would find the narrow path.

Don't appeal to prejudice if you would become a real leader.

Don't paint people with depravity if you would produce desire for purity.

Don't underestimate the importance of little things in your effort to attain true goodness.

Don't expect an hour at church to counteract all the influences of six days of active business life.

Don't attempt to gain spiritual wealth without willingness to experience material poverty if necessary.

Don't avoid the hard places on the road to heaven if you would have strength to ascend its final heights.

Smiles of the Day

Successful Plan.

"One time I was in great danger from a lion," said the African explorer, who happened to be in a reminiscent mood, "and, having no weapon at hand, I tried sitting down and staring at him."

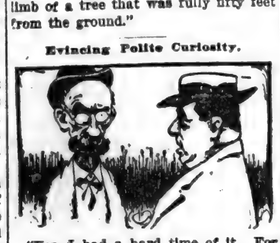
"How did the plan work?" queried the innocent bystander.

"Couldn't have worked better," replied the hero of the tale. "The lion didn't come within fifty feet of me."

"That's queer," remarked the i. b. "How do you account for it?"

"I think the place I selected as a seat had something to do with it," answered the explorer. "I sat on the limb of a tree that was fully fifty feet from the ground."

Evincing Polite Curiosity.



"Yes, I had a hard time of it. For a while the doctor said I had only one chance in a thousand to regain my reason."

"Well?"

"Well what?"

"Did you regain it?"

True Sympathy.

Younger—Three years ago I married your only daughter.

Oldun—Yes.

Younger—And I have never ceased to regret it.

Oldun—Let us sympathize with each other, my boy.

Younger—With each other?

Oldun—Yes; I married her mother.

Rather Mixed.

The big brakeman opened the door of the smoker and bellowed:

"Anychoomengoshmash!"

The four drummers playing a game of cards looked up inquisitively.

"Anychoomengoshmash," echoed one. "Why, that must be an Indian name."

"Sounds like Hottentot," said a second.

"Or Eskimo," added a third.

And then the conductor came through.

"Say, conductor, what station was that the brakeman called out?"

"Oh, that wasn't a station."

"Then what did he say?"

"Why, 'Have any of you men got a match?' Billy is so used to announcing stations in a jumble he talks that way altogether."

At the Summer Boarding House.

City Boarder—You should be arrested for getting money under false pretenses.

Farmer Ryetop—What now, neighbor?

City Boarder—Why, you said after I had been here a week I'd have an appetite like a horse.

Farmer Ryetop—And ain't yeou, mister? Begosh! I saw yeou eating corn off the cob at dinner.

Another Thrust.

Mr. Stubb—That old chop Argus had a hundred eyes.

Mrs. Stubb—So they say.

Mr. Stubb—And I suppose, Maria, if I had a hundred eyes I could see everything, too.

Mrs. Stubb—Everything but your own faults, John.

Rah-Rah Boy Coming.

"Oldum has some old-fashioned ideas, hasn't he?"

"How so?"

"He has sent his son to college to make a gentleman of him."—Houston Post.

Trouble Impending.

The Girl—Oh, Jimmy, how I wish this could go on forever.

Jim—Well, I'm afraid it won't. I've an idea dat barb wire fence ahead of us'll stop us.

Cause of His Haste.

Perambulating Pete—Wot is youse runnin' fer, Mike?

Meandering Mike—De woman at de house back dere offered me a cake.

Perambulating Pete—Well, wot was de matter wid it?

Meandering Mike—Matter? Why, it was a cake uv soap.

The Very Idea.

Mr. Portleigh—This shopping business is an awful nuisance.

Mrs. Portleigh—Why, Henry! You have no reason to complain. I'm doing the shopping. All you do is to carry the parcels.

Irrepressible Laughter.

Stage Manager (at rehearsal)—But you laughed at the death scene. You mustn't do that.

Actor—With the salary you give me, I can only greet death with joy.

A Woman's Eyes.

"This paper," remarked Mrs. Bimberly, "tells of a woman in Kansas who has microscopic eyes."

"I guess most women have them," rejoined her husband. "Anyway, a mouse looks as big to the average woman as a trolley car does to a man."

Candid Admission.

Kind Lady—And you claim to be an Englishman? I'll test you. How many meals do you eat a day?

Sandy Pikes—As many as I can git, mum.

Bunkoed Again.

Farmer Ryetop—Say, Hiram, when you were in Noo York last, what was the worst quarter you took in?

Farmer Hardapple—Why, a Canadian quarter with a hole in, by gosh!

Always on Her Mind.

Dick—She is ever thinking about an engagement ring.

Tom—Think so?

Dick—I know it. She said even the sunset reminded her of a band of gold.

Packing Trunks.

"When a woman packs a trunk she puts her soul into the task."

"And when a man packs a trunk he puts his feet into it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Easy.

"Say!"

"Yep?"

"How does a doctor know w'en a man he's treatin' is goin' ter die?"

"Well, he knows what he's been dopin' him wid, don't he?"—Cleveland Leader.

Thrown Out.

Tess—Why, Bell used to be hand-in-glove with him.

Tom—Say rather "hand-in-mitten." She gave him the latter and withdrew the hand.—Philadelphia Press.

Hymen at the Wheel.

"Yes," said the young artist, proudly, "this is my latest picture. It represents the old ferryman waiting for the runaway couple to leave the parsonage."

"Fine picture," complimented the friend. "What is it entitled?"

"Why, 'Waiting for the Tied.'"

He Got It.

Willie (paying visit with his mother)—Gee! I wisht I had something ter eat.

His Mother—Willie, you must not ask for anything when you are visiting.

Willie—I didn't ask fer it; I wished fer it.

Unexpected Death.

Mrs. Hogan—Oi hear your son Patrick died very suddenly. Was his dith unexpictid?

Mrs. Doran—It was. We expictid a pardon from th' Guvinor to th' very lasht minute.

Down at Bacon Ridge.

Drummer—So this town is progressing, eh?

Old Postmaster—Wall, I should smile, stranger. The chap that runs the old traction engine has picked up French and calls himself a chauffeur.

Always Failing.

"The upper set worries me a great deal," said the socialist on the back platform.

"The upper set worries me also," sighed the man in the green necktie.

"Ah, are you also a socialist, my friend?"

"No, but I've just had an upper set of teeth put in this morning."

The Poor Umpire Again.

Stubb—Yes, they found that the score had been doctored.

Penn—What happened then?

Stubb—Oh, the umpire had to be doctored.

The Only Way.

"This bathing pool on the lot you sold me is a fake," blustered the irate purchaser.

"In what way, sir?" asked the crafty real estate agent.

"Why, you told me I would find the water up to my neck. Instead of that I find it only twelve inches deep."

"Well, er—I meant you would find it up to your neck, sir, if you jumped in head first."

More Important.

"Ah! Mrs. Newcomb," said the uppish Mrs. Subbubs, "my many social duties have prevented me from calling upon you as I should. However, I will surely return your visit some day——"

"Oh!" that doesn't matter much," replied Mrs. Newcomb promptly, "but I do wish you'd return the groceries you've borrowed from time to time."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

In Great Luck.

"Do you believe in luck?"

"Sometimes. See that fat woman with the red hat over there?"

"Yes."

"Twenty-two years ago she refused to marry me."

So Sudden.

Miss De Muir—I wish I could think of some new and unusual birthday present to surprise mamma with this year.

Mr. Spoonmore—How do you think she'd like a son-in-law?

More proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saves woman from surgical operations.

Mrs. S. A. Williams, of Gardiner, Maine, writes:

"I was a great sufferer from females troubles, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health in three months, after my physician declared that an operation was absolutely necessary."

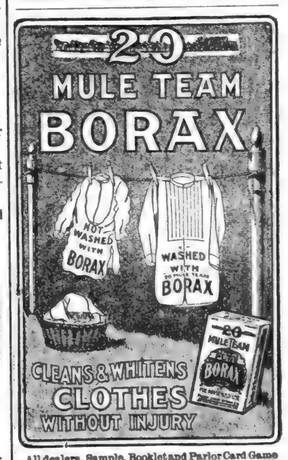
Mrs. Alvina Sperling, of 154 Cleybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered from female troubles, a tumor and much inflammation. Two of the best doctors in Chicago decided that an operation was necessary to save my life. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely cured me without an operation."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

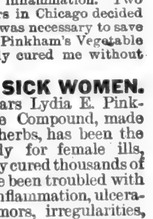
Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.



All dealers. Sample, Booklet and Parlor Card Game "WIZZ," 10c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

Paxtine
TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.



Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND WATERPROOF OILED GARMENTS

are cut on large patterns, designed to give the wearer the utmost comfort

LIGHT-DURABLE-CLEAN AND GUARANTEED WATERPROOF

SUITS $3.00 SLICKERS $3.00

BE SURE THE GARMENT YOU WANT BEARS THE NAME OF THE ITEM.

A. J. TOWER CO. BOSTON U.S.A. TOWER CANADIAN CO. LIMITED TORONTO, CAN.

If afflicted with sore Eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

SEPTEMBER

0333
L 903

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with when no longer needed as the best of remedies, when required, are to assist nature and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna
manufactured by the
CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. ONLY
SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS
one size only, regular price 50¢ per Bottle

Big Pennsylvania Oak.

A monster rock oak tree was recently cut in Juniata township, Huntingdon county. Its dimensions were as follows after having been cut down and peeled: The circumference of the butt was 12 feet 7 inches, or a diameter of about 4 feet; the diameter at the end of the last log, or 62 feet from the butt, was 22 inches; no limbs were on the tree within 60 feet of the ground. The logs were measured and the amount of lumber that can be made is 2,190 feet board measure, and twelve crossties can be made from the limbs. The bark will amount to from 1¼ to 1¾ cords.—Philadelphia Record.

As a rule, the white flowers are more fragrant than those of other colors.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE DIABETES BACKACHE
PER BOX 75 "Guaranteed"

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful "Cascarets" for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to "Cascarets" for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year.

James McGuan, 108 Mercer St., Jersey City, N. J.

Best For The Bowels
Cascarets
CANDY CATHARTIC
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped C C C. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 592
ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

Get your Letter Paper and Envelopes printed at this office. We can give you the

EAGLE LINEN
PAPER and ENVELOPES

It is fine and will suit you. Try it.

FOR SALE. FINEST LANDS IN THE NORTH-WEST. 40,000 ACRES of choice land in the celebrated CLOVER BELT OF WISCONSIN, all within a few miles of three railroads; good roads and schools; terms and price on tracts of 40 acres and up reasonable. Write for information.
SETTLERS ESPECIALLY DESIRED.
John S. Owen Lumber Co., Owen, Wis.

EYESIGHT WAS IN DANGER

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores—Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and within five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, then I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in two months our baby was a different girl. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a new-born baby. She has not had a sign of the eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, LeSueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

CHEAP LIVING IN FRANCE.

Ham Is 90 Cents a Slice and Ice 10 Cents for a Coffee Cup Full.

"American women wouldn't complain about the prices of meats here if they once tried living in Bordeaux," said a woman who has just returned from a year of housekeeping in that French city, to a New York Press reporter. "The cheapest meat obtainable there is ham," she explained, "and that costs 90 cents a slice. Chickens are so expensive that every scrap of them, even the head, is made use of by the Bordeaux cook. I remember my surprise when the first plate of chicken soup was placed before me at my own table, to behold funny little red scraps floating through it. The waitress explained that those were the chicken's comb, chopped fine. To waste the comb of a chicken is considered an unheard of extravagance in Bordeaux.

Meals are not only high in price there, but extremely poor. I soon adopted the custom of the wealthy families and sent my orders to Dax, the nearest large city, twice a week, and had my meats expressed from there. The meats are no cheaper in Dax than in Bordeaux, but they are the best I have ever eaten anywhere. As if to make up for the exorbitant price of meat, all vegetables cost a mere nothing, and the poor subsist entirely on vegetarian diet.

"One of my chief delights was the patisseries, where the most delicious cakes and tarts could be had for a penny or two each. They were of infinite variety, and so delicious that after eating them it is easy to understand why the French say we Americans don't know what cake is. Every customer is given a plate and fork upon entering the patisserie, and goes around the counters selecting her own. When you are leaving you are asked the amount of your bill and your statement is never questioned. You pay what you say you owe.

"But how I did long for a plate of good American ice cream! It is unknown there, except, perhaps, at a formal dinner, where it is served in infinitesimal portions, frozen in some fancy shape or figure. Every one over there assures you that the French don't care for ice cream, and can't be made to patronize a place which serves it; but when you buy ice you understand the real reason of its lack of popularity. A piece of ice which costs 10 cents will almost fit inside a coffee cup."

Lost Its Potency.

"So you no longer use buttermilk?"

"What's the use?" returned Mr. Fairbanks; "if I drank a gallon of the stuff a day the papers wouldn't notice it."—Philadelphia Press.

Relic of the Past.

"So, woman, you treasure another man's photograph?"

"Don't be foolish, Henry. This is a portrait of yourself when you had hair."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Yellow Clothes Are Unsightly.

Keep them white with Red Cross Ball Blue. All grocers sell large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

A Boy on Clergymen.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Coopers-town school boy's essay on Clergymen. The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are 3 kinds of clergymen bishups rectors and curats. the bishups tell the recters to work and the curats have to do it. A curate is a thin married man but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Pointed Yoke Blouse.

The blouse that is slightly open at the throat is always an ideally comfortable one for warm weather, and it is so pretty and charming whenever becoming that it is quite easy to understand its extended popularity. This one is absolutely simple, yet chic and graceful, while it can be made either with the V-shaped neck or a high one as may be found most becoming. In this instance the material is one of the pretty cotton veilings with trimming of filet banding, and the waist is unlined, but it can be utilized for silk and chiffon, for almost every seasonable material and can be lined whenever found desirable.

PATTERN NO. 5993.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5993.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Russian Blouse Dress.

The dress that is made in Russian style, or with blouse and skirt in one, is always a satisfactory one for the younger girls, and this season it has taken on a number of new and attractive forms. In the illustration is shown one of the best and most desirable. I is buttoned down the front, so that I can be opened out when laundering be comes necessary, and it is finished with the big sailor collar that always is becoming, and which in this instance is oddly shaped.

PATTERN NO. 6022.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6022.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

FACTS WORTH KNOWING.

Seventy thousand Americans emigrated to Canada in 1906.

A man's hair turns gray about five years earlier than a woman's.

Living expenses in New York have increased 11 per cent in one year.

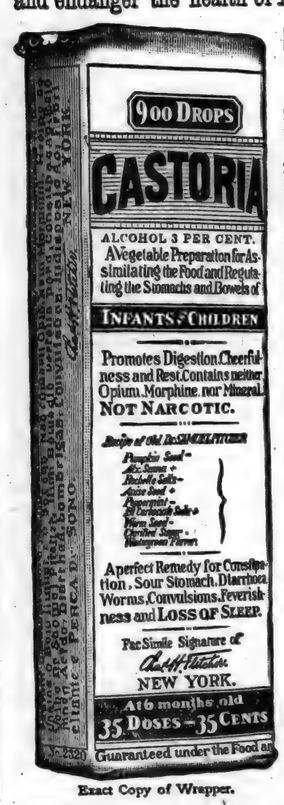
Horseshoes are sometimes made in Australia of cowhide instead of iron.

Every man believes he is an ideal man. That's the reason he "talks" so much about other men

What is Castoria.

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. F. Gerald Blattner, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "Your Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, always obtaining the desired results."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Don't Live in New Houses.

Why is a new house unhealthful? That is a question which has been asked by many and answered by few. And yet the reason is obvious. In the construction of just one medium sized house it is estimated that over 30,000 gallons of water is used. This water does not evaporate so quickly as it would in the air and sunlight, but lies near the surface of the earth and under the house and in the walls of the cellar; hence the house is damp, and damp houses foster illness. A house that has been standing for a year or so is much more healthful than a new one.—Minneapolis Journal.

TEN YEARS OF BACKACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer in the Same Way.

Mrs. Thos. Dunn, 153 Vine St., Columbus, Ohio, says: "For more than ten years I was in misery with backache. The simplest housework completely exhausted me. I had no strength or ambition; was nervous and suffered headache and dizzy spells. After these years of pain I was despairing of ever being cured when Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and their use brought quick relief and a permanent cure. I am very grateful."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"Champ" Clark, the Missouri Congressman, never writes his full name, James Beauchamp Clark, except on important documents.

Quick as Wink.

If your eyes ache with a smarting, burning sensation and dimness use PETTIT'S EYE SALVE. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

When the Dime Museum Burned.

They got the fat woman out
By using a pair of strong derricks;
And when she saw she was safe
She promptly went into hysterics.
—Chicago Tribune.

If you use ball blue, get Red Cross Ball Blue, the best ball blue. Large 2oz. package. 5 cents.

The Hongkong harbor has a water area of ten miles, and is regarded as one of the finest in the world.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

There were shipped 34,611 tons of chalk from Dunkirk, France, to the United States in 1905.

FITS St. Vitus' Dance and Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ld., 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa

ROSEBUD GOVERNMENT LANDS

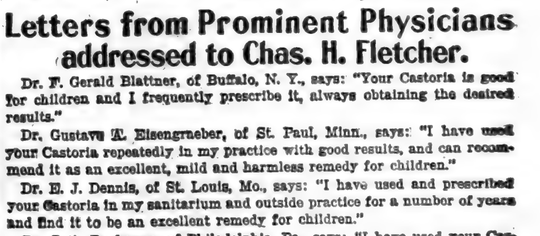
BEST REACHED FROM DALLAS

Dallas and Gregory, S. D., are reached only by the Chicago & North Western Railway.

They are the only towns on the reservation border.

Dallas and Gregory are the main registering points.

President Roosevelt has designated Dallas for the final drawing October 19, 1908.



The Chicago & North Western Ry. is the only all-rail route to the reservation.

A million acres of fertile agricultural and grazing land in the great Missouri Valley Corn Belt is to be opened to Homesteaders October 5 to 17, 1908.

For information about how to get a homestead with details regarding rates, train schedules, address

THE NORTH-WESTERN LINE

W. B. KNISKERN
Pass'r Traffic Mgr., C. & N. W. Ry.
Chicago, Ill.

SHORTEST LINE TO ROSEBUD RESERVATION

The opening of the Rosebud Reservation, October 5 to 17, next, will give over 5000 people each a choice farm in Tripp County, South Dakota, for a small sum per acre. 838,000 acres will be opened. People drawing one of these farms must pay $6.00 an acre one-fifth down, balance in 5 years. Chamberlain and Presho, South Dakota, are places of registration. Both are located on the shortest line to the reservation from Chicago—the

CHICAGO MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL RAILWAY

The best of these lands are located in the Northern part of Tripp County easily reached from both Chamberlain and Presho. All persons, except certain soldiers, must be present in one of these towns for registration. Presence at the drawing is not required. Those who draw one of these farms will be notified by mail. Rosebud folder, containing map, and giving full particulars free on request.

F. A. MILLER,
General Passenger Agent,
Chicago.

How She Kept Young.

Some one once asked a woman how it was she kept her youth so wonderfully. Her hair was snowy white, she was 80 years old and her energy was waning, but she never impressed one with the idea of age, for her heart was still young in sympathy and interest. And this was her answer: "I knew how to forget disagreeable things. I tried to master the art of saying pleasant things. I did not expect too much of my friends. I kept my nerves well in hand, and did not allow them to bore other people. I tried to find any work that came to hand congenial."—Woman.

Uncertain as Yet.

Naggus (literary editor)—Borus, which one of the magazines is going to publish that last short story of yours?

Borus (struggling author)—All I can tell you about it now, Naggus, is that seven of the magazines are not going to publish it.

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N.Y.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Some bats found in India measure six feet across their outspread wings.

F. W. N. U. - - - No. 38—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors.

SEPTEMBER

0334
L 903

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

HARLAN ITEMS.

L. A. Reichelderfer and wife are visiting at Alexandria.

Mrs. E. T. Julian and sons are home from an extended visit in Ohio.

C. A. Blackburn and wife spent Sunday with Dr. Blackburn and family.

A. M. Reichelderfer and wife of Ft. Wayne, spent Sunday with friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Reeder entertained a number of friends at their home, Tuesday evening.

Ora E. Blackburn left Tuesday for Indianapolis, where he will attend school this year.

The Hicksville Fair will be bigger and better than ever, this year. Sept. 22 to 25. Five days.

Moses Horn and famill of Ft. Wayne visited with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shoup the first of last week.

Miss Lola Reichelderfer visited from Friday until Sunday with friends at Cridersville and Lima, Ohio.

Mrs. Ida Harris of Ft. Wayne spent a few days last week with Helen Reichelderfer.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Lauer are the guests of Mrs. Lauer's parents, Mr. E. C. Carrington and wife.

Roy Miller was the victim of a very serious accident, last Wednesday. While opening a bale of straw a wire stuck him in the eye. He is under the care of Dr. Havice of Ft. Wayne.

School opened Monday with fine prospects for a successful year. Two rooms of the new High School building were furnished and the remainder of the building will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. The enrollment is larger than any previous year as there were fifty-one enrolled. Supt. Fred Smith comes from Churubusco, where he has taught the past two years with Prof. Colborn. Miss Joy Shutt as principal needs no introduction as she taught in the school last year. The music and drawing will be cared for by Miss Lola Reichelderfer. The grade teachers are as follows:—Primary, Miss Lyle Swift; Intermediate, Miss Beryl Boston; Grammer; Mr. Calvin Stauffer.

Bible Contest.

The contest held Thursday evening by the members of the Bible Training Class of the Christian church, proved to be very interesting. The class had been chosen into two divisions with Robert Ulm and C. C. Woodcox as leaders.

The questions were put to the class by the teacher, J. A. Brown. The members answered orally. In all eighty-nine questions were asked and out of this number only 13 were missed by all the students. This oral examination showed that the class is doing efficient work. This week they enter on the second six months of the course. Several new members have enrolled for this work.

Earl Smith and wife of Rittman, Ohio, are visiting friends and relatives.

Ily Beaber went to Blakeslee, Monday to visit in the home of her uncle, John Milliman.

FOR SALE: A good dwelling house, almost new, a bargain for somebody. see S. S. WIDNEY.

Cadmir Woodcox and wife went to Beulah, Mich., last week to visit their uncle, Jacob White.

Rolland Bearss while delivering a load of hogs to market, Saturday, had two of them die on the way. The excessive heat smothered them. Their value was estimated at about $13.

Miss Lora Hull, teacher of Piano and Organ, held her music recital at her home on last Wednesday. Those present were the students accompanied by their parents and one invited guest. Miss Anna Wilmot being the first to receive a diploma after having completed a full course consisting of seven grades. After the program pop-corn, ice cream and fig newtons were served.

If you are going to have a Public Sale and want a first class lunch stand see, C. F. Kagey and Grover Curis.

Two Improved ..Stoves...

The Laurel Baseburner

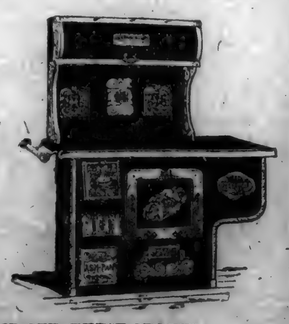
The New Art Laurel, is without question the most striking specimen of beautiful design and perfect workmanship evet produced.

Combined with the beautiful design, you will find exclusive "Laurel" improvements that excel all others in relation to fuel economy, increased heating capacity, simplicity of operation and control, and everlasting durability.

The Laurel Steel Range.

This is the great fuel-saver. It's two-flue construction makes it superior to all other ranges.

It has increased cooking facilities. Is fitted with a quick and even baking oven.



Be Convinced

COME IN AND SEE THESE STOVES AT

H V Kinsey & Son's

COBURN'S CORNERS

Postal cards at Spurgeon's Studio, 75 cents per dozen.

L. W. Johnston of Ft. Wayne, visited with Reed F. Place and family, Friday.

Alva Perry and family of St. Joe took dinner with Rev. Brown and family, Sunday.

Leslie Gee of Kendallville, Ind. spent Sunday and Monday with relatives and friends in this vicinity

See the Newest Novelties in Ladies Belts, Belting and Belt Buckles, Just in Big Four Store.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gee went to Peru, Saturday to spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs Nina Hadsell.

The schools opened here Monday Rob Ulm is teacher at the north school and George Beams at the south.

Mrs. Earl Smith of Rittman, Ohio arrived Saturday for an extended visit with relatives and friends in this vicinity.

Laura Coburn, who has been visiting with Dr. Gary Emanuel and family of Edgerton, O., returned home Tuesday of last week.

Carl Shull of Walkerville, Mich., arrived here, Thursday. He took up his duties as a teacher in the Newville schools, Monday morning.

John Whitehurst, Fred Thomas and their families of Newville and Mr. and Mrs. Rob Ulm of St. Joe took dinner Sunday at the home of C. A. Tustison.

Clyde Hart was able to be present at Sunday School Sunday morning, after a long absence on account of sickness. He will resume his duties as superintendent next Sunday morning.

Mrs. Olen Dermott and Mrs. Miller Dermott took dinner with Reed Place and family, Thursday.

Ross Abel began his school in Jackson Tp., Monday. He teaches the Bare Creek School.

Misses Clara Shull and Laura Coburn room at George Beams's this winter and attend school at Spencerville. Five of our young people attend school there, the two mentioned and Guy Platter, Maude Platter and Alva Place.

WABASH CORNERS.

Sherman Rickett and wife spent Sunday in Ft Wayne.

O. K. Shull began his school at the Savior school house Monday.

Neva Andress was a guest in the family of Wm. Pervines, Thursday afternoon.

Anna Henderson and daughter of Spencerville, were Sunday guests at John Smith's.

Dan Knisely, wife and three children of near Harlan, spent Sunday with Rachel Knisely.

Mrs. Lehman of Defiance, Ohio, spent Friday with her cousin, Mrs. D. D. Burley and family.

Milton Wolff of Edon, Ohio, spent Sunday afternoon and night with his son, Sherman Wolff and wife.

Fred Hood and Lizzie Pervines of Auburn, spent Wednesday evening with Wm. Pravines and family.

Charles White, wife and son, Henry Gall, wife and children of Hamilton were guests of Roy White's Tuesday.

George Pervines, wife and daughters Waneta and Elane, were Sunday guests of Cal Hutton and family near Newville.

Mrs. Anna Rickett scalded her face badly, Tuesday morning. She was taking water off the stove when it spilled.

Wabash Excursion

The Wabash rail road will run an excursion to Detroit, Sunday Sept. 20. The train will leave Spencerville at 7:15, and St. Joe at 7:20, A. M. The fare for the round trip from both places is $1.50.

Cider Mill

Harry Kees will make cider at his mill in St. Joe, two days each week; Thursday and Friday. Bring your apples to St. Joe and have Kees make your cider.

Elmer Hart is clerking in Sechler's restaurant.

Janette Howey, west of Concord purchased a fine Chute & Butler piano of Hadsell and Coburn, last week.

Mrs. Harry Milliman was called Friday noon, to the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Brown of Hicksville, who is dangerously sick with pneumonia.

4 PER CENT

INTEREST

Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.

Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid $50,000

Security to Depositors $100,000

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

RAZORS HONED

For 25 cents

If they do not cut, they cost you nothing.

Our shop is known as the

CANARY BARBER SHOP

You can get your work done and hear the Hartz Mountain Canaries sing at the same time.

George Milliman

SKATING.

RINK WILL BE OPEN ON SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 19, 1908.

A number of friends and relatives from this way attended the funeral of Mrs. Chas. F. Kinsey at Auburn, Friday afternoon.

Best Quality, Axminster, room size rugs, Floral and Oriental patterns, Worth $25.00 for $21.50 Big Four Store.

Mart White and wife of Oreland, Ind., and J. B. White, wife, Ella Gill, Ida Woodcox and son of St. Joe, were the guest of Sherman Wolf and wife, Thursday.

NEWVILLE ITEMS.

Teachers institute was held at this place Friday.

Letha Enzor started to school at Butler last Wednesday.

The womans Aid Society of the U. B. church meet with Julia Wyatt this week.

Mrs. Dean of Auburn came Saturday to visit a few days with relatives at this place.

Mrs. Curtis Crawn and children of Butler spent Saturday at the home of Leslie Strong's.

Lulu Loomis and Anna Collins of Hicksville visited Thursday with friends at this place.

Mrs. Hugh Harter returned one day last week from Eastern Ohio, where she has been visiting.

School at this place began Monday with Grace Magginis, primary teacher and Carl Shull, principal.

Harvey Kimes of Spencerville and Eli Johns of Butler and D. J. Blair's spent Sunday at Hollis Akins.

Two school hacks are being driven to this place this term, one by Adrain Heree the other by Hugh Strong.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sechler and grandaughter, Madonna Kinsey took dinner at the home of Maurice Headley.

King McDonald of Elkhart came home Thursday to spend a few days with his parents Mr. and Mrs. McDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scoville of Butler and Mr. C. J. Hadsell and family of Hicksville spent Sunday at the home of Leslie Strong.

Rev. Hill returned home Sunday evening from conference. He will preach the coming year at Laketon, a Rev. Hibbs takes his place.

Rev. Thomas, minister of the Church of Christ, preached his farewell sermon Sunday morning. He is going to take up evangelistic work.

The following girls from the Christian Sunday school were taken into the church Sunday morning:—Edna Kelley Anna Kosht, Georgia and Virginia Wartenbee, Lucile Schramm, Roxy and Myrtle Jennings, Gladys Abels, Laura Brunson and Lureign Thomas.

A Sure-enough Knocker.

J. C. Goodwin, of Reidsville, N. C says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve is a sure-enough knocker for ulcers. A bad one came on my leg last summer, but that wonderful salve knocked it out in a few rounds. Not even a scar remained." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns etc. 25c. at H. Milliman's drug store.

For Sale.

Two last spring bull calves. Also one two years old. All pedigreed shorthorn stock.

ROLLAND BEARSS.

FAIRVIEW

Mabel Esselburn and children spent Sunday with Mrs. Annie Houser.

Our school began Monday with Mr. Goldsmith, as teacher.

Myrtle Platter spent Sunday at Alda Browns'.

Mrs. Lucy Edwards Jeffries of Mishawauka, Ind., is spending a few days with Mrs. Almira Krise.

Chas. O. Krise's new house is rapidly nearing completion. The plasterers began their work, Monday.

Edward Bassetts' spent Sunday with Gay Hays'.

Mrs. Alex Platter spent Sunday with her brother John, of near Spencerville.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 23.

St. Joe, Indiana.

MRS. WARNER

Has returned from the Eastern Markets with all the new styles of the season. Beginning Monday,

September 14

we will have our

MILLINERY and PATTERN HAT DISPLAY.

We are looking for You.

Harry Milliman
The Druggist

SCHOOL DAYS.

They are now here and with books, pencils, writing paper and pens, the boys and girls are off to school. We desire to call attention to our line of

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for every purpose.

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

SCHOOL BOOKS and BAGs.

School Books Sold for Cash Only.

POST CARDS.

Until further notice I will make post cards for 50c per doz.

Here Every Day. Phone No. 20.

W. C. DeLONG, Photographer.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

SEPTEMBER

U335
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 23 1908. NO. 39

Local Items.

The Hicksville Fair will continue Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Edith James of Harlan is visiting a few days with her sister, Mrs. Morris Curie.

J. C. Hull and family took dinner Sunday at the home of Sim Maurer in Spencerville.

Earl Sherer and Dale Walters of Ft. Wayne were here over Sunday visiting at the homes of their parents.

Beulah and Frank Randall of Waterloo visited Saturday and Sunday with their brother, Will Randall.

Mrs. Peter Bishop came here from Auburn, Saturday and will stay for some time at the home of her son, M. T. Bishop.

Mrs. W. E. Baxter came Thursday noon to visit her mother, Mrs. Kinsey.

Elizabeth Riley of Defiance, Ohio, visited a few days last week, in the F. M. Monroe family.

C. Warner and wife of near Hicksville visited a couple of days last week at the home of Cliff Robbins.

Mrs. Ezra Circle and daughter Ruth of Springfield, Ohio, visited the past week with Mrs. Circle's mother, Mrs. Hannah Ulm.

Mrs. Chas. Bishop of Reading, Mich. came to this place, last week, and is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Baker.

A new cement walk has been placed in front of H. C. Hathaway's bakery and grocery. This greatly improves the bakery front. Warner is doing the work.

CRAIG SHEFFER.

The St. Joe Blacksmith.

'Tis A Merry Klang

The anvil resounds from morning 'til night. We are busy all the time and want to keep busy. That is why we are careful of every bit of work we do, and are willing to guarantee every job of blacksmithing put out.

Remember I have purchased the Sailer blacksmith shop. The shop will be open every week day from morning until night. You will find us always ready to shoe your horses, mend broken iron work, set tires, or make any new piece in iron.

Let Me Prove It, To You.

The Banker's Attitude

The men who organize banks do not have selfish motives. Besides being a business proposition whereby a rate of interest is earned on the capital of the bank—a rate consistent with safety—the bank is a public institution. The banker's aim is to help customers financially Give each better facilities with which he may carry on business; furnish a system that insures more safety for business transactions; and render assistance to men, in giving them credit for doing business. The experience and position of the banker enables him to judge a man's problems accurately, and seeks the opportunity to help those who come to him for advice. The banker can diagnose a financial case and administer relief as well as the doctor in his field of work. He is in touch with business conditions; he knows the causes and reliefs for business ailments; he can tell you how to regulate your business pulse and bring it up to normal.

The bankers remedies and methods are not experiments; they have been administered to others and proven beneficial. Bring your business case to this bank for relief.

St. Joe Valley Bank.

KAGEY'S RESTAURANT

A Clean Place

You would rather eat in a clean place. The food tastes better and you receive more satisfaction when eating it. You need not be ashamed to bring your friends here for lunch as we do everything possible to give the best service.

ANY KIND OF SHORT ORDERS.

We are making specials in the way of

Hamburg, Frankfurts, Sausage, Steaks

We also serve in nice style

Cold Veal and Ham, Coffee and Lunch

Call at our place when you want to eat,

Bring us Your Butter and Eggs.

EDITOR WEDDED.

Fred B Leighty and Lora E. Hull Married at Home of Bride's Parents, Monday Evening.

A Narration of the Event as Told by The News Pencil Pusher.

During the past week invitations were given on the quiet to some of our young people to attend a "swap" party at the home of J. C. Hull, Monday evening. Now a swap party ordinarily is an enjoyable affair but when they reach such extensive proportions as the one Monday evening, they are interesting indeed. The guests were permitted to do their trading in the usual way, but the big event occurred when J. C. Hull gave his daughter away that he might receive a son-in-law and the daughter exchanged her name for that of another. It had been planned to keep the wedding a surprise to the guests with the exception of the immediate family friends. Monday, the news began to filter about town and by evening many had solved the mystery.

After a short social time which everyone enjoyed heartily, the bridal party appeared, as the wedding march was played by Miss Flossie Copp. Frank Leighty and Merritt Hull were the attendants with the groom and the bride was accompanied by Grace Leighty and also by Miss Rose Gibson of Ft. Wayne as maids. The ceremony that united the licensed parties was performed by Rev. McCain of the Methodist Church. While in the midst of congratulations and best wishes the guests were summoned to the dining room where a bounteous three course supper was served. The entire evening was a most enjoyable one and all the guests made merry together. Mr. and Mrs. Leighty are well and favorably known. The bride is an accomplished musician and has been a teacher of music in this locality for the past four or five years. Mr. Leighty has been connected with the News for nearly seven years, serving his apprenticeship with L. W. Yeiser from whom he purchased the plant. The writer of this article managed to become his business partner a few weeks previous to his taking a life partner. It is easy to tell which has brought him the most joy. May this joy continue and develop into a full life of success and happiness.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That I, JACOB D. LEIGHTY administrator of the estate of WILLIAM KNIGHT deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, to the highest binder, on Thursday the first day of October 1908, at the farm near Fairview Church the following personal property, belonging to the estate of said decedent, to-wit: All the horses, cattle, hogs, corn in shock, farm implements, etc.

TERMS OF SALE:

For all amounts not exceeding five dollars, cash in hand. For amounts of five dollars and upwards, a credit of twelve months will be given. Note, bearing six per cent interest after maturity, with approved security, and waiving Valuation and Appraisement Laws, will be required.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
Administrator.

School Items

Going to the Hicksville Fair? Sure!

Gladys Barney started to school Monday.

Mark Williams took up the work with the "Juniors" Monday morning.

Miss Elizabeth Riley of Defiance, visited the Grammer room last Thursday afternoon.

Mary Scholes, who is attending High School at Harlan, visited the St. Joe High School last Friday afternoon.

School will be closed for the Hicksville fair Thursday, the same will be made up the following Saturday.

The "Freshmen" called a meeting, selected their colors, Red and Green, and ordered their pennant Monday.

With an enrolment of thirty-four in the Intermediate room there has not yet been a case of tardiness. This is surly a manifestation of an unusual interest among the children of that age. Parents should see to it that they are in no manner responsible for a change in the attitude of the pupils.

Services Continue.

Gospel services have been in progress at the Christian church for over a week. The interest has been all that could be desired. The pastor, J. A. Brown is doing the preaching and has been ably assisted by Fred Thomas who takes charge of the song services. The success of the meeting in accessions to the church has been encouraging and Saturday evening six were buried with their Lord in baptism. The meetings will continue at least over next Lord's Day. All are invited to come and enjoy these services.

Anniversary Concert

To be Given by Coburn's Corners Band-Assisted by Visiting Talent-Band One Year Old.

Early in October the Coburn's Corners Band will give their first anniversary concert. It will take place on the street of St. Joe and will be free to everybody. They are preparing now to make this concert an extra good one. The Grabill Band will assist them. This band is well organized and plays some fine music. The bands will play together and also render pieces separately. Other visiting talent will be with the boys to make the band stronger and give the people the best concert of the season.

The Coburn's Cornets Band will soon have been organized one year. When the organization was formed they possessed a membership of ten, now the band contains eighteen players, many of whom have become very proficient in the use of their instruments.

During the year they have purchased new suits and some new instruments and the best part of it all is that everything is paid for. The band has played at, all but three or four Sunday School picnics held in the country this summer and wherever they went they have made good, giving the people all the music that was wanted.

Early in the spring Foraker Ferrill was engaged as leader. Mr. Ferrill has had a wide range of experience in band and orchestra work, and has never failed to make good wherever he has been. He traveled one year as leading cornetist for the Buffalo Bill Band and his services were eagerly sought for this year, but he thought best not to go with the "wild west" again. As leader of the Coburn's Corner Band he has shown marvelous ability. Many of the members were at first raw recruits and out of them he is making good players. He deserves all the commendation he gets.

Announcements will be made next week concerning this anniversary concert, as to time, program, etc. This will be the great tree musical treat of the season and none should miss hearing it. In fact the whole country ought to turn out in mass that evening and come to St. Joe to hear these two bands play. Good time to have a real harvest festival when everybody crowds the streets of St. Joe and enjoys a good time. Remember the concert lasts all evening and it is expected that you come and take the town by storm. Look for the coming announcements, talk to your friends about this also, mention it to your enemies so that they will not feel slighted, but the important thing is that you come to St. Joe on the evening of the great Anniversary Concert.

CITIZENS MEET

The Good Citizen's League of DeKalb county supported by many republicans, prohibitions and some democrats have petitioned our representative to vote for a county local option bill in the present special session of the legislature. Meetings were held throughout the county the fore part of last week and Wednesday forenoon a number of St. Joe citizens met at the Christian church. Mr. Stevens of Garrett was present and outlined the purposes to be pursued by the Good Citizen's League. It was decided by those present to circulate petitions and many volunteered to do so. The petitions were carried Wednesday afternoon and over two hundred names were secured. Many volunteered to write personal letters to our representative with a view to influencing him to vote for the county local option.

It is thought by the conservative people that representative Knisely will stand with his party on the local option question and favor township and ward. The "drys" of DeKalb think however that he does not like to be classed as a "wet" and are giving him an opportunity to show his hand. Just what Mr. Knisely will do during the coming session is not a foregone conclusion. It is safe to venture however, that he will be loyal to his political friends.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL,
City Barber

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

Canning Time

Is still on and we are getting another big shipment of Glass Fruit Cans. You will need some more cans to take care of the fall fruit and vegetables that are ripening. Plenty of Sealing Wax also to use with these cans.

A List of Soaps

FOR LAUNDRY WORK

Easy Task, Star, Lenox, Procter and Gamble. Ivory, Fels Naptha, Wabash Naptha, Wool Soap, Old Mill, 8 bars for 25c.

Washing Powders

Ivorine, Rub-No-More, Pearline
Bar Boy's Friend and Sapolio.

All the good Toilet Soaps. Buy your soap Here.

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Republican Caucus.

The republicans of Concord township met in Widney Opera House Saturday afternoon to nominate candidates for the township ticket. John Provines acted as chairman and called the meeting to order. The call for nominations for trustee were made. The name of Mac Leighty was the only one presented and he was made the candidate by acclamation. For assessor the name of Daniel Baker was the only one presented and he was also made the party candidate by approval of all present. Mr. Baker has already held the office of township assessor for four years. The matter of having senator Hemenway come to St. Joe and give a speech, was discussed and it was decided not to have him come.

The caucus was "short and sweet" and if the republicans elect their men as easy as they nominate them the candidates will not have to do much hustling. Clyde Hart was there with a big roll of papers, which during the process of the meeting developed into numerous smaller rolls and every republican took a picture of his favorite state and national candidate to adorn the best room at least until election time.

Band Concert, Next Saturday Night.

The Coburn's Corners Band will give a band concert on the streets of St. Joe Saturday night. Everybody come to town and hear this concert. The merchants and townspeople are furnishing these concerts for your benefit. Come into town, see your friends, do your trading. Just the recreation you need.

Mr. and Mrs. Cadmir Woodcox came to St. Joe, Tuesday from their Michigan trip. They will move from here to Garrett, Thursday.

Chas. Thaver returned Friday from Seattle, Wash., where he has been for nearly one year. His health is much improved and he says he is feeling fine. He expects to remain on the farm in Newville township, with his wife and sister-in-law.

L. L. C. MEETING

The L. L. C. convened at the home of Mrs. Belle Barney, Sept. 16th, 1907. The President called the Club to order and Mrs. Benninghoff led the lesson. The subject was Ruskin's Seven Lamps of Architecture. There are many beautiful gems of thought and sentiment which must be studied to be appreciated. The biography of Ruskin was given by Mrs. Swineford. The Club answered roll-call by giving responses from Ruskin. After the usual routine of business the club adjourned to meet in one week. The hostess treated the ladies to fine grapes.

Republican Conventions.

The republican senatorial and judicial convention for the counties of DeKalb and Steuben, were held at Waterloo on Friday. There were two candidates before the senatorial convention, Attorney Willis Rhoads of Auburn and James Provines of Jackson township. But one vote was required and Mr. Rhoads was declared the nominee.

At the judicial convention there were four candidates for prosecutor: Two from DeKalb, C. S. Smith and Hubert Hartman both of Auburn, and two from Steuben, D. G. Gleason of Fremont and C. E. Beckholt of Angola. Hubert Hartman was selected on the eighth ballot.

Isaac Meese was the Concord township delegate to the senatorial, and Walter Abel to the judicial convention.

Frank Kinsey placed a new tin roof on the Matilda Widney residence, last week.

F. M. Kimes has been added to our list of readers. He is now superintendent of the schools at Kansas, Illinois. Four high school teachers assist him with the work.

John Sechler,

St. Joe, Indiana.

New School Supplies.

This week we are showing a new line of
Tablets, Pencils and Erasers,
Pens and Ink, Colored Crayons,
Examination paper and School bags,

Get your Supplies Here.

Fresh Canned Goods.

Many of them here and more on the way
Cove Oysters, Salmon,
Apples, Peaches,
Corn, Etc.

Come In and See.

SEPTEMBER

0336
L 903

Are You Regular?

If you are not, it is a sign of disease, a sign of some hidden female trouble, that may be undermining and weakening your constitution, and laying up for you much future suffering.

Many thousands of weak, irregular, suffering women have, in the past 50 years, been greatly benefited or cured by the use of that well-known, successful, purely vegetable, female tonic and curative remedy

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

Apple G. Barnes, of Alto, Tex., writes: "I caught cold, which made me irregular and gave me pains in my shoulders and sides. For almost 2 weeks I could not lift a chair. Cardui brought me all right again; I have no more pains and am in very good health."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 24

J. A. PROVINES
TRUSTEE
of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.
C. R. PRICE,
ST. JOE, IND.
Office in Case building.
Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

The public have little appreciation of the value of well conducted local newspapers. Their offices of beneficence to the community are so common that they are unnoted, but none the less no town or city can advance without its newspapers are in the forefront of its advancement. They are the life of the community. They must lead in every effort to invite capital, enlarge industries and enthuse the people in the use of their advantages.

Young man! be at your best. Within you are latent powers which, if developed, would make you master of any situation. Other young men are not so much more gifted than yourself, the only difference is they have "stirred up" the gift within them. Will you? Various avenues are open to assist you in the cultivation of your talents. To those of this vicinity the High School holds forth the golden opportunity, with its thorough system of common school grades as a preparation. Our High School and Grade Schools stand with open doors today. Young man, if you are today idling time away you would grasp a proffered opportunity by gathering up your books and entering school. This is the first step toward enabling you to be at your best.

The reappearance on the fashionable streets of Washington of elegant carriages with liveried coachman and footmen; of automobiles that have been resting during the summer in garages and have now reappeared painted and polished until they look newer than when they were new are indications of the return of that wealthy and fashionable throng that is becoming more and more conspicious in

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4. East bound....4:55 a. m.
No. 16. East bound...12:40 p. m.
No. 17. West bound...11:58 a. m.
No. 3. West bound...8:42 p. m.

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a.m
No. 3. Western Express 7:58 p. m

GOING EAST.

No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:36 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

the spectacular life of the Capitol. The President is expected here in less than two weeks, some of the Cabinet Ministers are all ready at their posts and with the return of Mr. Roosevelt the autumnal season will be literally in the saddle and bridle paths of Rock Creek Park will be gay with men and women on horse back while the drive ways will be perilous with motor cars of every description. Journalistic writers are predicting a lively and vigorous, in short, a Rooseveltian finish for this presidental term and say that he will be insistent for more ships, more guns, more soldiers, more marriages, more births, more faith, hope and charity, in fact more of everyting that is good for man and his wife whether in the shop, the mine or on the farm. It is said that he will in his final annual message to Congress recommend an increase of the Army from its present force of sixty thousand men to at least one hundred thousand. The General Staff is of the opinion that sixty thousand men are too few to properly garrison the posts at which it is necessary to maintain an army force. The present law provides that the army may increase to one hundred thousand in time of war and this number would be a mere handful as compared with the immense force in the field during Civil war, or the immense force of pensioners today, forty three years after the war has ended. The General Staff is of the opinion that larger bodies of men are necessary for the protection of our Insular possessions, and that especially more soldiers are required to garrison the fortifications at Pearl Harbor in the Hawaii Islands. Large sums of money are to be expended in the erection of these fortifications and it is thought that at least two thousand men will have to be maintained there to make the post reasonably safe against a surprise or until we might be able to send additional ships for its protection.

The coming winter in Washington is sure to be one of unusual interest politically. There will be great preparation for the Presidential inauguration. The completion of the new Union Station one of the largest and finest in the world will add greatly to the easy ingress and egress of the many thousands who come to Washington every four years to enjoy the pageantry and the festivity of this quadrennial event. It is lamentable that it must happen on the fourth of March a day proverably insalubrious and beastly. Four years ago the weather killed two Senators and no telling how many less conspicuous people.

Obituary.

Silvia Etta Bassett, daughter of Geo. A. Bassett and Ida B. Bassett, was born at Defiance, Ohio, January 12th, 1883, and departed this life Sept. 15th, 1908, aged 25 yrs. 8 mo. and 3 da. She was converted and joined the Fairview M. P. church in the winter of 1901, under the pastorate of the present pastor. She had been a member of the U. B. church previous to moving to this place. In July 3rd, 1902 she was united in marriage to Miles Olmsted to this union were born two children, Ida Bell and Everett Eugene, who with husband, father mother, two children, and one sister, survive her departure. Sylvia was a good child in her innocent way and is certainly at rest with Christ in God.

The funeral was held at the Fairview church, Thursday at 2 p. m. Rev. J. C. McCain officiating. Interment in the St. Joe cemetery, Elza Kinsey in charge.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of the stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or fiction," says N. H. Brown, Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c

Curie shipped a car load of sheep, Saturday.

Ed Berry sold a wagon load of onions at Hicksville, Friday. His onions are of finest quality this year.

Ephraim Wineland and family of Auburn, visited Saturday with the family of Emanuel Hendricks.

The News office now displays a new sign. It is finished in pure gold and silver leaf on a black background, and is one of the fancy kind. You cannot help but see it when you come to town. C. A. Woodcox did the painting.

School Days.

"School days, school days,
Dear old golden rule days:
Readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic,
Taught to the tune of a hick'ry stick
You were my queen in calico,
I was your bashful barefoot beau,
And you wrote on my slate,
I love you Joe,
When we were a couple of kids."
Selected.

Can anything be more pleasant in the busy hum-drum of after years, than to permit your mind to wander back to the days of school life? There are the sweet memories and incidents that come up; the smiling faces and pleasant countenances; the old school house door, that has so often admitted you, swinging back and forth on its great hinges; the very walls speaking of happy hours while at your side, stands the noble teacher who has watched your every move, and is as much interested in your success as you are yourself. As these pleasant recollections come back, the eye is almost moistened as one realizes those days are gone forever, and so many who took part in those happy hours, as well. As we sit and contemplate we realize that never again in this life will those days return. The participants who so joyously together in the school room and play ground pledged loyalty and faith to the old school, and whose memories are the most pleasant in our life, are scattered far and wide, and some departed forever to their eternal home. When this is realized, sad, indeed, is the heart, and the swiftness with which the years pass by makes one understand that we are journeying toward the setting sun. This realization of swiftly fleeting time ought to make us the more solicitous about the welfare of those who are in school today. We ought also to do all in our power to get those young men and women who are out of school today, to realize the mistake they are making. School days are our best days if improved while they are our own. The time will come when it will be too late to get a thorough education, and then there can be naught but regrets for wasted opportunity.

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Pain Weakens

Headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, or pains of any nature weaken the system—they are a strain upon the nerves. Almost instant relief can be obtained by taking Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills, and without any bad after-effects. Take one on first indication of an attack—it will ward it off. They are a pleasant little tablet, sold by druggists everywhere, 25 doses 25 cents; never sold in bulk.

"I was subject to constant headaches for a period of four years. At times I was almost unfitted for the work in which I am engaged, that of station agent. Through the advice of a friend I tried Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and the result has been that I have entirely eradicated my system of those continuous headaches that follow a continual mental strain. They have done for me all that is claimed for them." O. L. RUSSELL, Agt. C. & N. W. Ry., Battle Creek, Ia.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a year now for neuralgia and find there is nothing like them. They surely have been a blessing to me." MRS. M. J. HAMILTON, Upper Alton, Ills.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and we authorize him to return the price of first package (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

The Modern Demosthenese.

Where the silvery moonbeams caress the sweet magnolia blooms—where the mocking-bird swoons in ecstasy as he trills and thrills his evening lay—where the Southern Cross hangs low in the summer sky and sheds its golden radiance on fair women and brave men—where the cotton opes its snow-white bolls and showers its largess on a peaceful people—where the happy negroes sit beside their cabin doors, singing their quaint songs to the tinkle-tinkle of the banjo—where hospitality is the one endeavor of the generous residents, and where the weary wayfarer is welcomed with outstretched hands to groaning boards—where mint patch flourishes and the liquor glows ruby red—where chivalry still retains its beautious sway—where the days are dreams of delight and the soft and odorous nights make romance live again—where the lovebirds coo and caress in the fragrant branches of the emblossomed trees—where all Nature is brightest, sweetest, loveliest——

That's the Sunny South. And the speaker? Ah, who could the speaker be but that distinguished son of that Sunny South, that silver-tongued orator from Dixie, that Ajax of Atlanta, that Demosthenes of Demiopolis Colonel John Temple Graves? Favorite son of a favored section, none so well as he can phrase the delights of the land of his nativity.

There are other orators in the south. Dixie teems with them. It goes with the blood, the birth. In the North, when a man cannot do any thing else, he thinks he can write. In the south when he can do nothing else, he knows he can talk. Oratory a lost art? If it ever was lost the South found it. But, even so, there are orators and orators, and at the apex, the peak, standing in sublime and solitary splendor on a pedestal of golden, glistening, glistering language, is Colonel John Temple Graves, who distils common speech into the quintessence of poetry, who pronounces a "Good-morning" with such measured cadence that the trite and trival words fall like liquid music on enraptured ears, for whom the garden of rhetoric holds its fairest flowers, whose feet wander on the primrose paths of poesy and whose head is ever far amid the stars—John Temple Graves, the hottest little tamale when it comes to handing out the spoken word we have in our vast and somewhat conversational midst. —Saturday Evening Post.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Commissioner appointed by the DeKalb Circuit Court, in the case of Catherine E. Murphy et al. against Lydia A. Kees, et al., to sell the following described real estate, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, to-wit:-a part of the south west quarterof section fifteen, in township number thirty three, north, range fourteen, east, bounded by a line, commencing at the point where the west boundary line of said section crosses the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and, running thence south on said section line to the north boundary line of Washington Street in the Town of St. Joe; thence east on said boundary line of Washington Street eleven rods; thence north to the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and thence in a westerly direction along the south boundary line of said right of way to the place of begining, will sell said real estate at private sale on and after October 24th., 1908, at the office of J. E. and J. H. Rose in the city of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the following terms, to-wit:-One third cash in hand on the day of sale, one third in nine months and one third in eighteen months from the date of sale, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's promissory notes, with six per cent interest, and with attorneys fees, waiving relief from valuation laws, and secured by a mortgage on said real estate.

Dated, September 7th., 1908.

James E. Rose, Commissioner.

How to get Strong.

P. L. Daily, of 1247 W. Congress St Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

Will DeLong is making improvements on the interior of his residence on Widney avenue.

C. A. Woodcox moved his household goods to Garrett, Saturday, where the family will reside. Woodcox has a position with the B. & O. as painter.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

GENERAL ITEMS

Razors honed at MILLIMAN'S.

FOR SALE:—9 head of Shropshire ews. D. L. Hurley, St. Joe.

The Hicksville Fair is in progress this week, and is bigger and better than ever.

Butler will have a lecture course this year. The first number on the course is the Chicago Ladies Orchestra.

Ralph Thomas has become a frequent visitor in Waterloo. When he was courting his wife his calls were numerous and his present friendship may only be a revival of an old habit. —Waterloo Dawn.

Does the Dawn mean to insinuate that Ralph is after another wife?

The county commissioners at their meeting held late Friday afternoon reappointed Samuel M. Brown as superintendent of the county infirmary and farm, the appointment being for a period of two years. Mr. Brown has been in the position for six years and has proven efficient in the performance of the duties. Mrs. Brown was continued by the commissioners in the position of matron. There has never been a lady at the county infirmary who has proven more popular than Mrs. Brown.—Auburn Courier.

Money to loan on farms a 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

The Public Press of Garrett, after living nine months and two weeks a weekly edition has been sold and will now be continued as a daily an weekly paper.

All factories in South Bend are running up to their usual capacity for this season of the year, and it is not anticipated that there will be any decrease in the force during the rest of the year.

Garrett is soon to have a new industry. It reports are true Milwaukee parties will erect an establishment to manufacture paper from peet moss. The moss is to be found in large quanities near Garrett.

The Board of Commissioners at their regular session decided to here after reject any and all claims for materials or employees, unless a proper requisition therefore shall have first been filed by the proper officials or emplove, and the contract therefore shall have been let by the Board. Any such contract let by any officer or employee of the county will not be recognized by the Board.

The candidate, he kissed the baby, rubbed the heads of Sam and Sue; he swore the twins were beautiful and wished that he had two but that doesn't count. He asked about the corn bread that he vainly tried to chaw, and forthwith begged a receipe: of course, that tickled maw—but that doesn't count. But just before he left he winked and then closed up his jaw, and slipped out behind the barn and took a drink with paw and that's what counts.—Ex.

WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Elza Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

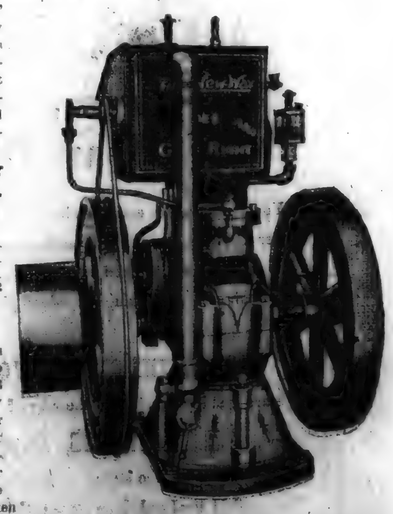
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P "NEW WAY" engine on our floor, if you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

SEPTEMBER

0337
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

J. F. BALTZ

Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you: All work guaranteed

News Items

Jack Beams returned from the sanitarium, last week.

Quite a number from here attended the Ft. Wayne fair, last week.

Miss Pearl Nelson of Ft. Wayne, visited friends here a few days last week.

Wm. P. Steward spent Saturday night and Sunday with Carl Grill of St. Joe.

Con Davis, Charles Chapman and several others spent Sunday at Ft. Wayne.

Charles Chapman of Gary, Ind., has been visiting his brothers, Ebb and George, last week.

Mrs. Lydia Jane Steward has been quite sick the past week, and is but little better at this writing.

Do not fail to see the styles in new fall and winter millinery at Mrs. Hart's, Spencerville.

Misses Ada Bair and Gladys Nelson of Wesley Chapel are rooming with Mrs. Lucy Ann Fairfield and attending high school.

Edward Hull returned home one day last week with blood poison in one of his hands. It is hoped it will not prove serious.

Mrs. Devilbiss and Mrs. Bowser of Ft. Wayne, visited Rev. Sweeneys' and called on Mrs. Rebecca Bowman, Thursday and Friday.

John Provines Jr., who has been traveling for the Robert Johns Novelty Co., in W. W. Fisher's place, came home last Friday and stayed a couple of days.

Mrs. Mable Shoemaker came back from Peru, last Saturday, bringing her children and household goods with her. She expects to reside at Auburn in the near future.

The road supervisor has closed the road from Main St., to the schoolhouse on account of the bridge being out. They are building a new bridge and although it is rather inconvenient now, it will be all the nicer when finished.

George Wilson, who fell and rebroke his limb is able to sit up in a chair.

Dr. S. S. Kimes, who was on the sick list, last week, is better and able to resume his practice.

Mrs. Gessinger of Hicksville, O., visited her sister-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Gessinger Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Wilson, Vera Steward of Butler, and Ethel Metcalf spent Sunday with L. W. Steward and family.

Emma E. Allen and Cora B. Hart were at Ft. Wayne, Thursday, and returned with a full line of millinery novelties for fall trade.

Ida Reed of Meese Chapel, is staying with her aunt, Mrs. Pernetta Steward and attending high school this term.

Frank Steward of Garrett, was called to his mother,s home on account of the sickness of his infant daughter, last Sunday.

Jack Moody, who has been suffering from paralysis, is some better at this writing, he is able to say yes and no. They think he is improving very slowly.

Sunday night after the train coming from the south had whistled the crowd standing on the Wabash platform, looked down the track and were startled at the sight that met their gaze for on the track in front of the train was a flock of sheep they keep ahead of the train quite a ways and the engineer slowed down for the station and the sheep got off the track. It was learned afterwards that the sheep belonged to John Mason and that none of them were killed. There were twenty in number and had the train been coming from the other direction or had it not stopped at the station they would surely have been killed.

A Paying Investment

Mr John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "Have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a 50c. bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at H. Millman's drug store, 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

A Large Trade

Erick & Co. informs us that this summer's business has been extraordinarily good. During the past four months they have sold seven thousand dollars worth of goods. This is indeed a record breaker.

The Ericks carry a large and varied assortment of goods for the benefit of the people of Spencerville and vicinity This past summer they have made a special effort to get hold of the people's trade and have been very successful. On special days their store and side walk has been crowed with purchasers. Erick & Co, are satisfied with the trade they have received and in turn have given their customers entire satisfaction.

SPENCERVILLE R F D No 1.

Mrs. Geo Horn is sick with something like lumbago.

Elias Spitler sold his house hold goods to Henry Grill.

Mrs. Mettie Roades and son called on Mrs. E. H. Horn, Thursday.

Frank Vanzile of Hursh who was very sick last week is improving.

Arthur Walter is teaching the Braybrook school. Fern Walter the Wise school and Hazel Greenwalt the Horn school.

D. K. Horn expects to begin a new addition to their house this week Ed Shutt and his men from Ft. Wayne will do the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goldsmith of Grabill who have been staying with her son Will and wife of Hursh, will return to Grabill the first of this week Mrs. Goldsmith is in very poor health.

E. H. Horn came very near having a serious trouble last Monday. He set fire to a few brush heaps as it was early in the morning and there was no wind but before noon the wind rose and sent the fire whirling through the woods. Had it not been for the assistance of some of his neighbors it would have done much damage.

If it be Will Taft
Or if it be Will Bryan
You will like our drugs
If you will but try 'em.

Bowman's Drug Store

Spencerville R F D No 2

Frank Emrie, wife and son of Huntertown spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Lizzie Wearly and family.

Mrs. Laura Sharp and son, after visiting with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rouds returned to her home at New Paris last Thursday her sister, Inez accompanied her, she expects to remain an indefinite time.

Chas. Stantley and wife, of near Hursh town spent Sunday with W. O. Lake and family.

Vernie Kellie spent Saturday night and Sunday at Hicksville.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Metcalf and Mrs. Shoemakerr spent Sunday with D. M. Kelly and family.

Zinith Wearly spent Sunday with Fenus Horn.

Harvie Kimes and Minnie Thompson took Sunday dinner with J. Baltz of spencerville.

Corma Kelly spent Sunday at Woodburn.

Ort Wearly started to school at Maysville last Monday where he expects to take his fourth year in high school.

Clara Keesler and Fern Wearly took Sunday dinner with Pluma Kimes.

Earl Stiman who has been working for his uncle near Auburn has returned to his home near Spencerville.

M. Oberholzer and family of near Harlan and family of near Harlan spent Sunday with her parents Oscar Spitler and family.

Samuel Wearly spent Sunday afternoon with Golden Beninghoff.

See those new silk and satin hats at Hart's Millinery Store.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

MRS. HART'S Fall and Winter Styles in Millinery

We are going to dispense with our usual fall and winter opening and wish to invite your attention to our full and complete line of millinery goods which we now have on display.

For Your Inspection

We have hats of all kinds and styles; hats for the school girl, dress hats, the new silk and satin hats and other styles and shapes too numerous to mention.

Caps and Hoods

We also have a full line of caps for children and hoods for the little tots.

We shall be pleased to have you call, look at our stock and get our prices before purchasing. You will receive courteous attention whether you are a purchaser or not.

Cora B. Hart, Spencerville, Ind.

Baby Has Measles.

The three weeks old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Steward took sick Wednesday of last week. At first it was difficult to tell what was the trouble with the child, but the doctor pronounced it measles. The parents were unable to understand where the baby was exposed to the disease. It was decided that the little one took the measles from a pillow on which its father had lain when he had the same disease fourteen years ago and the feathers had retained the same until now. The baby is getting along nicely and if proper care is taken no harmful results will come from having the measels so early in its life's career.

Flowery Sentences Retained.

"The mantle of darkness" and "the dome of the sky" are survivals from the days when the sky was believed to be a solid dome resting upon the edge of the earth, over which blankets of different colors hung at dawn and dusk.

3rd. Annual FREE FALL EXHIBIT will be held at AUBURN Oct. 7-8-9

$2,000 in Prizes.

Finest Free Attractions. Did You Get A Premium List?

If not write

C. H. NAPP

Assistant Secretary.
AUBURN, INDIANA

Erick & Co.

Fall Dry Goods

We are pleased to state that our line of dry goods presents as complete and varied assortment as can be found in many towns larger than Spencerville. Our customers reap the benefits of good goods at the lowest possible prices. Shoes for men, women and children. A new line of dry goods, and a special showing of new stiff hats.

Good Groceries

Groceries that are fresh and clean can always be found here. Don't fail to look at our premiums with White Cross Baking Powder. Many have already seen them and are buying this baking powder.

A Special Drive

A special run on poultry, next Thursday forenoon.

Bring in your poultry.

Under All Moods.

We are so apt, when everything seems desolate, to think that there is nothing in the world but our own mood. It comes like sunrise, sometimes, to remember that under all moods is the will of God.—George H. Morrison.

Good Attencance.

The schools at this place have been going a little over one week and indications are favorable for a very successful term of school. The High School numbers thirty. The grades are as follows:—Grammar 26, intermediate 30, primary 40.

S. S. Kimes

—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

We are actually giving away these dishes to our cash customers. There is no lottery about this. You get a dish free at your expense. With ever ten cent purchase you get a ticket which is to be turned in exchange for dishes. With every $1.00 purchase you get a cash ticket which you can use in exchange for a China Closet worth $15. Call at the store at any time and learn the particulars. We are doing all in our power to convince you that it pays to trade at our store.

Staple Articles.

Dry goods, groceries and shoes. Never a week goes by but you need some article of food or clothing. We keep just such articles for your convenience

Spencerville, Indiana.

SEPTEMBER

0338
L 903

We are pleased to announce that our first showing of Ladies, Misses and Childrens wraps are now ready for your inspection. We have in stock more than 100 garments all of which are strictly new and up-to-date. Style and quality considered we can give the very best value obtainable for your money : : : : : :

Ladies Wraps from $5.00 to $20.00
Misses Wraps from $5.00 to $10.00
Childrens Wraps from $3.00 to $6.00

Don't forget to come in and inspect this line.

THE BIG 4 STORE.

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

POST CARDS.

Until further notice I will make post cards for 50c per doz.

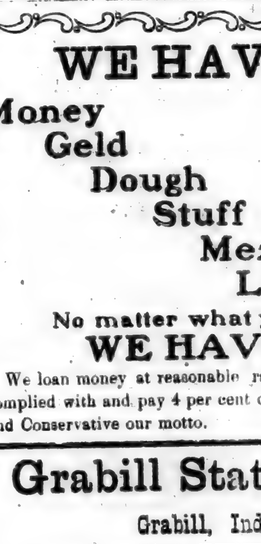
Here Every Day. Phone No. 20.

W. C. DeLONG, Photographer.

Two Improved ..Stoves...



The Laurel Baseburner

The New Art Laurel, is without question the most striking specimen of beautiful design and perfect workmanship ever produced.

Combined with the beautiful design, you will find exclusive "Laurel" improvements that excel all others in relation to fuel economy, increased heating capacity, simplicity of operation and control, and everlasting durability.

The Laurel Steel Range.

This is the great fuel-saver. It's two-flue construction makes it superior to all other ranges.

It has increased cooking facilities. Is fitted with a quick and even baking oven.

Coal Hods, Stove Boards, Sheet Iron Heaters, Stove pipe and Elbows, Stove Blacking.

Be Convinced

COME IN AND SEE THESE STOVES

AT

H V Kinsey & Son's

HARLAN ITEMS.

Edith Hannon has been ill the last few days.

Ella Page leaves Friday for Terre Haute where she will attend school.

E. L. Carrington was a Ft. Wayne visitor last Saturday.

Grace Higgins spent Friday and Saturday in Ft. Wayne.

Roy Miller's condition is some what improved. The Doctor hopes to save the eye....The High School teachers attended a meeting held at Supt. Felger's office last Saturday, for the purpose of effecting an organization of the High School teachers of the county....On account of the Ft. Wayne Fair the schools were dismissed last Friday.....The Senior class organized last Thursday evening David Goldsmith was chosen president. Guy Roller and Mildred Cummins are two new scholars enrolled, this makes a total of fifty six in the High School.

John Hoffman spent Sunday the guest of his mother.....Chas. Kent and wife and Mrs. Burnett of Chicago are visiting Mrs. J. L. Reichelderfer.....Rev. Clossen, the new pastor of the M. P. church, has moved his family to Harlan .....Ray Shawl returned home after a weeks visit with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Zeis....Elmer Zeis and wife are spending a few days at the lake.....Wm. Vallien and wife attended the funeral of Mr. Vallien's sister at Garrett, Friday.

Public Sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale on the Mort Foote farm, 3 mile northeast of Maysville and 1½ mile south of Hall's Corners, on Tuesday Sept. 29, at 10:00 the following: Full blooded Morgan colt 2-yr. old, coach colt 3 yr. old, well broke, brown gelding 5 yr. old, weighing 1,350 lbs., mare coming 3-yr. old, 3 colts coming 2-yr. old, colt 5 mo. old. These colts are coach bred will make horses 1,200 to 1,300 lbs., 4 Poland China brood sows 2-yr. old. 36 head of shoats, weighing from 80 to 125, 2 Chester White brood sows, 1-yr. old, will farrow soon, some fine ones, Durock boar 1-yr. old 40 head of Shropshire breeding ewes, 1 fresh milch cow, Durham yearling steer, 1 cow will be fresh in March, 1 Poled Durham bull, twenty mo. old, Durham heifer coming 2-yr. old, bred to be fresh in March, 3 Durham milch cows giving milk, bred to be fresh in the month of March. Terms made known on day of sale.

MORT FOOTE.
J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

John Betz and wife attended the funeral of his brother-in-law, W. V. Cummings at Harlan, Thursday forenoon.

Ben Leighty, the new marshall, is completing the street crossings that were begun by ex-marshall Blecke. When these crossings are all put in it will add materially to the beauty of our streets.

Cleo Stainbrook of Hicksville, in company with Avis and Leon Sechler attended the Ft. Wayne fair, Thursday.

Miss Pearl Nelson of Ft. Wayne, visited friends here Thursday and Friday. She went from here to Spencerville, Friday afternoon.

Fuchsia Hadsell, M. J. Hadsell and Miss Duck of Peru, were guests at the home of Dr. Sheffer, Tuesday.

Norman Wyatt moved his household goods, Tuesday, from St. Joe where they have been stored for sometime, to Hicksville. He is going to work for Teagarden.

Notwithstanding the political speech of the world-wide-known evangelist, Sam Small in the public square, the coliseum was well filled Saturday night to listen to the excellent program rendered by Chastine Johnston and his students in their annual contest and recital. This musical event is an occasion that is coming to be fixed in the calendar of Auburn's many attractions and is looked forward to by music lovers with happy anticipation. That the recital and contest is an inspiration to Mr. Johnston's pupils is evidenced by the fact that for weeks preceeding the recital the pupils bend every effort to acquire proficiency and do their best on the program. It also has a tendency to raise the musical standard of our people for after having heard Mr. Johnston and his pupils, none but the best will command the attention of the people.—Auburn Courier.

SKATING.

RINK WILL BE OPEN ON SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 26, 1908.

COBURN'S CORNERS

Clyde Hart was able to begin school at Coletown Monday.

Mrs. Reed Place has been on the sick list this week.

Mrs. Howard Northup has been at Ft. Wayne a few days.

Walter Abel attended the republican convention at Waterloo last Friday.

Mrs. Walter Abel and Edith Abel spent Thursday, with the latters parents.

Olen Dermott, wife and babies spent Sunday afternoon with her parents.

Earl Coburn and family took dinner with H. A. Coburn and family, Sunday.

Mrs. Walter Abel visited with her daughter Mrs. Carper and family last Tuesday.

Mary A. Rhodenbaugh of Petersburg Virginia, spent last week with Lany Gee and family.

Cordelia Alton, who has been visiting in Mich. for some time, returned home Wednesday.

Clyde Hart, wife and children and Alice Hart spent Sunday afternoon with W. M. Abel and wife.

The band met at the corners Sunday afternoon and W. C. Delong took their pictures for post cards.

Charley Treece and wife took dinner with the latter's parents, Joseph Volkert and wife, Sunday.

As J. A. Brown is holding a meeting at St. Joe this week, there will be no preaching at the Corners next Lord's day.

Messers. Thayer Northup, Levi Rowe, Victor and Forest Dermott, and Britten Freburn attended the Ft. Wayne Fair last week.

Kel Hart's have at last succeeded in getting a well after four failures, Mr. Donaldson succeeded in finding water at a depth of eighty feet.

For Sale.

Two last spring bull calves. Also one two years old. All pedigreed shorthorn stock.

ROLLAND BEARSS.

WABASH CORNERS.

John Smith and wife attended the Ft. Wayne Fair Friday.

Mr. A. L. Lake of Butler, spent Sunday with J. R. Shilling and family.

Harry Clouse of near Auburn, spent Saturday and Sunday with Ray Herrick.

Miss Lela Shilling spent part of last week at Auburn, Waterloo, and Crooked Lake.

George Simington, wife and sons of St. Joe, were Sunday guests at Ale Simington.

Milas Olmstead, of Edon was the guest of his cousin, Sherman Wolff and wife, Thursday.

Clarence Engle and wife of near Newville were the guests of George Pervines and family, Sunday evening.

John Knisley of near Farmer Center and Dan Knisley and son, Vonnie of near Harlan, were the guests of Mrs. Rachel Knisely, Wednesday.

Dan Shull, wife and children of east of Hicksville, Will Lucas and wife and Theodore Kline, wife and grandson were Sunday guests of O. K. Shull's.

The J. B. White family reunion was held at his home in St. Joe, Wednesday September, 9th. It also was Mrs. White's seventy-first birthday. Those present from a distance, were Mart white and wife of Orland, Charles White wife and son, and Henry Gall, wife and children of Hamilton, and Dennis White and wife of Auburn.

4 PER CENT

INTEREST

Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.

SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.

Capital Paid $50,000

Security to Depositors $100,000

PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

Harry Milliman
The Druggist

DRUGS THAT ARE ALWAYS PURE.
FANCY PERFUMES
BRUSHES and COMBS
TOILET ARTICLES

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for ever purpose.

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

New line of Fishing Tackle. The Famous SNECK HOOK, SPOON HOOKS and TANDEM SPINNERS.

Expert Wooden Minnows.

Bert Bowman of Chicago, spent Sunday with his family at this place.

All Civil war veterans and their wives will be admitted free to the Hicksville Fair, Saturday.

The Lutheran Sunday School will hold a Rally Day, Sunday, October 4th. Extensive preparations are being made to have a very interesting program. All are invited to be present.

Mrs. W. C. Patterson and Mrs. S. W. Pustison and daughter Margaret, are in Detroit, this week, attending the convention of the W. H. and F. M. Society of the Northern Indiana Synod of the Lutheran church. They will also visit relatives there before returning.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 82.

St. Joe, - Indiana.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, American field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

SEPTEMBER

U339
L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30 1908. NO. 40

Local Items.

Big Doin's, Saturday night.

Dr. J. W. Lilly after thirty-five years in the active work of the ministry has decided to retire from the work and will locate in Hicksville. Twenty one years of his active life were spent as Presiding Elder in the United Brethern church.

Mr. F. J. White, of St. Joe, candidate for Recorder on the republican county ticket, was a caller at this office last Thursday evening. He is a gentleman of agreeable address and makes friends wherever he goes. The voters of the county have a right to congratulate themselves in the fact that candidates like Mr. White are worthy of their earnest support.—Waterloo Press.

Maud Bishop returned to her home in Reading, Mich., Thursday, after visiting a number of days at this place.

O. H. Widney is building a cement walk in front of the Opera block Harry Kees, Frank Walter, Clarence Woodcox, George Swineford, Morris Curle, and Samantha Kees are all putting in new walks.

The gospel meeting which has been in progress for over two weeks at the Christian church will close sometime this week, services having been announced for this evening. The meeting has been very successful and twenty-one had united with the church up until last evening. The pastor, will fill his morning and evening appointments at Coburn's Corners next Sunday.

CRAIG SHEFFER.

The St. Joe Blacksmith.

'Tis A Merry Klang

The anvil resounds from morning 'til night. We are busy all the time and want to keep busy. That is why we are careful of every bit of work we do, and are willing to guarantee every job of blacksmithing put out.

Remember I have purchased the Sailer blacksmith shop. The shop will be open every week day from morning until night. You will find us always ready to shoe your horses, mend broken iron work, set tires, or make any new piece in iron.

Let Me Prove It, To You.

The Banker's Attitude

The men who organize banks do not have selfish motives. Besides being a business proposition whereby a rate of interest is earned on the capital of the bank—a rate consistent with safety—the bank is a public institution. The banker's aim is to help customers financially Give each better facilities with which he may carry on business; furnish a system that insures more safety for business transactions; and render assistance to men, in giving them credit for doing business. The experience and position of the banker enables him to judge a man's problems accurately, and seeks the opportunity to help those who come to him for advice. The banker can diagnose a financial case and administer relief as well as the doctor in his field of work. He is in touch with business conditions; he knows the causes and reliefs for business ailments; he can tell you how to regulate your business pulse and bring it up to normal.

The bankers remedies and methods are not experiments; they have been administered to others and proven beneficial. Bring your business case to this bank for relief.

St. Joe Valley Bank.

KAGEY'S RESTAURANT

Fine Presents

WHILE THEY LAST WITH EVERY ONE POUND CAN OF

WHITE CROSS Baking Powder

No Better Made.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR YOUR PRODUCE

All The Time

Bring us Your Butter and Eggs.

Sechler Reunion

The reunion of the Sechler family was held Saturday at the beautiful home of Byron Widney, two miles north of St. Joe. The day was pleasant throughout and permitted the guests to enjoy themselves thoroughly. Forty-seven members of the family were present. A few visitors also enjoyed the day—Rev. and Mrs. McCain, Mrs. Mullen, Mrs. Laub, S. L. Widney and B. L. Carpenter and family. The forenoon was spent by all in having a general good time. Horseshoe and baseball were played and other amusements were participated in by all. This phase of the merrymaking closed at the noon hour when all partook of the good things that had been prepared to eat.

A literary program was given in the afternoon consisting of songs, instrumental music and recitations. Rev. McCain gave a short address and a memorial was read by Mrs. Millie Benninghoff. After the program officers were elected as follows: President Henry Sechler, Butler; Vice Pres., Frank Sechler; Secretary, Ross Abel; Treasurer, Edith Abel; Program Committee, Frank Curle, Frank Kinsey and Millie Benninghoff. Late in the afternoon ice cream and cake were served, after which the reunion guests took their departure.

In Memoriam.

"Silently, swiftly into the past
The waves of time's ocean roll
Leaving impressions that must last
On the passing immortal soul."

One other year has passed and we are again assembled in kindred ties, with love and good will. May these ties grow stronger with years. We bury the past year with all it holds dear in the deep sepulcher of ages, it will sleep there in its slumbers forever but its history we write upon the tablet of memory which treasures great heart sorrows, for we have been made to drink deeply from this fountain.

As our minds revert to our last reunion, we recall the happy spirits of those present. Since then two have passed into the valley that lies beyond the shadow of death; and today we feel 'tis sweet that we may commune with invisible forms, but sad on account of their absence. They never quite leave us, our friends who have passed through the shadows of death to the sunlight above. A thousand sweet memories are holding them fast to the places they blessed with their presence and love.

In the life transition of Catharine Sechler one has been removed, who sacrificed and braved many hardships on life's rugged pathway to gladden the hearts of others; one who loved to be present on these occasions, and brought joy to all. Her place can never be filled. There remains with us a life frought with kindly deeds, loving thoughts and unselfish aspirations. May her virtues rest as a mantle upon us.

Yes, we feel her risen spirit
That has passed our visions scope
Somewhere joined a blissful circle
In the border-land of hope.

"O Death where is thy victory, O Grave where is thy sting." Some time in the morning, noonday or evening time of life, death waits on us all. Longfellow has sadly painted this scene in the words;

"There is a reaper whose name is death
And with his sycle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath
And the flowers that grow between".

Another link has been severed from our band in the death of Mary Baltz Maurer. Her loving and cheerful disposition, sunny and unselfish nature, wealth of love and fine affection, made many warm friends, and years shall roll into the gulf of time before sweet recollections of her shall fade from our memories.

"We cannot say—we will not say
That she is dead she is just away
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land"

While our hearts are saddened by the earthly separation of loved ones how sweet is the thought of immortality. God has designed this universe and we shall meet our friends again. Their hands which we were wont to clasp, their contenenances into which we loved to look were tempered, and we see them no more. Their shadows may be recorded in photography and in memory's unseen page, but they are gone; but their souls whose tenderness and sweetness we could see in their contenances, and spoke in their life are eternal. Death parts us from our loved ones, and may we so live that we may join the reunion which will be eternal.

"One of there days the loved faces
Vanished here from the kindred bond
Haunting yet their familiar places
Waving us yet to the better land
Smiling yet in the light of heaven
Once again shall be our own
To stand with our loved ones before that throne."

School Attendance.

No one thing is so much a factor in the success of a term of school as good attendance. It was stated in the school notes of last week that one room had not as yet had a case of tardiness or absence. Barring sickness each of the other rooms should have had as good a record. The fact th t they did not is a good reason for saying that someone ought to be more careful about attending school.

Perhaps the parents do not stop to think what the real results are when their children absent themselves from school. They should be careful about giving their children permission to stay out of school. The poorest policy and the worst economy is to keep them out of school. Every day out is a day lost to the school work—they cannot make it up. They will soon be behind their classmates and will want to stop school—find fault with the teacher—say she is partial, etc., when perhaps the fault lies with the parent.

To make our schools eminently successful there should be the co-operation of teachers, scholars and parents. The teachers and students are doing there best to make the term pass successfully, and the parents should now do their duty in seeing that their children are regularly in school.

School Items

Fred Malone was a visitor in the High Room Monday afternoon.

Ralph Sechler missed school Saturday afternoon to attend the Sechler reunion.

Edna walter was absent from school a few days last week on account of sickness.

Lena Coburn was compelled to miss school a few days last week on account of weak eyes.

Ethel Berry and Dale Widney are reviewing some eighth grade work and high school studies.

As school was dismissed for the Hicksville Fair on Thursday, the work was made up on Saturday.

The "Juniors" have been having quite a struggle with quadratics in their Algebra the past two weeks.

Meals Served.

The ladies of the M. P. church will serve dinner and supper, November 3rd.

They will also hold a market of baked goods, Saturday, October 3rd.

Severly Injured.

Mr. Hollis Aikens was seriously injured Thursday, while returning farm Butler to his home in Newville township. He was accompanied by two men and was driving a wagon loaded with well tools. Near the Sam Wyatt farm he attempted to drive through the creek. He had done this many times before but this time the wheels on one side of the wagon dropped into a deep hole throwing the three men into the water. The box floated off the wagon but caught on one of the rear standards. Mr. Aikens held to the lines and was dragged to the opposite bank. When he struck the bank in some way the wagon box was thrown upon him. It was apparent at once that he was severly injured and he was immediately taken to the home of his daughter Mrs. Blair, at Newville. Upon examination it was found that the spinal cord had been injured. Sunday he was unable to turn his head but a little to the left and the lower half of his body is entirely paralyzed.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL, City Barber

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Inner Man.

needs good wholesome food usually three times each day. Something to please his taste and nourish his body. We wish to call your attention to the extensive grocery line which we carry. It is our aim to have everything one could want and always of the best quality. Our Baked Goods are fresh and always baked to a standard grade and quality.

Vegetables.

You should know that we keep all kinds of vegetables in season, and we urge you to come here when you want anything in the vegetable line.

Fresh Cranberries

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

Becomes a Law

County Local Option Bill Passes Lower House. Six Democrats Favor It.

The county local option bill which has been the main question for the consideration of the special legislature, passed the house of representatives just before noon Saturday by a vote of 45 to 55. Six democrats voted to support the measure and four republicans opposed it.

As the roll was called many representatives made short speeches setting forth why they supported or opposed the bill, but Luther W. Knisely created the sensation of the session when he declared on the floor of the house that he had been offered a job by "the great man of the state" if he would vote for the local option bill. Later he signed an affidavit in which he related the manner of the alleged offer. This affidavit is now in the hands of the chairman of the state democratic committee and is to be used in the present state campaign. Knisely's explanations include Senator Wickwire of DeKalb and Steuben as the agent of the governor in the attempted bribe.

As soon as the vote was taken and had been formally announced by Speaker Branch, the bill was sent to Governor Hanly for his signature. He signed the same with three pens one of which he presented to his wife and the other two to friends.

The passage of the county local option bill now takes the liquor question out of politics in the state of Indiana, during the remainder of the campaign. Just what the result will be with reference to the coming election is difficult at present to determine, but it is evident that the plans for finishing the campaign will need to be altered.

Anniversary Concert

Saturday night marks the first anniversary of the organization of the Coburntown Farmers Band and their first anniversary concert which will be the last of the season, will be held on the streets of St. Joe that evening. An effort is being made to give you some good music on this event.

The boys were expecting assistance from the Grabill Band but have been very much disappointed in hearing that they will find it impossible to come as they had intended. Regardless of this disappointment which no one else can feel more than the band boys, they shall try and make up for the deficiency by playing an extra good program in which they have placed music they have never played before in concert.

All they desire is that you will overlook the promise they made you and were unable to fulfill. Just come out anyway and listen to their program which is printed below. March, Cradle of Liberty, Al Hayes; Andante and Waltz, Shades of Evening, Heindon; Overture, Empire, Southwell; March, American Soldier, Myers; Serenade, To Alice, Bond; Mazurka, Palmetto, Moquin; March, Under Northern Skies, Moquin; Waltz, Caronota, Edw. Hozel; Characteristic March, In Ole Kentuck, Hazel; America. Program subject to change.

Has Mrs. Warner any Brown Hats? Yes. A fine display in Browns, Blue, Green and all the new shades and styles.

John Sechler,

St. Joe, Indiana.

New School Supplies.

This week we are showing a new line of
Tablets, Pencils and Erasers,
Pens and Ink, Colored Crayons,
Examination paper and School bags.

Get your Supplies Here.

Fresh Canned Goods.

Many of them here and more on the way
Cove Oysters, Salmon,
Apples, Peaches,
Corn, Etc.

Come In and See.

SEPTEMBER

0340
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 SEPTEMBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	•	•	•
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 3rd. F. M. 10th. L. Q. 17th. N. M. 25th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Fifty Hurt in Trolley Collision.

Fog was responsible for a head-on collision between two cars on the Southwestern Traction Company's line between Philadelphia and Chester, Pa., in which about fifty persons were injured, several probably fatally. The car leaving Philadelphia, with workmen employed by the Baldwin Locomotive Company at its out of town plant, and known as the "Baldwin tripper," was speeding along the single track with seventy-two men on board when suddenly a car coming from Chester loomed up in the fog. Before brakes could be applied there was an awful crash. Men were hurled in every direction and both cars were wrecked.

Shocked by Supposed Corpse.

Physicians of Waterbury, Conn., are puzzled over a remarkable case of suspended animation. Mrs. B. F. Carpenter, of Bethlehem, pronounced dead by attending physician, and with the undertaker already in the house, sat up in bed with the indignant announcement: "I'm not dead yet." Mrs. Carpenter, who is 80 years old, had been suffering for some time with ailments incident to old age. While her physician, Dr. H. S. Allen, was at her bedside she underwent sudden collapse. There was no heartbeat, sign of pulse of respiration. Dr. Allen notified the family and summoned the undertaker. It was while he stood condoling with her relatives that Mrs. Carpenter sat up and made the startling announcement.

Aged Lady Took Acid by Mistake.

Mrs. C. W. Edwards, one of the most highly esteemed pioneer women of Whitley county and who resides in South Whitley with her son, John Edwards, by mistake took a dose of carbolic acid and has suffered severely from the poison. On account of her advanced age her eyesight is poor and she mistook the carbolic acid bottle for a bottle of medicine. It is probable that she will soon recover from the effects of the acid.

Freight Train Dropped Into River.

The eastern span of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad bridge over the Susquehanna river at Perryville, Md., collapsed while a freight train, running from Baltimore to Wilmington, was passing over it and the locomotive and fifteen cars dashed to the river below. The engineer, Patrick Linn, and his fireman, both residents of Baltimore, were drowned. So far as can be learned at this time no other trainmen were injured.

Young Woman a Suicide.

The dead body of a young woman was found in Bedford, Ind., near the railroad tracks and about 300 yards from the Monon station. The face was badly disfigured, as though having been crushed by a blow with some blunt instrument. The clothing was inexpensive. The body was later recognized as Stella Miller, a domestic living near Arcola, Ill. The finding of carbolic burns indiactes suicide.

John M. Dowie Dead.

John Murray Dowie, aged 83 years, father of John Alexander Dowie, the founder of Zion City, and who was repudiated by his son, died at the home of his son's widow, Mrs. Jane Dowie, on White Lake, Muskegon County, Michigan. He went to live with Mrs. Dowie when his son denied him and had been in declining health since.

World to End Soon, Says Preacher.

The Rev. John J. Morton, an evangelist, in a recent address at Evansville, Ind., predicted that the world come to an end on or before October 25. The present drought that prevails throughout the Ohio Valley is a forewarning of the destruction of the earth by fire, the preacher declared.

Bishop of Montreal Dead.

Bishop Carmichael, of the Church of England, diocese of Montreal, is dead at his home in Montreal, Quebec.

Fight Duel Over Dog.

John Davis, aged 20, and Ben Rubens, an ex-soldier over 60 years old, of Madison, Ind., had a rifle duel on account of a dog. Rubens was shot in the thigh. Davis was placed in jail.

Divides $1,775,000 Among Children.

The will of the late John V. Farwell, merchant and philanthropist, of Chicago, has been filed for probate, disposing of an estate of $1,775,000 equally among his children.

WRIGHT FLYER FALLS; KILLS ARMY OFFICER

Aeroplane at Fort Myer Drops, Causing Death of Lieut. T. E. Selfridge.

INVENTOR'S LEG IS BROKEN.

Aviator's Condition Points to Recovery—Propeller Blade Breaks on Two-Man Flight.

After having drawn the attention of the world to his aeroplane ascensions at Fort Myer, near Washington, and establishing new world's records for heavier-than-air flying machines, Orville Wright the other afternoon met with a tragic mishap while making a two-man flight. The aeroplanist was accompanied by Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the signal corps of the army. In a fall of seventy-five feet Lieut. Selfridge was fatally injured and died soon afterward. Mr. Wright was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

While the machine was encircling the drill grounds a propeller blade snapped off and, hitting some other part of the intricate mechanism, caused the airship to overturn and fall to the ground, enveloping the two occupants in the debris.

Soldiers and spectators ran across the field and assisted in lifting Mr. Wright and Lieut. Selfridge from under the tangle dmass of machinery, rods, wires and shreds of muslin. Mr. Wright was conscious. Lieut. Selfridge was unconscious. His head was covered with blood and he was choking when the soldiers extricated him.

When their wounds had been bandaged Mr. Wright and Lieut. Selfridge were taken to the Fort Myer hospital. It was feared that Mr. Wright was suffering from internal injuries. He had lapsed into a state of semi-consciousness by the time he reached the hospital. Lieut. Selfridge did not regain consciousness. He was suffering from a fracture at the base of the skull. After an examination it was announced that Mr. Wright was not seriously hurt. He is suffering from a fracture of his left thigh and several ribs on the right side are broken. Both men received deep cuts about the head.

Mr. Wright announced several days ago that he would take Lieut. Selfridge, who was secretary of the Aerial Experiment Association and an aeroplanist himself, in his next flight. At 5:14 in the afternoon the aeroplane was released, and it was noticed that it did not rise as quickly as on previous two-men flights. Lieut. Selfridge weighed about 175 pounds, making the weight greater than the machine had ever carried before.

After gliding over the ground on its runners for thirty feet the machine rose gradually, and had gained a height of forty feet when it passed over the starting apparatus for the first time. There was a six-mile wind, and the machine did not run as smoothly as on its former flights, most of which were made in calm weather. The aeroplanist, however, apparently had control of the flyer, which rose to a height of seventy-five feet as it completed the second round. This height was maintained on the third round. While the machine was turning at the southern end of the field several thousand feet from the spectators, something fell.

Immediately all eyes were on the aeroplane and it was seen to turn over on its left side, and, pausing a moment, made a complete turn and then came swooping to the earth in a cloud of dust.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

A new industry in the western portion of the upper Michigan peninsula is a creamery which is being established at Ewen. The plant, which is now being erected, will handle 10,000 pounds of milk a day, making 400 pounds of butter.

The executive committee of the National Wool Growers' Association is selecting locations for the central warehouses to be established by the association. St. Paul, Minneapolis, Denver, St. Joseph, Chicago and Omaha are each bidding for the national market.

AIR EXACTS HEAVY DEATH TOLL

German Scientist Probably First to Die in Effort to Fly.

The tragical mishap which cost Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the United States signal corps his life is the most recent of many resulting from man's persistent effort to conquer the air.

Lilienthal, a German scientist, and M. Pilcher, another student of aeronautics, probably were the first martyrs to the cause of the heavier-than-air type of air craft. The former was killed in the summer of 1896 while experimenting with his "gliding machine," which is said to have furnished the first model for the Wright brothers. The latter met his death about the same time in a test of his own aeroplane.

On Sept. 3 last Charles Oliver Jones, the Hammondsport (N. Y.) aeronaut, fell to his death from his dirigible balloon Boomerang while giving an exhibition flight in Maine.

While it involved no loss of life, the destruction of Count Zeppelin's mammoth balloon by lightning at Echterdengin, near Stuttgart, Germany, on Aug. 5 last, was one of the severest blows yet struck at aerial navigation.

A spectacular accident to a mammoth airship at Berkeley, Cal., on May 23 last resulted in serious injury to sixteen men, who narrowly escaped with their lives. The airship, the invention of Capt. J. A. Morrel, was on its trial trip. In full view of 10,000 people it ascended 300 feet, when it suddenly burst and dropped to the ground with its crew of sixteen men.

One of the most remarkable escapes from death in aeronautical history was that of Gail Robinson, who sails the Knabenshue airship, at Springfield, Ohio, July 13, 1907. Robinson fell 800 feet, the only mark of his experience being a small scratch. As he neared the earth the machine slowed up and he reached the ground safely. When the people flocked to the wrecked balloon, thinking to find Robinson a corpse, he was coolly lighting a cigarette.

WRIGHT MADE RECORD FLIGHTS

Ohio Aviator's Feats with an Aeroplane Startled the World.

Orville Wright, before the recent accident put a stop to the trials at Fort Myer, startled the world by his feats with his aeroplane and established records for both one and two man flights. His greatest flight was made on Sept. 12, when he remained in the air for one hour fourteen minutes and twenty seconds, covering a distance of 51.3 miles. Leading up to this he had made the following flights:

Sept. 9—57 minutes 31 seconds; 36 miles.

Sept. 9—1 hour 2 minutes 15 seconds; 38.5 miles.

Sept. 10—1 hour 5 minutes 52 seconds; 41 miles.

Sept. 11—1 hour 10 minutes 26 seconds; 46.8 miles.

Wright's record for flights with a passenger were:

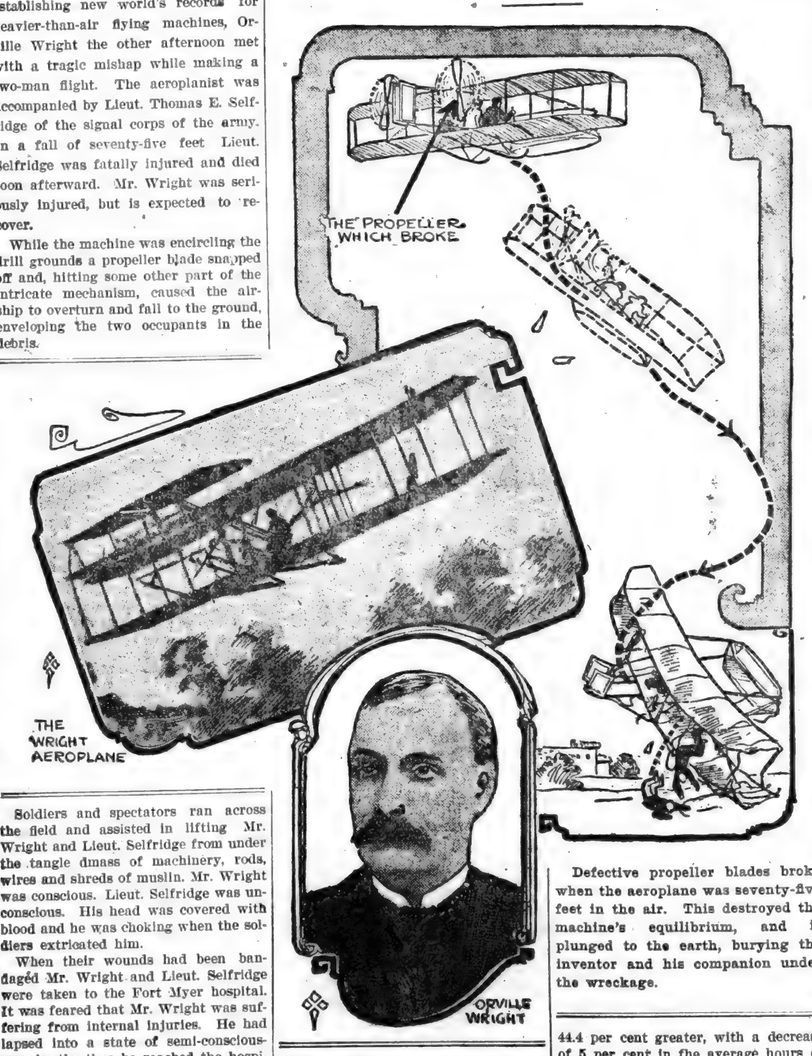
Sept. 9—6 minutes 26 seconds; 4 miles.

Sept. 12—9 minutes 6 seconds; 6 miles.

A Flier Without a Tail.

Members of the Aerial Experiment Association at Hammondsport, N. Y., have tried navigating the air in the June Bug with the entire rear portion, or tail, of the machine removed. There was some lack of stability, but greater speed was possible with no air surfaces back of the rudders. A speed of over forty miles was attained.

SKETCH SHOWING HOW FATAL AEROPLANE WRECK OCCURRED, INVENTOR AND AIRSHIP.



Defective propeller blades broke when the aeroplane was seventy-five feet in the air. This destroyed the machine's equilibrium, and it plunged to the earth, burying the inventor and his companion under the wreckage.

WAGES AND PRICES SOAR.

Purchasing Power of Labor and Cost of Necessaries Compared.

The average wages per hour in the principal manufacturing and mechanical industries of the country were 3.7 per cent higher in 1907 than in 1906, while retail prices of food were 4.2 per cent higher, according to the July report of the bureau of labor. The regular hours of labor per week were four-tenths of one per cent lower, and the number of employes in establishments investigated by the bureau showed an increase of 1 per cent.

The purchasing power of an hour wage, as measured by food, was less in 1907 than in 1906, the decrease being one-half of 1 per cent. The report shows that as compared with the average for the ten-year period 1890 to 1899 the average wage per hour in 1907 was 28.8 per cent higher, the number of employes 44.4 per cent greater, with a decrease of 5 per cent in the average hours of labor per week.

The retail price of principal articles of food was 20.6 per cent higher in 1907 than for the period 1890 to 1899. Compared with the average for the same ten-year period the food purchasing power of an hour's wage in 1907 was 6.8 per cent greater.

The report adds that the greatest increase in wages per hour was in the manufacture of cotton goods, the increase being 12.9. In the paper and wood pulp industry there was an increase in wages per hour of 10.1 per cent; in the silk, woolen and worsted goods industry 0.4 per cent; in the glass industry and street and sewer work an increase of 5.8 per cent. The investigation made by the bureau covers those industries in which the wages paid in one year were $10,000,000 or more.

The report presents the retail prices of thirty staple food commodities as sold in sixty-eight localities in the United States by 1,014 dealers.

Retail prices of food in 1907 were higher than in any other year of the eighteen-year period above named, being 4.2 per cent higher than in 1906.

The average prices of twenty-nine of the thirty articles included in this compilation of prices were higher in 1907 than in 1906. The articles which showed the greatest advance in prices are flour, 8.9 per cent; butter, 8 per cent; evaporated apples, 7.8 per cent; milk, 7.3 per cent; corn meal, 6.8 per cent; cheese, 6.7 per cent, and potatoes, 5.4 per cent. The only article which showed a decrease is tea, the decrease being 0.2 per cent.

ALL AROUND THE GLOBE.

Fire at Hinton, W. Va., destroyed the stables of the Hinton Livery Company, burning thirty-seven horses. Fifty vehicles and other property were also consumed, causing a loss of $36,000, including $6,000 on the building.

Jail officials at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., want Harry K. Thaw removed from the lockup there. They say his presence demoralizes the place and destroys discipline, as he sleeps in the corridor "and has all the fixtures and paraphernalia of a business office."

LIVES OF 110 LOST IN ALASKAN SHIPWRECK

Star of Bengal Is Broken to Pieces on the Shore of Coronation Island.

RESCUERS SAVE 27 PEOPLE.

Two of Crew Reach Land and Make Vain Effort to Operate Life Line.

One hundred and ten out of a total of 137 persons aboard the cannery ship Star of Bengal were drowned last Sunday afternoon when the vessel was torn from the hold of protecting tugs and lashed ashore at Helm Point, off the Alaskan coast, at the southeast end of Coronation Island.

The news was brought to Wrangel by the tug Hattie Gage, Captain Farrer, which carried the survivors, twenty-seven in all. The survivors before leaving Coronation Island buried the bodies of fifteen white men on the beach.

The cable ship Burnside, which left for the scene of the wreck at midnight Monday, as soon as the news of the wreck was received, returned the following evening with the information that the Star of Bengal was a total loss, only the ends of the masts showing above water.

Cast Ashore in Driving Rain.

The ship was being towed to sea from the Wrangel cannery by the tugs Hattie Gage and Kayak. Captain Farrer of the Hattie Gage gives the following account of the disaster:

"As we came within reach of the gale we could see we were making leeway and drifting toward Coronation Island. The Kayak was light and could do nothing. The Hattie Gage could not handle the ship alone. At 4 o'clock the Star of Bengal drifted into a narrow bight and we could see land on both sides abreast. We sounded and found eight fathoms.

"We could see the vessel dimly by the phosphorous dark rocks that were all around. We cut the towline and steamed out into open water, but could not see anything in the driving rain except one blue light burning on the ship. The storm increased and the tugs steamed to Shipley Bay, twenty-six miles away."

Survivors Tell of Struggle.

Survivors Muir and Olson said the ship sank about 9 o'clock after breaking into three pieces. The surf was full of salmon cases and gasoline drums.

Muir says he and Olson got a boat off and went ashore through the wreckage. They helped several ashore and pulled Captain Wagner out of the wreckage. He could not speak. The breeches buoy was rigged to a tree, but the ship was swaying so that the line was alternately loose and tight, making its use impossible.

The ship's books and papers were found on the beach. One man had matches and a fire was built with kerosene from the wreck. The fire saved the lives of the survivors, as it kept them from freezing.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Minneapolis health officers have confiscated a large quantity of milk from local dealers, claiming it was not in fit condition for food.

La Crosse, Wis., business men have subscribed $500 to aid the national rivers and harbors congress in its campaign for the improvement of inland waters.

Fargo business men are figuring on building a trolley line from Fargo to Dillmanch, a new suburb created by the Northern Pacific railroad for shops and yards.

Montana mine operators and workers are holding a joint convention in Helena to adjust the wage scale for the ensuing year. The operators desire to make a cut in wages, but this the miners will resist.

The receivers of the Pillsbury-Washburn company will keep the mills going. Pillsbury "A" mill is running on full time and "B" mill will start in a few days. The court has authorized the payment of employes.

A fight for better railroad rates has been opened by North Dakota wholesalers and jobbers, and at the request of the commercial clubs of Fargo and elsewhere. North Dakotans allege discrimination by railroads in favor of Twin City jobbers and wholesalers, and insist on being given a square deal.

A conference dealing with mining conditions existing in the United States and the great number of fatalities resulting from mine accidents, is being held in Pittsburg. Victor Watteyne, chief of the Belgian department of mines, is conferring with Charles Palm of the United States geological survey, and J. W. Paul, chief of the department of mines of West Virginia.

At Sedalia, Mo., six hundred employes of the Missouri Pacific shops who have been working on part time since the beginning of the financial stringency will resume on full time.

E. E. Beckler, one of the best known civil and construction engineers in the United States, dropped dead at the West Tunnel camp of the St. Paul pass, near Taft, Mont., aged 52 years. Under the direction of Mr. Beckler, the Pacific extension of the Great Northern railroad was constructed. He was at one time chief engineer for the Montana Central.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Business activity reflects further recovery, although the failure record is distorted by one unusually heavy default. Steadier conditions are seen in production and distribution and the congestion is gradually clearing, now it is finding that new demands in the leading industries include none of special influence.

Melters of pig iron bought more freely against future needs, prices being made inviting, and there is increasing work at foundries, forges and steel car shops.

Building operations make seasonable progress, while the new permits indicate that an unusual quantity of materials is to be consumed. More hands find employment in quarrying, and prices for stone, brick and cement become firmer.

Seasonable weather stimulated the construction and outdoor activities.

Retail trade opens up encouragingly in the principal lines. Visiting merchants have increased in numbers from the Northwest, and there is much buying of general merchandise throughout the wholesale district. Staple goods are sold to an extent comparing favorably with this time last year, and the absorption is yet notable in the woolen, millinery and footwear.

The markets for meats, provisions and live stock denote increasing consumption, notwithstanding the high cost again is high and wheat around $1 a bushel.

Bank clearings [illegible] the best showing in eight weeks and exceed those of the corresponding week of 1907, which included only five business days, by 10 per cent.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 31, as against 21 last week and 17 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 8, against 6 last week and 5 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Business in general has experienced a further moderate improvement, following as well as in wholesale [illegible] trade has reached the maximum for the season, and most out-of-town merchants have left the large centers for [illegible] State fairs and fall carnivals, attracting visitors to various sections, thus enlarging the volume of trade.

On the whole, purchases have been confined chiefly to staples, and no more than actual needs have been supplied, [illegible] sales have been considerably below those of last year at this season.

This conservatism, for which approaching elections and the [illegible] purchasing power of the public, outside of the agricultural regions, are responsible, is looked upon with some degree of satisfaction, it being felt that, inasmuch as retailers' stocks are not burdensome, a constantly good filling-in order trade should be experienced throughout the fall and winter.

Relatively, best reports come from the larger cities of the West and Southwest, but southern and Pacific northwestern cities also contribute good returns.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Sept. 17 number 209, against 191 last week, 179 in the like week of 1907, 171 in 1906, 173 in 1905 and 203 in 1904. In Canada business failures this week number 25, compared with 34 last week and 40 in the corresponding week of 1907.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.50; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $7.50; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.35; wheat, No. 2, $1.00 to $1.02; corn, No. 2, 77c to 78c; oats, standard, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $12.00; prairie, $8.00 to $11.00; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 23c; eggs, fresh, 19c to 22c; potatoes, per bushel, 64c to 70c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $7.50; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.75; wheat, No. 2, 98c to $1.00; corn, No. 2 white, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2 white, 50c to 51c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.40; hogs, $4.00 to $7.37; sheep, $3.00 to $4.25; wheat, No. 2, $1.04 to $1.05; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2, 48c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 78c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.25; hogs, $4.00 to $7.35; sheep, $3.00 to $3.65; wheat, No. 2, $1.01 to $1.03; corn, No. 2 mixed, 82c to 83c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 51c to 52c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 79c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $4.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.70; sheep, $2.50 to $3.85; wheat, No. 2, 97c to 98c; corn, No. 3 yellow, 82c to 83c; oats, No. 3 white, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 73c to 75c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.04 to $1.06; corn, No. 3, 77c; to 78c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 75c to 76c; barley, No. 1, 65c to 66c; pork, mess, $14.95.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.50; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.70; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $4.75; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $6.30.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 98c to $1.00; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c; clover seed, October, $5.45.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.25; hogs, $3.50 to $7.20; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.07 to $1.08; corn, No. 2, 86c to 87c; oats, natural white, 53c to 55c; butter, creamery, 20c to 23c; eggs, western, 19c to 23c.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

The negro population of New York City is estimated at 80,000, one-tenth of the number being West Indians.

The German Emperor has given $24,000 to the Robert Koch foundation for resisting the spread of tuberculosis.

SEPTEMBER

0341
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre
The Tale of Pelee

BY WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

Copyright, 1904, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY. All rights reserved

CHAPTER XIII.—(Continued.)

"Still, I must leave nothing undone tonight. I want the years bright for you, and I must try once more. After all, the mother of my beloved can do no wrong."

"People might be safe away up there on the Morne d'Orange," she said, fearfully, "but you must pass to and fro through the city!"

Gently he turned her face from the hidden city. "Look yonder into the splendid night!" he whispered. "Feel the sting of the spray. Hear the bows sing! It's all for us, Lara, the gilded track to the moon, the loveliest of earth's distances—and the sky afterward! We can't leave this great thing undone. Listen, dearest; when the dawn comes up the Madame will be lying seven or eight miles offshore. I'll take the launch into the harbor, and climb the morne once more to the big plantation house, bringing your love and mine to the mother-bird whom I owe for all things good. If she will not come with me, I shall command Uncle Joey to take her to Fort de France. After that——"

She was clinging to him and sobbing. "After that?" she repeated.

"We steam for Fort de France then," he said, "and Father Damien must spare us an hour from his labors. After that, beloved, you and I and the honeymoon—out on the swinging seas!"

Just now Denny Macready appeared on the bridge.

"Lara, I want you to know this Denny," said Constable. "I found him in a stoke-hold, and haven't been able to get rid of him since. He's my steward at sea, my butler ashore, and 'Yours solid' anywhere. Denny, I'm going ashore at dawn——"

"'Tis crool t' hear, sorr."

"That point is pretty well covered, Denny. I want you—that is, I'm leaving Miss Stansbury in your hands."

"Sh-sh—wait till I putt on me gloves."

"How are your charges faring, Denny?" Constable asked.

"Is ut th' little wans, you mane?"

"Yes, the natives."

"If I on'y had some goats, sorr!"

"Why goats?"

"Sure, I've been potherin' with lime wather an' sea wather an' wather straight an' sugar av milk—whin goats could do it all, an' betther."

Macready went below, leaving a laugh on the bridge—which was no little thing. The Madame crept in to the edge of the smoke. The gray ghost of morning was stealing into the hateful haze. The ship found anchorage. The launch was in readiness below. It was six in the morning. Pugh, the new third officer, was just leaving the bridge. Constable and Lara were standing at the door of his cabin.

"I know that you could do no greater thing than this—for me," she told him; "but when a woman comes into her own—as I have—it is terrible to be left alone so soon. There are warnings in the wind, menaces in the silence, dangers in everything. It cannot be that I have found you, my lover, only to lose you again. Oh, come back to me quickly, dear!"

"Three hours shall see us on our way to Fort de France," he answered blithely. "Trust me to hurry back to you. Pelee is still now. It may be that the pressure is eased——"

"There, kiss me, and don't wait! The very name of Pelee is horrible!" She moved with him to the ladder. "I thought I would be braver than this, Pierre Valeur!"

He whispered a last word and descended. Ernst had been relieved, and another sailor was in the launch, one for whom preparations had been made in the dim hall. Constable was happy. He waved a kiss at the pale, mute face leaning overside, and the fog rushed in between.

CHAPTER XIV.

The launch gained the inner harbor, and the white ships at anchor were seen vague phantoms in the vapor—French steamers, Italian barques, and the smaller West Indian craft—all with their work to do and their way to win. Constable heard one officer shout to another, inquiring if Saint Pierre was in the usual place, or had switched sites with Hades. The day was clearing rapidly, however, and before the launch reached shore the haze was so lifted that Pelee could be seen, floating a pennant of black out to sea. In the city a large frame warehouse was ablaze. The tinder-dry structure was being destroyed with almost explosive speed.

"Wait for me here," Constable said to the sailor, as the launch scraped the Sugar Landing.

A blistering heat rushed down from the expiring building to the edge of the land. Crowds watched the destruction. Many of the people were in holiday attire. This was the Day of Ascension, and Saint Pierre would shortly pray and praise at the cathedral. Even now the bells were calling, and there was low laughter from a group of maidens. Was it not good to live, since the sun shone again and the mountain did not answer the sainted bells? It was true that Pelee poured forth a black streamer with lightning in its folds; true that the people trod upon the hot gray dust of the volcano's waste; that the heat was such as no man had ever felt before and many sat in misery upon the ground; true, indeed that voices of hysteria came from the hovels, and the breath of uncovered death from the byways—but the gala spirit was not dead. The bells were calling; the mountain was still; bright dresses were abroad—for the torrid children of France must laugh.

Constable fell in with the procession on the way to the cathedral. Reaching there, he climbed to a huge block of stone in the square, and hurled broadcast the germ of flight. Many had seen him before, when his face was haggard. He was smiling now. There was color in his skin, fire in his eyes, a ring in his voice. Fear was not in him.

A carriage was not procurable, so he walked toward the Morne d'Orange. It was seven-thirty, and the distance was two miles to the plantation house. At eight, or soon afterward, he would be there—eight on the morning of Ascension Day; at nine, in the launch again, speeding out to the smile of the bride!

Twenty times a minute she recurred to him as he walked. There was no waning nor wearing—save a wearing brighter, perhaps—of the images she had put in his mind. The night had brought him palaces and gardens and treasure houses; everywhere he turned, new riches broke upon him. That her face had lain between his hands; that his hands had brought that face to his own; that her whispers, kisses, confidences, her prayers and passions and coming years, all found their center and origin in himself, like bright doves that had a cote within his heart—these thoughts lifted the poor man to such heights of praise and blessedness that he seemed to shatter the dome of human limitations, and emerge crown and shoulders into the illimitable ether.

The road up the morne stretched blinding white before him. Panting and spent not a little, he strode upward through the vicious pressure of heat, holding his helmet free from his head, that the air might circulate under the rim. At length, upon the crest of the morne, he perceived the gables of the plantation house, above the palms and mangoes, gold-brown in the dazzling haze.

Pelee roared. Sullen and dreadful out of the silence voiced the monster, roused to his labor afresh. The American began to run, glancing back at the darkening north. * * * The crisis was not passed in favor of peace. The holiday was darkened. The Madame would fill with refugees now, and the road to Fort de France turn black with flight. These were his thoughts as he ran.

The lights of the day burned out one by one. The crust of the earth stretched to a cracking tension. The air was beetling with strange concussions. In the clutch of realization, he turned one shining look toward the sea. Detonations accumulated into the crash of a thousand navies.

On the porch of the plantation house, twenty yards away,, stood the mother of Lara, her eyes fascinated, lost in the north. At the steps he fell, caught her skirt, her waist, in his hands. Across the lawn, through the roaring black, he bore her, brushing her fingers and her fallen hair from his face. He reached the curbing of the old well with his burden, crawled over, and grasped the rusty chain. Incandescent tongues lapped the cistern's raised coping, and running streams of red dust filtered down.

It was eight in the morning of Ascension Day. La Montagne Pelee was giving birth to Death.

CHAPTER XV.

When the launch entered the denser cloud and faded from her sight, Miss Stansbury retired to the cabin. Over all her thoughts of the unhallowed parting from her mother the night before, and the clean, valorous act of her lover now, hung the defined terror lest Pelee should intervene. She heard Macready's step at the door; the calm voice of an officer on the bridge; the morning bells.

The pale winding sheet was unwrapped from the beauty of morning. Through a port-hole she saw the rose and gold on the far, dim hills. Her eyes smarted from weariness, but her mind, like an automatic thing, swept around the great circle—from the ship to the city, to the house beyond the morne and back again. She saw him in the launch, in the midst of native groups on the shore, in the plantation house, begging her mother to listen, importuning Uncle Joey to take her to Fort de France, returning through the streets with people following—the crowded launch, and then the joy of empty arms filled. But sometimes Pelee would burst into the deepening channel of thoughts, effacing the whole, and leaving her, a shrieking, dishevelled creature, in the midst of a chaos which would not answer. She went on deck. Laird, the first officer, invited her to ascend the bridge. He was scrutinising through the glass a blotch of smoke on the city front. "What do you make of it, Miss Stansbury?" he asked.

The lenses brought to her a nucleus of red in the black bank. The rest of Saint Pierre was a gray doll settlement, set in the shelter of little gray hills. She could see the riven and castellated crest of Pelee, weaving his black ribbon. It was all small, silent and unearthly.

"That's a fire on the shore," she said.

"Exactly," said Laird.

Shortly afterward the trumpetings of the monster began. The harbor grew yellowish-black. The shore crawled deeper into the shroud, and was lost altogether. The water took on a foul look, as if the bed of the sea were churned with some beastly passion. The anchor chain drew taut, mysteriously strained, and banged a tattoo against the steel-bound eye. Blue Peter, drooping at the foremast, livened suddenly into a spasm of writhing, like a hooked lizard. The black, quivering columns of smoke from the funnels were fanned down upon the deck, adding soot to the white smear from the volcano. Lara felt Macready pulling at her arm.

"Ye musht go below, miss. Ye know me ordhers."

She rebelled with sudden vehemence, declaring that she would smother down there.

"You can do no good here, sure. Don't make it crool fur me?"

"Make haste below, miss—squall coming!" commanded Laird. Gentleness and jollity were gone from the large red face.

She suffered herself to be drawn down the ladder, crushed by the officer's words, and the iron fingers of fear closing about her heart. A hot, fetid breath charged the air. The water danced, alive with the yeast of worlds. The disordered sky intoned violence. Pelee had set the foundations to trembling.

Lara drifted into the open polar region, Despair. These men were all his friends. She must not hinder them. They had much to do. Her part was self-effacement. In the darkening passageway she heard Laird shouting orders above, heard him command the native women to "tumble below," and the sailors to seal the ways after them, heard the deep sea language and—"barometer" * * * "Constable" * * * There were running feet, bells below, cries from the native women, quick oaths from the sailors. The ship rose and settled like a feather in a breeze.

She was incapable of swift action. Macready lifted her into the cabin and slammed the door, rushed to the ports and screwed them tight with lightning fingers, led her to a chair and locked it in its socket.

"That's the deere," he said breathlessly. "Shud so much as a shpark from the mountain raise so much as a bloosh upon your cheek, sure I'd niver be able t' face Mr. Constable again, but go on sthokin' foriver an' iver."

"It's very good of you," she answered dully.

She sat very still, not daring to relax the rigid tension of her face, her hands, or her brain, lest the scream of madness break forth. From out the shoreward darkness thundered vibrations which rendered soundless all that had passed before. Comets flashed by the port holes. The ship shuddered and fell to her starboard side.

Eight bells had just sounded when the great thunder rocked over the gray-black harbor, and the molten vitals of the monster, wrapped in a black cloud, filled the heavens, gathered themselves, and plunged down upon the city and the sea. As for the de Stael, eight miles from shore and twelve miles from the craters, she seemed to have fallen from a habitable planet into the fire-mist of an unfinished world. She heeled over like a biscuit tin, dipping her bridge and gunwales. She was deluged by blasts of steam and molten stone. Her anchor chain gave way, and, burning in a half-dozen places, she was sucked in-shore.

(To be continued.)

FLO'S PHOTOGRAPHS.

Her Boy Friends Were Always Giving Her Their Pictures.

"Don't you think Kent Hampton's last photograph is a splendid one?" Flo Davol asked, carelessly.

A swift color flashed across Rachel Hill's face. She tried to make her voice indifferent, but the hurt would show a little.

"I haven't seen it," she replied.

"Haven't seen it?" Flo echoed. "How queer, when you are such friends! I have it somewhere here——"

She began hunting through the photographs crowding her desk. They were nearly all photographs of boys of young men, and Kent's was clearly in sight, as Rachel, with a flash of contempt, saw at once, although it was several minutes before Flo apparently discovered it. Then she handed it to Rachel. Her whole elaborate, overdressed little figure betrayed her delight in her pretty triumph.

"It certainly is queer that he didn't give you one," she repeated, "but the boys are always giving things to me. Really, I don't know what to do with half of them!"

As Rachel walked home through the September afternoon her eyes were full of bitterness. Why was it, she wondered, that girls like Flo got so much more than their share of good times and—things? She would not have cared about the others, but Kent Hampton, who had been her playmate ever since she could remember, and was going away to college in two days. Oh, Flo could have had anything else if she only had not spoiled that dear old friendship.

That evening Kent came over with his chum—who was also Rachel's cousin—Tom Calverly. Usually the three had the happiest of evenings, but this time something was plainly wrong. The boys kept up their nonsense, but it did not "go" as usual. Finally Tom remarked of something:

"It's dead easy—as easy as one of Flo Davol's photographs—eh, Kent?"

Rachel grew red, then pale. "I should think you'd be ashamed!" she cried, facing them indignantly.

The boys stared at each other in perplexity.

"To joke over a girl when you give her your picture," she stammered. "It—it's contemptible!"

Kent's lips tightened, but Tom whistled softly.

"Look here, Ray," he asked, "don't you know, honest?"

"Know what?" Rachel inquired.

"The way she gets those pictures. She gets them by asking—that's how. She asks so that a fellow can't refuse unless he's a brute. I guess I have half a dozen of hers somewhere round. Kent, here, is such a Sir Galahad he burns them—says it's not fair to have them lying round, even if the girl did force them on you."

"Oh!" Rahel cried, softly.

But up in her room that night she looked out with happy eyes into the dark. It was so good to keep one's friends on the old high terms—it was so good to keep one's self-respect!—Youth's Companion.

Not So Useless, Either.

"Wildcat mining stocks are not altogether useless—or worthless, either," said a New York broker who handles cheap mining stocks the other day as he hung up the telephone receiver. "Here's a man who just offered me $50 for enough mining stocks to have a face value of $50,000. He wasn't particular what stocks he got if they only had a paper value of $50,000. I closed the deal and shall make money on it, too. What did he want with such stocks? Well, I haven't the slightest doubt but that he is getting ready to go into the bankruptcy court and wants to show his creditors where his money has been dropped. We often get such requests and are usually able to fill them."

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE TO THE LEGISLATURE

Two of the most important subjects considered by Governor Hanly in his message to the Indiana Legislature, convened in special session, were those dealing with the Night Riders and County Local Option. The Governor opened his message with an explanation of the entanglements caused by the appropriation law and closed by advocating county local option as against township option, which he says the brewers want. Concerning the Night Riders, the Governor says:

In the early spring numerous raids were made in the part of the State bordering upon the Ohio River by so-called "Night Riders" upon the property of persons engaged in the growing of tobacco, resulting in the destruction of a number of tobacco beds where young plants were being grown preparatory to transplanting in the fields. Many threatening letters were written warning the growers not to plant a tobacco crop for this year, and threatening personal violence and the destruction of property if the crop were planted. I have done what I could under the limited authority conferred upon the Governor by law and with the meager funds in my hands to apprehend these persons and protect the persons and property of citizens in that section of the State. In a few weeks the tobacco crop will be cut and housed in sheds and barns. Many threatening letters are again being received by the tobacco growers, warning them not to cut their crops at peril of the destruction of crops and barns by fire. For a year past one-third of the neighboring State of Kentucky has been, and now is, in a state of anarchy; neither life nor property is secure. Property has been destroyed and a number of persons murdered. Depredations have been committed in Ohio necessitating special legislation and the conferring of special authority upon officers in that State to preserve the property and lives of her citizens.

The protection of property and its peaceful enjoyment, and the preservation of the lives of its people, are among the primal reasons for the maintenance of any government. I cannot consent that the government of this Commonwealth shall fail in this behalf. Under the present law I have neither authority nor money with which to prevent it.

I therefore recommend the enactment of a statute for the protection of tobacco growers, making the destruction of, or injury to, tobacco either in the field or after the same shall be severed from the soil, a criminal offense, and fixing a severe penalty therefor. I also recommend legislation authorizing and directing the Governor to appoint such number of persons as he may deem necessary, to act as secret service officers, to detect or apprehend any person or persons engaged in the malicious destruction of tobacco plants or other property of persons engaged in the growing, curing and marketing of tobacco; giving to such officers the power of a sheriff or other police officer to arrest and detain until a legal warrant can be obtained, any person or persons found violating any of the laws of this State enacted to prevent the destruction or injury of tobacco, and giving to the Governor authority to fix the compensation of such officers, in addition to their actual and necessary expenses, and the making of an appropriation of $15,000 for the payment and compensation of such officers and their necessary expenses.

The enactment of such legislation will of itself have a deterring effect upon those engaged in the unlawful practices to which I have adverted, and will enable the executive to meet with greater efficiency the conditions that are likely to arise.

County Local Option.

On the subject of Local Option Governor Hanly says:

The welfare of the State, viewed from either a moral or an economical standpoint, requires the enactment of a law giving to the qualified voters of the respective counties of the State the right to vote upon the question of the exclusion of the liquor traffic from any such county. In my judgment it is both expedient and right that this legislation be enacted now.

The traffic in intoxicating liquors is owned and controlled to-day by a few men. It is closely and compactly organized, both for defense and aggression. Its conduct has become such as to challenge the thoughtful consideration of the people of every State in the Union. In this Commonwealth this is especially true.

The independent retail dealer, owner of his place of business and responsible to the community where he does business and in which he lives, is fast becoming a memory. He has almost ceased to be. More than 35 per cent of the places where liquors are sold at retail, to be drunk on the premises where sold, are owned or controlled by brewery corporations, whose directors and officers live out of the vicinity where the business is carried on, and who have no interest or identity with the people of such communities. Many of them live in palatial residences in fashionable quarters in the larger cities of the State, far removed from the scenes of the barrooms they maintain.

These men, acting through the legal fiction called a corporation, buy or rent the buildings where the business is conducted. They own the fixtures. They furnish the liquors. They pay the license fee. Where taxes are paid, they pay them. The law inhibits the issuing of a license to a corporation. To evade this, license is taken in the name of some irresponsible person who owns no property and has no concern and no mission except to sell intoxicants to anybody, at any hour, on any day, in order that his master, the brewer, may gather his daily measure of profit. The brewery corporation, the brewer himself, or some paid agent, executes the bond required of the licensee, and he is given to understand that he must conduct the place turned over to him at a profit to his master, and that he may evade the law without substantial risk. If he is prosecuted, he is defended. If he is fined, his fine is paid. His place is a rendezvous for the idle, the vicious and the criminal—a hotbed for the breeding of vice and crime. In time of civic excitement or social disorder, arson and murder issue from it like beasts from a lair. This is the experience and this the testimony of every city that has become the victim of the mob or whose laws have been defied by riot.

Those in control of these places are concerned about nothing but profits and increased revenue. To obtain these they multiply saloons, plant them in residential districts and establish them in communities where saloons otherwise would not go.

The aggression and the intolerance of the traffic, coupled with its utter disregard of law, led the Sixty-fourth General Assembly to enact a law giving to the majority of the legal voters of any township or city ward the power, by remonstrance, filed with the Board of County Commissioners, to exclude for a period of two years.

Under the provisions of this law the traffic has been excluded, in three and one-half years, from 880 of the 1,016 townships in the State, from many city wards, from a number of cities, and from twenty-five entire counties. More than 1,600,000 people now live in territory where there is no licensed saloon. But this territory is constantly invaded by the traffic and a constant warfare against it is necessary for its exclusion. This statute was enacted without submission to the vote of the people, but its effects have been so beneficent and the good accomplished under it has been so great the people of the State are unwilling to see it repealed, modified or weakened. So strong is the sentiment in its behalf that both the great parties in the State are pledged to maintain it inviolate. And the desire of the people for the further restriction of the traffic is so sincere, so manifest and insistent that both parties have promised additional and supplemental legislation.

Two methods are suggested. One, a township and ward election, where the people of the township or ward may vote for or against the traffic. The other, a county election, where the people of each county may vote for or against it. Between these two propositions both the temperance people and the liquor interests of the State have made quick and decisive choice.

The first method would add nothing to the present statute. The unit would be precisely the same as that covered by the present remonstrance law. It would not be a step for the further restriction of the traffic, but a step toward the weakening of the present restraint. In practice, it would greatly impair if not effectually destroy the remonstrance law. Operating over the same territorial unit, conflict would ensue and the remonstrance law would be supplanted. The township or ward covers too small a territory to be an effective unit. No township or city ward can single-handed protect itself from the ravages and evils of the traffic so long as it is permitted in the townships and wards surrounding it. A great majority of the citizens of a county or a city may be opposed to the traffic, but while a single township or city ward favors it, though by a majority of but one legal voter, the county or the city must tolerate it, must suffer in silence without redress, denied a voice or even a hearing concerning it. Thus the will of the people is made ineffectual, their purpose impotent. A city ward or township is not a substantial governmental unit. They have no officers qualified or empowered to enforce the laws of the State relating to the traffic. The expense of criminal prosecutions for crimes committed in the township or ward is not borne by such township or ward alone, but by the county as a whole. The evil effects of the traffic cannot be confined to their boundaries, but reach all the people of the county. Township or ward local option by election is a kind of home rule but little better than that which would follow if the unit were a precinct, a city block, a single flat in a city, or the house of a single family. Carried to its last analysis, it localizes the option to the individual conscience of each citizen, and takes away all right of society, as represented in the majority, to have a voice in the matter. It is not government by majority, but government by the minority. It is not the rule of the people, but the rule of the few.

The county is a well recognized and long-established unit of government. It has officers and courts and the machinery by which the law of the State can be enforced. The people of this unit all share the cost of criminal prosecutions for crimes committed within it. The traffic's evil effects can more nearly be confined to its borders.

The difference between the two methods is emphasized and accentuated by the character of those who support them. Good men may be back of the township and ward unit, but back of it are also the allied liquor interests of the State, organized as a single unit. Every brewer, every distiller, every saloon-keeper, the keeper of every brothel and of every unlawful resort, and every allied interest that can be reached, individual or corporate, are supporting it, and they are not half-hearted in their support of it as against county option. They are desperately in earnest. They are here and will be here throughout this session, active, dominant, arrogant, intimidating and corrupting, prepared to defeat county option at any cost or by any means within their power. They seek, through you, to take over unto themselves the enactment of law. They are reaching for the reins of government everywhere and in every department, that they may administer it in their own behalf.

On the other side is the great body of our people, the many, the masses, unorganized, without celerity of movement or corrupting power. They are not for county local option. They plead their cause in the open. The ministry of the State of all denominations, teachers, lawyers, doctors, manufacturers, farmers; the moral forces of the Commonwealth, represented by the Christian church and religious societies; the great rank and file; the multitude whose government this is, whose commissions you hold, whose representatives you are. Thousands of them are here and will be here to urge their claim upon you.

The brewery, the distillery, the saloon, the brothel, on one side. The church, the school, the home on the other.

County option is in harmony with the spirit of our institutions. It is in accord with the basic principle of American government. It meets the requirement of the great declaration, that "governments shall derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

How can a man who enjoys the blessings of free popular government and who professes to believe in democratic institutions where the people themselves, by majority, exercise the right to rule, consistently deny to the people of the several counties of this Commonwealth the right to exclude this traffic from their midst if they so desire? How can a man who values political freedom for himself deny to the three millions of people in Indiana who desire to be heard upon this question the exercise of a right so fundamental. How can a man who believes in the right of the majority to decide questions of tariff schedules and monetary ratios refuse to submit this question to the forum of a free people, or withhold from his fellow citizens a freeman's right to vote upon it?

I reiterate my belief that it is both expedient and right to enact this legislation now. If it is right to enact it next January, it is right to enact it in September. Therefore I recommend to you and urge upon your favorable consideration the enactment of a local option law with the county as a unit, giving to the people the right to vote by counties upon the question, and so drawn as to preserve the present remonstrance law. In this I voice the thought and express the conscience and the purpose of the people, whose servants we are. If your enactment shall voice their thought and express their purpose, you may justly claim their approval. You will thereby place the State where the intelligence, the conscience and the character of its citizens entitle it to stand. If you fail, you will have to account to them, for soon or late they will have their way upon this great question. In this neither the majority nor the minority can escape responsibility. As individuals and as representatives of the people, your responsibility is the same, whether you are of the majority or of the minority. Right is right, and he who opposes it cannot long find safe refuge behind the barricades of party.

The General Assembly is now in session. You constitute it. You have the power to legislate. The people know you have the power. They will not be satisfied with postponement or delay. They expect you to act upon this question before you adjourn.

It All Depends.

"Do you believe in bleeding patients?" queried the young physician.

"Depends on the size of their bank account," replied the old doctor.

Well Named.

She—Do you notice that Lord De Broke calls Miss Milyuna, to whom he's engaged, "My Subby?"

He—Yes; I suppose he means "subtreasury."

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS.

The truth is regarded by most people as an insult.

It is always a hard job to jar a man loose from his money.

Almost every man is a better man than he is a husband.

Was there ever a lecturer who did not come well recommended?

Nearly every boy determines to whip his school teacher, when he grows up.

EXTRA SESSION MEETS.

Indiana General Assembly Convenes Under Call from Governor Hanly.

LOCAL OPTION IS MAIN ISSUE.

"Dry" Bill Indorsed by Churches and Temperance Organizations—Also After "Night Riders."

Indianapolis correspondence:

A special session of the sixty-fifth general assembly of Indiana was opened under a call from Governor J. Frank Hanly to consider four subjects: A county local option bill, a bill giving the governor additional authority to prevent destruction of property by "night riders" in southern Indiana, a bill to repeal a grant of $120,000 to Vincennes University by the last legislature and a bill to correct an error in a bill passed by the last legislature, under which unexpended funds of State institutions would revert to the general fund Sept. 30.

The subject of absorbing interest is the county option bill, which has been indorsed by church conferences, ministerial associations, the Anti-saloon League and other temperance organizations. Opposing interests have been just as active.

The Senate contains thirty-six Republicans and fourteen Democrats, and the House fifty-three Republicans and forty-seven Democrats. The six special elections held to fill vacancies did not change the political line-up.

County local option was started on its legislative journey at Saturday's session. Though the way looked dark and rough and was known to be beset with many dangers, friends of the reform were confident that the journey would be made with safety and dispatch. Difficulty was encountered at the very outset inasmuch as two kinds of county option appeared and each claimed the right of way. One was started by the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, and was supposed to bear the administrative stamp. The other was started by Senator Mattingly of Washington, author of the high-license bill two years ago, champion of the "blind tiger" bill, and one of the stanchest temperance workers in the State. Both bills named the county as the unit for the proposed legislation, but they differed in details. The conflict was notable in at least one phase. This conflict was such as to make the leaders decide that the bills should follow regular courses. The better one, leaders say, will live; in other words, it will be a survival of the fittest.

PRISONER SPIRITED AWAY.

Hamlet Dillon Dies from Wounds Inflicted by His Brother-in-Law.

Hamlet Dillon, aged 32, trustee of Elmore township, Daviess county, who was shot five times upon Main street, Washington, by H. L. Hale, a federal revenue agent of Nicholasville, Ky., is dead. Sheriff Colbert spirited Hale to Vincennes, fearing he would be lynched at Washington. Hale and Dillon had married sisters and the killing was a result of family trouble. Hale went to Washington Friday morning, and, meeting Dillon on Main street, fired five shots into him without exchanging a word, it is charged. At a conference between Hale and Judge James Denton of Somerset, Ky., it was decided that insanity shall be Hale's defense.

ENORMOUS SNAKE SEEN.

Big Round as a Stovepipe, of Great Length, and Has Flat Head.

Much excitement prevails among farmers northwest of Morocco over the appearance in that vicinity of what is said to be the largest snake ever seen outside of a menagerie. The snake, which has been seen three or four times by farmers and their sons, is said to be as big around as a stovepipe and of enormous length. Owing to the haste shown by snake seers in getting away from the snakeship, those who saw it, though generally agreeing to its enormous size, are unable to furnish further particulars, beyond the fact that it possessed a large flat head of remarkable ugliness. An effort is being made to organize a party to capture the snake.

WOMAN DIES FROM BURNS.

Flames from Open Grate Set Clothing on Fire.

Mrs. H. Tobin, who was severely burned when her clothing caught fire from an open grate, died at the Gary hospital. The funeral was held at Harvey, Ill. Mrs. Tobin lived on a farm near Glen Park for many years. She is survived by three daughters. She was 68 years old.

Girl Kills Brother at Play.

Six-year-old Walter Hankins of Rushville was shot and instantly killed by his 10-year-old sister, Jessie Hankins, while playing with a revolver which they found at the home of Albert Umbenour, in Anderson, where they were visiting.

Plowed Up Den of Spreading Adders.

While working on a farm near New Harmony, George Curtis plowed up a den of snakes. All were spreading adders. Curtis killed ninety-two and captured twenty-two alive. Some of the snakes measured two feet in length.

So They All Think.

Stella—Congratulate me, dear, I'm engaged.

Mabel—Huh! I wouldn't marry the best man on earth.

Stella—Of course you couldn't. I'm going to marry him myself.

Yes, Indeed.

Cross—I've just written a play, and I tell you it will raise your hair.

Kilson—Yes? I'll recommend it to all my bald-headed friends.

SEPTEMBER

0342
L 903

Easy Confinement

If you have cause to fear the pains of childbirth, remember that they are due to weakness, or disease, of the womanly organs, and that healthy women do not suffer, like weak ones.

The specific, medicinal, vegetable ingredients, of which that famous, female medicine and womanly tonic

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

is composed, will build up the womanly organs to a healthy state and thus prevent needless suffering.

"Before my confinement," writes Mrs. Rose Schubarth, of Monument, Colo., "I had such bearing-down pains I didn't know what to do. Cardui quickly relieved me. Some months later I had a fine 12-lb. baby, was sick only thirty minutes, and did not even have a doctor."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 35

J. A. PROVINES
TRUSTEE
of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.
C. R. PRICE,
ST. JOE, IND.
Office in Case building.
Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

The Presidential campaign is not lacking in interest and variety. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Taft are having many joint debates not on the same platform as did Lincoln and Douglas but each is daily answering or parrying the thrusts of the other and the press furnishes such up to date reports that the whole country is as much edified as though it heard from all the candiates simultaneously. Mr. Bryan says that Mr. Taft flees from his platform and Mr. Taft retorts that Mr. Bryan is afraid of his record. When Mr. Bryan makes a point about injunctions Mr. Taft wants to know something about Mr. Bryan's plans for government ownership of the railroads. President Roosevelt flung himself into the campaign Monday of last week when he printed a letter in advocacy of his candidate and Secretary Root made a speech on Tuesday for forceful and persuasive logic unexcelled in American oratory. Mr. Bryan has invaded the enemy's country and if the fervor and admiration of his friends can decide the issue he is certainly to be congratulated on the spirit of the campaign. Except for the efforts of Mr. Hearst it is free of mud slinging, muck raking and Billingsgate rhetoric.

The Two Candidates.

William J. Bryan.

"Primarily, Mr. Bryan is a well-rounded man. Many who have and do fill the public eye may bear inspection in their public aspects, while their private lives are best left in the shadow. Such men are like statues made to be placed in niches: the front of a statesman or philospher, while the back is but uncarved ugliness. But the Nebraskan you can view from any side, and you always see a man, a whole man. Time has demonstrated that Bryan has generally been right on public questions. But great as is his recognized ability—yet the foundation and keystone of his strength with the people is quarried from their faith in his honesty."

JOHN H. ATWOOD.

William H. Taft.

"I think that almost all men who have been brought in close contact, personally and officially, with Judge Taft are agreed that he combines, as very, very few men can combine, a standard of unflinching rectitude on every point of public duty, and a literally dauntless courage and willingness to bear responsibilities, with a knowiege of men, and a far-reaching tact and kindliness, which enable his great abilities and high principles to be of use in a way that would be impossible were he not thus gifted with a capacity to work hand in hand with his fellows."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

WABASH
Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:

GOING WEST.
No. 11, Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a.m
No. 3, Western Express 7:58 p. m

GOING EAST.
No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:26 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Any News?

Do you know that an editor or reporter for a newspaper can in his rounds stop and ask a hundred persons "What is the news?" and ninety out of the hundred will reply "nothing special," and yet fifty out of the number knows something that if not found in the next paper will astonish them greatly and disappoint them more and possibly make them mad. Don't be afraid to let the newspaper men know it.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of the stomach, liver and bowels, with out fuss or fiction," says N. H. Brown-Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory, at H. Milliman's drug store. 25c.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Commissioner appointed by the DeKalb Circuit Court, in the case of Catherine E. Murphy et al. against Lydia A. Kees, et al., to sell the following described real estate, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, to-wit:-a part of the south west quarter of section fifteen, in township number thirty three, north, range fourteen, east, bounded by a line, commencing at the point where the west boundary line of said section crosses the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and, running thence south on said section line to the north boundary line of Washington Street in the Town of St. Joe; thence east on said boundary line of Washington Street eleven rods; thence north to the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and thence in a westerly direction along the south boundary line of said right of way to the place of begining, will sell said real estate at private sale on and after October 24th., 1908, at the office of J. E. and J. H. Rose in the city of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the following terms, to-wit:-One third cash in hand on the day of sale, one third in nine months and one third in eighteen months from the date of sale, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's promissory notes, with six per cent interest, and with attorneys fees, waiving relief from valuation laws, and secured by a mortgage on said real estate.

Dated, September 7th., 1908.

James E. Rose, Commissioner.

Public Sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale on the Levi Repp farm, 3 miles north of Maysville and 3 miles south of Spencerville, Friday October 9th, at 10 a. m., the following:- one good work horse, four milch cows, Herford yearling bull, twenty-three breeding ewes, two Shropshire rams, two brood sows, farrow soon, fourteen shoats, fourteen acres corn in shock, McCormick binder, two horse wagon, one light wagon, sleigh, Flying Dutchman breaking plow, hay rake, spike tooth harrow, hay rack, hog rack, gravel boards, mud boat, grass seeder, hay fork, dinner bell, mail box, two bed steads, cook stove, heating stove, bed lounge, 404 Oliver plow and numerous other articles. Terms made known on day of sale.

PERRY M. REPP.

J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

Boom The Town.

Traveling men that come to our town remark that we have a pretty town. Yes, we have a pretty town, and by the number of traveling men that come here regularly we know that we must have a business town. With her trade, her churches, her schools, and her cultured population we have a first class town in which to live.

Many things attest the beauty of our town as a residence and social center, but one thing in which it is wofully lacking is the number of business enterprises to employ labor. Labor means wealth, and whenever any manufacturing plant is busy employing men and women, who in turn use their income to support themselves and families, then a town is prosperous and the community about it is also reaping the benefits to be derived from its prosperity.

It is true that industries have been started here only to be discontinued after a few years, but that does not need to hinder the establishment of something which will be permanent. Let the genius and capital of our town get together and begin looking about for the purpose of locating in our midst some useful and permanent industry. There is a tendency with some of the smaller manufacturing plants of the larger cities to move to the smaller towns where operating expenses will be materially decreased. St. Joe has excellent shipping facilities, located as it is on the Chicago division of the Baltimore & Ohio and on the Wabash.

Nothing will boom of its own accord. Some force must agitate and keep continually working until something of worth is accomplished. Let us begin to take an interest in the manufacturing possibilities of our town even as we are interested in good streets, beautifully shaded and bordered with good sidewalks. Now is the time to get to work and "whoop her up" lively for the good of St. Joe.

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired feeling, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."
MRS. F. J. NORTON,
Freeville, New York.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That I, JACOB D. LEIGHTY administrator of the estate of WILLIAM KNIGHT deceased, will offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on Thursday the first day of October 1908, at the farm near Fairview Church the following personal property, belonging to the estate of said decedent, to-wit: All the horses, cattle, hogs, corn in shock, farm implements, etc.

TERMS OF SALE:

For all amounts not exceeding five dollars, cash in hand. For amounts of five dollars and upwards, a credit of twelve months will be given. Note, bearing six per cent interest after maturity, with approved security, and waiving Valuation and Appraisement Laws, will be required.

JACOB D. LEIGHTY
Administrator.

A Sure-enough Knocker.

J. C. Goodwin, of Reidsville, N. C says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve is a sure-enough knocker for ulcers. A bad one came on my leg last summer, but that wonderful salve knocked it out in a few rounds. Not even a scar remained." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns etc. 25c. at H. Milliman's drug store.

For Sale.

Two last spring bull calves. Also one two years old. All pedigreed shorthorn stock.

ROLLAND BEARSS.

GENERAL ITEMS

Thad Thomas of Corunna, was in town, Friday.

The Garrett knitting mills resumed work this week after being idle for some time.

It appears that it was no small sensation that the Rev. Small created in and about Garrett and Auburn.

Fred Feick, who made the race for congressman of this district is now making a speaking tour of the state of New York, in behalf of the Democratic national ticket.

"The young man who lets the impossible of the present deter him from making plans for the possible of the future is about as alive as an Egyptian mummy, and not one whit more useful."

Prune juice, and essence of Juniper and other liquids masquerading as "Blended whisky" are herafter to be known as "imitation whiskies" according to the decision of Judge Tompson of Cincinnati. One by one our illusions are shattered.

A recent novel emanating from Chicago advises a woman not to marry a man until she has seen him drunk. The trouble has usually been that a woman never saw the man of her choice drunk until after she had married him.

The tax payers will find no fault with the county officials who have succeded in reducing the levy this year to 44.65 cents on a hundred dollars valuation which is a reduction of three cents below that of last year. It means that this coming year we pay for county expenses on each hundred dollars assessed against us 44.65 cents.

The idea of centralizing township schools by closing the smaller ones and transporting pupils daily to a larger district is said to have originated with W. A. Williams of Rome City who was a township trustee from 1894 to 1900. It arose when the school near Wolcottville burned and Trustee Williams provided township transportation for the pupils to other schools. The idea worked so well that the is now being followed all over Indiana.

Reports made to general headquarters of the B.&O. show that 5,000 freight cars have been placed in operation since the middle of August and that there are still 14,000 surplus freight cars. This is the smallest number of surplus cars reported by the company since last fall. The filing of this report is probably responsible for the rumor that the road has invited bids for new equipment. Officials of the company, however, state that bids have not been invited and that no equipment will be ordered for the present.

4 PER CENT
INTEREST
Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually.
SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.
Capital Paid $50,000
Security to Depositors $100,000
PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

Maybe Mr. Higsen wont be elected President but at least he is getting a lot of free advertising for his axle grease.

The Vail Cooperage Company of Ft. Wayne is contemplating the establishing of a stave factory at Grabill.

A Philadelphia couple walked twenty eight miles to get married. But a great many people go two thousand miles to South Dakota to get a divorce.

Attorney General Bonhparte has been back from his vacation in the Berkshires for three whole days and has not not given out a newspaper interview yet.

Campaign speeches and political issues took a back seat in Indiana and waited until the special legislature now in session passed some bill relative to local option.

Our Presidential candidates are much hampered in their political fight by the fact that both are gentlemen and that both have lived like gentlemen. Their fight seems about as half hearted as that of two small boys who have to pummel each other to escape a licking from older boys.

The republican papers tell us that Marshall evades the campaign issues and does not stand firmly for any righteous principles. The democratic sheets say that Watson is a pretender. It must be about time for the voter, who cares, to start out with a lantern in search of an honest man.

The first number of the Garrett Daily Press appeared on Tuesday of last week. It is a neat seven column sheet and will no doubt receive a generous welcome at the hands of the Garrett people.

Money to loan on farms a 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

As both of the big parties promise tariff reform soon after election, it will be of interest to recall just what the duties are on their products: On hogs brought into the United States there is a duty of $1.50 per head; $30 per head and up on horses and mules; $2 to $14 per head on cattle; seventy-five cents to $1.50 per head on sheep fifteen cents a bushel on oats; twenty-five cents a bushel on wheat; ten cents a bushel on rye; fifteen cents a bushel on corn; fifteen cents a bushel on buck wheat; thirty cents a bushel on barley two cents a pound on rice; six cents a pound on butter and cheese; forty-five cents a bushel on beans; three cents each on cabbages; five cents a dozen on eggs; $4 a ton on hay; twenty cents a gallon on honey; twenty-five cents a bushel on potatoes; four to eleven cents a pound on wool; two cents a pound on lard and three cents a pound on poultry. Notwithstanding the above tariff on importations, there were the past year $414,000,000 farm products brought in. There are corresponding duties on the things he buys

WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Elza Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

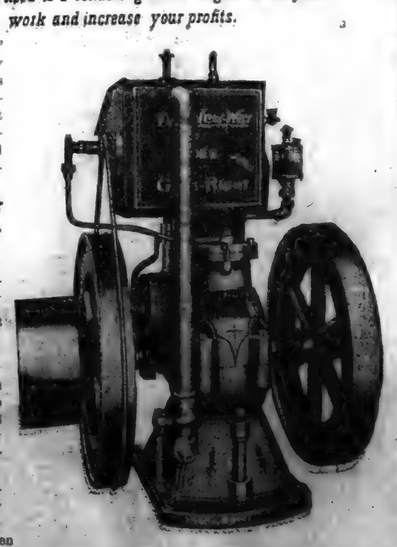
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



So SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

SEPTEMBER

U343
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

J. F. BALTZ
Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

News Items

Henry Murray made a new cement walk around his lot.

John Baltz and son Tommy, visited Thomas Murray, Sunday.

Mrs. Ona Moore and Grace Houk took dinner, last Tuesday with Mrs. Jennie Steward.

Messrs. Culbertson and Nugen shipped a car load of hogs and sheep from here, Saturday.

Do not fail to see the styles in new fall and winter millinery at Mrs. Hart's, Spencerville.

Ardie and Dewey Wilson of Noris Chapel, spent Saturday night and Sunday with their grandmother, Mrs. Lydia J. Steward and their sister, Edna.

Mrs. Cupp and Mrs. Benninghoff left Saturday morning for Elkhart, where they are visiting their sons, Edward Cupp and Willie Benninghoff, who are working at that place.

The town seemed almost deserted last Thursday, for nearly every one were gone to the Hicksville Fair. The ball boys played against Antwerp that day, and were defeated by a score of 9 to 4.

Dr. S. S. Kimes accompanied Mr. Arthur Strevey to Ft. Wayne, last Saturday, and called on Dr. Wheelock for an examination of an affected eye. The diagnosis was the same as had been made by Dr. Kimes.

Saturday was quite a day for runaways here. Mr. Mort Shutt was loading wood out at the saw mill and his team became frightened and ran several rods before they were stopped. The wagon was badly broken. Mr. Shutt had to get another wagon to haul his wood. Also one of L. W. Steward's teams driven by Fordie Kensinger was delivering wood. While returning with the empty wood wagon, one of the horses became frightened at an automobile standing on Main street, and ran pulling the other horse along. They finally ran into a tree and stopped No one was hurt and there was no damage done except breaking some of the harness.

Julia Stevens went to Avilla Monday to visit with relatives.

Murray Bros. have completed the repair work on the mill dam.

Wm. Moore and wife and Bert Fisher, went to Chicago, Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Steward returned to her home at Garrett, Saturday.

See those new silk and satin hats at Hart's Millinery Store.

Remember the Missionary Convention next Monday. All are invited.

Miss Mary Comesky and Mrs. Koontz visited the formers sister at Leo, Sunday.

F. D. Lake of this place, accepted a position as chauffeur with Dr. Shutt of Ft. Wayne.

Ed Beams put telephones in the homes of Clyde Rectenwalt and Mrs. Cora Hart, this week.

Mrs. Rebecca Bowman is no better at this writing. She is so very weak that she does not notice any thing.

Mrs. Hattie Bowman of Chicago, who has been assisting in caring for Mrs. Rebecca Bowman returned home, Monday.

Mr. Holsworth of Ft. Wayne, and Anna Goldsmith of Grabill visited the latters cousin, Mrs. J. S. Hollobaugh Sunday.

Esq. Allen has the contract of painting a number of the steel bridges in this county. He is now working on the Newville bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Cornell of Missouri are visiting the latters sister Mrs. Bernetta Steward. They are on their way to Maryland.

Wm. Wyatt and wife, Lorenzo Nelson and wife, Henry Porter, wife and daughter, Jennie, Reason Chaney and wife and Ada Eales, spent Sunday with Samuel Steward and family.

A Paying Investment.

Mr. John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "Have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a 50c. bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

W. M. ALLEN,
BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

Missionary Convention

A missionary convention will be held at the Methodist church, Monday, October 5. This convention is held in connection with a series to be held in the Ft. Wayne district of the Methodist Episcopal churches. The session will last all day.

In the forenoon the first topic will be "The Macedonian Cry" and will be discussed by J. L. Hutchens of New Haven; the second subject of the forenoon will be "The Duty and Obligation of the Church to Conference Claimants", by Preston Polhemus of Harlan.

The afternoon session will begin with a praise service which will be followed by two addresses. The first, "Methodism and Education" by Emory Dunbar of Woodburn; the second "An active, willing, consecrated, determined, "never give up" pastor, and his relation to "All Full" benevolent collections. by J. B. Cook, Monroeville.

The evening program will also contain two addresses. Preston Polhemus will talk on "Home Missions and Church Extensions as Factors in Winning America for Christ". This will be followed by an address on "Foreign Missions and its Marvelous Triumphs" by J. B. Cook. These two subjects will also be discussed at Wesley Chapel the same evening, the first by Emory Dunbar and the second by J. L. Hutchens. All are invited to come and enjoy these services, next Monday beginning at ten o.clock.

Dog Lost

STRAYED OR STOLEN—

A black and tan full blooded hound. Anyone returning or giving information as to the where abouts of this dog will receive a liberal reward.

HARVEY KIMES.

IT WILL PAY YOU TO GO TO
Bowman's Drug Store

FOR YOUR DRUGS.
His goods are the best. Will also stand the test,
Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Spencerville R F D No 2

Mrs. Oscar Spitler is quite sick at this writing.

Gust Hefner and wife spent Wednesday with J. Koch and family.

W. L. Steward and family took Sunday dinner with H. Kimes and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hollopeter and son Cecil spent Sunday with his mother at Leo.

Roy Walker of Ft. Wayne spent Sunday with his sister Mrs. Wm. Muller and family.

Mr. Clarence Beery of Ft. Wayne spent Sunday with his parents H. Beery and family.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stafford and children of Hicksville spent Thursday with her sister Ida Kellie and family.

Wes Zimmerman, wife and daughter Dena spent Sunday with her sister Mrs. Perry Hemminger of Coburntown.

Mrs. John Benninghoff and Mrs. G. Cupp left Saturday for a weeks visit with their sons, at Elkhart, they will also visit at New Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Hefner who recently returned from the state of Washington spent Thursday and Friday at the home of H. Kimes and family.

Did Some Hazing

The students in the second and third years of the High School thought that the proper thing for them to do last week was to haze the first year students. Their intentions were to give them a sort of initiation into the advanced mysteries and force them to subscribe to a constitution of their own making. Last week it seems that a great deal of the time was taken up by the two upper classes in devising and carrying out their work of hazing the freshmen much to the neglect of work that ought to have been done. No one objects to a little fun now and then carried out in a sensible way but when it comes to larger abusing smaller ones, disarranging clothing and quarreling and fighting on the streets after school it is time for the parents to object. It is also their right to see that no such actions are permitted on the school premises where their children attend school.

If this hazing had been only among the boys, people would possibly not have said so much for all remember that "boys will be boys," but when students that are old enough to be young ladies take a smaller girl and treat her so roughly as to disarrange her hair and clothing and also make unkind remarks to her, it is time for someone to do something to save the reputation of the Spencerville High School.

A PARENT.

Mrs. Arthur Strevey and little son, are staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank House.

MRS. HART'S
Fall and Winter Styles in Millinery

We are going to dispense with our usual fall and winter opening and wish to invite your attention to our full and complete line of millinery goods which we now have on display.

For Your Inspection

We have hats of all kinds and styles; hats for the school girl, dress hats, the new silk and satin hats and other styles and shapes too numerous to mention.

Caps and Hoods

We also have a full line of caps for children and boys see the little tots.

We shall be pleased to have you call, look at our stock and get our prices before purchasing. You will receive courteous attention whether you are a purchaser or not.

Cora B. Hart, Spencerville, Ind.

Erick & Co.

LOOK OUT for our Ad Next Week.

THURSDAY FORENOON

is the time we buy poultry.
Highest Market Price Paid.

Bring in your produce

3rd. Annual
FREE FALL EXHIBIT will be held at AUBURN
Oct. 7=8=9
$2,000 in Prizes.
Finest Free Attractions. Did You Get A Premium List?
If not write
C. H. NAPP
Assistant Secretary.
AUBURN, INDIANA

Went To Hospital.

Edward Hull in company with Dr. Shook went, Wednesday of last week, to the Hope hospital at Ft. Wayne, where he is being treated for blood poisoning. He came home from Tecumseh, Michigan, on account of trouble with blood poisoning in his hand. The injury became worse until it was thought best to have special treatment. The doctors at the hospital opened the arm above the elbow in order to stop the progress of the poison. Sunday the arm and hand were not much better, but the doctors were of the opinion that the poison could be driven out, and thus prevent the necessity of removing his arm.

S. S. Kimes
—M. D.—
Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.
Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

FRED THOMAS
THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

Many do not yet realize the wonderful values they can get in exchange for cash purchase tickets at our store. With every 10 cent purchase a ticket on a complete dinner set and when your purchase amounts to one dollar you get a ticket on a China Closet. You can see both these premiums in our store and they are certainly worth your attention.

Our Fall Shoes are all in.
Also a full line of Rubbers.

Rain Coats from.....$10 to $12.50.
Extra good Trousers.....$3.00 to $2.50.

Spencerville, Indiana.

SEPTEMBER

0344
L 903

POPULAR PULPIT

HOW TO CONQUER TEMPTATION.

By Rev. William C. Stinson.

There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God, who is faithful, will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.—I. Corinthians 10:13.

Every man realizes that when he would do good evil is present with him. Sanctity is ever pursued by haunting forms of sin that lurk in ambush, choose their moment for surprise and spring upon their victim when he least suspects their presence. Sometimes we divide persons into the tempted and the untempted. There are persons whose life flows along as smoothly and quietly as a brook in a sheltered meadow. They seem not to be disturbed by any temptations within or without. Or they live on such high altitudes of spiritual serenity as to escape the moral miasmas of the valley. Let us not be deceived by such a classification.

Weak, shallow natures are the only ones exempt from temptation. They are below temptation, not above it. Strong natures never escape temptation and usually the stronger the personality the stronger and fiercer the temptation. Temptation itself is not sin. Temptation is infection; sin is disease. Whether one catches or resists the disease depends upon his moral constitution. Malaria seizes the man in whose body the disease finds a susceptible condition. Temptation is an inducement to depart from the path of rectitude and may spring from without or from a man's own nature. As an outward solicitation it comes to one man, and he says, "Yes." It comes to another man, and he says "No." The outward temptation arouses the personality within a man. The outward appeal to do wrong measures the temptable element within.

The reason why one man overcomes temptation and another does not is not so much because of difference in circumstances, but because of the difference in personality. You may place two men in the same environment. One man succumbs to its temptation because he has in his moral constitution the element of defeat; the other overcomes because he has within him the pledge of victory.

This is not underrating circumstances. Many a man's security from temptation lies in cutting himself loose from the outward associations of wrong. Let him make a solemn compact with himself that he will remain away from the place of temptation. The devil enters the soul of many a man through his mouth, his eyes, his ears. The man thus influenced should make a holy covenant with his senses of taste, sight and hearing.

But a man's security lies not so much in seclusion. He must go out into the world. The greatest safeguard against temptation is self-culture. A healthy body is the best resistant against disease. Rules of life are good but frequently powerless. Better is it to have a strong soul, iron in the blood. Let a man build up his moral constitution by thinking noble thoughts, derived from the habitual practice of reading good books, performing noble deeds, associating with pure women and honorable men. Let a man walk in the spirit and he will not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. Good literature, pure friendship and honorable toil are among the methods which God provides to enable a man to overcome temptation. Of all books the Bible is the best, for its passes as iron into the blood and gives vigor to the will. Of all friendships, the sense of the companionship of the Man of Nazareth is the most invigorating. The power and purity of his life may be claimed and used in every hour of temptation. Devote yourself to God and you will find God fights the battles of a will resigned.

THE FRUITS OF FAITH.

By Henry F. Cope.

"The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, kindness, goodness, self-control; against such there is no law." Galatians v., 22.

When you have taken stock of all the fruitage of your life how many of these things are yours? Though you have all other possessions, what are they worth without these? Here are the supremely desirable blessings of any life, those that being present make the barren board a feast or, being denied, turn the sweetest cup to bitterest gall.

These are the elements and attributes that make all the difference in every life. Yet they are attainable on equal terms to all. The rich man sitting in the splendid restaurant will not find them on the menu card; his money cannot buy them. The humblest laborer, looking across plain, homely fare, may find them all in face of wife and children and in the simple joys of home.

Men hurry across the seas and over the continents; they rush from one amusement and distraction to another seeking these fruits of the fairer world. Others spend all their energies laying up money, hoping some day to have enough to purchase such blessings. Yet how foolish are we all, for these things are not to be found with much searching nor bought with much gold; they are free to all who will have them.

Love and joy and peace and all that makes life fair and sweet are not for sale on any counter or in any store; they are not hidden away in strange places. They are fruits of the spirit; they spring up and ripen in the heart of man; they are from within and not from without.

How much we all need to remember this, that the great things in any life are the things within itself. The infinite has set infinitude in our hearts. The good things, the eternal things spring up within. What you are and what you really have is dependent not on your circumstances but on the deep sources, the secret springs of your life.

We have whatever we set first in our hearts. If the greatest good in life is gold, you will have gold; if you set fame as the goal of life, doubtless you will reach it. And if the chief things are those that are not things at all, the affection of friends, the good will of neighbor, the common joys of living, the pleasures of patience, and the power of a well ordered life, then these blessings, too, are ours.

No man can make himself, his true self, rich by sitting in a bank of money bags. No man can make himself wise by sitting in a book store, and the poorest fools of all are those who seek to find happiness by sunning themselves in the rays of artificial merriment and laughter. Environment has its part to play, but it only plays it in response to some spirit within us.

Life's satisfactions all spring out of the soul. If your heart cannot give you happiness in a cottage it will do no more for you in a palace. Make a man a being without that inner self, without the sense of that which is more than flesh and longer than time, and you have made life a dreary, empty business of bargaining and counting things and no more.

If a man is only dust, then let him scramble for the dirt; let the beast become more and all of beauty and ideals be counted as folly. But if there be in him the spark of the divine, if he has gleams of an infinite life and love to which he belongs, if he is the child of the great spirit, then let him live more and more for the higher life toward which his being aspires.

Deep within us and ever we know that these fruits of the spirit are more to be desired than any things in the world of sense. Yet they have no place, no jurisdiction, in our lives except as we are spiritual, God-born beings, while we have no possibility of their possession as long as we set first the fruits of the dust, the trivial, empty prizes for which we are now striving.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

You cannot find truth by trimming.

A hot head makes no warm friendships.

Love does not stop at the boundaries of liking.

He has no force with men who has no faith in them.

It's easy to get tangled up in truth's castoff clothes.

The poorest life is the one that has no love for the poor.

Greatness is measured by our response to high appeals.

We never know our neighbors until we meet our needs.

Leaders of men never wait to feed on popular appreciation.

People who are true blue never suffer much from the blues.

Whether life shall be desert depends on the springs in your heart.

No one finds happiness without often turning his back on pleasure.

There's one unfailing cure for the blues; brighten some other life.

Proving the crookedness of other lives will not straighten your own.

When a man brags of his square dealing look out for the sharp edges.

This world is always godforsaken to those who have forsaken the good.

No heart is happier than the one that love leads to take a drudgery with joy.

He who sneers at enthusiasm is past the dead line of any great usefulness.

Dreams of golden streets will not pass in place of deeds of the golden rule.

The most singular thing about a man of genius is his estimate of himself.

The world always sees something more practical in painting a pump than in purifying the water down out of sight.

DONT'S FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't pledge your hands if not your heart.

Don't try to conquer sin unless you are willing to confess it.

Don't worry about results if you are devoting your best efforts to doing good.

Don't search for God in nature until you have thoroughly explored yourself.

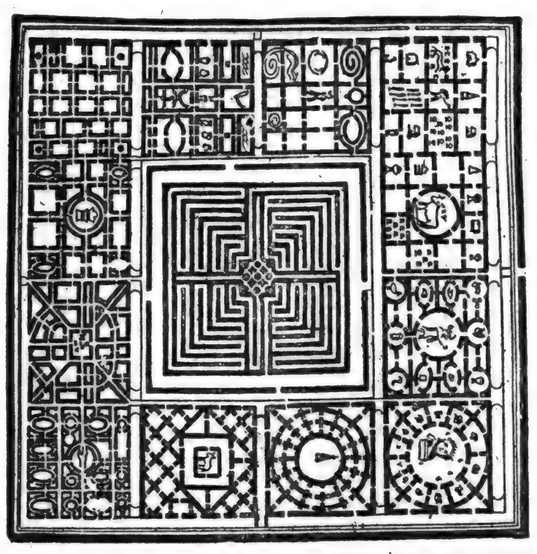
Don't indict men of total depravity if you would inspire them with conceptions of the divine character.

Don't depend on letters of introduction to convince others that you are a Christian worker in the Lord's vineyard.

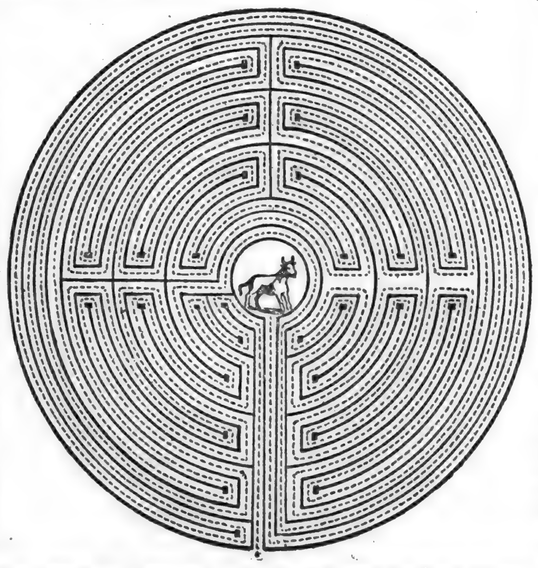
Don't profess consecration to the Lord's service while your acts and words too plainly indicate lack of consecration of effort.

Don't get your dreams of heaven from a sleepy preacher, but from consciousness of having done something to make heaven on earth.

TWO MOST WONDERFUL MAZES EVER BUILT.



The Top Illustration Shows the Moeris Labyrinth of Ancient Egypt, Built of Solid Marble and Containing 3,000 Buildings—No Key Is Furnished to This Intricate Labyrinth.



The Dotted Line Shown on the Famous Knossos Labyrinth, in Crete, Will Serve as a Key to the Maze.

The labyrinth or maze is a popular attraction at every exposition. Coney Island has several of them, all exceedingly simple in construction, but very difficult to find your way out of once you are fairly inside.

Coney Island's mazes, and even the more famous and ingenious ones at Hampton Court, at Versailles and Scheveningen, are mere toys compared with the two most famous labyrinths of ancient times, the plans of which are shown herewith. These are the Moeris labyrinth, in Egypt, and the Knossos labyrinth, in Crete.

The Moeris labyrinth was square and built entirely of marble. In it were 3,000 buildings arranged in groups of twelve palaces. The outer wall was decorated with lines of statues; within are the twelve groups of palaces and in the center are the gardens, the walks of which constitute a maze within a maze.

The Cretan labyrinth was formed by Daedalus for Minos as a prison for the minotaur to which twelve Athenian youths and maidens were offered every year. According to classical mythology, Theseus, coming to Crete with a band of victims, received the clue to the labyrinth from Ariadne and killed the monster.

The dotted guiding line, shown in the plan of the Cretan labyrinth, furnishes a key to the minotaur's prison in the center. It will be noticed that every path in the maze has to be traversed before the center can be reached. Looking down on the plan of the maze this looks like a simple and methodical way to reach the center, but if the reader were penned in between the high walls of the maze and invited to try it again he would probably soon lose his bearings and get hopelessly lost.

No key is furnished to the solution of the Moeris labyrinth. Readers are invited to find it for themselves if they can. An entrance to the outer palaces will be found in the top. There are several short-cuts by which the center garden may be reached; it is not necessary to traverse the entire group of 3,000 buildings. To reach the center of the garden will prove almost as much a puzzle as the Cretan labyrinth. And having once reached the middle it will be just as hard, perhaps harder, to get out again than it was to find a way in.

A MEDICATED SOUP.

One often reads of the tremblings and anxieties which accompany the first dinner parties of the young wife and housekeeper. Gerald Gordon, in "Life in the Mofussil," gives a bit of experience which shows that a youthful bachelor makes his debut as an entertainer with similar feelings of trepidation. Feeling almost as nervous as a girl for the success of his initial social enterprise in India, he entered the dining room with his guests.

The table looked very well. In the center was a large citron melon, with the thick rind cut into ornamental shapes. The flowers were prettily arranged. When I viewed the dining room before the arrival of the guests I felt well contented.

The critical moment was when we sat down. I was prey to a hundred and one anxieties. These fears were not allayed by seeing my right-hand neighbor only making a show of eating his soup. Then I saw the colonel take one spoonful and order the servant to take it away. My own turn arriving, I found to my horror a strong flavor of castor oil in the concoction. On looking round the table, it was clear that everyone else had discovered it.

The consumah, standing by the sideboard, was totally unconscious that anything was wrong, and I had to tell him twice to remove the soup.

Later the horrible mystery was explained. It was the custom of the native cooks to strain soup through a cloth, and a clean one was provided every day for the purpose. In my establishment we burn castor oil in the lamps. The duty of straining the soup that day was given to a wretched under-cook, who took a cloth which had been used for cleaning the lamps.

This was trying, but everyone tried to make the best of matters. The dinner went smoothly after this, until dessert. Among the dishes was one of green gages, with a lot of fluffy cream on top. I felt rather proud of this delicacy. The colonel tasted it.

"Goodness! Olives!" he shouted.

Alas! it was too true. At the time I had given out a bottle of green gages I had also given one of fine Spanish olives. Now, for the first time, I noticed the green gages lying innocently in a cut glass dish where the olives should have been.

This was too much for the guests' power of self-restraint, and they laughed loudly and long. It was the best way to get over it, but I did not soon hear the last of those olive tarts.

All Bound.

A citizen of culture and poetic taste went to a public library and asked for Shelley's "Prometheus Unbound."

He was rather taken aback when the librarian replied, with great hauteur:

"We don't keep any unbound books in this library."

If it were not for the fear of public opinion, most men would go to the devil in the day time.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Girl's Dress.

The simple dress that is worn over a guimpe is always one of the prettiest for young girls, and this model takes peculiarly satisfactory lines. It is adapted to light weight wool, to the pretty simple silks, that will be so much worn this season, and also to the washable materials, but as illustrated it is made from silk and cotton pongee trimmed with banding and with buttons. The waist and skirt are joined beneath the belt, so forming the semi-princesse dress that is a feature of the season, and the short sleeves are of the latest cut, yet the dress is consequently an exceedingly simple one For the trimming any banding is appropriate, and if buttons are not liked embroidered discs could be substituted, or the plaits can be left plain.

PATTERN NO. 5984.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 5984.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Corset Cover Closing in Back.

Pretty corset covers are always enticing, and this one, which closes at the back, is specially desirable beneath the fashionable blouses. It is prettily trimmed at the front and can be made either with the short puff sleeves or without. Lingerie batiste with trimming of lace makes a most satisfactory garment of the sort, but nainsook, and all similar materials, and also the thin wash silks, which many women like for the purpose, are appropriate. In addition to its other advantages, the corset cover allows of a neck finish of several sorts.

PATTERN NO. 6047.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly. For convenience, write your order on the following coupon:

Order Coupon.

No. 6047.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

PROVERBS AND PHRASES.

If I rest I rust, says the key.—German.

Force can never destroy right.—Latin.

Beauty vanishes, virtue endures.—German.

Impudence and wit are vastly different.—Latin.

He who climbs too high is near a fall.—Greek.

MY OWN FAMILY USE PE-RU-NA.

HON. GEORGE W. HONEY.

Hon. George W. Honey, National Chaplain U. V. U., ex-Chaplain Fourth Wisconsin Cavalry, ex-Treasurer State of Wisconsin, and ex-Quartermaster General State of Texas G. A. R., writes from 1700 First St., N. E., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"I cannot too highly recommend your preparation for the relief of catarrhal troubles in their various forms. Some members of my own family have used it with most gratifying results. When other remedies failed, Peruna proved most efficacious and I cheerfully certify to its curative excellence."

Mr. Fred L. Heland, for nine years a leading photographer of Kansas City, Mo., located at the northeast corner of 12th and Grand Aves., cheerfully gives the following testimony: "It is a proven fact that Peruna will cure catarrh and la grippe, and as a tonic it has no equal. Druggists have tried to make me take something else 'just as good,' but Peruna is good enough for me."

Pe-ru-na in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets, which represent the solid medicinal ingredients of Peruna.

COURIERS ACROSS SAHARA.

New Service from Niger to Mediterranean—A 1,000-Mile Route.

Though a journey across the Sahara is still an undertaking of some magnitude, the pacification of the central region by the French has been wonderfully rapid during the last five years, says the Pall Mall Gazette.

Removed, as it were, from the exciting influence of events in Morocco, and undisturbed by Senussite propaganda, the French officers have been able to establish friendly relations with the Taureg and other Berber tribes, and have organized a chain of posts right across the desert connecting Algeria with French West Africa. The route for the telegraph has been surveyed and a "wireless" installation is being established.

Meantime by a recent mail from Dakar the governor of French West Africa reports that he has instituted a monthly service by couriers between the Niger and the Mediterranean. The southern point of the departure will be the ancient town of Gaso on the Niger, some 20 miles below Timbucktu, and the point of departure from the north Insalah in the oasis of Tuat, which is some 30 miles south of the rail head in the Sud Oranasis. Intermediate posts have been established at Agades and the Ahaggar. The oversight of the new route covers fully 1,000 miles of desert.

Much is expected in the way of accustoming the wild tribesmen of the Sahara to the new order of things from the regular running of this service and possibly some development of trade may follow. But at present it will be useful chiefly as a means of rapid communication between the French military posts. It is intended that officers selected for service in or returning home from the Niger districts shall make use of the Trans-Saharan route, which will be more direct and less costly than the journey from or to France via Senegal or Dahomey. Both horses and camels will be used on the new service.

Are Your Clothes Faded?

Use Red Cross Ball Blue and make them white again. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

Submarine Navigation.

The idea of the submarine is certainly as much as 200 years old, but most of the earlier plans were flat failures. In 1774 an inventor named Day lost his life during an experimental descent in Plymouth sound. Bushnell of Connecticut in 1775 contrived a submarine vessel propelled by some kind of screw. Robert Fulton also in 1796 invented a box which when filled with combustibles might be propelled under water and made to explode under the bottom of a ship. It is hard to say who was the originator of the idea of the submarine boat unless it was Day.—New York American.

SEPTEMBER

L 903

0345

This woman says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved her life. Read her letter.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words. For years I suffered with the worst forms of female complaints, continually doctoring and spending lots of money for medicine without help. I wrote you for advice, followed it as directed, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored me to perfect health. Had it not been for you I should have been in my grave to-day. I wish every suffering woman would try it."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.

Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful "Cascarets" for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to "Cascarets" for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year.

James McGuns, 109 Mercer St., Jersey City, N. J.

Best for The Bowels

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 598

ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

Get your Letter Paper and Envelopes printed at this office. We can give you the

EAGLE LINEN

PAPER and ENVELOPES

It is fine and will suit you. Try it.

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 355 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N.Y.

If afflicted with sore Eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

REVIEW OF INDIANA

W. G. Kist and T. W. Hess, of Warsaw, will establish a daily newspaper at Garrett. It will be called the Daily Press.

As a result of a small cork slipping into her throat, the 3-year-old daughter of George Hicks, ten miles west of Richmond, choked to death.

It is announced that the chair factory recently moved to Evansville from Boyd, Wis., will start operations on November 1, with a force of 100 men.

Mrs. Lycurgus Beeson, of Milton, has a dahlia growing in her doryard that measures eleven feet in height. The plant looks well and has a number of fine flowers.

Samuel Hawkins, of Crawleyville, caught two large catfish in the Wabash river, each weighing forty-four pounds. Hawkins experienced considerable difficulty in landing them.

A telegram received in Brazil recently announced that William Hunt, a single man, aged 38 years, had been found dead in a corn field, near Harrisburg, Ill. At the side of the body was an empty whisky jug. The young man's home was in Brazil, where he belonged to one of the highly respected families.

Claude Leach, a farmer living near Fowlerton, was tossed by an angry bull, the animal throwing Mr. Leach high into the air twice, the second time throwing him over a wire fence and out of its reach. Attending physicians say no bones were broken, but Mr. Leach is black and blue as the result of his unusual experience.

Moses Overholser, 80 years old, a bachelor and farmer, living ten miles west of Goshen, bought a cow at a sale. While leading the animal home, it rushed him, knocked him down and trampled him. A nephew drove the cow off and took his uncle to a doctor, who thought he would recover. En route home the aged man died.

In a divorce complaint filed in the Circuit Court at Anderson by Julia Lawson, 54 years old, against William Lawson, a well-known farmer near Anderson, she alleged that she was the sixth wife of Lawson; that they were married last January and separated last week. She charged him with cruelty. Mrs. Lawson returned to Tipton where she is well known.

Owing to the continued drought in the vicinity of Elwood automobile owners are unable to use their machines outside the city, the dust being several inches deep on the roadways. A machine running from ten to fifteen miles an hour throws such a cloud of dust that the occupants can scarcely breathe. Many owners have placed their autos in the garage to await a rain.

Physicians from all parts of Clay County report an epidemic of hives, something never before known in this or any other county, so they assert. It is said that in the county there are no less than 300 cases of the disease. In some families every member is affected from the parents to the babies, and some of the cases reported are of a serious character. The physicians are unable to account for the prevalence of the disease.

While Frank Turner, of Owensville, was drilling a well at a depth of 70 feet on the Jones farm, two snakes were seen to drop out of the drill pipe. It is believed the snakes crawled into the casing and fell to the bottom while the drillers were at dinner. At a depth of 80 feet the drill was obstructed by a layer of straw. Straw was matted around the drill when it was taken out. The presence of straw at that depth is a mystery, as the ground where the well was being drilled is perfectly level.

While John Wright, a farmer, living west of Brownsville, was cutting corn, his dogs cornered, in a thicket nearby, what he supposed to be a groundhog. Going to the thicket he saw a strange-looking animal in a bush. It sprang at him and had it not been for the dogs he would have fared badly. The animal succeeded in getting away from the dogs and is now in the large thicket. Young pigs have been missed in the neighborhood and the farmers are very much alarmed. It is thought the animal is a lynx and an effort will be made to capture it.

Spring chicken is cheaper than beefsteak in Warsaw. Prices for young dressed fowls are as low as 10 cents a pound. As a result of this poultry packers and large dealers are holding their stock. Many of them are fattening the chickens for the Thanksgiving trade. Beyer Brothers & Co., who have packinghouses in various cities in Northern Indiana, are shipping thousands of young chickens to the company's pens at Rochester, to be fed and fattened until the market shows improvement. There is a prospect of plenty of turkeys this fall.

Arthur Palmer, aged 59 years, and for many years editor of the Worthington Times, and the oldest printer in the county, lost a finger while cleaning a job press at the office of the Linton Record.

Special Judge Watkins, of the Huntington County Circuit Court, has set the third trial of Charles Dunn, charged with the murder of Alice Cothrell at Wallen six years ago, for the 7th of December. The aged prisoner is now out on bail.

The Wabash river at Huntington is the lowest it has been known to be in twelve years.

Elwood Sine and Macy Antrim left Peru recently for Empire, canal zone, to work in the Government service. This makes Mr. Sine's fourth trip to the isthmus.

A cow belonging to James Quinlan, of Montezuma, died a few days ago without apparent cause. On dissecting the animal to learn, if possible, the cause of death, a hat pin was discovered imbedded in her heart. It is supposed she swallowed the pin, which finally made its way to her heart.

That part of the Root furniture factory in Shelbyville which was destroyed by fire almost two weeks ago, will be rebuilt, the managers having let the contract last week. The new building will be completed in eight weeks, and will be of the same dimensions as the old one, 80x50, and three stories high.

Leslie Brown, of Hortinville, recently perfected and patented a magazine shotgun that will shoot fourteen times without reloading, at the rate of 150 shots a minute. The Remington Arms Company has offered Mr. Brown $5,000 for his patent, but he values it at several times that amount and will not accept the offer.

When Caleb Powers, of Kentucky, appeared before a large audience for a lecture in Anderson recently, he was surprised by meeting the Rev. J. W. Walters, an old friend and neighbor of Mr. Powers, at Barboursville, Ky., several years ago. Mr. Walters said that he knew Mr. Powers from boyhood and had always respected him.

A turkey hen, which has very peculiar habits, is owned by Mrs. Hugh Dobbins, who lives west of Shelbyville. The hen is a mother in the true sense of the word. While she has no offspring of her own to care for, she is harboring the young of other fowls. At the present time she is caring for fifteen white chickens and a number of guineas which have been recently hatched.

The $10,000 damage suit of Hurby Hamm against Martha Leslie, his wealthy mother-in-law, whom he charges with alienating his wife's affections, has begun at Columbus. Hamm alleges Mrs. Leslie repeatedly drove him from her home, won his wife's affections from him, and refused to permit her to live with him. The wife was but 14 and the husband 17 years old when they were married.

George T. White, probably the oldest blacksmith in Johnson County, is dead of apoplexy at his home in Greenwood. He came to Greenwood from Ohio more than fifty years ago, and set up a shop on the site of his present home and continued in active work until the death of his wife, a few weeks ago, when he closed his shop and patiently waited the end. He was 77 years old, and the father of seven children, five of whom survive him.

Joseph Adams, of Reeve Township, Daviess County, belongs to a large family, twenty-three of whom will vote for W. J. Bryan this year, and he issues a challenge, asserting that this is the largest number of voters in a single family that will vote for the Democratic presidential candidate this fall. He is a member of a family of thirteen children, eleven of whom have families of their own. "I met the challenge of the Huberts, of Carlyle, Ill., and any other family in the whole country," says Mr. Adams.

Scott Lawrence, a farmer living about two miles from Silver Lake, while driving a well, struck a vein of gas, or something quite similar to natural gas, when down about eighteen feet. After a number of trials, he failed to ignite it. The odor was similar to natural gas, and it flowed from the pipe with considerable force, producing a whistling noise that could be heard for half a mile. Although the gas was allowed to flow for several hours, there seemed to be no diminution in the force. Lawrence then continued to drive the pipe, and five feet below the pocket of gas, he struck a strong vein of pure water.

The almost complete skeleton of a mastodon was unearthed in Perry Township, Miami County, last week by ditchers working for John McClain. The huge head was discovered first, and the workmen afterward proceeded to uncover the remainder cautiously in order to get the other bones without destroying them. Fred Fite, postmaster at Denver, who is a taxidermist, was sent for and he superintended the work of uncovering the skeleton. The bones filled a big farm wagon and were taken to Mr. Fite's home, where he will mount them. Twelve five-pound teeth were found and five of them in the jaws. This makes five mastodon skeletons found in Miami County within the last twenty years.

Cherry trees in the orchard of W. C. D. Stevenson, in Dillsboro, are in full bloom. While this is a very unusual happening, it is even more remarkable this fall because of the long continued drought.

Mrs. Charles Hines fell from the back porch of her home in Bedford to the ground below, a distance of six feet with a tub of boiling water. In landing Mrs. Hines was severely scalded on the breast and arms and badly bruised.

PRESCRIBED CUTICURA

After Other Treatment Failed—Raw Eczema on Baby's Face Had Lasted Three Months—At Last Doctor Found Cure.

"Our baby boy broke out with eczema on his face when one month old. One place on the side of his face the size of a nickel was raw like beefsteak for three months, and he would cry out when I bathed the parts that were sore and broken out. I gave him three months' treatment from a good doctor, but at the end of that time the child was no better. Then my doctor recommended Cuticura. After using a cake of Cuticura Soap, a third of a box of Cuticura Ointment, and half a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent he was well and his face was as smooth as any baby's. He is now two years and a half old and no eczema has reappeared. Mrs. M. L. Harris, Alton, Kan., May 14 and June 12, 1907."

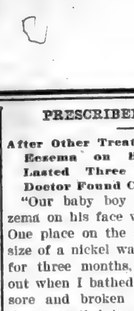
A Curious Plant.

"A curious plant," said an eminent botanist, "is the wild tamarind or juba plant of the riverside and waste places of tropical America, and very strange are its effects upon the nonruminant animals that feed upon its young shoots, leaves, pods and seeds. It causes horses to lose the hair from their manes and tails, has a similar effect upon mules and donkeys and reduces pigs to complete nakedness. Horses are said to recover when fed exclusively on corn and grass, but the new hair is of different color and texture from the old, so that the animal is never quite the same as it was. One animal of which I personally knew, after feding on the plant, lost its hoofs and had to be kept in slings until they grew and hardened again. Ruminant animals are not thus affected, and the growth of the plant is actually encouraged in the Bahamas as a fodder plant for cattle, sheep and goats. The difference is probably due to changes effected upon it in the chewing of the cud."

AWFUL GRAVEL ATTACKS.

Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills After Years of Suffering.

F. A. Rippy, Depot Ave., Gallatin, Tenn., says: "Fifteen years ago kidney disease attacked me. The pain in my back was so agonizing I finally had to give up work. Then came terrible attacks of gravel with acute pain and passages of blood. In all I passed 25 stones, some as large as a bean. Nine years of this ran me down to a state of continual weakness and I thought I never would be better until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The improvement was rapid and since using four boxes I am cured and have never had any return of the trouble."



Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Boat Raising Feat.

Navigators on the Great Lakes are interested in an experiment now being made off White Lake in Lake Michigan. The work is a boat raising feat—to lift a big steamer, the State of Michigan, formerly of the Berry line, out of 60 feet of water in Lake Michigan. It is being carried on by Fernando Staud, of Chicago, and if the experiment is successful, salvage operations on the chain of lakes will take on renewed interest. Staud proposes to raise the sunken steamer by means of four huge buoys, each 32 feet long and 14 feet in diameter. The buoys are of metal, and it is purposed to fill them with gas and sink them under parts of the submerged boat. The surface of the lake being reached, the water will be pumped out of the hull and the craft saved for further use.

WHY suffer with eye troubles, quick relief by using PETTIT'S EYE SALVE, 25c. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

Only the "Effects."

On one of the western rivers some years ago the steamboat F. X. Thompson ran on a snag and was sunk. It settled in the water in such a way that only the initials of the name painted on the side of the boat showed above the surface. The wreck was regarded with much interest by the passengers on the next boat that went up the river. One of them, more curious than the others, hunted up the captain.

"Captain," he asked, "do you know the name of that steamboat?"

"Yes, sir," answered that officer. "That's what is left of the F. X. Thompson.

"What happened to her?"

"She seems to have sunk."

"But what do you suppose was the cause of her sinking?"

"The cause?" said the captain. "I don't know, sir. All we can see is the F. X."

If you wish beautiful, clear, white clothes, use Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents

The Office Minstrels.

Bones—Mistah Johnsing, wot am de diffunce 'tween a campaign postah an' a honest office holdah?

Interlocutor—I give that one up, Sam. What is the difference between a campaign poster and an honest office holder?

Bones—De one am a lit'ograft an' de uddah am a foe to graft.

Interlocuto"—Ladies and gentlemen, the famous tenor, Prof. Nicholin de Slott, will now sing the latest popular ballad, entitled "Turn Down the Gas, Clarence; Papa's Snoring to Beat the Band."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

THINKS GUM CHEWING GOOD.

French Scientist Willing to Aid the Big American Industry.

A French scientist, Dr. Leon Meunier, writing to Les Annales on the habit of gum chewing, says: "A man must thoroughly masticate his food if he aspires to digest well. Mastication is a very important physical function. Three successive digestions are indispensable. The first takes place in the mouth. Influenced by the ferment of saliva we begin to digest amalaceous substances, an operation which is continued in the stomach. * * * When people have hyperchlorhydria the salivary digestion is seriously affected and the more so when nothing is done to take up the elements of saliva." Dr. Meunier signals the utility of exciting the flow of saliva in hyperchlorhydria and of artificially producing a secretion of salivary ferment. He says:

"During a trip I made to the United States in 1904 I was struck by an empirical treatment which has been employed by Americans many years to facilitate stomachic digestion. In all the cities of the United States and Canada I saw large numbers of people chewing a substance to take the place of the vulgar 'quid' of tobacco. That substance is sold everywhere under the name of 'chewing gum' of 'pepsin gum.' I analyzed that gum and found that there was not a trace of pepsin in it. In all cases the gum was an insoluble aromatized resin. The gum chewers are legion—one man of every two and one woman of every three will tell you that he or she delivers himself or herself so ardently and with such docile persistence to that exercise after every meal in order to facilitate digestion."

Being anxious to know whether or not the practice of gum chewing is useful, Dr. Meunier prepared a test gum—made of flavored, completely insoluble resin—to see if by reason of its agreeable character it could be utilized to engender a digestive saliva devoid of any foreign substance. Following are the results of his experiments: When the patient had not chewed the gum half an hour after the beginning of a repast (that is to say, when the amylactic phase is nearly over) from five to thirty grams of sugary matter was found.

Under the same conditions, when the subject had chewed gum, from six to thirty-eight grams of soluble amylaceous matter was found, which proves that the starch digested, estimated either in dextrine or in amylaceous soluble matter, is superior when the digester has chewed gum. Generally speaking, saliva dilutes the food in the stomach and the digestion of amylaceous matter gains 50 per cent by the action of the gum—or by the action of chewing the gum. So we may conclude that gum judiciously chewed empirically exercises a real therapeutic action on the stomachic digestion. "The Americans are right. When the salivary function is weak let us chew."—Review of Reviews.

Succeeded Beyond His Expectations.

Rivers' nose was swollen to twice its natural size, and his face was ornamented with various strips of court plaster arranged without the slightest regard to symmetry of design.

"Hello, old chap!" exclaimed Brooks; "what has happened to you?"

"Do you recall the fact that the last time you saw me I was looking for the infernal scoundrel that stole my umbrella?"

"Yes."

"Well, I found him, Brooks; I found him!"—Chicago Tribune.

One of the Essentials

of the happy homes of to-day is a vast fund of information as to the best methods of promoting health and happiness and right living and knowledge of the world's best products.

Products of actual excellence and reasonable claims truthfully presented and which have attained to world-wide acceptance through the approval of the Well-Informed of the World; not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting and obtaining the best the world affords.

One of the products of that class, of known component parts, an Ethical remedy, approved by physicians and commended by the Well-Informed of the World as a valuable and wholesome family laxative is the well-known Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

SICK HEADACHE

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine Must Bear Fac-Simile Signature

Brent Good

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

The Cream OF TEXAS Farming Lands For Sale

In the "Shallow Water Belt" just below the Panhandle. Pure water at from 20 to 45 feet. A country that offers to investors and homeseekers today an opportunity equal to that offered by Illinois and Iowa forty years ago. Soil of unsurpassed richness, rainfall abundant, climate salubrious. The land of corn, cotton, wheat, oats, alfalfa and fruits and vegetables of all kinds. The paradise of hog and cattle raisers. Write me for particulars. Also LAND coming under the GOVERNMENT IRRIGATION project in rich North Platte Valley of Nebraska. Cheap now but will be worth $100 an acre next year when water is ready to turn on. Write me. ROBERT LUCAS, Iowa City, Ia.

FOR SALE FINEST LANDS IN THE NORTH-WEST. 40,000 ACRES of choice land in the celebrated CLOVER BELT OF WISCONSIN, all within a few miles of three railroads; good roads and schools; terms and price on tracts of 40 acres and up reasonable. Write for information. SETTLERS ESPECIALLY DESIRED. John S. Owen Lumber Co., Owen, Wis.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

Copper, Vulcan, the multimillion dollar key mine to Lawsons Trinity, National and Balakiala, Smelters; Exploration stock 25c. Will advance 1,000 per cent. and again. "Brains and Bullion" ready to mail you. Shasta Brokerage Co., Dunsmuir, Cal.

Of the English in India, there are six men to one woman.

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 40—1908

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

ROSEBUD GOVERNMENT LANDS

BEST REACHED FROM DALLAS

Dallas and Gregory, S. D., are reached only by the Chicago & North Western Railway. They are the only towns on the reservation border. Dallas and Gregory are the main registering points. President Roosevelt has designated Dallas for the final drawing October 19, 1908.

The Chicago & North Western Ry. is the only all-rail route to the reservation.

A million acres of fertile agricultural and grazing land in the great Missouri Valley Corn Belt is to be opened to Homesteaders October 5 to 17, 1908.

For information about how to get a homestead with details regarding rates, train schedules, address

THE NORTH-WESTERN LINE

W. B. KNISKERN
Pass'r Traffic Mgr., C. & N. W. Ry.
Chicago, Ill.

NWBI

20 MULE TEAM BORAX

by softening the water, cleans the skin thoroughly, removes odor of perspiration and renders the skin soft and velvety.

All dealers. Sample, Booklet and Parlor Card Game "WHIZ," 10c. Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES

Color more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. You can dye any garment without ripping apart. Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG CO., Quincy, Illinois

SEPTEMBER

U346
L 903

Your Hat Is Now Here

Yours fitted to your head and face. Special prices this week. Mrs. Warner, Milliner.

News Items

Buy our stationary,

The Hicksville Laundry gives either the gloss or domestic finish.

GEO. MILLIMAN, AGT.

Clarence Hart placed four fine specimens of Tulpahaucan apples in the News window also a bunch of home grown peanuts.

Vere Tustison and wife of New Haven stopped in this place Monday forenoon waiting for the B. & O. train to Hicksxile where they went to visit relatives.

A fire occured at the home of Sam Warner Tuesday night which damaged the east side of the house considerably.

Mrs. Della Dolph of South Bend came Monday evening to visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hart.

Cider Mill

Harry Kees will make cider at his mill in St. Joe, two days each week; Thursday and Friday. Bring your apples to St. Joe and have Kees make your cider.

On Time

Baltimore & Ohio.

No. 4.	East bound	4:55 a. m.
No. 16.	East bound	12:40 p. m.
No. 17.	West bound	11:58 a. m.
No. 3.	West bound	8:42 p. m.

BLACKSMITH SHOP.

Pinkerton Bros.

Located in the old Sailer stand on Third Street, south of the Big Four Store.
We are prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing and want an opportunity to show the people of this vicinity what we are able to do. We invite you to bring your work to our place of business and we guarantee to satisfy you.

Horseshoeing Our Specialty.

J. V. Pinkerton A. V. Pinkerton

POST CARDS.

Until further notice I will make post cards for 50c per doz.

Here Every Day. Phone No. 20.

W. C. DeLONG, Photographer.

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled—proper cleaning of the wheat—correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

Plans Made.

Chastine Johnson has plans laid, music out, and all well under way for a series of from seven to nine contests and recitals for 1909, two to be full recitals by one student and a full recital of left handed pieces. Four or five to be held at St. Joe and three or four at Auburn.

Clerk Relieved.

County Clerk Jenkins was relelved of over $80 at the Hicksville Fair Thursday. He carried the money in a bill book and did not miss it until Friday morning.

Woods Burn.

Tursday afternoon a fire started in the woods on what was formerly known as the Pete Humbarger farm two miles east of Coburn's Corners. The origin of the fire is not known and it had gained considerable headway before it was discovered. The neighbors turned out and fought nobly but were not able to get the fire under control until late Thursday evening. The fire burned in stumps and log heaps all day Friday and needed continuous watching in order to keep it under control.

How to get Strong.

P. L. Daily, of 1247 W. Congress St Chicago, tells of a way to become strong He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c.

COBURN'S CORNERS

Does the horse need shoes? Have him shod at Pinkerton's, St. Joe.

Freeman Abel and wife of St. Joe visited Sunday with Walter Abel.

Mrs. Yarnell is visiting her daughter at Fort Wayne, Mrs. Erick.

J. A. Brown will fil his regular appointments at this place, next Sunday.

Alice Hart was a visitor with her son, Adrian, at Hicksville from Tuesday until Saturday of last week.

Fuchsia Hadsell spent Sunday with her uncle, Saxe Hadsell, and returned that evening to her home in Peru.

Will Maxwell took in the excursion to Chicago, Sunday and remained until Monday evening visiting his father near that city.

The Sunday School session was unusually interesting last Sunday. The attendance was good and the offering amounted to over $4.00.

Clyde Hart was the lucky one to draw the fire proof safe given by the Mellink Safe Co., at the Hicksville Fair. The safe is a neat one and will be of much value for the depositing of papers that need protection.

CONCORD

Edna Johnson who has been quite sick for the past week is better.

George Baker entertained his brother from near Edgerton, Sunday.

Charley Jacksons will move on their farm west of Concord this week.

A. H. Provines, wife and children visited with Jacob Baker, Sunday.

John George, wife and children spent Sunday with the former's Uncle Jim George and family.

Mrs. Wm. Sheldon of Johnstown Pennsylvania arrived here Thursday for a ten days visit with friends and relatives.

Leora and Minnie George who have been working in Auburn and Kendallville spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

WABASH CORNERS.

O. K. Shull and family spent Sunday at Benj Hamilton's.

Mrs. J. B. White and Ella Gil of St. Joe were the guests of Letitia White last Thursday.

Birdie Brown of near Auburn and Mrs. James Dragoo were Sunday guests at Mart Hull's.

J. B. White of St. Joe, Roy White and family and Sherman Wolff and wife were Sunday guests at Gene White's.

Mr. and Mrs. Hissong of near Harlan spent Sunday at Will Scotts.

Several from this place attended the Hicksville fair last week.

Joe Shull, missed three days of school last week on accounut of sickness.

Jhonathan Boyles, who has been in bed for four years is failing very fast.

Sherman Rickett and wife spent Sunday at Tom Rickett's west of Spencerville.

Maud Braithwrite and daughter Pearl of Ft. Wayne were the guests of Mrs. Maurer and three sons, Saturday night and Sunday.

Mrs. Warner the milliner, is at Ft. Wayne this week buying something new of Reed Bros. and Waddell Co. of Cleveland.

HARLAN ITEMS.

Fred Smith spent Sunday at Churubusco.

Maud Jeness of Ft. Wayne, spent Sunday with Lyle Swift.

Lura Fry of Leo, spent Saturday and Sunday with friends.

S. V. James and E. C. Reichelderfer are remodeling their houses.

The Ladies of the M. E. church gave a social at the Starr House, Saturday night. Music was furnished by the Grabill Band.

Mrs. Rawie, a native of New Zeland gave two very interesting lectures at the M. E. church on Thursday and Sunday nights.

The Springfield Township Sunday school convention will be held at the Church of Christ, Saturday evening, Oct. 3 and Sunday afternoon, Oct. 4. A splendid programme has been prepared.

NEWVILLE ITEMS.

Elmer McDonald, wife and children of Kendallville are here visiting her parents John Miller and wife.

Frank Akins of Detroit, Michigan, came Friday evening to help in carring for his father Hall Akins.

Armenis Woodcox attended church at the Christian Church Sunday and took dinner at Maurice Headlys.

Frank Fitch's brother, wife and children of Ft. Wayne came Saturday evening to spend a few days with him.

Orva Enzor and Howard Benninghoff after two or three weeks vacation return to Angola to resume another years work in college.

Sadie Washler returned home Friday from Petoskey, Michigan, where she was called on account of sickness of her sister, Silvia Walter.

Mrs. Elect Ryan received word that her sister was in very poor health. She made immediate arrangements and started Saturday evening.

The river bridge at this place is receiving a new coat of paint and other repairing, the work is being done by the Spencerville bridge painters.

FAIRVIEW

Old papers at NEWS office.

Mrs. Aleck Platter spent Sunday at Harlan.

A few from this place attended the Hicksville fair, last week.

Norman Rolland and family, spent Saturday night and Sunday with his parents, northwest of Garrett.

SKATING.

RINK WILL BE OPEN ON SATURDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 26, 1908.

Gay Hay, wife and daughter Beulah, spent Sunday with Edward Bassetts'

Ethel and Erma Houser spent a few days with their uncle, Rev. G. E. Komp, of near Columbia City, last week.

Will Moudy and wife came home Friday night to attend the wedding of Mr. Moudy's brother, which occured Saturday evening.

Pinkerton Bros. desire to call attention to the fact that they are located here to do all kinds of blacksmithing and especially to satisfy you in horseshoing.

The preaching services at this place have been changed to Sunday afternoon in place of Sunday evening. The next appointment being one week from next Sunday.

Harry Milliman
The Druggist

DRUGS THAT ARE ALWAYS PURE.
FANCY PERFUMES
BRUSHES and COMBS
TOILET ARTICLES

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for ever purpose,

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

New line of Fishing Tackle. The Famous SNECK HOOK, SPOON HOOKS and TANDEM SPINNERS.

Expert Wooden Minnows.

Rev. Hill moved last week to his new charge at Laketon, Indiana.

Jessie Headley went to Kendallville, to visit relatives and attend the fair.

Rev. Couch of Harlan preached at the Christian Church last Sunday afternoon.

Bruno Seatlin of Farmer, Ohio, was visiting his cousin, Elmer Traxler over Sunday.

At this writing Hall Akins condition is not improved as much as his friends would like.

Rev. F. A. Thomas starts for Kansas City, Thursday to visit with his sister, Grace, who is in poor health and from there he goes on to Topeka Kansas, to enter his Evangelistic work.

J. H. Lake M. D

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house, and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 82.

St. Joe, Indiana.

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, American field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

Cloak and Ladies Suit Sale

On Wednesday Oct. 7th. will be our Grand Opening Sale day for Ladies Cloaks, Ladies Suits, Misses and Children Cloaks.

Mr. Schule, a representative of one of the Large Chicago Wholesale Houses, will be here all day to assist us in this Sale and he will also have an immense Line of Ladies Suits and Wraps for you to select from. Any suit bought on this day can be delivered at once

For this day we will make special low prices, which will mean dollars in your pockets. Don't forget the day.

Wednesday, Oct 7, All Day

The BIG FOUR STORe.

SEPTEMBER

U347
L 903

Supplement to the

St. Joe News

St. Joe, Ind. | Wednesday, September 30, 1908 | Tustison & Leighty, Pub

Local Briefs

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Mr. Willis of Waterloo was in town Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Leighty spent Sunday with relatives in Auburn.

W. R. Baxter and wife of Garrett visited Sunday with relatives.

Asa Shuff went to Reading, Mich. Friday and remained over Sunday.

Frank Scholes and his cement gang are putting in a bridge near Butler, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Reasoner spent Sunday at Ft. Wayne with their daughter, Mrs. Potter.

Mae Openlander came from home at Sherwood, Ohio, Thursday and remained until Friday noon with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leighty.

Pledge cards were printed in this office last week for the Methodist Protestant church. They are about to make some improvement's and hese pledge cards will be used in tolliciting funds.

Bring your laundry to George Millimans.

Addie Elliott of Butler spent a part of last week with friends, here.

Lee O. Tustison spent Saturday and Sunday at Muncie and Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bachtol of Waterloo visited Thursday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wiers.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Leighty visited with relatives and friends at South Bend, from Wednesday until Sunday.

John Sechler was at the Mort Foote sale Tuesday and served lunches and short orders to those who were in attendance.

Will Staman who has spent the summer with his parents, left Monday for Chicago where he will spend the winter continuing his work in the pharmacy school.

H. M Simmons is building a new barn on his farm near Hall's Corners in place of the one which recently burned. The new barn will be larger than the two old ones. W. A. G. Smith took his cement block machine to the Simmons place Tuesday to manufacture the blocks needed in the foundation.

WE HAVE IT.

Money
Geld
Dough
Stuff
Mezuma
Long Green

No matter what you call it.

WE HAVE IT.

We loan money at reasonable rates if our conditions are complied with and pay 4 per cent on Time Deposits. Safe and Conservative our motto.

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill, Indiana.

Joseph Witmer, Pres. Albert Egly, Cashier.
David Klopfenstein, V. Pres. Marcus Yager, Asst. Cashier.

Two Improved ..Stoves...

The Laurel Baseburner

The New Art Laurel, is without question the most striking specimen of beautiful design and perfect workmanship ever produced.

Combined with the beautiful design, you will find exclusive "Laurel" improvements that excel all others in relation to fuel economy, increased heating capacity simplicity of operation and control, and everlasting durability.

The Laurel Steel Range.

This is the great fuel-saver. It's two-flue construction makes it superior to all other ranges.

It has increased cooking facilities. Is fitted with a quick and even baking oven.

Coal Hods, Stove Boards, Sheet Iron Heaters, Stove pipe and Elbows, Stove Blacking.

Be Convinced

COME IN AND SEE THESE STOVES

AT

H V Kinsey & Son's

John Betz was so unfortunate as to have twenty dollars stolen, Thursday at Hicksville. He was getting on the train returning from the fair, when some one relieved him of the money.

You will get relief from Pain when Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are taken.

Some night prowler was so unfortunate as to lose a grain sack while around the barn on the Beeks Erick farm the other night. This individual may have the bag by calling on Rollan Bears who has very kindly preserved it for whoever lost it.

SEPTEMBER

U348
L 903

BARNEY'S STORE

SOL BARNEY

DEALER IN GENERAL MERCHANDISE

We want again to call your attention to our shoes and urge you to come in and see them. You ought to take particular pains to see this showing of shoes as they represent the most complete line ever shown here and we venture that there is no more complete line in DeKalb County.

SELZ SHOES

Yes, we handle the "SELZ" because there is none better. The quality question is solved in these shoes. The service that a purchaser gets out of a shoe depends upon what goes into it. SELZ are made of honest material.

Mr. Selz, a gray haired man of 85, says: "I would rather see every wheel in our eight factories stop, and close the doors than to dodge my own sense of honor in the manufacture of shoes. As long as the name SELZ goes on shoes it must stand for what it has always stood for: ABSOLUTE HONEST QUALITY."

BARNEY'S STORE

"Royal Blue."

Three styles of leathers are shown in the "Royal Blue."

Vici, Velour and Gun Metal.

All vici leather is made from selected skins and represents a uniform quality. The Gun Metal is becoming more and more popular every year; a dull finish and an excellent wearer. Velour calf is a dressy leather and takes a polish almost like a patent.

PRICE $4.00

A WORKING SHOE.

Made from heavy material and especially constructed for the laboring man. They are always soft and pliable and made on easy and very comfortable lasts. A shoe that will give the workingman satisfaction.

Price $3.00.

Selz Cushion Sole

The cushion sole has become a staple thing with many wearers. The special feature of this shoe is the felt cushion upon which the foot rests. It is dressy and serviceable and easy on the feet.

"POWHATTAN"

HIGH CUT.

A shoe that cannot be excelled for service, and one of the best shoes for wear in cold and wet weather. Its best quality leather and heavy double soles make it almost indestructible. Try a pair.

Price $4.50.

A COMPLETE LINE OF

New Mishawaka Ball Brand Rubber Goods

BARNEY'S STORE

0349
L 903

OCTOBER

OCTOBER

0350

L 903

Farrell . Clipper

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 7 1908. NO. 4

Local Items.

Mrs. Rose Johnston who has been keeping house for Henry Abel for some time, has returned to her home. Mrs. Ella Thompson of Ft. Wayne is doing the housework for him.

Mrs. Kate Perry of Holden, Mass., arrived here Sunday noon to visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thayer. She intends to remain here a number of weeks and meet her many friends in this vicinity.

J. K. Stafford of Auburn was calling on friends in town, Monday.

H. M. Widney and wife left Monday afternoon on the Wabash fast line, on their trip to Maine. They expect to remain at least six weeks. The trip is made purposely for the benefit of Mrs. Widney's health, and if the climate and location proves satisfactory they may decide to remain permanently. Mr. Widney's parents will remain on the farm during their absence.

CRAIG SHEFFER.

The St. Joe Blacksmith.

'Tis A Merry Klang

The anvil resounds from morning 'til night. We are busy all the time and want to keep busy. That is why we are careful of every bit of work we do, and are willing to guarantee every job of blacksmithing put out.

Remember I have purchased the Sailer blacksmith shop. The shop will be open every week day from morning until night. You will find us always ready to shoe your horses, mend broken iron work, set tires, or make any new piece in iron.

Let Me Prove It, To You.

S. S. Rally

The Lutheran Sunday School Sunday morning, held an interesting rally day session in which all the classes participated. The theme, A Voyage of Life, was carried out in songs and speeches and the decoration were suggestive of life on the ocean wave.

The program as given was a continuous comparison of our real life voyage to the voyage made by a ship as she leaves one port to cross the rolling tide to a destined harbor.

The applications of the different phases, as the clearance paper, compass, chart, dangers of the voyage, Life Saving Stations, were made in speeches and readings by W. C. Patterson, D. J. Baker, Mrs. Frank White Mrs. Dilley, Mrs. Patterson and others. Helen Patterson recited "Jesus Savior Pilot Me" to indicate "Our Pilot" in life's voyage.

The pastor's address was a continued application of the illustrative lessons to be derived from the ocean voyage, and he impressed many practical truths upon the minds of his listeners.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Lutheran Church will meet at the home of Mrs. J. D. Leighty, Thursday at 2 P. M.

Mrs. C. A. Patterson and Mrs. Jacob Sechler, will leave today noon for Bedford, Ind., to attend the State W. C. T. U. Convention. Mrs. Patterson will go as a delegate from the county and Mrs. Sechler as a delegate from the local union.

Killed By Pony

Word was received by relatives at Newville, last week, of the death of Lotus Chapman, the eleven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Chapman. The accident was extremely shocking. The child was riding a pet pony, when in some way she was thrown her foot catching in the stirrup. She was unable to free herself and the pony kicked her to death. The body was badly bruised and so disfigured that it could not be shipped to this place for burial.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are well known to people in this vicinity, Mrs. Chapman being a daughter of Mr. Aikens who is now very low on account of recent injuries. The Chapmans are at present residents near Pierre, South Dakota, having taken up a claim in that state a few months ago. The sympathy of their relatives and friends are theirs in this their severe trial.

Services Closed.

It was announced in last weeks issue that the protracted services at the Christian Church would close during the week. It was thought best by the pastor, however, to continue them over Sunday. They closed Sunday evening after lasting for three weeks. All the preaching was done by the pastor J. A. Brown and he expounded the scriptures in a masterful way. He was assisted in the music during the first two weeks by Fred Thomas of Newville. In all there were twenty five additions to the church during the meeting.

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Inner Man.

needs good wholesome food usually three times each day. Something to please his taste and nourish his body. We wish to call your attention to the extensive grocery line which we carry. It is our aim to have everything one could want and always of the best quality. Our Baked Goods are fresh and always baked to a standard grade and quality.

Vegetables.

You should know that we keep all kinds of vegetables in season, and we urge you to come here when you want any thing in the vegetable line.

Fresh Cranberries

Country Produce Wanted.

Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

BARNEY'S STORE

SOL BARNEY

DEALER IN GENERAL MERCHANDISE

We want again to call your attention to our shoes and urge you to come in and see them. You ought to take particular pains to see this showing of shoes as they represent the most complete line ever shown here and we venture that there is no more complete line in DeKalb County.

SELZ SHOES

Yes, we handle the "SELZ" because there is none better. The quality question is solved in these shoes. The service that a purchaser gets out of a shoe depends upon what goes into it. SELZ are made of honest material.

Mr. Selz, a gray haired man of 85, says: "I would rather see every wheel in our eight factories stop, and close the doors than to dodge my own sense of honor in the manufacture of shoes. As long as the name SELZ goes on shoes it must stand for what it has always stood for: ABSOLUTE HONEST QUALITY."

BARNEY'S STORE

"Royal Blue."

hree styles of leathers are shown in the "Royal Blue."

Vici, Velour and Gun Metal.

All vici leather is made from selected skins and represents a uniform quality. he Gu n Metal is becoming more and more popular every year; a dull finish and an excellent wearer. Velour calf is a dressy leather and takes a polish almost like a patent.

PRICE $4.00

Selz Cushion Sole

The cushion sole has become a staple thing with many wearers. The special feature of this shoe is the felt cushion upon which the foot rests. It is dressy and serviceable and easy on the feet.

A WORKING SHOE.

Made from heavy material and especially constructed for the laboring man. They are always soft and pliable and made on easy and very comfortable lasts. A shoe that will give the workingman satisfaction.

Price $3.00.

"POWHATTAN"

HIGH CUT.

A shoe that cannot be excelled for service, and one of the best shoes for wear in cold and wet weather. Its best quality leather and heavy double soles make it almost indestructible. Try a pair.

Price $4 50.

A COMPLETE LINE OF

New Mishawaka Ball Brand Rubber Goods

BARNEY'S STORE

BARNEY'S STORE

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE

Notice Is Hereby Given to all persons interested in the estate of Maria Hilderbrand deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 22nd. day of October, 1908, and show cause, if any, why my Final Settlement Accounts with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

Witness My name, this 1st. day of October, 1908. J. M. Milliman. Administrator.

John W. Baxter, Atty.

Just Issued.

Every reader of this article who has idle money, is requested to write for a little booklet just issued, that explains a first real estate mortgage, with a good rate of interest and gilt edge security back of it. All successful farmers, business men, school teachers, bankers, professional men and capitalists are especially invited to read the book. It gives good photographs of the land and its products and explains the method of a 6 per cent 1st. mortgage real estate bond issue. The Marion Trust Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., is trustee. The book will be mailed free upon request by writing W. J. Stapish, Anderson, Indiana. You must act without delay or you will miss more than you realize. Successful farmers should be especially interested.

Candidates, Hiram H. Slaybaugh and J. G. Philbrick were meeting the St. Joe voters, Friday.

School Items

Dale Widney was absent Monday.

Foster Gee visited the High School last Friday forenoon.

There was no tardiness nor absence in the High School last week.

One new student has enrolled this week in the primary department.

Winnie Bailey and Chloe Rhodenbaugh were High School visitors Friday afternoon.

Last week was another banner week for the intermediate room with an attendance of thirty-four. There was no tardiness and no absence.

Because the township trustee refused to transfer the Nelson children they have been compelled to change from the primary and intermediate rooms to the Carr district.

The intermediate room has them all beat for attendance and punctuality. For the month ending last Friday there were but two days absence and not a case of tardiness. A record which for the number enrolled has not been equaled in the history of the school.

J. H. Lake M. D.

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO 82.

St. Joe, Indiana.

MUSIC.

I cannot consider accepting more students at St. Joe for summer of 1909, than those already engaged except on a waiting list to fill a vacancy if someone quits. I shall travel less than last year.

No new organ students will be taken except in the fourth grade and only after examination. All others are requested to employ Miss Jessie Headley '08 Organ. One of the best organists and most competant, best prepared organ teachers I know. She intends to make music teaching her profession, has a reputation to make and will therefore do much more and work harder than one who is merely teaching for spending money. Some people are afraid of young teachers. I began here as a young teacher less than four years ago.

Old students who have not made positive engagement for next year and desire to continue should notify me at once of their intention, as I have several new students waiting for a place and who will come to my home or St. Joe for lessons if accepted.

Those who study continuously or have signified their intention of completing a course not included above. No reflection on any other teacher or previous statements are intended.

Chastine Johnston.

OCTOBER

0351
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 OCTOBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31

F. Q. 3rd. F. M. 9th. L. Q. 16th. N. M. 25th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Motorman Absent; Car Runs Wild.

An Indianapolis & Cincinnati traction car ran "wild" through the city of Connersville, Ind., for eight blocks, finally coming in collision with a freight car. As the car was coming down the Tenth street hill it struck a buggy at Lincoln avenue, in which was seated Mrs. John Petty. Mrs. Petty was thrown for some distance, and the buggy was demolished. The car was stopped and the motorman and conductor went to the assistance of the injured woman, who was unconscious. The trainmen carried her into a nearby residence.

Negroes Terror Stricken.

According to advices from portions of Calhoun, Baker and Miller Counties, Georgia, a reign of terror exists among the negroes because of raids of nights. In a recent ride through this district they destroyed thirteen negro churches and school houses, starting near Kestner, Ga., and riding through to New Salem. This is the same vicinity where some time ago a negro lodge room was dynamited. Several lynchings have also taken place in the district.

Plague Ravages Chinese City.

There have been five hundred deaths from the bubonic plague at Tong Eha, China, sixty miles northeast of Tien Tsin, since the outbreak of the epidemic. No alarm is felt, however, and it is not believed that the disease will spread. The cholera in the Yang Tse valley is abating, but the toll of deaths this season has been heavy. In Hang Kow 30,000 natives and a score of foreigners have died of the malady.

Two-Headed Baby Alive and Well.

A fine, healthy, two-headed girl baby, weighing eight pounds, has come to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Falen, of Bridgeport, Conn. Mother and babe are in the Bridgeport hospital and both are doing very well indeed. Joseph Falen, the father, is a business man and a well known resident of North Bridgeport. Mrs. Falen is the mother of four bright healthy children.

Auto and Street Car Crash.

When an automobile and street car crashed in Louisville, Ky., Miss Katherine Horde, member of a prominent family, was almost instantly killed; Robert Payne, a young society man, was crippled, perhaps permanently, and four other persons were more or less severely bruised. The automobile was the property of Raymond Minor, who was out for a spin with a party of friends.

Put Poison in Dough.

Angered because he had been discharged as cook in the Stanford Inn at Palo Alto, Cal., Chin, a Chinese, put a large quantity of irritant poison in the bread dough and as a result several students are in the hospital and 200 are ill. Prompt action of the university physicians was probably all that saved many from severe illness or death.

Great Strike is Ended.

The residents of Winnipeg, Man., were startled by the furious blowing of locomotive whistles, which was the signal announcing that the Canadian Pacific mechanics' strike, which started August 4th, had been declared off. The strike involved twenty thousand men.

Miss Hemenway to be Bride.

United States Senator James A. Hemenway and wife have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lena, to Bennett Gates, son of Harry B. Gates, a capitalist of Indianapolis, Ind. The wedding will take place in January.

Boat Lost in Storm.

Thousands of bales of rye straw have been washed ashore on the Lake Michigan coast from Pentwater to Little Point Sauble, and it is believed a boat has been lost in the heavy storm that has been prevailing for the past three days.

Michel Again Fire Scourged.

The town of Michel, B. C., was again swept by fire, the cause being unknown. Practically all the business houses were burned out. Loss $20,000, with small insurance.

Five are Injured.

Five persons were injured, two of them seriously, when a "sight-seeing" automobile in Pittsburg, Pa., was caught and crushed between two street cars.

FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH

REPORTS FINE OYSTER CROP.

New York Health Board Also Guarantees Their Purity.

"Best in several years," is what the dealers say of this fall's oyster crop in the Long Island waters. The future, too, is provided for in an excellent set of baby oysters. In the summer officials of the health department have inspected all the oyster beds from New York City to New Haven and down the New Jersey coast as far as Manasquan. Certain waters are under the ban, and Health Commissioner Darlington says New Yorkers may eat the city's supply without fear. The new law requires that every person who sells oysters in that city shall have a written permit from the board of health. Applicants are required to give the names of the growers from whom they buy their stock and the location of the beds. Such permits are revocable on proof that a dealer is selling "drinked" oysters, as the oystermen call them—that is, oysters that have been "fattened" in polluted waters. Mr. Darlington said all leading oyster dealers are heartily cooperating with the health department officials in enforcing the new law. The New York State oyster is a recognized patrician and is sought eagerly. Blue points, Rockaways, East rivers, etc., are shipped to all parts of the United States and Europe.

PHILADELPHIA BOY ENDS LIFE.

Forbidden to Pay Schoolgirl Attention, He Ends Life.

Horace J. Ray, 15 years old, shot himself to death in Philadelphia in the presence of 15-year-old Florence Marshall, his schoolgirl sweetheart, because he had been forbidden paying attention to her to the neglect of his studies. The children went to the same public school and the boy was the girl's constant escort. So serious was he in his attentions that his family forbade him going to her house. He bade the girl good-by and after telling her that he could not live without her and intended to end it all, he drew a revolver and attempted to shoot himself. The weapon failed to explode and the girl struggled to keep him from injuring himself. He managed to readjust the revolver, and as the girl fought to get the pistol he shot himself in the breast. He died in her arms.

RICH AND HAS 5 WIVES; BARRED

Wealthy Passenger Refused Permission to Land at San Francisco.

Although he has $3,000,000 and is the largest landed proprietor in Hongkong, Robert H. Bosman, who arrived at San Francisco on the steamer Korea, is detained on board the vessel and denied the right to land because he has five wives. Two of them are with him and three more are awaiting his return home. Bosman made no attempt to conceal the facts and admitted to the immigration inspectors that he is a polygamist. His case will be made the subject of consideration by a special board of inquiry. Bosman was born in China, his father being a Briton while his mother is a Chinese. He says he will bring pressure to bear on the government to secure the right to land. He has a score of servants.

FIRE WIPES OUT VILLAGES.

Beyond Control and Is Spreading Destruction Over Large Area.

The forest fires in the Adirondacks, fanned by a strong wind, got beyond the control of the hundreds of men who have been fighting them. According to reports received large areas have been swept by the flames and several small villages and camps wiped out. Long Lake West, a village of about 100 inhabitants, was burned and the damage resulting amounts to many thousands of dollars. The village contained about a dozen buildings, the railroad station, and a large storehouse which supplied the camps for miles around. The preserve of Dr. Webb at Nehasane was threatened and Utica was appealed to for assistance.

Anna to Pay Helie's Debts.

The Cri de Paris again revives the story that the Prince and Princess Helie de Sagan are going to Germany to live. The newspaper says the Princess has agreed to clear the Sagan ancestral estates of debt and rebuild the ancient chateau in Silesia, and that arrangements have been made by which Prince Helie will resume the rank of Duke Sagan and be received at the German court.

Football Player Is Paralyzed.

Wilfred Balthaser Martin, halfback of the Waterbury, Conn., high school football team, is in a serious condition as the result of an injury to his spinal column during a practice game of football. The body is paralyzed from the shoulders down.

Chicago Business Man Gone.

Leslie Carter, former president of the South Side Elevated railroad, and a prominent figure in Chicago's business life, is dead, after a year's illness.

25 Killed in Montana Wreck.

A special from Livingston, Mont., says that Northern Pacific passenger train No. 16, east bound, crashed into a freight train at Youngs Point and that twenty-five persons, including the engineer, fireman and brakeman, were killed.

One Dead, Seven Hurt in Blast.

Seven men were injured and a boy was killed in an explosion in the factory of the Ideal Comb Company in Cambridge, Mass. The plant was burned at a loss of $25,000.

ALLEGED GRAFT EXPOSED.

Doctor Said to Have Listed Sing Sing Convicts as Sick for Cash.

The reason for the resignation last June of Dr. Robert T. Irvine of Ossining, N. Y., as physician at Sing Sing prison has become known with the pardon of John W. Wooten, who, it is alleged, helped expose the system by which Dr. Irvine is alleged to have "grafted" thousands of dollars from prisoners, the scheme being to keep them in the hospital ward and away from hard labor so long as they paid the sum demanded. Wooten was serving an indeterminate sentence for looting the Weisell estate of $20,000. According to one prison official, Dr. Irvine saw to it that no man who could pay the price came in contact with the rock pile or other hard labor. The price varied according to the prisoner's circumstances, but there were no social discriminations. The second-story worker who could buy it got the freedom of the hospital ward as well as the financier. It was generally understood that the lowest fee was $50. There was no limit at the other end, and $50 would only keep you in the hospital for three or four months. If you fell back on your payments you were pronounced "cured" and out you went to the shoeshop or the brick department.

FOND DU LAC FIRE LOSS BIG.

Flames Are Controlled After Damage of $250,000.

Fire which for a time threatened the entire city of Fond du Lac, Wis., was extinguished the other morning after damage estimated at $250,000 had resulted. The principal losses are: St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church and parsonage, $100,000; Congregational church, $75,000; Crescent garage and seven automobiles, $35,000; St. Peter's Lutheran church steeple, $7,000; Grant public school, $10,000; former Mayor Mayham's residence, $10,000. The fire is said to have started from an explosion of gasoline in the Crescent garage. With the aid of a high wind, the flames soon communicated to the church property in that vicinity. Firebrands from the burning churches were blown over an area of ten blocks square, spreading to roofs of many residences.

PLOT TO KILL KING FOILED.

Police Prevent Attempt on Life of Alfonso of Spain.

Details of a carefully paid plan to assassinate King Alfonso of Spain when he passed through Biarritz on his way to Paris came to light with the arrest of the chief plotters. The anarchists had timed every move of the King, and had arranged to explode several bombs under the railway coach occupied by his majesty upon his arrival. When the anarchists were arrested a number of infernal machines containing enough explosive to destroy a dozen trains were found and confiscated. The anarchists were captured through the close surveillance kept by the French secret police on strangers and suspicious persons. The whole plot was discovered and the police acted promptly, arresting five men, declared to be among the most dangerous anarchists in Europe.

MONSTROSITY IN CONNECTICUT.

Girl Baby Born with Two Heads—Likely to Live.

A two-headed baby girl, born to Mr. and Mrs. Falco of Bridgeport, Conn., is at the hospital. The baby was born with two heads on one pair of shoulders. The normal head ends abruptly just above the eyebrows and slopes back sharply, leaving practically no forehead. The second head, set in back of the first head, is covered with long black hair. It has well defined features but only one eye. Malformations such as this are not entirely unknown, but it is extremely seldom that such a child is born alive and apparently healthy. The respiration is perfect and in the opinion of the doctor and the nurse the malformed child will probably live.

Shot at Door of Church.

A crowd of drunken men attacked worshipers as they were leaving the little Baptist church at Anthras Postoffice, Ky., killing J. W. McKinney, John Bennett and Edward Thomas and wounding Rev. Mr. Kind and a man named Gibson; the former fatally.

Governor Demands Inquiry.

On demand of Gov. Hanly the Indiana Legislature has started an investigation into the charge that the executive attempted bribery to secure the passage of the local option law.

Tuberculosis Is Expensive.

Tuberculosis costs the United States over a billion dollars a year, according to a statement made by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale before the tuberculosis congress in Washington.

Lives Lost in Shipwreck.

The British ship Loch Finlas was wrecked in a gale off the coast of Tasmania with the loss of twenty lives.

Ridder in Haskell's Place.

Herman Ridder, editor of the New York Staats Zeitung and vice chairman of the publicity bureau of the Democratic national committee, has been appointed by National Chairman Mack as treasurer of the national committee to succeed Gov. Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma.

Savings Bank Is Looted.

The Colton, Savings bank at Colton, S. D., was robbed early Friday. The thieves escaped in an automobile. They obtained less than $1,000.

WIDOW TORTURED WITH ACID.

Crime of Vengeance in Which Victim Guards Assailants' Names.

First gagged with a rag stuffed with pepper, then stripped and her entire body rubbed with carbolic acid by a man and two women, Mrs. Sarah Sample, a well-to-do widow of 61, living at 577 Franklin avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was the victim of one of the most extraordinary and mysterious crimes of vengeance with which the police of greater New York have had to deal in recent years. Mrs. Sample says she was standing in her open doorway when the man seized her and thrust her back into the flat. The two young women followed. The man held Mrs. Sample by the arms while the two women pried open her mouth and crammed into it a rag stuffed with red pepper. The trio then flung her across a bed and stripped her. While the man held her down the women produced a large bottle of carbolic acid and, with deliberateness, rubbed the acid over her entire body. The victim refused to name her assailants or to prosecute them if caught, or even to submit to ambulance treatment. Instead, she summoned her own private physician and kept her own counsel.

TWELVE COUNTIES GO "DRY."

Election Held Under Rose Law Is Victory for Temperance Forces.

Twelve Ohio counties voted Tuesday under the Rose law, and all went "dry" by majorities ranging from a few hundred up to more than 2,000. The number of saloons affected is 289. Most of the counties which voted are largely agricultural, but Scioto and Lawrence counties have a large urban population in Portsmouth and Ironton, respectively. Altogether sixteen of the eighty-eight counties in the State have had local option elections and all have gone "dry." The total number of saloons voted out is 330. The counties that went "dry" and the number of saloons affected are: Gallia, 19; Jackson, 44; Lawrence, 27; Pike, 9; Scioto, 65; Adams, 5; Athens, 71; Vinton, 4; Hocking, 27; Van Wert, 22; Nobel, 7; Guernsey, 35.

BOY KIDNAPED FROM SCHOOL.

Leavenworth Youth Hurried Away to Kansas City in Automobile.

A woman, heavily veiled, and a man in an automobile kidnaped Theodore Thomas, Jr., son of a well-known Leavenworth man, from the grade school in Leavenworth, Kan., and placing him in the automobile, drove hastily in the direction of Kansas City. A young man who gave the name of John Hayes, Jr., and said he was the son of the former chief of police of Kansas City, Mo., was arrested and placed in the county jail charged with aiding in the kidnaping. Mr. Thomas some time ago was granted a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Agnes Thomas, and was given the custody of their son. Young Thomas lived with his grandmother. The mother of the boy lived in Kansas City, Mo.

TIDE OF ALIENS HAS TURNED.

More Foreigners Arriving in United States than Are Going Abroad.

The tide of immigration again has changed, and for the first time in months the arrivals in the United States are exceeding the departures. Such a condition has not existed for nearly a year. Last week the excess amounted to 700 at one port alone, and similar conditions are reported from other places of entry. Following the depression of last fall a large number of foreigners returned to the places of their birth. During the eleven months ending Aug. 31, 1908, 527,000 immigrants departed, while only 270,000 arrived.

Firebug Set $20,000 Blaze.

The Fort Sheridan Park pavilion, north of Chicago, which has been the object of severe attacks by United States army officials, was burned to the ground by firebugs. The loss was $20,000. Efforts were made to save the building, but in vain. The police found conclusive evidence of incendiarism after the fire burned itself out.

See Caleb Powers Baptized.

Caleb Powers, who spent eight years in a Kentucky penitentiary in connection with the Goeble assassination case before being pardoned by Gov. Willson, was baptized in the Baptist church at Jellico, Tenn., Sunday in the presence of 500 people.

Store of Arms Found.

A warehouse stocked with arms for the revolutionists has been located in a subterranean passage on the edge of Tiflis, Russia. The police who raided the place seized several tons of explosives, stacks and cases of rifles and pistols, and 150 primed bombs.

Woman Mysteriously Shot.

As she lay sleeping in bed with her two children at her side Mrs. Helen Roach, 25 years old, was shot twice in the head in New York and died instantly.

Insane Mother Kills Her Child.

Mrs. John Dalton, living three miles south of Elkhart, became insane and choked her baby to death. There was no one at the house at the time except Mrs. Dalton and the child.

Year's Mine Deaths 3,125.

Accidents in coal mines of the United States during the last calendar year resulted in the death of 3,125 men and injury to 5,314 more, according to statistics just made public by the geological survey in Washington.

U.S. COAL MINES TAKE 3,125 LIVES IN A YEAR

Geological Survey Statistics Show 5,314 Persons Were Injured in 1907.

WORST IN WEST VIRGINIA.

Death Rate Among Miners in That State Is 12.35 Per Thousand—Blasts Not Greatest Danger.

Accidents in coal mines of the United States during the last calendar year resulted in the death of 3,125 men and injury to 5,314 more, according to statistics made public by the geological survey.

The death record among the coal miners during the year was greater by 1,033 than in 1906, and is said to have been the worst year in the history of the coal industry. The figures do not represent the full extent of the disasters, as reports were not received from States having no mine inspectors.

West Virginia reported for 1907 the heaviest death rate, 12.35 per thousand employes, and that State also showed the lowest production for each life lost —65,969 tons. New Mexico stood next on the list with a death rate of 11.45 and a production of 77,322 tons for each life lost. Alabama was third, with a death rate of 7.2 per thousand and a production of 92,535 tons for each life lost.

Missouri had the lowest death rate, heading the roll of honor with .95 and 499,742 tons of coal mined for each life lost.

Statistics do not bear out the popular idea that most mine disasters result from explosions. Of the total number reported during the last year 947 deaths and 343 injuries resulted from gas and dust explosions and 201 deaths and 416 injuries were caused by powder explosions.

The chief cause of death among the miners, the report claims, was the falling of mine roofs and coal. Such disasters caused 1,122 deaths and 2,141 injuries.

E. W. Parker, chief statistician of the survey, asserts that much benefit will result from the action of Congress in appropriating $150,000 to investigate mine disasters and take steps to decrease the number of accidents each year. He says one of the greatest needs of the coal mining industry is the enforcement of military discipline in the operation of the mines.

Care of the Unemployed.

Reports continue to come in from the various charity organizations in American cities telling of a gloomy outlook for the coming winter on account of the vast number of unemployed men and women. As bearing directly on this situation the Bureau of Labor at Washington has just issued a report on the policy of European countries toward the unemployed. Germany has made great strides by introducing public employment bureaus and by taking care of tramps. In Belgium, Netherlands and Denmark the incorrigible idle have been forced largely into work homes, where they are, however, well treated. All the countries of Europe have apointed special commissions to deal with this problem. Colonies for the unemployed are favorite remedies and public relief works are being started in some places.

Castro's refusal to permit the Brazilian charge d'affaires to assume charge of French interests in Venesuela is the latest fuel thrown on the smoldering fire of Venesuela's international complications. Speculation is rife in Caracas as to whether or not Brazil will look upon this action as an insult directed at her and what France will do towards getting representation here for her interests after this rebuke.

The international cotton congress, meeting in Paris, adopted resolutions inviting all confederated associations in the various countries interested in cotton to join in a harmonious curtailment during periods of distress arising from over or under production; another invites the European governments to study and advance the extension of colonial production of cotton; a third instructs the cotton contract commission to place before the exchanges of Europe a recommendation for the substitution of the net weight basis of purchase for the present basis, which allows a shrinkage of 30 pounds in a bale of 500 pounds; and a fourth looking to the introduction into Europe of the mutual mill insurance system in vogue in America.

The funeral of the Baron Speck von Sternberg, German ambassador to the United States, was held at Lutzschena, the family estate near Leipsic.

At Nuremberg the German Social Democratic Congress has held its annual congress and the report showed a gain of 10 per cent in the organization. A delegate from the British Social Democratic Federation spoke at length against allowing the governments of the two nations to decide on war or peace over the heads of the people. He argued that the socialists of both countries should work together for peace.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Some irregularity is seen in the course of events, but the general trend of business is encouraging. Temporary setbacks are caused by forest fires, delayed fall plowing and postponed demand in leading retail lines, all due to the abnormal drought.

The volume of payments through the banks furnishes the best record in twelve weeks, and is considerably above that of the corresponding week of 1906, when trade was remarkably active, while the comparison with a year ago shows only a small loss.

A healthy indication is the firmer tone in money, which has caused an advance in the discount rate.

Despite increasing shipments of currency to move the crops and reserving of funds to meet heavy October settlements, bank deposits remain at the best average of the season and resources are ample for anticipated borrowing needs.

Investment has widened in choice bonds, although the new issues are restricted, and sales of local securities almost equal those at this time last year. There is also considerable money going into real estate, mostly bought for improvement purposes. The total new building work and heavy construction compares favorably with this time last year, and labor finds more employment at good wages.

Absorption of building materials steadily expands, and this strengthens the conditions in lumber, structural steel, wood work and quarrying, shipments having increased and prices being firmly upheld.

Manufacturing discloses no significant change in production. More machinery and hands, however, are active and new orders come forward as well as expected in iron, brass and electric lines.

Bank clearings, $237,615,073, are 3.7 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 28, against 34 last week and 16 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 7, against 9 last week and 3 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

While events generally tend toward steady if slow improvement, conservatism still rules purchasing in wholesale and jobbing lines, and at several large centers fall trade, notably in dry goods, has reached and passed its maximum. Taken as a whole, trade, though in a few instances equal to a year ago at this date, is still generally below the normal, and the approach of the election has a tendency to discourage all but absolutely necessary purchases.

Western trade advices are good as a whole, though house trade is on the wane and traveling salesmen are relied upon to take care of reorder business. There is very general agreement that stocks are small in retailers' hands, and color to this is given by the many orders given for immediate shipment, which throws unusual burdens in turn upon jobbers, wholesalers and manufacturers.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Sept. 24 number 207, against 266 last week, 166 in the like week of 1907, 165 in 1906, 185 in 1905 and 179 in 1904. Failures in Canada for the week number 32, against 25 last week and 36 in the like week of 1907.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.65; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $7.25; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.35; wheat, No. 2, $1.00 to $1.01; corn, No. 2, 78c to 79c; oats, standard, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $12.00; prairie, $8.00 to $11.00; butter, choice creamery, 19c to 24c; eggs, fresh, 19c to 23c; potatoes, per bushel, 60c to 70c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $7.45; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.75; wheat, No. 2, 98c to $1.00; corn, No. 2 white, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2 white, 50c to 51c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.00; hogs, $4.00 to $7.20; sheep, $3.00 to $4.15; wheat, No. 2, $1.04 to $1.05; corn, No. 2, 76c to 77c; oats, No. 2, 47c to 49c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 79c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.25; hogs, $4.00 to $7.35; sheep, $3.00 to $3.35; wheat, No. 2, $1.05 to $1.06; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $4.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.80; sheep, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 99c to $1.01; corn, No. 3 yellow, 81c to 83c; oats, No. 3 white, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.04 to $1.06; corn, No. 3, 76c to 77c; oats, standard, 50c to 51c; rye, No. 1, 75c to 76c; barley, No. 1, 65c to 66c; pork, mess, $14.95.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.30; hogs, $6.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.00; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.07 to $1.08; corn, No. 2, 84c to 86c; oats, natural white, 53c to 55c; butter, creamery, 22c to 26c; eggs, western, 19c to 23c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 99c to $1.01; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 80c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 77c; clover seed, October, $5.57.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.25; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.50; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $4.75; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $6.30.

Price of Hogs Put Up.

For the first time in nine years the price of hogs rose even with that of cattle in the Chicago stock yards last Monday, the figure being 7 cents or thereabouts. Scarcity of live stock and the high price of corn is given as the cause of the rise. The price of pork, lard and tallow have gone up at the same time.

OCTOBER

U352
L903

The Whited Sepulchre

The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

Captain Negley had just stepped into the chart room. Laird was on the bridge. Plass, the second officer, on his way to the bridge to relieve or assist Laird, was felled at the door of the chart room. In the instant required to drag the body to shelter and close the door of the chart room, Captain Negley was overpowered by the blizzard of steam, gas and livid stone. When consciousness returned to him he was lying across the body of Plass, and the ship was rolling like a runaway buoy.

The skipper regained his feet. In spite of terrible burns, he felt little pain. His limbs, below the knees, were like wood. His left hand was yellow and inflated. Fire brands still screamed into the sea outside, but the day was returning. The indomitable Negley was first to reach the deck, the woodwork of which was burning in several places. He tried to shout, but his throat was closed by the hot dust. The body of a man was hanging over the railing of the bridge. It was Laird, with his face burned away.

The shock of his burns was beginning to overpower the captain when Pugh, the third officer, untouched by fire, appeared from below. In a horrid tongueless way, Negley fired the other to act, and staggered into the cabin passageway. Pugh shrieked up the hands and set to the fires and the ship's course. Out of the five sailors and three officers on deck when Pelee struck, Negley alone had retained the thinking faculty.

Miss Stansbury was hurled from her chair. Appalled by the dread fact of dissolution, she lay in the primal darkness in the midst of falling glass. Macready was groping, calling for her. That she was unhurt seemed such a great matter to him and entirely insignificant to herself. Her lover had fallen. Their starry pavilion of the future was in blackness and ruin. It would have been better had Pelee found them together. * * * Macready lifted her to a chair. The ports were gray instead of black, but splashed with the big seas.

"Your friend is dead, Denny," she said harshly.

"What's this you're talkin'? 'Tis no bit av a geyser in a dirt pile as can tell him how t' come an' go."

The screaming of the native women reached them from the hold. Macready opened the door, and a blast of terrible heat entered the cabin. The woman was clutching the arms of the chair and staring at him with the most pitiful eyes ever seen in child or woman. The swaying form of Negley was in the passageway, and something of the extent of the disaster broke upon the Irishman.

"Bring him here!" she commanded, taking Negley's arm. "There, I can manage him! Run and get oils and lint!"

He obeyed. The decks were covered with a paste that burned through his shoes. Black clouds were rolling out to sea. Deep thunder of a righteous source answered Pelee's lamentations. The sailors were fighting fire and carrying their dead. The thin, shaken voice of Pugh came from the bridge. The engines were throbbing.

"Eight miles at sea! Eight miles at sea!" Macready repeated. "Th' long-armed mountain—an' what musht the infightin' have been!"

In the store-room, he opened jars of oil and cartons of lint and bandages, for the use of the men; then rushed back to the cabin with a portion. Nature finds work for strong hearts that have lost their heroes. Negley's cracked and twisted boots had been removed, and the ashes cleansed from his eyes and ears and mouth. Another valiant nurse had emerged from a broken romance. The woman who would have fainted yesterday at the smell of burnt flesh was cutting away the clothing from the captain's shoulder. When the ointments and wrappings had been applied to the skipper's wounds, she helped Macready carry the unconscious man to a berth.

"'Tis rainin' evenchooalities out," he muttered genially, noting that the work was life to her.

"We must be nearly in-shore by this time," she said slowly.

Denny's effervescence was now corked. Pugh had been putting the Madame out to sea since he got control of her. The Irishman felt instinctively that the woman would want to go ashore, which he didn't propose to allow. On the other hand, although he had nothing to do with the running of the ship, he didn't like the idea of saving the Madame at the price of her owner's life.

"I dunno," he answered carefully. "'Tis har-rd t' see fur th' rain."

His soft magic failed.

"But the ship is moving!" she exclaimed. "Denny, open the door!"

Macready gave way. She heard the steady beat of the engines, and the big seas driving past. She rushed out of the passageway, regardless of the flood, and peered over the main deck railing. There was no smoke, no familiar shadow of hills, but a leaden, tumultuous sky and the rollers of the open sea, beaten by a torrential shower. She crossed the charred planking to the starboard side, drenched to the skin in an instant. There was no Pelee, no Saint Pierre! Macready tried to draw her to cover, but she turned upon him furiously.

"You have let them put to sea—you, his friend—while he is held back there, waiting for his ship?"

"What could poor Denny, that bosses th' galleys, ma'am, do toward runnin' the ship? Thim byes 'ud say, 'Git back t' your patty-pans, you wipe!' But I've thried, sure, t' kape th' lady from harum this day. You know Captain Negley——"

"Where's the first officer?"

"Dead, ma'am."

"And the second officer?"

"Th' same."

"Who is putting out to sea?"

"Third Officer Pugh, in the name av his dirthy sowl."

"Is that Pugh on the bridge?"

"Ut is."

A moment later the officer in oil skins of Constable's pith helmets was upon her head; his rain coat was buttoned about her, the sleeves rolled up to her hands; and a pair of his shoes was laced over her own. It was difficult to move about in this regalia, but it kept off the withering draughts. The boat was lowered.

A half-hour later, they were forced to put back to the ship. Ernst was whimpering at the oars, his lips twisted in agony. Macready was silent, an eloquent signal of his failing endurance. Lara had not swooned; her will was not broken, but conditions had been encountered which flesh could not conquer. The boat was pulled about to the lee of the steamer, and at a port-hole glass she saw the sneering face of Pugh, still in irons.

There in the boat the three renewed their strength, and another terrific downpour came to aid them. Lara sat in the stern, hands and lips tense, during the cloudburst. It was nearly two in the afternoon when the boat was bailed, the stock of ice replenished, and a second start made. The sailors gave them a cheer.

Deeper and deeper in toward the gray, low beach the little boat was pulled, its occupants the first to look upon the heaped and running over measure of Saint Pierre's destruction. Denny and Ernst took turns at the oars, sometimes pulling a single blade together. Rare running mates, they were, odd as two white men could be, but matched to a hair in courage. Ernst bent to his work, a grim, stolid mechanism. Denny jerked at the oars, and found breath and energy remaining to assail Pugh, with his barbed and poisoned tongue. The woman, in the stern of the boat, knelt before them, praising, cooling their faces with ice, her words often incoherent, but her spirit unconquerable.

(To be continued.)

NOT A MENACE.

We Are Better Off for Some Immigrants We Receive.

"You like dis—perhaps?" said the pretty Syrian woman, holding out some crocheted lace toward the lady of the house. It was in a New York home, and there was possibly something incongruous about the beautiful surroundings and the poorly clad woman seated on the floor in the midst of her laces and embroideries. The incongruity did not strike either mistress or visitor, however, for each was, in her way, dignified and simple.

"Do you make these things here?" asked the lady, interestedly.

"I have made them at home, in Syria. I have not long been in your country—two days onlee."

"Ah! Did you have to pay much duty on them?" The lady was thinking of her own experiences with the customs officers.

A smile lighted the little Syrian's face as she answered, "I pay not one cent. Some say to me, 'Emptee your pillow and sew all your things inside, like we.' But I tell them, 'No, I will not begin new life in a new country with deceit. We are Christian.' I went to the customs man and I say, 'Please see my things. They are all I have, but they cost not much money.'

"'Dis lace,' he say, 'how much it cost?'

"'I made it,' I tell him. 'It cost—the thread—onlee three cent.'

"'I make you no charge for that,' say the man. 'How much this embroidery?'

"'It is onlee the cloth and thread that cost thirty cent,' I tell him. 'I made all myself. He charge me not one cent, and I go back and say to the others, 'Look! Is it not better to be honest?'"

"But why did you leave your beautiful country? I'm afraid you will find it hard to get on here," said the lady, sympathetically, opening her purse.

"Ah, Syria is no more beautiful to us," said the little woman, sadly. "There we are—what you call it?—persecute because we are Christian," she said, as she accepted the money for her lace and began to pack her cases. "My man, he stand one day on the street, and a boy run by and cry out, when he pass, and say that my husband take money from him. My husband is good man. He not steal from any one, but because he is Christian he must pay the money. It is always so. Here we can be—what you call it?—freedom, and the good God will help us."

"Eleven thousand three hundred and forty-three foreigners landed in the port of New York yesterday," read the man of the house the next morning. "The highest day's record. Well, what is going to become of us all?" said he. "What a menace they all are!"

"No, not all," replied the lady across the breakfast table, and she began to tell him of the little Syrian woman.—Youth's Companion.

The Fickle Summer Maid.

Rodrick—Man at the seashore discovered diamonds in the surf. Did you ever discover any jewels when you were there?

Van Albert—I thought I discovered a jewel last summer, but after she jilted me I came to the conclusion that she was only an imitation.

The coal supply of the Philippines has been found to be much larger than was anticipated and of a uniformly good character. It is stated that a large vein crosses the entire group of islands and it has been clearly traced in one vicinity for twenty-five miles.

Municipal pawnshops have been opened in Pekin for the relief of the residents who have been heretofore the victims of extortionate private establishments. The city charges are 15 per cent, while they have been paying 50.

The day is always his who works in it with sincerity and great aim.—Channing.

REVIEW OF INDIANA

Burglars entered the dental offices of T. Q. and Richard Neptune, in Decatur, carrying off gold scraps valued at $60.

Fire of an unknown origin destroyed a large barn on the farm of Casper Willis, south of Petersburg, entailing a loss of $1,000, partially insured.

Concerning the statement from Logansport recently that Colonel Jacks, who died there a few days ago, was the oldest Odd Fellow in the State, having been a member for fifty-four years, Joel Peffley, of Delphi, announces that he has been a member in good standing for the last fifty-eight years.

The contest between the Christian Sunday Schools of Elwood and Alexandria on the point of attendance will be carried on during the month of October. The Alexandria school is one of four in the Christian churches of the United States which has an enrollment more than twice the size of the church membership.

William Green was arrested in Muncie, and he has been returned to Newcastle to answer the charge of embezzlement. It is alleged that he circulated a subscription paper for a relative who is permanently crippled, and after collecting $15 he absconded with the proceeds. During his absence his wife filed suit for divorce, alleging failure of support for herself and children.

Greene Goodman, a Knox County mussel digger, has returned from the lower Wabash river with $1,500 more money than he started with. Last week he had the good fortune to find a fine "ball" pearl, which he sold to John Wolhelm a New Harmony dealer, for $1,000. The gem weighed 23 grains. Goodman found several other pearls of lesser value, his pearl-hunting trip netting him more than $1,500.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lett, near Crothersville, have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and five generations were present. The relatives included Fielding Lett, father of Daniel Lett, 92 years old; Branan, Mitchell and Wirt, sons of Daniel Lett, with Daniel's granddaughter and child; the last named being a great-great-grandchild of Fielding Lett. It was a remarkable family reunion, as it is seldom so many generations of one family can be brought together.

The appeal of Mrs. Mary Grim, 53 years old, who, for fourteen years, has been a helpless inmate of the Kosciusko County Infirmary, that somebody find her daughter, has been answered. The woman did not know her daughter's name, as the girl married a train dispatcher at Garrett some years ago. An article describing the woman and daughter appeared in The Indianapolis News, and was subsequently copied by other newspapers. Last week the daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Allen, was found at Gary.

Hiram Stewart, a farmer boy, 20 years old, was shot by his uncle, Stephen Ellis, last week, under the supposition that he was a burglar. Hiram spent the evening at an entertainment in the neighborhood, and he decided to quarter himself for the remainder of the night with his uncle, without informing him of his intention. While putting his horse away he made a noise at the barn which awakened his uncle, who investigated with a shotgun. The uncle fired both barrels, but his aim was poor, and he only succeeded in sprinkling his nephew's legs. The wounds are not serious.

Alexander Seward and wife, of Elwood, went to Northern lakes seven weeks ago, to spend their vacation. When they returned they were met at the door, when it was opened, by the family house cat, lean and gaunt, but able to mew a welcome, although it had probably had nothing to eat other than a stray mouse during the entire time the family was away. A still greater surprise awaited the home comers. On the best bed, on which rested a $75 silk spread, were seven kittens, but the costly spread which had been won in a lodge contest by Mrs. Seward, was in shreds, the mother cat having torn it to pieces to make a cozy bed for her young.

Mayor Lawrence Becker, of Hammond, who is a Democrat, will be compelled to take his family horse out of a local livery barn because the animal goes frantic when it sees the pictures of Taft and Sherman, in the shape of lithographs hung up in the livery stable. Before the pictures were hung up the horse was gentle as a lamb, but when he is hitched up in the barn he paws and kicks at the sight of the pictures and the barn men can scarcely control him. The livery man complained to Mayor Becker that he was unable to handle the horse and Mayor Becker told the liveryman to take down the pictures of Taft and Sherman and the animal would be pacified.

Mrs. William Pedrick, of Columbus, has a cocoanut palm in full bloom. It is a rare thing for palms of this variety to bloom in this locality, and this is the first time in eight years that this palm has borne blossoms.

The White Realty Company, of Fort Wayne, has closed a deal for the purchase of the Bank Block, one of the best situated properties in that city; consideration, $150,000. The deal is the largest in realty circles in Fort Wayne for many years.

Mrs. Ella McGowen, of Decker, has a large grapevine which is bearing a second crop of grapes for the season. The crop now ripening is in every respect the equal of the regular yield, which was taken from the vine more than a month ago. The vine is near a pump and receives waste water.

Work has begun on the construction of a home in Clinton for Mrs. Claude Matthews, widow of the last Democratic Governor of Indiana. Mrs. Matthews has continued to live on the 2,500-acre Matthews estate, west of Clinton, but she has concluded to remove to the city. The new home, when finished, will be one of the finest in Clinton.

While repairing a barn roof, Walt Rhodes, a farm laborer, living in the Wabash bottoms near Owensville, made a misstep and fell to the ground, a distance of eighteen feet. When a fellow-workman ran to the place, expecting to find Rhodes dead or seriously hurt, he was amazed to see the man sitting on the ground, grinning and filling his pipe for a smoke.

Dr. Thomas A. Shane, of Columbus, found a strange bird in the alley near his home. He gave the bird to an expert, and it was found to be a "flapper rail"; at least, that is its common name. The bird feeds along the Eastern coast of the United States, and is rarely if ever seen in this part of the country. It had a broken wing, and was found under a tangle of telephone wires, so it is supposed to have flown into a wire and become injured in that manner.

David Barber, of Muncie, suffering from toothache, took too much whisky to kill the pain and endeavored to enter the residence of John Gallagher, a former policeman, thinking it was his own home. Gallagher, believing that his neighbor was a burglar, knocked him down, the man being unconscious on the sidewalk for twenty minutes. Barber was placed in jail, but when the circumstances were explained City Judge Gass dismissed the case. The toothache was stopped by the knock-out.

Williams Jennings Bryan had an ardent supporter in Frank Yarbaugh, a farmer, near Acton. Yarbaugh was struck by a street car at Washington and Alabama streets, in Indianapolis, and he was cut about the head. He was carried bleeding to the City Dispensary. Yarbaugh thought he was fatally hurt. "Don't let me die, doc," he said to one of the internes. "I'm a Democrat, and I want another chance to vote for William Jennings Bryan." Yarbaugh was told he was not seriously injured, and he became quiet.

A fire, which originated from some unknown cause, destroyed the stable and all of the stalls at the fair grounds, near Mt. Vernon, ninety stalls being consumed. The fair ground is beyond the city limits and it was impossible for the fire department to render aid. The stalls were constructed of pine and poplar timber, and burned rapidly. It is not known how the fire originated. The ground is owned by August Schieber, of Mt. Vernon, and was leased by the Mt. Vernon Association. The loss is several thousand dollars, with no insurance.

John Lucas, of Washington, has in his possession three pearls which he values at $1,200. The three baubles were found in White river and are three of the prettiest gems ever taken from that source. The largest and finest was, when found, about the size of a marble, but now after it has been trimmed down to get its lustre it is about the size of a pea. It is of the pink variety and nearly perfect in shape. R. I. Lindsay, a Vincennes pearl buyer, offered the finder $800, but the offer was refused. Lucas demands $900. The other two pearls are smaller and are white.

A remarkable instance of the memory and fidelity of a dog was exhibited in Alexandria recently, when Harry Holloway, for some years a newspaper carrier in that city, and for the last two years located at Canton, Ohio, returned to visit friends. When Jack, the carrier's canine companion of former days, saw his old-time friend he was almost frantic with joy, and, though old and infirm, barked and frolicked like a pup. All day long he was a constant companion of Holloway. When Holloway left in the evening Jack became disconsolate, refused to eat, and apparently had lost all interest in life. Jack is but a cur, of no particular breed, coal black and homely, but for five years or more has not missed going over the paper routes with some of the carrier boys, and when given a paper and sent across a lot to an out-of-the-way subscriber, never misses putting it in its accustomed place. He knows where every paper goes and is a valuable assistant to new carriers. He is a pensioner at the various restaurants and lives well.

A barn owned by William Mitchell, near Pleasantville, was destroyed by fire, with contents, and the home was saved with difficulty. Four horses were cremated. Total loss, $1,600, with $400 insurance.

Two mangled bodies, thought to be those of Roy Shirley, of Melrose, Ohio, and Ralph Roach, of Paulding, Ohio, were found along the tracks of the Nickel Plate railroad near New Haven. It is believed the two men fell from a freight train.

INDIANA LAWMAKERS.

The county local option bill passed one of its critical stages Thursday when it was advanced to second reading by a vote of 51 to 49 in the House. Notwithstanding the progress made the Republican managers are by no means confident that the bill will pass. Some of the men who support it are not enthusiastic, and the managers believe they consented to the advancement merely that there might be further argument on it and that it is their intention to vote against the bill when it comes up for passage. The bill provides that the county commissioner shall order an election to decide whether a county shall be "wet" or "dry" when 20 per cent of the voters shall petition for such election.

Contrary to general expectation and to the disappointment of some of the friends of the county local option bill, it was passed to a third reading in the House Friday without amendment. For some unknown reason carefully laid plans of the Republican managers came to naught, and they are more in doubt about the passage of the bill than when it was thought that the bill would be amended to get Democratic votes by adding what is known as the dual feature, that is, providing for ward and township local option along with county local option. Only one amendment was offered and that was promptly defeated, but somehow the dual amendment got lost and was not offered at all, and the bill went to third reading.

County local option in Indiana is now a fixed fact. The stage setting Saturday was the most spectacular that was ever seen in the Indiana House of Representatives and the scenes were truly dramatic. Massed about the Speaker's desk, extending around the four walls of the room and filling the lobby and galleries, were eight hundred or a thousand temperance workers, keenly alive to every movement of the Representatives. The calling of the roll on the passage of the bill began in a silence that was almost painful. Printed lists of the legislators were in many hands and as the names were called by the clerk the most intense interest was manifested. A Representative stood up to explain his vote. He was regarded as opposed to the bill, but as he proceeded the countenances in the lobby began to brighten. Was he going to vote for the bill? As he talked the tension grew. Then the words "I vote yes" fell on the ears of the listeners and a great shout went up from hundreds. When a member who was counted for the bill voted against it there would be sighs and smothered groans from the crowd, but these soon gave way to shouts of applause when unexpected support came. Representative Johnson of Vigo county attracted much attention when he rose to speak. He had been counted upon as opposed to the bill, and as he rose his daughter was seen to seat herself by his side. His voice trembled as he said life had been a burden to him; he could not read, he could not sleep, he could not eat. He did not approve of the bill, nor could he have been elected if he had stood upon such a platform. Then his voice fell to a whisper and he burst into tears, voting "Yes" as he sat down. Cheers resounded throughout the hall. Johnson's daughter smiled and every one knew to what influence he had succumbed. One by one the Representatives spoke and as the roll call proceeded the workers began to take heart. One more vote for the bill would insure its passage. Every ear was intent, every eye fixed on the members. Then that vote came—from an unexpected source—and the lobby went wild. The victory was won. And then the vote proceeded rapidly, finally standing 55 to 45 in favor of the bill, six Democrats having voted for it and four Republicans against it. Within an hour Gov. Hanly had signed the bill, and county local option became a law in Indiana.

The Senate Monday afternoon killed the prohibition amendment which was passed the previous week by the House. The proposed amendment provided for State wide prohibition and would have to be acted upon by two successive Legislatures before being submitted to the people for approval. The Democrats in the Senate supported the bill, but the Republican majority voted solidly against it. A number of ministers were present.

Gov. Hanly appeared before the House Tuesday afternoon and in excited tones, at times trembling with emotion, read a special message demanding that the attempted bribery charge made against him by Representative Knisely be investigated. His request was granted, a committee was appointed and the inquiry is under way. Knisely made an affidavit in which he charged that Senator Wickwire had offered him a position worth $2,000 a year, and that when Knisely demanded authority for the offer he said Wickwire took him to the office of the Governor, where the latter confirmed it, declaring that "it was the opportunity of his life." When the message had been read a motion was carried that a committee be appointed. Speaker Branch named Condo and Daily as the Republicans and Honan and Pierson as the Democrats. Gov. Hanly, Representative Knisely and Senator Wickwire all appeared before the committee.

Overbalanced.

Mudge—It's funny how much easier it is to meet fellows I owe money to than to meet the fellows who owe me money.

Yabsley—Perhaps it is because there are so many more of them.

Elevator Taffy.

The elevator boy was "sweet" on the pretty stenographer.

"You seem in a good humor this evening, Billy?" she commented as she entered the car at the tenth floor.

"You bet," chuckled Billy, straightening up his tie, "I feel like I am on a hunting trip."

"Indeed! In what way?"

"Why, I am bringing down a 'dear.'"

And she blushed and said he was the nicest boy in town.

CHAPTER XVI.

It was after eleven when the Madame de Stael regained the harbor. The cloudburst had spent itself. Out from the land rolled an unctuous smudge which bore suggestions of the heinous impartiality of a great conflagration. The harbor was cluttered with wreckage, a doom-picture for the eyes of the seamen. Dimly, fitfully, through the pall, they saw the ghosts of the shipping—black hulls without helm or hope. The Madame vented a deep-toned roar, but no answer was returned—not a voice from the wreckage, not the scream of a gull. A sailor heaved the lead, and the scathed steamer bored into the rising heat.

Ahead was emptiness. The woman was standing forward on the main deck. The wind tunnelled through the smoke, and she saw the hills shorn of her city. The hope that the guns of Pelee had been turned seaward was crushed with other hopes. A cry was wrung from her breast at last. The anchor chain was dropped, and two men were bearing the brave Negley down from the bridge. Macready hastened to the woman's side.

"Arrange to get a small boat, Denny. We must go ashore;" she commanded, recovering self-possession.

Macready felt that it was now time to force matters.

"You can't go ashore yet, lady!" he exclaimed. "I cud bake a potatie here, sure, in the holla av my hand. What, thin, must it be in that pit av dishtruction?"

He was staring in a smoke-stained face. The purpose there was immovable as granite. The voice that he heard made him wince with fear, lest she should direct upon him words such as had been Pugh's portion.

"Mr. Macready, get a small boat ready! I am going ashore."

"Sure, an' I'll go wit' you, ma'am," he said hastily.

"I did not think you would withhold your aid from him, Denny. Make haste," she added gently.

The sailor whom Denny persuaded to accompany them was the old lion, Ernst, who had held the launch at the pier so long, and who had been relieved for the last trip. Water, medicines, food, spirits and many cakes of ice, thickly wrapped in tarpaulin, were placed in a small boat. The woman suffered herself to be garbed according to the ideas of Macready. One

OCTOBER

0353
L 903

Easy Confinement

If you have cause to fear the pains of childbirth, remember that they are due to weakness, or disease, of the womanly organs, and that healthy women do not suffer, like weak ones.

The specific, medicinal, vegetable ingredients, of which that famous, female medicine and womanly tonic

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

is composed, will build up the womanly organs to a healthy state and thus prevent needless suffering.

"Before my confinement," writes Mrs. Rose Schubarth, of Monument, Colo., "I had such bearing-down pains I didn't know what to do. Cardui quickly relieved me. Some months later I had a fine 12-lb. baby, was sick only thirty minutes, and did not even have a doctor."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. E 35

J. A. PROVINES
TRUSTEE
of Concord Township.
OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.
C. R. PRICE.
ST. JOE, IND.
Office in Case building.
Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

Is this canned oratory being guaranteed under the Pure Food Law?

Whichever wins November 4, that White house chair will need a fifth leg.

The dirt is flying so lively in the campaign now that nobody seems to care for the latest news from the big ditch in Panama.

William Howard Taft, William Randolph Hearst and William Jennings Bryan are booked to take up a lot of the time of the people during October.

The Josephs have fallen upon evil days. Cannon, Forsker and Sibley all have their hands full in explaining. It is better to be Dennis.

The report of the department of Agriculture on the crop of 1908, is a most remarkable one. With the exception of a few dry spots here and there, the crop of 1908 is a most remarkable one. With the exception of a few dry spots here and there, the crop of 1908 is a record breaker; the crop of 1906 was so large that the railroads of the country were taxed to their utmost capicity to handle it, but the crop of 1908 is appears is going to break all records. But a very few people in this country realize what a tremendous factor the great crops play in our prosperity. Begining with May of every year, our millionaires begin going to Europe and it has been ascertained that they take over to the old country about $200,000,000 of our money. During the summer and fall of every year another $100,000,000 is sent over by European laborers working in this country. Then about October and November of each year, a large number of foreigners who have been working here two or three years return to their European homes and carry in their pockets another $100,000,000. This makes about four hundred million dollars ($400,000,000) transfered from this country to Europe between May and December of every year. This is a big drain on the money market and last November, the tension in money matters was so great that it snapped and we have not yet recovered from the effect of that panic Now after this four hundred million dollars is transfered to Europe, the farmer begins to sell his wheat, corn, pork, beef, and cotton to the European markets and that not only brings back the four hundred million dollars carried over but something like five hundred million dollars additional. Thus the monetary market is thoroughly replenished, so when there is a light crop of farm products we do not get back from Europe so large a sum of money. This shows how thoroughly dependent we are on the farmer for continued prosperity. In view of the tremendous crop of this year, it would seem that nothing could prevent an era of great prosperity regardless of who is elected president this fall. In fact, the country has nothing to fear from the election of such able and honest men as either Mr. Taft or Mr. Bryan and if Mr. Roosevelt will stop wronging the people, the country will soon be in a healthy and prosperous condition again.

WABASH
Wabash Time Table.
Trains leave the St. Joe Station as follows:
GOING WEST.
No 11. Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34a.m
No. 3. Western Express 7:58 p. m
GOING EAST.
No. 2, Eastern Express 6:34 a. m
No. 16, Toledo Acc & Mail 7:26 p. m

The St. Joe News.

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

Democratic Caucus.

The Democrats of Concord township will meet in caucus at St. Joe, Saturday afternoon, October 10 at 2:30 for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices of trustee and assessor.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Commissioner appointed by the DeKalb Circuit Court, in the case of Catherine E. Murphy et al. against Lydia A. Kees, et al., to sell the following described real estate, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, to-wit:-a part of the south west quarter of section fifteen, in township number thirty three, north, range fourteen, east, bounded by a line, commencing at the point where the west boundary line of said section crosses the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and, running thence south on said section line to the north boundary line of Washington Street in the Town of St. Joe; thence east on said boundary line of Washington Street eleven rods; thence north to the south boundary line of the right of way of the Baltimore and Ohio and Chicago Railroad Company, and thence in a westerly direction along the south boundary line of said right of way to the place of begining, will sell said real estate at private sale on and after October 24th., 1908, at the office of J. E. and J. H. Rose In the city of Auburn, DeKalb County, Indiana, on the following terms, to-wit:-One third cash in hand on the day of sale, one third in nine months and one third in eighteen months from the date of sale, the deferred payments to be evidenced by the purchaser's promissory notes, with six per cent interest, and with attorneys fees, waiving relief from valuation laws, and secured by a mortgage on said real estate.
Dated, September 7th., 1908.
James E. Rose, Commissioner.

A Healthy Family.

"Our whole family has enjoyed good health since we began using Dr. King's New Life Pill, three years ago," says L. A. Bartlet, of Rural Route 1, Guilford, Maine. They cleanse and tone the system in a gentle way that does you good 25c at H. Milliman's drug store.

Public Sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale at his residence 1 mile south west of Spencerville on the old Carnes farm, Saturday, Oct. 24, at 10 a. m. the following: 25 head of Shropshire breeding ewes, one cow fresh now, one fresh in Nov., and one fresh in March, one mare 7 yr. old, weight 1200, 2 yr. old Gelding, three brood sows, one Poland China boar, two seated surrey, single buggy, one horse wagon, set of heavy and light single harness, hog rack, single horse corn plow, hay in mow, fodder in shock, first class bed room suite, coal stove, two heating stoves, sideboard and other household goods too numerous to mention. No by bids whatever, everything to be sold as going to move away. Terms made known on day of sale.
GEORGE PAFF.
J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

DeKalb County Teachers' Assn.

The committee of the DeKalb County Teachers' association have met at the office of County Superintendent H. E. Coe and made arrangements for the annual meeting of the association which will be held at Auburn, Nov. 27 and 28, immediately following Thanksgiving. It was decided to get the best talent obtainable to address the gathering. State Superintendent Fassett A. Cotton and Miss Tarney Campbell, of Anderson, will be invited. Prof. Huffman, of Purdue university, will also be present, with his vast store of good things to be told along the line of scientific agriculture and nature work coupled with hints in the mechanical arts; also. Prof. Hoffman, of Bloomington university, will be on the ground well supplied in the line of psychology and philosophy.

On Friday, the first day, it has been decided to use as much home talent as possible, those prominently placed thereon are Attorney D. M. Link, of Auburn, and one of the Auburn physicans will be selected to deliver an address upon the important topic, "The Public Schools From the Standpoint of the Farmers." In the evening, the social phase will be especially attractive for the committee have labored much over it with a decision to hold an immense banquet consisting of a three course supper at the K. of P. building, with the best of music during the hours thus enjoyed in this manner, the same to be furnished by the Garrett Glee Club, which already enjoys the distinction of being one of the best in northern Indiana. During the day sessions, the musical selections will be given by Miss Sembower, Chastine Johnston and the Schermerhorns.

For Sale.

Two last spring bull calves. Also one two years old. All pedigreed shorthorn stock.
ROLLAND BEARSS.

Failed to Arrive.

Sept. 30;—The band from this place intended to assist the Coburntown band in their last concert for the season to be given at St. Joe, next Saturday evening, but owing to another engagement which was put on and awarded to the boys it will make it impossible for them to be there The boys are very much disappointed in the matter as they would like to form an acquaintance with this band. From the program in the St. Joe News the band is going to give a first class entertainment.—Grabill Review.

S. S. WIDNEY,
NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.
WRITES INSURANCE
against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.
REAL ESTATE AGENT
A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.
Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

Rheumatism

Do you want to get rid of it? If so, take Dr. Miles Nervine modified as directed in pamphlet around bottle. In addition to the direct curative properties it has a soothing effect upon the nervous system by which the rheumatic pains are controlled, and rest and sleep assured. It has made many cures of this painful disease, some of them after years of suffering. If it will cure others why not you. If your case is complicated, write us for advice, it costs you nothing and may save you prolonged suffering.

"I was so crippled that I could scarcely walk. After having my shoes on for an hour or two I could manage to walk by suffering the pain. Then I began to have pains all through my system. My doctor told me I had an acute attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I read about Dr. Miles' Nervine, bought a bottle and I commenced to get better from the start and for the past six months have scarcely any pain, and am able to walk as well as ever."
JAS. H. SANDERS.
P. O. Box 5, Rockaway, N. Y.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.
Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

A Political Duel.

Why not permit the campaign to center in the literary war of the two principal fighters, Roosevelt and Bryan? Their speeches furnish mighty interesting reading, and the untiring energy exerted in behalf of their respective policies presents as pretty a fight as one would care to see.

Mr. Bryan's supporters understand that he is making a strong case, and the country at large does not tire of the material the president is furnishing. In olden times opposing armies in battle array, selected one skilled in all the arts of warfare to champion their respective sides and these two fought the battle singly until the weaker succumbed to the inevitable. And so it would be well to allow these two champions of the opposing factions of our commonwealth continue in their war of words, influencing the voters of the country until the Nov. ballot makes one of them "go way back and sit down".

This is the kind of campaign It saves money and is thoroughly enjoyable,

Had A Close Call.

Mrs. Ada L. Croom, the widely know proprietor of the Croom Hotel, Vaughn, Miss., says: "For several months I suffered with a severe cough, and consumption seemed to have its grip on me, when a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. I began taking it, and three bottles affected a complete cure." The fame of this life saving cough and cold remedy, and lung and throat healer is world wide. Sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Prepare For Fire.

This article is not a warning to get ready for fire in a world to come, but it does carry with it an appeal to our townpeople to see that we are better prepared against a disastrous fire, while we live here. In times past several small blazes have started within the corporation limits but the quick work of volunteer citizens soon put out the fire. They were all of such a nature as to be easily put under control. If a fire should gain headway in congested portions of the town all the efforts of a volunteer bucket brigade could not stop its devastations. What the town needs is a good supply of buckets, some long ladders and shorter ones with which the upper story of any building might be reached easily. It would be well to have someone designated by the town board to direct the efforts in putting out fires. There should also be some alarm that would be understood by the citizens as such and capable of arousing the town at any time. St. Joe has never had a disastrous fire, but we should nevertheless well prepared for it at all times. There are a number of fire traps in the town and it behooves every citizen to use all the precaution possible to prevent any serious outbreak of fire.

A New Party.

There evidently is need of a new political party. The general and enforced begira from the two old parties, just now, presents the need of a place of refuge for the weary and oppressed. Mr. Hearst does not deserve to have it all his own way in supplying our governmental system with the organized elements of reform. Just now the two old parties are turning loose a lot of one time active material that might somehow be gotten into shape as a new political force. Of course it would be mandatory that only those who had been adjuded too mean for association with either of the old parties could be accepted as members.

Take Notice.

Harry Kees will discontinue making cider, Friday, October 16th. Next Thursday and Friday he will make as usual.

4 PER CENT
INTEREST
Paid on savings accounts, paid or compounded semi-annually
SAVINGS LOAN & TRUST CO.
Auburn, Indiana.
Capital Paid
$50,000
Security to Depositors
$100,000
PRICE D. WEST
President
MONTE L. GREEN
Vice President
FRED W. KNOTT
Secretary

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.
HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

GENERAL ITEMS

Sheriff Reed was on our streets, Thursday.

Hon. Luther Knisley who had figured that he was out of politics for good certainly jumped into the limelight again and attained almost a national reputation in making his sensational charges with reference to Governor Hanly and Senator Wickwire.

The next term of circuit court will begin on Monday, October 12, and the jury commissioners have selected the following grand petit jurors:

GRAND JURY
David Martz, Fairfield.
John Thrush, Franklin.
Frank Gfeffer, Grant,
Irvin Imler, Keyser.
Emery Johnson, Fairfield.
Isaac E Baker, County.

PETIT JURY
Wm. H. Fair, Butler.
J. O. Hilkey, Butler.
Justin Girardot, Union.
A. D. Jackman, Wilmington.
W. J. Peckhart, Grant.
Isaac McDaniels, Wilmington.
G. W. Rakestraw, Union.
Benj. F. Hurran, Franklin.
B. E. Widney, Concord.
Ed Brumbach, Richland.
F. M. Delienbaugh, Fairfield.
Geo. W. Cosh, Union.

Ray Nelson formerly of Auburn and well known to many of the young people of this vicinity will be married Saturday evening October 10, to Miss Edith Severance of Brunswick, Missouri.

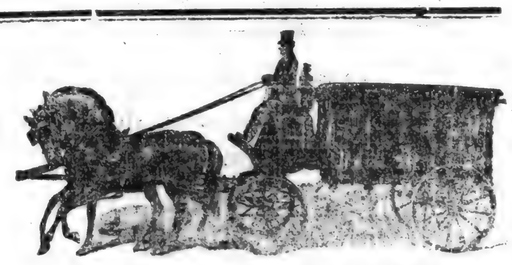
The Hicksville Fair was reported by the home papers as a success financially. Those who attended from this way are inclined to think that was the only phase of its success.

The W. H. Eiblinger's auto buggies were the source of much attraction at the Hicksville fair, and the company was awarded a silver loving cup for the victory with their machine in an exhibition run.

Eleven counties in Ohio held elections under the new Rose county option law Tuesday of last week and in the eleven a majority of nearly 13,000 was given which will close over 150 saloons. VanWert county, near us, gave 800 majority and will close up 21 saloons.

Money to loan on farms a 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.

A young lady of Churubusco went into a dry goods store the other day and blushingly ask the clerk if he "had any of those elastic bands capable of being elongated and adjusted at pleasure, and used by the feminine portion of mankind for putting around the lower extremities of their locomotive members to keep in the proper position and the required altitude habiliments of their tibias." The clerk is now on a "funny farm."
—Exchange.



WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Eliz Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

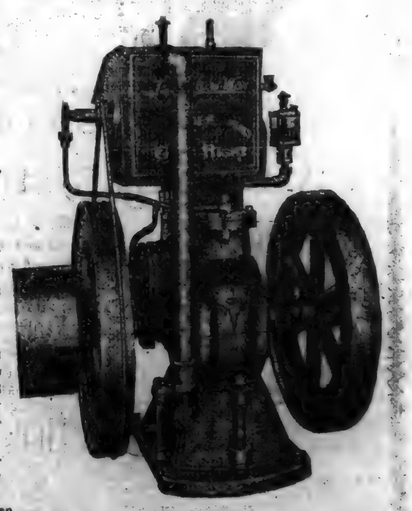
H. V. Kinsey & Son,
Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

OCTOBER

0354
L 903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

J. F. BALTZ
Blacksmith.

Still Doing Business AT The Old Stand.

I have employed one of the best all around blacksmiths to assist me. We are prepared to do all kinds of Blacksmithing on short notice.

Horseshoeing

is our specialty. Our customers come from all over the township and for many miles away. It is our desire to please these people We want to please you. All work guaranteed

News Items

Mrs. Ella Carnes spent last Friday afternoon in Ft. Wayne.

Harvy Beams spent several days in Ft. Wayne with relatives last week.

Will Henderson and wife of Auburn are visiting relatives here this week.

Mrs. Cupp has returned from Elkhart, where she has been visiting her son.

Mrs. Nancy Chaney and Mrs. Jennie Steward spent part of last Thursday at Ft. Wayne.

Mrs. Clyde Rectenwal is visiting relatives at Toledo and other eastern points, this week.

Mrs. King returned from Toledo, O Saturday evening where she spent a week with relatives.

Miss Ethel Metcalf and Mrs. Mable Shoemaker attended the band concert at St. Joe Saturday night

Mr. and Mrs. Will Goldsmith took Sunday dinner with the former's sister-Mrs. Mary Hallabaugh.

Mrs. Hullie Rummell and little daughter returned to her home in Oklahoma City last Wednesday.

Mr. Jake Baltz has moved his house out to the road this week. It will look much better when finished.

Mr. Henry Carnes left Sunday night for Indianapolis where he attended the session of Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias.

The Ladies Guild Society of the M. E. Church meets at the home of Mrs. Sam Markle next Thursday afternoon October 8th., at 2 o'clock, for business.

Mr. L. W. Steward has just made some improvements in his mill by adding a new Gang Edger, which increases the capacity about one half.

The stork accompanied by Dr. S. S. Kimes visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herby Webb east of town last Tuesday and left an eight pound baby girl.

Messrs. Jake Baltz, Clyde Rectenval Mort Shutt, Jack Beams and L. W. Steward went to Ft. Wayne last Tuesday and joined with the other Masons in the ceremony of laying the corner stone of A. A. S. R. Cathedral.

Irvin Lake visited his Uncle, Herman Grnob at New Haven, Monday.

Lewis Fredrick, wife and baby of Pleasant Lake spent Thursday and Friday with Mr and Mrs. Geo. Kimes

Miss Ethel Baker returned from Mansfield, Ohio where she has spent the latter part of the summer with her sister, Mrs. Grace Carrol.

Clyde Wilson and family moved to Hicksville last Wednesday and Mr. James Value moved into the Ora Quance property that Wilson vacated.

Spencerville R F D No 2

Clarence Clay of Dunfee spent Sunday with C. M. Wearly.

Mrs. Myrtle Kimes of Illinois took Sunday dinner with H. Kimes.

Harvie Kimes left Monday evening for an extended hunting trip to Maine.

Chas. Gibbone and wife of near Auburn spent Sunday with his sister Mrs Wes Zimmerman and family.

Geo. Paff, wife and daughter, Gladys John Beams, wife and son, Robert, and Ezra Horn and wife took Sunday dinner with Greely Wearley and family.

Injured.

While hauling logs Wednesday afternoon of last week, Sam Steward had one of his legs severely injured. He was loading in the woods and had hitched his team to the top log of a tree. The horses started before he was ready and dragged the log onto him. Mr. Steward succeeded in getthe horses stopped, but his fellow teamsters had to move the log off from him. No bones were broken but the limb was considerably bruised.

S. S. Kimes
—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

W. M. ALLEN,
BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSTICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

Missionary Meeting.

Mrs. F. A. Dressel invited the St. Joe and Spencerville W. H. and F. M. Societies to meet at the parsonage on Thursday afternoon, October 1st., to hold a union meeting. The day will long be remembered by those present as a Gala Day in the Missionary Calendar. Both societies were well represented and those that were absent surely missed a feast of good things.

Mrs. W. C. Patterson conducted the first half of the program. Our scripture lesson was Precious Promises, and the Bible reading was Toilers and Fishers. The world is so full of toilers that Jesus needs many helpers to carry his message of hope. This was followed by a quartette from the St. Joe Society.

Mrs. John Beams conducted the last half of the program. The lesson study Children of Toil followed by a reading Brothers in Christ. These meetings make us realize that we are indeed one in Christ. Mrs. F. A. Dressel and Mrs. Abe Furnish gave a report of the convention, which met at Detroit, Mich. Both ladies gave the convention so fully that we were made to feel we were one of the convention. The societies adjourned for a separate business meeting, after which all joined in singing, Blest be the Tie that Binds. The souvenirs were Autumn Leaves garnished by the host ess' own loving hands. Before departing, the societies were surprised by being served lunch.

A Guest.

Nervous or Sick Headache will yield quickly to the influence of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. 25 doses 25 cents.

FRED THOMAS
THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

Obituary

Rebecca Bowman

Rebecca Jones was born at Ashland Ohio, July, 24th. 1829. Departed this life, October 3rd., 1908. Aged 79 years, 2 months, and 9 days. She was married to Altman Bowman April, 16 1846. To this union were born three children, two sons and one daughter. One son and the daughter with the father having proceeded the wife and mother to the spirit world. Sister Bowman and her husband came to Spencerville, Indiana, in 1851, where she has made her home for 57 years. Her husband died in 1857 leaving her a widow at the age of 26 with the care of three small children. Sister Bowman was a member of the Lutheran Church in good and regular standing until October 3rd., when her membership was transfered from the church militant to the church Triumphant. She leaves to mourn their loss one son, two brothers and a host of relatives and friends. The funeral services were conducted at her late home by her pastor Rev. F. A. Dressel. He spoke from the text of her own choosing Psalms, 73: 23, 24, 25. Interment at Spencerville Cemetery. Beams & Baker in charge.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank the friends who so kindly assisted in the care and at the death of our mother.

H. W. Bowman & Family.

M E Convention.

The missionary convention of the Methodist Church was held Monday. The session began in the morning. A number of representative ministers from the Ft. Wayne district were in attendance. The first topic of the morning was "The Macedonian Cry" and was ably held forth by Rev. J. L. Hutchins of New Haven. Preston Polhemus of Harlan made a very able talk on the "Duty and Obligation of the Church to Conference Claimants."

On account of the funeral of Mrs. Bowman, an old and respected resident of this community, it was thot best to dismiss the afternoon session entirely. This was done and the work of the convention was taken up again in the evening. A good sized audience was present at the evening session and listened attentively to an address by Rev. Polhemus on "Home Missions and Church Extensions as Factors in Winning America for Christ." J. H. Cook of Monroeville also gave a splendid exposition of "Foreign Missions and its Marvelous Triumphs."

A session was also held at Wesley Chapel, the same evening. Emory Dunbar of Woodburn discussed the first of the above evening subjects before that people, and J. L. Hutchens addressed them with reference to the second.

Prohibition Rally.

Sumner W. Haynes, candidate for governor on the Prohibition ticket and the Clarion Male Quartett let loose their volume of speech and music in Spencerville Monday afternoon. The honorable candidate and his four traveling companions came from Auburn in two automobiles. The speech was deferred one half hour so as not to come at the time of the funeral. The speech was made from the automobile on the south side of the Lutheran church. Mr. Haynes' speech was strong and logical. It was indeed a rally for clean politics. He proceeded to show the fallacy of local option, not by berating any political party but by showing that local option was not the ideal way to do away with the liquor traffic.

The Clarion Quartette come in for their full share of praise. As a male quartett, they are among the best and do much to keep up the enthusiasm of the audience. A large crowd was in attendance and all enjoyed the program.

Bank Statement.

The following is a true and correct statement of the financial standing of the Grabill State Bank at the close of its business, September 30, 1908.

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts, including Mortgages	$65	915 81
Overdrafts,		560 77
Banking House,	3	300
Furniture and Fixtures,	2	343
Due from Banks and Trust Companies, including Certificates,	10	615 99
Cash on Hand, actual Money	3	541 15
Total,	$86	276 72

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock—paid in,	$25	000
Surplus,		500
Undivided Profits, net,		840 41
Individual Deposits on Demand, including Demand Certificates,	26	271 12
Individual Deposits on Time, including Time Certificates and Savings Deposits	33	665 19
Total	$86	276 72

Grabill State Bank,
Grabill, Indiana.

Keesler Milling Company
ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled proper cleaning of the wheat correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

Erick & Co.

THEY ARE HERE.

Our new fall goods are here and more are coming. We want to call your attention to this stock and invite you in to see them. Here are some of the specials:

Outing Flannels, EXTRA FINE ONES.

HATS & CAPS, A new line
NEW COATS, Just In.
HOSIERY & SHOES.

Men's Sweaters, All the Rage.

A Large Line of BED BLANKETS

Bring in your produce

IT WILL PAY YOU
TO GO TO
Bowman's Drug Store

FOR YOUR DRUGS.
His goods are the best. Will also stand the test.
Satisfaction Guaranteed.

Beams & Co.

DISHES - FREE

Many do not yet realize the wonderful values they can get in exchange for cash purchase tickets at our store. With every 10 cent purchase a ticket on a complete dinner set and when your purchase amounts to one dollar you get a ticket on a China Closet. You can see both these premiums in our store and they are certainly worth your attention.

Our Fall Shoes are all in.
Also a full line of Rubbers.

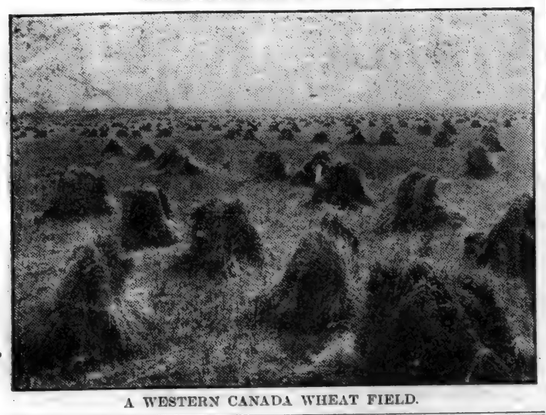
Rain Coats from.....$10 to $12 50
Extra good Trousers.....$3.00 to $2 50

Spencerville, Indiana.

OCTOBER

0355
L 903

FARMING IN WESTERN CANADA



A WESTERN CANADA WHEAT FIELD.

Canadian correspondence:

"What are the settlers of Western Canada—and most of all the farmers who have emigrated from the United States—doing this year?" I was asked by the editor of one of our big American magazines a short time ago, by which I was assigned to travel through the great wheat provinces of the Dominion West to discover just what the conditions were there, and how the many thousands of American farmers in this "Eldorado of Wheat" were prospering.

This was my fourth journey through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. I followed close upon the 60,000 good American farmers who left the States to make new homes for themselves in these provinces last year—and in different words, this was how I answered the question of the editor quoted above:

Imagine first of all, a train of forty-ton cars 1,454 miles in length—a train, in other words, which would reach from New York City to Denver, or from the Canadian border through the States of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, and for 250 miles down into old Mexico, and you will have some idea of this year's production of grain in the three great provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In other words, it will take more than 200,000 cars to carry the grain production of these provinces alone this autumn.

If a person were standing at one point, and this "grain train" passed him at the rate of twenty miles an hour, he would have to remain in that one spot for just three days and three nights to see the end of it.

It would carry past him more than 100,000,000 bushels of the best wheat in the world, 120,000,000 bushels of oats and 20,000,000 bushels of barley, for these figures, according to very best estimates that can be given at the present time, show what the settlers of Western Canada have raised this year in the way of grain.

Never in the history of any country has there been a more prosperous year for farmers than the present one in the Dominion West. So enormous has been the grain production that nearly 25,000,000 pounds of binder twine were required for the crops. Oats this season have gone as high as one hundred bushels to the acre, while over large areas of country the average has been as high as eighty and ninety bushels. The wheat yield has been as high as fifty bushels to the acre, and from figures already in it is believed that the total will show an average yield of between twenty and twenty-five bushels to the acre throughout the three provinces.

It is difficult for one to understand just what Western Canada means to the farmer until he takes at least one trip through that country. As yet the vast grain lands of the three western provinces, with an area large enough to support the population of a nation, have hardly been scratched. In other words, it may truthfully be said that the tremendous production of these provinces to-day is that of a few pioneers. Last year sixty thousand of the best farmers in the United States took up new homes for themselves there, and from the statistics of the past two or three years each one of these settlers will be harvesting from 500 to 2,000 bushels of grain next year. Under ordinary conditions the new settler makes a living during his first year. He builds himself a cabin or a rude board home, and if he has not much capital of his own he works a part of his time for his neighbors, for work is always plenty and wages good. The second year, however, he has in his own grain. It is a common saying throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta that "the settler makes a good living the first year, builds himself a good home the second, and is independent the third."

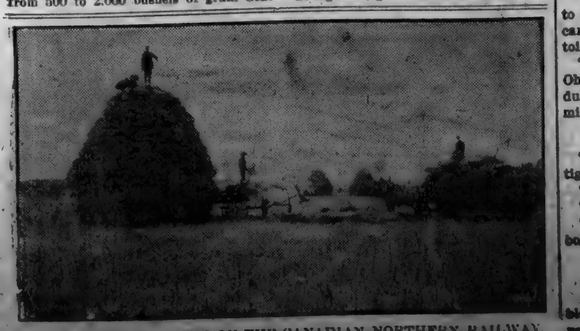
Until I had become thoroughly acquainted with these thousands of my people who have emigrated to Western Canada, and with the conditions now existing among them, I was inclined to believe with other hundreds of thousands of Americans that Canada's wheat lands were considerably overestimated. There are a large number of land companies in the United States whose promoters very much dislike to see good American farmers taking up land in Canada when they have vast tracts of their own to dispose of. One of the "stories" frequently seen in American papers is that the good homestead land, or free land, of the Dominion is already taken up. Millions of acres of the best land in the world are now open to American settlers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and these acres are offered to them absolutely free, with taxes so low, after they have gained possession, that they may almost be counted as nothing.

To-day three great railroads stretch across Western Canada, and within a few miles on each side of these roads the great part of the population of settlers live. Beyond these narrow belts are millions of acres of the best land in the world and it is safe to say that within ten years it will be almost entirely taken up—and American farmers will occupy a great portion of it. No farmer in this country has to carry his crops far, for every few miles along the railroads towns or stations are laid out, and at every place there is a huge elevator, and sometimes several of them, each holding from 20,000 to 60,000 bushels.

A few paragraphs back, I made the statement that many American land companies are trying to give the impression that the free homestead lands of the Dominion are about gone. To show how ridiculous this is, I will give the figures which have been secured through W. J. Kennedy, of the Department of Immigration, who has made an exhaustive investigation of this subject. According to the results of his investigation there are at the present time more than 100,000 free homesteads already surveyed and awaiting settlers, and in addition to those there are vast tracts of the best land in the world which have not yet been surveyed, and which will be homesteaded.

And from my long experience in the Dominion West, I confidently believe that during the next two years nearly all of these homesteads wil have been taken up by good American farmers—the farmers from our own States who are making Western Canada what it is to-day. Years ago the best advice in the world was, "Young man, go West." To-day it has changed in a small way. Now it is: "Young man, go to Western Canada."

THRESHING WHEAT IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA.



WHEAT-STACKING SCENE ON THE CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

Smiles of The Day

Misunderstood.

The busy man stopped before an office building and leaped from his carriage. At the same moment an ambitious urchin ran forward and piped: "Hey, mister, kin I hold yer horse?" "No, you can't!" snapped the busy man. "Won't charge y' much," insisted the urchin. "I don't care about the charge," impatiently responded the man, throwing a blanket over his bony steed. "My horse will not run away." "Gee, mister, I didn't think he'd run away!" "No?" "No. I thought he might fall down!"—Argonaut.

Quite a Storm.

"So that is the 'lightning express'?" remarked the unsophisticated city man.

"That's her," responded the dusty suburbanite with the lawn mower.

"She raises the thunder, doesn't she?"

"Oh, no. We raise the thunder when she is late or we miss her."

In a Bad Fix.

Reggy—W-well, I-I guess we are up against it. A-are you frightened, dear?

Peggy—Not a bit, love. It can't be more than a mile to shore and you told mother before she said I might come that you were a strong swimmer.

A Momentous Occasion.

"So you expect to be called on for a speech during the campaign?"

"Yes," answered Dustin Stax. "And it's one that is going to require a great deal of consideration."

"It will be a lengthy effort, then?"

"No. Exceedingly brief. When the collector of campaign funds comes around I've got to say 'yes' or 'no'."—Washington Star.

Strong Love.

"And you told her you loved the ground she walked on?" said Count Hickoff.

"Ah, yes, monsieur," responded Count Subrosa.

"And did she believe it?"

"Most assuredly, count. You see, she was standing on her father's rich coal mine."

Exciting Drama.

Mrs. Stubb—John, if married life is really a drama, do you think we get many curtain calls?

Mr. Stubb—Well, the married women may, Maria, but the married men get the curtain lectures.

Broke Him.

The learned physician arrived and removed his gloves. "I have come to take your pulse," he said briskly.

The sick man smiled feebly. "Go ahead, doc," he whispered, "it is about all I have left."

Polite Attention.

Visitor—Is your master in?

Servant—No; he's from home, sir.

Visitor—Gone away on a holiday, I suppose?

Servant—No, sir, on a bicycle.

Very Unpleasant.

"Mrs. Blimber is very nervous about there being thirteen at table to-night."

"Does she fear something unpleasant will happen?"

"Yes; she only has a dozen knives and forks."

Suburban Activities.

"How you must enjoy getting out to your country home and casting dull care to the winds after your hard day's toil in the hot and dusty city."

"Casting dull care to the winds! Oh! say, now, you wouldn't call it dull to chase a runaway cow three miles after dark, would you?"

Tom's Luck.

"Did Tom have any luck hunting tigers in India?"

"Yes—great luck."

"How?"

"He didn't meet any tigers."—Newsbook.

Just the One.

Lawyer—Are you er-er-truthful?

Applicant—Yes, sir, but I ain't so blamed truthful as ter interfere with yer business.

Pretty Mean.

"He's the meanest man I ever knew."

"That so?"

"Yes. Just to show what he can do, he takes a pair of field glasses to the ball game every afternoon, and puts in half his time searching the stands for some of his employes."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Necessity.

"I see you always wear a smiling countenance."

"Yes," answered the candidate a little wearily. "I have to. There is no telling what moment a snap-shot photographer may turn up."—Washington Star.

A Checkbook.

Men's lives should be open books,
So their good wives expect;
And they seem to think each page
Should represent a check.

Providential.

Knicker—How did Jones escape ptomaine poisoning?

Bocker—Didn't know how to pronounce it.

Valuable Pies.

"You mean to say you ask 20 cents for one of your mince pies?"

"I do."

"But you can buy a mince pie anywhere for 10 cents."

"Not like these."

"I don't see why these should be worth any more than any others?"

"Well, I do. Why, a fellow found a gold collar button in one of these pies yesterday!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Not Wholly in Vain.

Uncle Allen Sparks was returning gloomily from the funeral of an acquaintance.

"Well," he said, brightening visibly after a period of profound thought, "his life was a useful one, ater all. He once planted a tree."

Bruddah Ben's Philosophy.

"Wimmin folks am queer institutions," said Bruddah Ben.

"In what way?" asked Bruddah Hickey.

"Why, during yo' courtin' days dey am always ready to fall on yo' neck an' aftah de wedding ceremony dey am always ready to fall on yo' pocket book."

Important Accomplishments.

"How are you getting along at school now?"

"Well, but not as good as some of the other boys. I can jump over the school house fence, but I have to use the springboard to help me. But I guess by next week I'll be able to do it without the springboard."

Doubly Overdrawn.

Shortleigh—My account at the bank is overdrawn.

DeLong—Why don't you marry Miss Gotrox?

Shortleigh—She's too homely.

DeLong—Can't you close your eyes and imagine that she is handsome?

Shortleigh—Hardly. My imagination fund account is also overdrawn.

Declared Off.

Said He—Darling, we have been engaged for six months. Don't you think it is about time we were getting married?

Said She—Well, I'm willing to be married just as soon as you can provide me with a home.

Said He—That being the case, I suppose I am to consider the engagement broken.

About the Size of It.

"No man can tell what he can do till he has tried," remarked the moralizer.

"Yes," rejoined the demoralizer, "and there are lots of men who can't tell even after they have tried."

Cost of a Newspaper.

Jackson—No, I never take the newspapers home. I've got a family of grown-up daughters, you know.

Friend—Paper too full of crime, eh?

Jackson—No; too full of bargain sales.—Exchange.

A Hopeless Case.

"A great, big, able-bodied man like you ought to be ashamed to ask a stranger for money," said the well-to-do citizen.

"I know I ought," answered Meandering Mike. "But, mister, I'm jes' naturally too kind-hearted to tap 'im on de head and take it away from him."—Sketch.

Added a Little Sulphur.

Doctor—Did your husband follow my directions? Did he take the medicine proudly, "comes out to-night."

Patient's Wife—I'm afraid not, doctor; he swore every time I gave him a dose.—Brooklyn Transcript.

Filial Reproach.

"Young man," said the billionaire, "I made every cent of this colossal fortune by my own efforts!"

"Yes," replied the gilded youth, "but look at the manner in which your financial methods have gotten the family talked about!"—Washington Star.

Pattern Department

UP-TO-DATE DESIGNS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

Princesse Gown.

Every variation of the princesse model is being met with enthusiasm just now, and many women who find the more severe style trying are sure to welcome such a pretty modified one as this. The skirt and the blouse portions are joined at the sides by means of a belt, but the panels at the front and the back give the long, unbroken, characteristic lines. In this case foulard is trimmed with plain silk and with a little chemisette of embroidered batiste. The skirt portion is made with two gores at each side, which are joined to the panels, and the front and back edges of these gores and the edges of the panels are arranged to form inverted plaits.

PATTERN NO. 6057.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper. Be sure to give both the number and size of pattern wanted, and write very plainly.

Order Coupon.

No. 6057.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Misses' House Jacket.

The pretty and becoming breakfast jacket is always in demand, and this one designed for young girls is both simple and graceful. There is the big collar that is always becoming, while it leaves the throat comfortably free, and there is a choice allowed of three-quarter or long sleeves. In the illustrated dotted challis is trimmed with lace, but the model suits not alone the wool materials of the present and the pretty thin silks that are used for the purpose, it also is adapted to all the washable ones.

PATTERN NO. 5936.

The above pattern will be mailed to your address on receipt of 10 cents. Send all orders to the Pattern Department of this paper.

Order Coupon.

No. 5936.

SIZE .....

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

LITTLE ABOUT EVERYTHING.

Sixty-four out of every 1,000,000 of the world's inhabitants are blind.

If a phrenologist is a mind reader, the human mind must be mixed letters.

If you want people to listen to you, don't talk about yourself.

It is a waste of time to growl, for you will soon have to smile again.

The Nile never contains a greater variety of fish than any other body of water.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

FINDS "FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH."

Man Who Discovered Old Tunnel Will Lay Out Park There.

William R. Hinsdale of Orange, N. J., who has discovered the location of the "old Spanish tunnel" in the Shawangunk mountains, is to lay out a park there, according to the New York World.

Tradition said that from the tunnel ran a stream of living water, and Prof. Mathel, State geologist of Ohio, who investigated, accepted the theory that the work was done by Spaniards who formed a part of the Ponce de Leon expedition. After failing to find the fountain of youth in Florida and following their leader's dying injunction to continue the search, they are thought to have made the journey northward.

When they came to a stream larger than a man's arm rushing out of solid rock, with no visible source of supply, they halted and began to tunnel to locate the pool when it came. This was in the sixteenth century. The tunnel was known till recently only by Indian legend.

Hinsdale, finding a stream that never varied in its flow or temperature, employed a force of men, and uncovered an accumulation of debris. Then he located the mouth of the tunnel itself. It is perfectly formed and the stream gushes from a fissure at the extreme end.

The tunnel is 500 feet long, six feet high, four feet wide and straight as an arrow, with only a rise of seven feet in its entire length.

Hinsdale purchased the entire tract of land, put in a narrow-gauge railroad, built an electric plant and lighted the tunnel with incandescent lamps.

A company is being organized to bottle the water, which, on account of its purity and historical association, is expected to meet with ready sale.

RAISED FROM SICK BED

After All Hope Had Vanished.

Mrs. J. H. Bennett, 59 Fountain St., Gardiner, Me., says: "My back used to trouble me so severely that at last I had to give up. I took to my bed and stayed there four months, suffering intense pain, dizziness, headache and inflammation of the bladder. Though without hope, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and in three months was completely cured. The trouble has never returned."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Innocent.

"Lobelia," sternly demanded Mr. McSwat, "I want to know what you've been doing to my safety razor!"

"Nothing," was Mrs. McSwat's indignant answer, as she moved around with a slight limp. "Besides, Billiger, I don't believe it's a safety razor, anyway!"—Chicago Tribune.

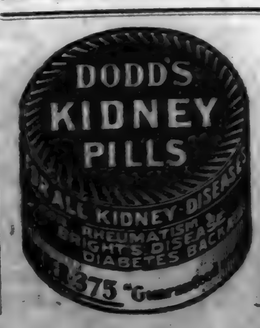
Great Home Eye Remedy, for all diseases of the eye, quick relief from using PETTIT'S EYE SALVE. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

Glory of the Nickname.

The public man in America who has never been tagged with a nickname may be just as efficient and worthy of praise as his brethren who are known as "Bill" and "Joe," but he has not achieved an equal measure of popularity. Nicknames are oftener inspired by affection than by aversion. "The men of the people," so-called, are invariably nicknamed. Venerable citizens still refer to "Abe" Lincoln, dwelling with reminiscent affection upon the abbreviation. Nicknames both good and bad are as old as history. In the country the people have a way of abbreviating the names of the men they really like and assigning their full titles to the men who prefer dignity to popularity.—Pittsburg Gazette.



OCTOBER

0356

L 903

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Will Young, of 6 Columbia Ave., Rockland, Me., says:

"I was troubled for a long time with dreadful backaches and a pain in my side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to try it; after taking three bottles I can truly say that I never felt so well in my life."

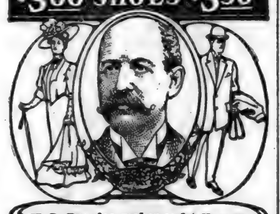
Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I had very severe backaches, and pressing-down pains. I could not sleep, and had no appetite. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a new woman."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 SHOES $3.50



W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world, because they hold their shape, fit better, and wear longer than any other make.

Sizes at All Prices, for Every Member of the Family, Men, Boys, Women, Misses & Children

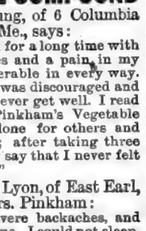
W. L. Douglas $4.00 and $5.00 Gilt Edge Shoes cannot be equalled at any price. W. L. Douglas $3.50 and $3.00 shoes are the best in the world.

Fast Color Eyelets Used Exclusively, or Take No Substitute. W. L. Douglas name and price is stamped on bottom. Sold everywhere. Shoes mailed from factory to any part of the world. Catalogue free. W. L. DOUGLAS, 157 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Paxtine

TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Keeps the breath, teeth, mouth and body antiseptically clean and free from unhealthy germ-life and disagreeable odors, which water, soap and tooth preparations alone cannot do. A germicidal, disinfecting and deodorizing toilet requisite of exceptional excellence and economy. Invaluable for inflamed eyes, throat and nasal and uterine catarrh. At drug and toilet stores, 50 cents, or by mail postpaid.



Large Trial Sample

WITH "HEALTH AND BEAUTY" BOOK SENT FREE

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., Boston, Mass.

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful "Cascarets" for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to "Cascarets" for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year."

James McGuire, 109 Mercer St., Jersey City, N. J.

Best for The Bowels

Cascarets

CANDY CATHARTIC

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c. 25c. 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back.

Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N.Y. 902

ANNUAL SALE, TEN MILLION BOXES

Copper, Vulcan, the multimillion dollar toy mine to Lawsons Trinity, National and Rainbiais, Smelters; Exploration stock 25c. Will advance 1,000 per cent. and again. "Brains and Bullion" ready to mail you. Shasta Brokerage Co., Dunsmuir, Cal.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later with Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia, which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine, but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

His Discharge.

A touching instance of the humor which never deserts a true Irishman even in his worst troubles is recorded.

A soldier was seen in the trenches holding his hands above the earthworks. His captain asked:

"What are you doing that for, Pat?"

He replied, with a grin, as he worked his fingers:

"I'm feeling for a furlough, sir."

Just then a rifle ball struck his arm just below the wrist. Then a queer expression of pain and humor passed over his face as he exclaimed:

"And faith it's a discharge."—London Answers.

Ask Your Dealer for Allen's Foot-Ease

A powder to shake into your shoes. It rests the feet. Cures Corns, Bunions, Swollen, Sore, Hot, Callous, Aching, Sweating feet and Ingrowing Nails. Allen's Foot-Ease makes new or tight shoes easy. Sold by all Druggists and Shoe Stores, 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Omissions of History.

The American colonists had just enunciated the doctrine that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

"How perfectly absurd," exclaimed King George III. "Why, a man can't even govern his family on that principle!"

Laughing uproariously, he gave orders that a few regiments of soldiers be shipped over at once to crush the incipient rebellion.—Chicago Tribune.

Do Your Clothes Look Yellow?

If so, use Red Cross Ball Blue. It will make them white as snow. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

RARE OLD VOLUME.

Black Letter 16th Century "Shepherd's Kalendar" in Minneapolis.

Charles L. Fellows, a local bibliophile, owns a copy of "The Shepherd's Kalendar," whose black-letter type smacks of the fine printing of Caxton and Wynkyn de Worde. In fact, the latter printer issued an edition of this celebrated book, says the Minneapolis Journal.

The exact date of Mr. Fellows' copy cannot be made out, except by an expert, because the title page, table of contents and two leaves of the beginning of the book are missing, but the edition has every appearance of having been issued prior to 1600. The remainder of the book is in an excellent state of preservation and a sight of its old plates is calculated to make a book lover water at the mouth.

This exceedingly curious book was very popular for a century or so from 1509 to 1600. One of its features is Lazarus' account of himself while he was dead and what he saw in hell. The infernal sights are pictured in the old wood cuts with a vividness that was calculated to make the wicked man of the sixteenth century lead a much better life than he otherwise would.

The "Kalendar" mentions the apocryphal books of the Bible in a way that seems to show that they were considered authentic. It also has an interesting variation of the Lord's prayer. "And let us not be led into temptation." It contains, of course, a calendar and much astrology, good advice, poetry and information on the signs of the zodiac.

Nothing better could be found to indicate the amazing progress of the world in the short 400 years that have intervened since this book was considered a masterpiece of literature, learning and art.

NO GUSHER

But Tells Facts About Postum.

"We have used Postum for the past eight years," writes a Wis., lady, "and drink it three times a day. We never tire of it.

"For several years I could scarcely eat anything on account of dyspepsia, bloating after meals, palpitation, sick headache—in fact, was in such misery and distress I tried living on hot water and toast for nearly a year.

"I had quit coffee, the cause of my trouble, and was using hot water, but this was not nourishing.

"Hearing of Postum I began drinking it and my ailments disappeared, and now I can eat anything I want without trouble.

"My parents and husband had about the same experience. Mother would often suffer after eating, while yet drinking coffee. My husband was a great coffee drinker and suffered from indigestion and headache.

"After he stopped coffee and began Postum both ailments left him. He will not drink anything else now, and we have it three times a day. I could write more, but am no gusher—only state plain facts."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

POPULAR PULPIT

WORSHIP AND ITS WORTH.

Son of man, stand on thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.—Ezek. 2:1.

The measure of the worth of any worship must be in the increasing worth of the worshiper. If we would glorify the Creator, the best way will be by making His creation more glorious. God is not made more by making man less. True religion in every way will inspire and lead men to larger living.

We have had enough of the religion that thought of man as utterly depraved, that chose to describe him as a vile worm of the dust, and that expressed its highest wish in the prayer, "O, to be nothing, nothing." Man was made to be something, and religion is to help him to be something greater, nobler, fairer than he ever has dreamed.

When a man has told the Almighty that he is only a vile worm of the dust, his gratuitous information has branded him as a hypocrite, for while he may have accurately described himself, he would be the first to resent our acceptance of his own estimate, while at the same time he has no right to utter such a libel on the race.

Worship is a reaching up toward the worth while, that which is worthy and inspiring. Every endeavor for better, purer, larger and more ideal living is an act of worship. Every prostration in the dust, save in sincere confession of past failure and with speedy rising to new endeavor, is an offense against the love that has destined us for greatness.

The divine call to man is to stand up and strive for the highest levels of life. Make the most of yourself, for manhood has been given that we might make it mean yet more. The godly life is the life that grows in goodliness, in godliness. The reality of the sense of the infinite may be measured by the earnestness of our endeavor to attain to the beauty of that life in our own.

No man ever strives after such full life without realizing how it both necessitates and develops the spirit of humility, how, as one seeks after fairer living, all the foulness and unworthiness stands revealed. Yet we have to learn to leave these things behind, to cast off the old garments of weakness and wandering, and put on new glory day by day.

Because man is the son of the Most High he is not afraid of his Father's face, and he never has found anything too high for him. He is most like his Father as he reaches out after the life that is great and good and noble. The children of the Most High are known everywhere as those who seek the highest life.

It is the spirit of God that makes men aspire. Think no glory of character too great for you. Look on life as simply heaven's way of setting the upward path before us, look on its every discipline as a call to true worship, to endeavor to be worthier, to climb somehow nearer to the face of the infinite goodness.

I would rather trust the honor of the man who is conscious of being an erect animal than that of the one who interprets his religion in terms of self-abnegation; the latter is liable to live up to his own specifications. If we would have men upright in their ways we must aid them to be upright in their worship.

This world needs men who will stand up on their feet; who are not afraid of being individuals, who can be counted and who can be counted on. That was the glory of that goodly life lived long ago in Judea and Galilee; it counted as an individual life. It was a life that stood up and has cried to all our lives ever since, "Stand up, look up, lift up."

Men have seen the divine in that life because it lifted itself toward the divine. It has become worthy of worship because it constantly worshiped by becoming more worthy. It has lifted lives because it has gone on rising to higher levels. So if any life would truly worship, it must realize its own dignity, its own glorious destiny, and, standing upright, strive out and up for fullness of living.

PRESENT DAY MATERIALISM.

By Rev. George Clarke Peck, D. D.

Is not the life more than meat?—Matthew vi., 25.

Time was when a trans-Atlantic trip made the event of a lifetime. People prepared for it with all but fasting and prayer. When an outgoing passenger went up the gangplank his friends had good reason to fear and his enemies just ground for hoping that he would never return to his native shore.

But in our day all is changed. An ocean voyage now, instead of being an epoch in life, is scarcely an event. Travelers count their voyages as a commercial man might reckon his trips to Boston. One's chief anxiety nowadays is concerning the size and location of his stateroom and the excellence of the chef. Few ocean travelers wake in the morning with a sort of wonder at being alive so far from shore, but rather speculating as to whether the coffee will be better than yesterday's.

Nevertheless, the voyage itself is the real thing. What matters anything or everything else as compared with the safety of the voyage? Who cared afterward that the saloon was luxurious and the cuisine excellent when the ill-fated Bourgogne lurched to her frightful doom? It needs only the jar and shudder of steel to declare that the voyage itself is the real thing. Nothing really counts as against that. The stewards may gather the tips, but the crew deserve them.

So in life, the voyage ought to be the paramount concern. The real business of manhood and womanhood is to make port at length. Yet what preponderance of emphasis we put upon things which do not really matter twenty-four hours afterward. What we shall eat, what we shall drink and wherewithal we shall be clothed. These are the considerations that rouse us. It might almost be said that we gauge the values of life in terms of the stomach.

"What do I think of your cities?" said a much-traveled man in my presence. "I do not think of them. I care nothing about them. I do not want to see your famous buildings or your historic sights. If you can recommend me to a luxurious hotel I shall call your city good and remember it with pleasure. It is not sentiment, but beefsteak that counts with me. Not twenty hours later I heard a prominent American just so describe his visit to Nuremburg. He went into rapturous reminiscences over that portion of his trip. Yet the object of his rapture was not the historic walls of the city nor its great chapters of action, nor the shrine of its famous church, but rather a little restaurant where he procured the best sausage and beer he had ever tasted. Indeed, he might have forgotten the church altogether save that it served to localize the place where he bought the sausage and beer. "Is not the life more than meat?" It would not seem so: not much more at any rate. At least, it is difficult to raise life above that level.

Such is the condition we are set to fight. Not in the interest of asceticism, but of manhood, with a generous thought for every creature comfort, but with supreme concern for character we may need to ask ourselves, very frequently: "Is not the life much more than meat?"

Then how much more? Life without a definite port at the end; life unthrilled and unfed by the Father; life unsanctified, however sleek, is the veriest failure.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Loving is simply life giving.

Worry is half of weariness.

Killing time is crippling character.

Paradise is not found by fleeing from pain.

The hypocrite is only the chronic living liar.

Sermons cannot take the place of sympathy.

Nothing is sacred without some sacrificial service.

Experience is the best interpreter of any theology.

The breadth of your prayer determines its reach.

It takes more than a loathing of hell to lead to heaven.

There is no faith without some feeling for our fellows.

Faith is not a balancing pole for the man on the fence.

A great sorrow may be the fitting for some great service.

The clinkers always take credit for the full head of steam.

You never will find good in a boy by the detective method.

Nothing heals our own wounds quicker than helping others.

Refuse another's burden and you lose your own blessing.

Men who are doing a big business never need a "busy" sign.

There is not a good life which does not find living a glad thing.

Paralysis of conscience is often mistaken for the peace of God.

This world never agrees with the man who tries to swallow it whole.

The man who brags of his self-respect is often paying his respects to a mighty small object.

Our own sins grow fast behind our backs while we are gazing at the faults of our neighbors.

It's a poor faith that values its creed by its virulent power to hurt the sheep of some other fold.

DON'TS FOR CHURCHMEN.

Don't think always to find happiness in pleasure.

Don't measure greatness by response to high appeal.

Don't wait for popular appreciation if you would lead men.

Don't dream of the new heaven to make the clean earth.

Don't paint the pump when you should purify the water.

Don't apologize for your religion when apology should attach to yourself.

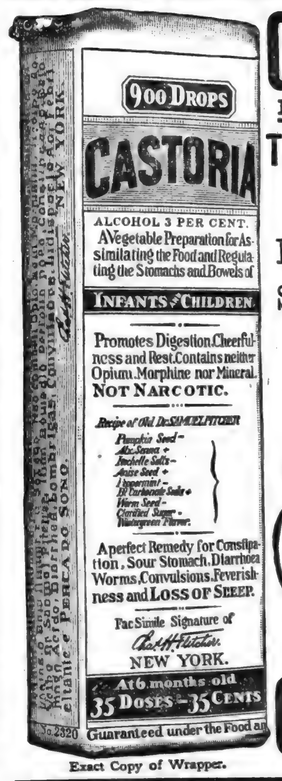
Don't make strong assertions on uncertainties lest you weaken your statements.

Don't fatten on the adversities of others lest you feed your own eternal adversity.

Don't pack your faith in ice depending on religious enthusiasm some time to thaw it out.

Don't sneer at enthusiasm lest you convince others that you are beyond the dead line of any great usefulness.

Whether the church shall stay in the world depends not on whether the world will support it, but on whether it will serve the world and save it.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

WOMAN'S NEWEST TIME KILLER.

Exchange of Post Cards Has Mounted to a Passion.

People spoke of the postcard craze more than a year ago as if it had run its length, says the New York Press. In truth, it has not yet reached its height, though it is growing at a rate to make it a serious problem to the post office department. Women and girls principally are responsible for it. Men send postcards only when they are away from home, and boys take merely a desultory interest in them. But to the eternal feminine in every stage of life the exchange of postcards has mounted to a passion. The correspondence columns of home magazines teem with efforts to exchange cards with anybody and everybody. One young woman writes she has a collection of 1,600, but wants more. Another confides to prospective correspondents she has set out to gather 3,000. Demands for extra pocket money doubtless have been made on thousands of parents and husbands, for though the fad is inexpensive when kept within reasonable bounds, it is easy to see its cost can become an item when ambitions wax unruly. The girl who wants a collection of 3,000, for example, will pay close to $100 for it in cards and stamps. She, of course, must send a card for each one she receives and her postage account may exceed that of many women of fashion. And 'tis said there are collectors who accumulate more than 10,000 cards apiece, one girl having carried her total to 25,000.

Engaging frankness is shown by many of those who forward their names for the exchange list. A Los Angeles girl writes that she can send views of Catalina island and Mounts Lowe and Wilson, which cost 15 cents a dozen, and that she does not wish to exchange them for cheaper cards. Several write they have all the paper cards they want and wish to exchange old leather ones. A Philadelphian prefers scenery and a Roxbury maid "would love to exchange postcards with any young girls from 12 to 20 years old." A girl who signs "Sweet Sixteen" and lives in Elsinore, Cal., wants not only foreign and domestic cards, but hotel monograms. One young woman has the capitols of thirty-six states and yearns for those of the others. A hospital patient adds the touch of pathos, for she wants "any kind of pretty cards." Of course a large part of the fun consists of letting every card go through the mail under its own address and stamp. Overpractical young persons who exchange cards in batches spoil the idea.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

Seeing Oxford.

An Oxford student was showing two fair cousins through the Christchurch College.

"That," he explained, "is the picture gallery; that, the library; and that tower contains the famous bell, 'Great Tom of Oxford.'"

Stooping quickly, he picked up a stone and sent it crashing through a second-story, ivy-framed window, where there immediately appeared a face, purple with rage.

"And that," added the young man, helpfully, "is the Dean."

Thus it was that he came to leave one seat of learning for another.—Success Magazine.

Clear, white clothes are a sign that the housekeeper uses Red Cross Ball Blue. Large 2oz. package, 5 cents.

With Copious Apologies.

"These practices of grafting—
Is there any way to mend 'em?"
"Sure! Just take the initiative
And let the referendum!"

The Professor.

"Uncertainty," moralized the doctor, "is the poison that lurks in everything in this life."

"Certainly," said the professor; "life itself is one-half 'if.'"

Marmalade, then made only of quinces, was known in Henry VIII.'s reign. The word is derived from "Mermelo," a quince.

OUT OF DOOR WORKERS

Men who cannot stop for a rainy day,- will find the greatest comfort and freedom of bodily movement in

TOWER'S FISH BRAND

WATERPROOF OILED CLOTHING

SLICKERS $3.00 SUITS $3.00

Every garment bearing the Sign of the fish guaranteed waterproof Catalog free

A. J. TOWER CO. BOSTON, U.S.A.
TOWER CANADIAN CO. LIMITED, TORONTO, CAN.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

FURIFIES as well as Beautifies the skin. No cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

FERD. T. HOPKINS, Prop., 37 Great Jones Street, New York.

Let us do your Printing using

Eagle Linen

for your office stationery. You can get the paper and envelopes to match.

It is the real thing. Take no other.

Low Rates to California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and other Western States, on SHIPMENTS OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND EMIGRANT MOVABLES. Address THE AMERICAN FORWARDING CO., 188 Madison St., Chicago, Ill., or 255 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N.Y.

The Cream OF TEXAS Farming Lands For Sale

In the "Shallow Water Belt" just below the Panhandle. Pure water at from 70 to 45 feet. A country that offers to investors and homeseekers today an opportunity equal to that offered by Illinois and Iowa forty years ago. Soil of unsurpassed richness, rainfall abundant, climate salubrious. The land of corn, cotton, wheat, oats, alfalfa and fruits and vegetables of all kinds. The paradise of hog and cattle raisers. Write me for particulars. Also LAND coming under the GOVERNMENT IRRIGATION project in rich North Platte Valley of Nebraska. Cheap now but will be worth $100 an acre next year when water is ready to turn on. Write me. ROBERT LUCAS, Iowa City, Ia.

SMOKE A Pickwick 10¢ CIGAR AND BE HAPPY

F. W. N. U. - - - - No. 41—1908.

When writing to Advertisers please say you saw the Adv. in this paper.

LAWSON'S "Remedy" and other investments analyzed, directed, "nailed down." Booklet free. MARK B. DAVIS, 1026 Broadway, Oakland, Cal.

OCTOBER

U357
L 903

KAGEY'S RESTAURANT

These frosty morns and cool evenings create a desire for a change in diet, and to meet your needs we have a full stock of seasonable fall food products. We especially call your attention to the famous

SEAL SHIPT OYSTERS

These are the famous pure food oysters. No ice to melt in the oysters and they always retain their salt water flavor.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR YOUR PRODUCE

All The Time

Bring us Your Butter and Eggs.

FOR SALE.

Shropshire Rams.

15 head of fine Shropshire Ram Lambs for sale: also 20 choice ewes. It will be to your interest to examine this choice lot of sheep if you are looking for something good at the right price.

Come and See These Sheep.

D. L. CARPENTER,

Phone No 64 13. St. Joe, Indiana.

FAIRVIEW

Old papers at News office.

Myrtle Platter spent Sunday with Letha Coyle.

Frank May wife and son spent Sunday at Harlan.

Lankey Morr and family spent Sunday with their parents in Auburn.

Simpson Johnston of Auburn called on his parents Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Moudy of Churubusco visited over Sunday with their parents.

Erma Houser along with a number of Sawdust friends attended the Hillsdale fair one day last week.

Mabel Hathaway and daughter, Milared of Garrett and Stella Markius and daughter, Ruth of Ft. Wayne visited at Houser's Sunday.

News of Alex Platter has been received and he is said to be sound of mind and will probably be returned home in a short time.

The time of Sunday school at this place has been changed to Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. Preaching services next Sunday after Sunday School.

WABASH CORNERS

Wm. Provines and son George spent Thursday in Auburn.

Leia Shilling is attending the I. B. College in Ft. Wayne.

Roy White who was quite sick is better at this writing.

Roogie Tryon spent Saturday with his mother in Newville.

The correspondent was the guest of Mrs. Ida Woodcox of St. Joe last Tues.

Roy White and son, Ora, called on Sherman Wolff and wife Sunday.

Charles Woodcox, wife and son of St. Joe were Sunday guests of Sherman Wolff's.

Sherman Rickett and wife spent Sunday in Auburn Junction with Geo. Arnold and wife.

Emanual Ulm and wife spent Saturday in Ft. Wayne with the formers sister Mrs. Malina Costlo.

Benj. Hamilton and wife and Will Hamilton and wife of Coburntown spent Sunday with O. K. Shull's

Violet Wilson returned to her home in Spencerville Saturday, after several weeks stay with her grandparents D. D. Burley and wife.

HARLAN ITEMS.

The Menonites are holding a meeting at Grabill.

Elizabeth Nelson of Ft. Wayne is visiting Mrs. John Stopher.

An all day Missionary Convention will be held at the M. E. Church Tuesday.

Nevadah Ackley of Hicksville, Ohio, is spending a few days with Edith Hood.

Rev. Pyle of Marion supplied for Rev Couch of the Christian Church last Sunday.

The townships of Scipio, Springfield and Cedar Creek will hold an institute here Saturday.

The Sunday School convention held at the Christian Church October, 3, was largly attended.

Freda Reichelderfer entertained her Sunday School class last Saturday in honor of her birthday.

The Misses Beryl Boston and Berdine James visited Willis Enninger and family of Ft. Wayne over Sunday.

John Yaggy and wife and Peter Loenner and wife of Woodburn attended the Sunday School convention.

The Misses Lyle and Eugenia Swift Zella Reichelderfer and Mrs. Roy Miller were Ft. Wayne visitors Saturday.

Where Bullets Flew.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a vetran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 50c at H. Milliman's drug store.

Shoe Repairing.

Leave your shoe repairing at Kinsey's Hardware. Prices reasonable

ROY KINSEY.

Coburn's Corners

H. A. Coburn and family took Sunday dinner with George Wade and family.

There will be preaching at the Corner's next Lord's Day, both morning and evening.

Floyd Coburn and Clara Shull visited with friends at Georgetown, Sunday afternoon.

W. F. Maxwell and wife visited with James Oberholtzer and family, near Harlan, Sunday.

Victor Dermott went to Cincinnati, Ohio, Saturday evening and returned Monday.

The Hicksville Laundry gives either the gloss or domestic finish.

GEO. MILLIMAN, AGT.

O J. Baker, Matie Gee, and son, Fred visited with Maurice Headley and family, of Newville, Sunday.

Pinkerton Bros. desire to call attention to the fact that they are located here to do all kinds of blacksmithing and especially to satisfy you in horseshoing.

The band elected new officers on Wednesday evening of last week. The following officers were elected: Stearl Wade, president; Ora Quance, vice-president; George Pence, secretary; and Merrit Maxwell, treasurer.

The ladies of the M. P. church will serve dinner and supper, November 3rd.

A number of our Prohibition friends attended the rally at Spencerville, Monday afternoon.

DID HIS BEST

The editor of the St. Joe News wrote a stirring article on "Young Man Do Your Best," and he went and got married. A physician that takes his own medicine is all right and so is an editor.

—Waterloo Dawn.

The writer of the article referred to is not married, nor does he thiuk that his brother editor was married on account of any influence the article had on him. If getting married is the best thing a young man can do, let us be truly thankful that our working partner has entered the matrimonial realm.

SPENCERVILLE

R. F. D. No. 1.

John Dilley and wife spent Sunday at F. A. Horn's.

George Mason was up from Harlan last week cutting corn on his farm.

Gaylen Boger started to school last week after having the whooping cough.

Some of the students who have been attending High School at Harlan think it is fine.

George Horn had a fifty barrel concrete cistern put in last week by men from Ft. Wayne.

Joe Boger received a telegram last week that his brother Will's wife of Elsie, Michigan, was dead, He took the train Wednesday morning at Spencerville and went to Elsie to attend the funeral which took place last Friday. His sister Lidia Boger who has been in Butler for some time came down and stayed with her sister in-law during her brothers absence.

NEWVILLE ITEMS.

Hall Akins seemes a little better at this writing.

Does the horse need shoes? Have him shod at Pinkerton's, St. Joe.

Bert Huntington, wife and daughter and Mark Countryman, wife and sons of Butler were Sunday visitors in the home of Mariah Countryman.

Henry Shaffer, wife and mother-in-law Susan Smith, Billy Miller and Clarence Baron, attended the Kendallville Fair last Thursday.

Mrs. Susan Smith of Holgate, Ohio, who for the past two weeks has been visiting her daughter Mrs. Henry Shaffer, returned home last Saturday.

Electa Ryan returned from Illinois where she was called on account of the sickness of her sister. The sister died on Wednesday of last week. She was 85 years old.

James Headley, wife and daughter Loline of Steubenville, Ohio, and Clara Imhote and son Ralph, of Butler Ind. took dinner with Maurice Headley and wife, last Saturday.

Mr. Warren Schovill met with quite an accident which will lay him up for a time his team started to run and tipped the wagon rack up and he jumped to save himself and struck his foot on something and broke both bones in his heel.

Local Briefs

Glen Wineland left Monday for Teagarden, Ind., to act as relief operator for the B. & O. at that place.

J. W. Dills of Hicksville, was in our town, Friday and Saturday and while here made the News office a pleasant call.

J. C. Hull is at Indianapolis this week as representative of the St. Joe lodge to the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Rhodenbaugh entertained the following visitors Sunday: Cal Grube and wife of Auburn Mart Wood and wife of Avilla and Mr. and Mrs. DeLain Gee of Coburns Corners.

May Waite and Blone Wise of Harlan spent Monday afternoon in St. Joe. Miss Wise returned with her companion as far as Spencerville where she remained to visit with relatives.

Marshall Andress, wife and daughter spent several days last week with relatives at Kendallville. They were accompanied home by Cap Andress who is visiting relatives and friends.

INSURANCE.

LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
SICKNESS,
FIRE and TORNADO-

THE BEST OF COMPANIES.

Are you interested? For rates Phone No. 46, or call on

J. C. HULL, City Barber

Harry Milliman

The Druggist

DRUGS THAT ARE ALWAYS PURE.
FANCY PERFUMES
BRUSHES and COMBS
TOILET ARTICLES

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

It is the largest and best we have ever carried. A full choice of tablets both for pen and pencil and something for ever purpose,

Note Books, Pens, Pen Holders,
Pencils, Indelible and Lead,
Carter's Ink, Erasers, Wax Crayons,
Penny Crayons, Colored Pencils,

New line of Fishing Tackle. The Famous SNECK HOOK. SPOON HOOKS and TANDEM SPINNERS.

Expert Wooden Minnows.

BLACKSMITH SHOP.

Pinkerton Bros.

Located in the old Sailer stand on Third Street, south of the Big Four Store.

We are prepared to do all kinds of blacksmithing and want an opportunity to show the people of this vicinity what we are able to do. We invite you to bring your work to our place of business and we guarantee to satisfy you.

Horseshoeing Our Specialty.

J. V. Pinkerton A. V. Pinkerton

Seasonable Hardware.

Success cream Separators, Washing Machines clothes wringers, churns, high grade enameled ware, tinware of all kinds, glass, sash and doors, all kinds of roofing, Sherwin-Williams paint, poultry fence, american field fence, table and pocket cutlery.

AND REMEMBER

I am closing out my stock of Ranges to make room for my fall stock of heating stoves, such as Wilson heaters, coles hot blast and hard coal base burners. Goods are guaranteed to be as good as the market affords.

Quality Right. Prices Right.

D. J. Baker.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM OF FREE FALL EXHIBIT

Auburn, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday
October 7, 8 and 9

Wednesday, Oct. 7

7:00 to 10:00 O'clock A. M. Entrance of Exhibits
10:00 to 12:00. Arrangements of Exhibits.

DINNER

1:00 P. M. Concert by Auburn's Famous City Band
2:30. The Sisters Allen in the prettiest act now before the public.
3:30. Professor Earl, the premier high wire artist of America.
4:30. Richard Bros., original up-side-down Buck and Wing dancing, foot juggling, etc.

EVENING

7:00. Concert by Auburn City Band.
8:00. Allen Sisters, appearing upon a specially constructed stage.
8:30. Richard Bros.
9:00. Professor Earl, high wire with electric lights and fireworks effect.

Thursday, Oct. 8

9:00 A. M. Band Concert.
10:00. Meeting of Judges in Commercial Club Rooms.
10:30. Good Roads Meeting—Address by M. E. Eldridge, U. S. Government Expert

DINNER

1:00 P. M. Concert by City Band.
2:00. Exhibition of Heavy Draft and Single Driving Horses
3:00. Showing of Belgian Horses and Colts, for which the Waterloo Horse Company put up $100 in cash prizes.
3:45. The Allen Sisters.
4:15. Richard Bros.
4:45. Professor Earl in Comic High Wire Acts.

EVENING

7:00. Band Concert.
8:00. The Allen Sisters.
8:30. Richard Bros.
9:00. Professor Earl.

Friday, Oct. 9

9:00 A. M. Band Concert.
10:00. Allen Sisters.
11:00. Richard Bros.

DINNER

1:00. Band Concert.
2:00. Parade of Schools of the County, same to form at corner of Seventh and VanBuren.
3:00. Prize Drill and March, both District and City Schools.
4:00. Allen Sisters.
4:40. Distribution of Prizes.
5:00. Professor Earl.

EVENING

7:30. Grand Parade of the Military Order of Snakes—a snake 150 feet long will crawl through the streets.
8:30. Allen Sisters' Farewell Program—Hoop Rolling.
9:30. Professor Leo Earl—Daring Feats on High Wire with Lights and Fireworks.

Elmer Hart and Chloe Rhodenbaugh spent Sunday with friends at Leo.

Hazel Berry and her mother were at Ft. Wayne, Friday.

John Palmer of Scipio Center was in St. Joe Saturday, having brought a large grist to the Keesler Milling Co.

Mrs. Mary Rhodenbaugh will leave today for Petersburg, Va., after spending several months with her son James and family at this place. She will be accompanied home by Mrs. J. L. Rhodenbaugh and daughter Irma. They will spend a couple of weeks there.

C. A. Woodcox of Garrett spent Monday in St. Joe.

Ed Leighty and John Sechler were at Ft. Wayne, Monday.

John May of Spurlington, Kentucky, has been visiting with his son, at this place, during the past two weeks.

Cadmir Woodcox and wife of Garrett spent last Saturday with relatives and friends at this place.

Armenas Woodcox left Saturday noon for Antwerp, Ohio, and will be working near that place for the next six weeks.

0358
L 903

OCTOBER

Supplement to the

St. Joe News

St. Joe, Ind. | Wednesday, October 7, 1908 | Tustison & Leighty, Pub

A BOY WORTH RAISING

Here is a story of a boy in college who was about to graduate. He wrote back for his mother to come. She replied that she could not do so. She said her clothes were worn out and she had no money to buy new ones for the occasion. The boy said come anyway. The poor mother went in her best but was not stylish. The commencement was in a fashionable church. The son was prouder of his mother than his honors. He walked down the aisle with her to one of the best seats. There were tears in her eyes, and she burst out weeping when her son pronounced the valedictory. The president pinned a badge on his coat, but he took it and pinned it on his mother's faded dress, as he bent and kissed her wrinkled face. The boy with this kind of pride will be an honor to his country and his God. May his number increase and the shadows of his loveliness cover the world.

A new lot of Buster Brown shoes for Boys, Misses and Children just received. The many calls for this popular line of shoes attest to their good wearing qualities. Buy your children the

Buster Brown
Blue Ribbon Shoe.

New line of Ladies shoes in $2.25 $2.50 and $3.00 grades just received.

Big Four Store
St. Joe Indiana.

Livery sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale at his barn in Harlan, Monday, Oct. 12, at ten o'clock A. M. the following: 9 yr. old mare, weighing 1,200 pounds; bay mare 8 yr. old weighing 1,100 pounds, grey driving mare, pair buckskin driving mares. 3 single buggies, 12 passenger buss wagon, 2 set light driving harness, 4 set single harness, 5 set fly nets, buggy pole, some office furniture.

GEORGE MASON.

J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

Would Mortgage the Farm.

A farmer on Rural Route 2, Empire Ga., W. A. Floyd by name, says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured the two worst sores I ever saw, one on my hand and one on my leg. It is worth more than its weight in gold. I would not be without it if I had to mortgage the farm to get it." Only 20c. at H. Milliman drug store.

First Necessity.

"How would you define a 'crying need?'" asked the teacher of the rhetoric class.

"A handkerchief," replied the solemn young man with the wicked eye.—Chicago Tribune.

The great and the little have need of each other.—Shakespeare.

A New One For Him.

"The climate here is salubrious, isn't it?" remarked the tourist.

"Say, friend," replied the native, "jest write that there word down fur me, will yer? I git tired o' swearin' at this climate in the same old way. That's a new one."—Philadelphia Press.

It is not the strength but the duration of great sentiments that makes great men.—Friedrich Nietzsche.

PATENTS

PROCURED AND DEFENDED. Send model, drawing or photo. for expert search and free report. Free advice, how to obtain patents, trade marks, copyrights, etc. IN ALL COUNTRIES.
Business direct with Washington saves time, money and often the patent.
Patent and Infringement Practice Exclusively.
Write or come to us at 583 Ninth Street, opp. United States Patent Office,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

CA·SNOW & Co.

Two Improved ..Stoves...

The Laurel Baseburner

The New Art Laurel, is without question the most striking specimen of beautiful design and perfect workmanship ever produced.

Combined with the beautiful design, you will find exclusive "Laurel" improvements that excel all others in reduction to fuel economy, increased heating capacity simplicity of operation and control, and everlasting durability.

The Laurel Steel Range.

This is the great fuel-saver It's two-flue construction makes it superior to all other ranges.

It has increased cooking facilities. Is fitted with a quick and even baking oven.

Coal Hods, Stove Boards, Sheet Iron Heaters, Stove pipe and Elbows, Stove Blacking.

Be Convinced

COME IN AND SEE THESE STOVES
AT
H V Kinsey & Son's

Frank Sechler and wife moved to St. Joe, Tuesday, and will remain with Nancy Widney this winter. Their son, Leon, will remain on the farm and care for the stock.

Note books at THE NEWS office.

Bring your laundry to George Milliman's.

Glen Wineland who has been employed as telegraph operator at Wawasee is home to spend the winter.

OCTOBER

0359

L 903

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXII. ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 14 1908. NO. 42

Issues Challenge.

Cyrus E. Gallatin has issued a challenge to any resident of DeKalb county to meet him in joint debate on the following question: Resolved, that the democrats who aided in the enactment of the Indiana county local option law deserve censure from their party.

He agrees to take the negative allowing the affirmative one hour, the the negative one four and ten minutes he to use ten minutes at the close. Mr. Gallatin does this so that those who are criticising those democrats who aided in the enactment of this law may arrive at a better understanding of the question.

The debates are to be held in the four principal centers of DeKalb County as soon after October, 20th as can be arranged.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons interested in the estate of MARIA HILDEBRAND deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 22nd. day of October, 1908, and show cause, if any, why my FINAL SETTLEMENT ACCOUNTS with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested, are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares.

WITNESS My name, this 1st. day of October, 1908. J. M. MILLIMAN, Administrator.

John W. Baxter, Atty.

School Items

Mark Williams was absent from school last Wednesday.

Several high school students attended the fair at Auburn last week.

Earl Sherer was a visitor in the high room last Friday afternoon.

The Freshmen Class who recently ordered a pennant were very much disapointed when it came to find that by mistake they had sent the wrong one.

The record of attendance in the primary room was broken last week by Galen Betz, Correl Smanton, Dortha Bowman, Albert Wade and Florence Williams, the latter being out on account of sickness.

Democrats Nominate.

The Democrats of Concord township met in caucus in Wm. Curie's store room, Saturday afternoon for the purpose of nominating a township ticket. Dr. Shook of Spencerville was chosen chairman and Henry Krabill of St. Joe, secretary. The call was made for nominations for trustee and that of John Fetters was the only one made to the caucus. This was accepted by acclamation. George Wade was the only name put in nomination for assessor and was also accepted by acclamation. The local caucuses of the two old parties were quiet affairs. It is safe to say that the competition of rivals will make matters more exciting before the first of November.

Grand Rally.

Three of Fort Wayne's prominent business men, Hon. Chas. S. Bush, Hon. E. H. Yarnell and Col. Lukens, will speak on the political issues of the present campaign, at Widney's Opera House, Thursday evening, Oct, 15th. These men will discuss the issues from a business man's view point. A fine quartett will be present and sing a number of campaign songs. All are invited to be present and enjoy this public speaking and singing.

Special Patriotic Service.

A service of especial interest is announced for next Sunday evening at the Methodist church. It is to be a patriotic service. The choir will furnish music appropriate to the occasion; and the pastor, Rev. J. C. McCain, will preach a patriotic sermon. His subject will be "The Religion of Politics". The public is cordially invited to attend.

A Turk, by name Johnathan David, was in town, Monday. He made the News office a call and treated the force with genuine politeness. He came to America ten months ago and is now traveling about making speeches. When asked what he thought of our country, he said that it was a wonderful country, in many respects the best and in some ways the worst country on the face of the earth. He then pointed out the evil of intemperance and other forms of prevailing vice.

Win Prizes.

Thursday and Friday of last week the Fall Festival at Auburn drew the attention of all the people in this corner of the country and a great majority of them took in the pleasures of that popular exhibit.

There were many premiums awarded and every part of the county was represented among the winners. The contributors from this way succeeded in capturing their share of the prizes. Following is a list of the prize winners from this corner: Best all around driving horse, Grover Curie took second premium, a $5 plush robe. Curt Washler was fortunate enough to get two pair of pants, one as first prize on clover seed and the other as first on sweet corn. P. A. Shurtz was awarded a $3.50 pair of shoes as first on buckwheat and Wm. Lucas will read the Courier one year as a third premium on the same article. The best potatoes captured a $10 lady's wrap for Frank Herrick. Peter Coyle received a plate rack as third on sweet potatoes O. W. Maggitis had the third largest yellow pumpkin and will read the Dispatch as a result of it; he also will sport a new pair of $4.00 boots for displaying the best trio Plymouth Rock chickens. J. B. White received a years subscription to the Dispatch as third on cabbage. John Washler took first and third on muskmelons and second on watermelons. Mrs. Curt Washler received second on the largest loaf of bread. In the school children's contest for the map of DeKalb county, Marie Leighty was awarded a $5 coat.

The crowds on both days were the largest Auburn has ever known and the success of this event bespeakes much for the executive ability of the men who had the festival in charge.

H. C. HATHAWAY,

GROCER & BAKER

The Inner Man.

needs good wholesome food usually three times each day. Something to please his taste and nourish his body. We wish to call your attention to the extensive grocery line which we carry. It is our aim to have everything one could want and always of the best quality. Our Baked Goods are fresh and always baked to a standard grade and quality.

Vegetables.

You should know that we keep all kinds of vegetables in season, and we urge you to come here when you want anything in the vegetable line.

Fresh Cranberries

Country Produce Wanted.
Bring us Your Butter & Eggs.

BARNEY'S STORE

SOL BARNEY

DEALER IN GENERAL MERCHANDISE

We want again to call your attention to our shoes and urge you to come in and see them. You ought to take particular pains to see this showing of shoes as they represent the most complete line ever shown here and we venture that there is no more complete line in DeKalb County.

SELZ SHOES

Yes, we handle the "SELZ" because there is none better. The quality question is solved in these shoes. The service that a purchaser gets out of a shoe depends upon what goes into it. SELZ are made of honest material.

Mr. Selz, a gray haired man of 85, says: "I would rather see every wheel in our eight factories stop, and close the doors than to dodge my own sense of honor in the manufacture of shoes. As long as the name SELZ goes on shoes it must stand for what it has always stood for: ABSOLUTE HONEST QUALITY."

BARNEY'S STORE

"Royal Blue."

Three styles of leathers are shown in the "Royal Blue."

Vici, Velour and Gun Metal.

All vici leather is made from selected skins and represents a uniform quality. The Gun Metal is becoming more and more popular every year; a dull finish and an excellent wearer. Velour calf is a dressy leather and takes a polish almost like a patent.

PRICE $4.00

A WORKING SHOE.

Made from heavy material and especially constructed for the laboring man. They are always soft and pliable and made on easy and very comfortable lasts. A shoe that will give the workingman satisfaction.

Price $3.00

Selz Cushion Sole

The cushion sole has become a staple thing with many wearers. The special feature of this shoe is the felt cushion upon which the foot rests. It is dressy and serviceable and easy on the feet.

"POWHATTAN" HIGH CUT.

A shoe that cannot be excelled for service, and one of the best shoes for wear in cold and wet weather. Its best quality leather and heavy double soles make it almost indestructible. Try a pair.

Price $4.50.

A COMPLETE LINE OF

New Mishawaka Ball Brand Rubber Goods

BARNEY'S STORE

Passed Away.

Johnathan Boyles, son of John and Nancy (Merritt) Boyles was born in Knox Co., Ohio, Feb. 12, 1815. He departed this life Oct. 11, 1908. Aged 93 yrs. 8 mo. 29 days. In the year 1825 he with his parents moved to Morrow county where he grew to manhood. His father being in feeble health, he at the age of 21 had cleared and fenced sixty acres of land.

In 1836 he was married to Elizabeth Oliver to which union were born seven children, two of whom died in infancy. Artemus and Martha lived to mature years. Nancy of Spencerville, Ind., Newton of Dexter, Iowa, and Emma of Hoopeston, Ill., still survive. In 1837 Mr. Boyles brought his family to DeKalb county, Indiana, where he resided until his death. In 1849 occured the death of his wife. In 1850, he was married to Susan Rummel. To this union were born three children, all of whom survive, Eliza of Wellington, Kansas, Mrs. Margaret Shurtz and Mrs. Ella Lucas of St. Joe.

Mr. Boyles is the last of the charter members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Spencerville, Indiana. No one was more highly respected as a gentleman and Christian than he. His long life was crowded with usefulness. In the early pioneer days he had to struggle to support his family. Oftimes privations were staring him in the face but his courage never failed and life was to him a great victory. In domestic life Mr. Boyles was a kind and affectionate husband and father. In public he was scrupulously honest and sincere. In his church relation he was faithful and enthusiastic.

It is useless to attempt a full recital of such a long and useful life. Suffice it to say that for more than half a century he trusted fully in his Heavenly Father. His last words were words expressive of full confidence in God. We have every reason to believe he has gone to receive his crown of reward. Funeral rites were observed on Wednesday, Oct. 14, at the Concord M. P. church. The Rev. C. B. Sweeney, pastor of the M. E. church of Spencerville, was in charge. Interment in the Concord cemetery.

We thus publicly thank those who so kindly assisted us during the protracted illness and the death of our father.

CHILDREN OF JOHNATHAN BOYLES

He Still Preaches

The following is a clipping from the Indianapolis Star, concerning L. L. Carpenter, that will be of interest to his many friends here:

WABASH, Ind., Oct. 6.—The Rev. L. L. Carpenter, dean of Christian Church ministers, president of Bethany Assembly, and who is said to have dedicated more churches than any other living man, returned from Delphi last night. He delivered a sermon Sunday, but not until today did he learn he had preached with a broken rib. While at work about his home he was struck by a piece of timber. He conducted his usual services Sunday. Although 76 years old, Dr. Carpenter recently crossed the continent to dedicate a church. He has a number of dedications assigned and will try to fill these engagements.

J. H. Lake M. D.

has permanently located in the O. H. Widney property on 4th street, opposite opera house and invites you to call on him.

Calls answered day or night.

BELL PHONE NO. 82.

St. Joe, - Indiana.

FOR SALE.

Shropshire Rams.

15 head of fine Shropshire Ram Lambs for sale; also 20 choice ewes. It will be to your interest to examine this choice lot of sheep if you are looking for something good at the right price.

Come and See These Sheep.

D. L. CARPENTER.

Phone No. 64-13. St. Joe, Indiana.

OCTOBER

U360
L 903

The St. Joe News

ST. JOE, INDIANA.

TUSTISON & LEIGHTY - - Publishers

1908 OCTOBER 1908

Su	Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa
•	•	•	•	1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31
•	•	•	•	•	•	•

F. Q. 3rd. F. M. 9th. L. Q. 16th. N. M. 25th.

FEATURES OF INTEREST

ABOUT THAT WHICH HAS BEEN AND IS TO BE.

All Sides and Conditions of Things are Shown. Nothing Overlooked to make it Complete.

Heroic Policeman Dies in Fire.

After rescuing an aged woman from a burning house, Policeman Nicholas Nestor, of Jersey City, plunged again into the blazing building and met death by suffocation. Firemen found his body four hours afterward in an unburned part of the house. After turning in the alarm for the fire, which he had discovered in the cellar of a house on Ocean avenue, Nestor rushed upstairs, aroused the sleeping inmates and ran again into the street to turn in a second alarm. Meanwhile all had escaped except Mrs. Wittenbert, old and feeble. Nestor fought his way to her room, where she was helplessly groping for an exit. Taking her in his arms he carried her through the flames and smoke to the sidewalk and returned to the building. He was not missed by his companions and it was only after the building had cooled sufficiently for examination that his body was found.

Woman Leaps Into Niagara.

A woman about six feet tall, wearing a black hat, long black coat, black shoes and spectacled, and of sallow complexion, appeared in the reservation at Niagara Falls, N. Y., acting strangely, and tried to cross over the bridge to Goat Island, but was stopped by a policeman, who told her that the island was not open to visitors. She continued to wander about, still acting strangely. She was questioned by the superintendent of the park police as to what she wanted, but obtained no information from her except that she was from Saginaw, Mich. Later she walked toward Prospect Point. Officers started after her, but before they reached her she passed under the railing and leaped from the bank into the American falls and nothing more was seen of her. This is the twelfth suicide at the Falls since July 1st.

Young Farmer Does Bloody Deed.

John W. Richardson, a young farmer living in the Lamberts Point section, near Norfolk, Va., shot and killed his sister-in-law, Miss Josephine Cromwell, his father-in-law, Beverley Cromwell, and committed suicide after he had killed his father-in-law's horse. A shotgun was the weapon used. Following domestic troubles, Richardson and his wife, a younger daughter of Mr. Cromwell, separated last week. Richardson claimed that alleged interference of Miss Josephine Cromwell into the family affairs had caused the separation between himself and wife.

Eddy Joined the Regulars.

Ralph W. Eddy, the young traveling man who disappeared in Milwaukee, August 12, two days before he was to have been married in Wooster, Ohio, is now a member of the Thirteenth Infantry, United States army, and is stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kas. A search of the records at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., revealed that Eddy went there August 21, declared his desire to serve in the army, passed the examination successfully and was sworn in for a period of three years. He was sent to Fort Leavenworth a few weeks ago.

Society of Equity Meets.

The American Society of Equity, having a membership of one hundred thousand and represented by a large number of delegates, met in annual convention in Milwaukee, Wis. The society is made up of farmers and its object is to regulate the price of farm products. It is a part of the program to establish elevators and warehouses in different parts of the country and by keeping grain and other produce in store and placing it on the market as there is a demand for it, it is hoped to regulate prices.

Family Quarrel Ends in Tragedy.

Clayton Erb, captain and regimental quartermaster of the Third Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, was shot and killed at his summer home near Village Green, Delaware County, Pennsylvania. His sister-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Beisel, is under arrest in the Media jail charged with the murder. The woman admits that she did the shooting during a family quarrel.

President Castro Worse.

Messages from Caracas say that the condition of President Castro, of Venezuela, has taken a turn for the worse, and that the gravest fears are entertained for his recovery.

Thieves Took Everything.

The postoffice at Williamstown, a little hamlet three miles north of Dunkirk, Ohio, was entered and robbed the thieves taking everything but the building.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

A CONDENSED RECORD OF THE EVENTS OF SEVEN DAYS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

THOUSANDS IN SCHOOL HUNGRY

Report Startles Charitable and Educational Circles of Chicago.

Statistics furnished in a report to the Chicago board of education disclosing that 5,000 children daily go to school hungry and showing the surprising extent of want and misery among Chicago's school children have stirred members of the school board and various educational, charitable and social circles. The terrible conditions affecting thousands of school children are bared in a report presented to the school-management committee of the board of education by a subcommittee consisting of W. L. Bodine, superintendent of the compulsory-education department; Dr. D. P. MacMillan, director of the child-study department, and Attorney Frank Hamlin. According to the report, 5,000 pupils do not know what a full meal means and are habitually hungry, while 10,000 other children in the city do not have sufficient food, although their cases are not as extreme as those of the first mentioned. In arriving at the totals 10,000 specific cases were examined and information was secured from various authoritative sources. Intemperance in some homes and lack of work are blamed in the report for the conditions. The want and misery is held to be the real cause of a majority of the truant and delinquent cases among the boys.

YEAR'S GOLD PRODUCT DROPS.

Decrease in Silver Also in This Country, with Colorado Leading.

The production of gold and silver by the mines of the United States for the calendar year 1907, as determined by the bureau of the mint and the geological survey, acting in conjunction, aggregated 4,374,827 ounces of fine gold of the value of $90,435,700, and 56,514,700 fine ounces of silver of the commercial value averaging 66 cents per ounce, or $37,299,700. As compared with the output of 1906 a decrease is shown in the value of gold of $3,038,100. While the production of silver in 1907 was only 3,200 ounces less than for 1906, the commercial value, on account of the decline in the price of silver, was $958,700 less. Colorado leads in the production of both gold and silver.

GIGANTIC SMUGGLING PLOT.

Government Officials Unearth Big Conspiracy to Defraud U. S.

What the customs officials claim to be the biggest smuggling plot in recent years at Philadelphia and which involves a business man of the city and a prominent resident of Boston, was unearthed in the arrest of Walter Parker of the crew of the steamer Marion. It resulted in the seizure of rare laces and gowns and a quantity of cloth. In addition to the Philadelphian and the Boston man referred to, the plot, according to government officers, involves the largest lace dealer of Queenstown, Ireland. It is expected that members of the crews of other transatlantic steamers will be shown to have been connected with a gigantic conspiracy to defraud the United States. Warrants for the arrest of two other persons were issued.

More Dry Victories in Ohio.

Perry county, Ohio, by a majority of 1,027, voted to banish saloons, of which there are fifty-six within its boundaries. This is one of the important coal mining counties. Brown county, on the Ohio river, also voted out the saloons by a majority of 682. There are twenty-three saloons in this county. Nineteen counties have now held elections under the Rose law and all have gone dry, the total number of saloons affected being 482.

Born as Castaways Are Saved.

The castaways from the British steamer Aeon, who passed nearly two months on Christmas island, an almost barren coral formation in the Pacific ocean, arrived at Suva, Fiji Islands, on the steamer Manuka of the Canadian-Australian line, all well and increased by one in number. A daughter was born to the wife of Chaplain B. R. Patrick, United States navy, twenty-four hours before the Manuka was sighted.

Boy Held as Train Wrecker.

Two recent train wrecks on the Lincoln, Neb., division of the Missouri Pacific are charged to Vernon Shipman, a 17-year-old boy of Lincoln, who was arrested and confessed that he placed a fishplate in the frog of the switch at Barnes Station. Section men on a handcar were thrown from the track just before the arrival of the express train. Shipman denies he caused the previous wreck.

Bars Up Against Standard.

In reply to their inquiry the members of the board of commissioners of Rogers county, Oklahoma, have been notified by the State Attorney General that they have no authority to give permission to the Prairie Oil and Gas Company to build pipe lines in public highways. The oil company has asked the commissioners for their permission.

Gets Fortune to Stay Unwed.

Providing she does not marry, Miss Eugenia Warren, teacher in the Coscob public school, will receive an annual income of $20,000 through the will of Mrs. Juliette W. Murray, late of New York. Miss Warren's admirers are now legion.

Lumber Merger Announced.

The Frost & Johnson Lumber Company announces the completion of a fully subscribed $10,000,000 yellow pine lumber merger, absorbing Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana companies.

Blast Heard Twenty Miles.

Two powder houses southeast of Sioux Falls, S. D., exploded with a detonation that was heard twenty miles away. One boy was killed, and it is feared two others perished. The powder houses belonged to the Larsen Hardware Company.

U. S. LEADS AS COAL PRODUCER.

Sixty Per Cent Ahead of Great Britain in 1907.

The United States produced 60 per cent more coal than Great Britain in 1907, over 100 per cent more than Germany, and, exclusive of Great Britain, more than all other countries combined. The geological survey, in a report on the world's production of coal, estimates such production at 1,209,184,109 short tons, of which the United States furnished almost 40 per cent. More than 93 per cent of the total world's production is from countries north of the equator, the countries south producing less than 20,000,000 tons annually. During the last forty years the percentage of the world's total produced by the United States has increased from 14.32 to 39.73, and since 1899 this country has held first place, having distanced Great Britain so far that that country can no longer be considered a rival.

SEALING FLEET AIDS VESSELS.

U. S. Revenue Cutters in Alaskan Waters Ordered Home.

The Behring sea fleet, consisting of the United States revenue cutters Thetis, Bear, Perry, McCulloch and Rush, under command of Senior Captain F. M. Munger, has completed its duty in Alaskan waters and the vessels have been ordered to their respective stations. The work of the fleet this year has been exceptional. Aside from successfully guarding the seal islands and territorial waters and preventing raids, important investigations have been made. The Perry investigated the condition of the natives along the Aleutian island chain as far west as Attu. The combined fleet has cruised over 60,000 miles, boarded twenty-seven of the twenty-eight Japanese sealers, and rendered assistance to distressed vessels amounting to nearly $500,000.

GREAT LAND RUSH BEGUN.

Registration for Land in the Rosebud Reservation Is Started.

The Tripp county, S. D., land rush began Monday morning, Judge Witten allowing notaries to write applications the minute Monday came. Actual registration was started in Gregory and Dallas at 9 o'clock and applications dropped into large metal cans at these two points. Judge Witten has issued notice to persons registering that applicants must swear that they honestly intend to make their homes on the land and that those registering for speculation or intending to sell relinquishments may be prosecuted by the government for attempt to defraud. A light rain freshened up the Rosebud Sunday night. Gregory and Dallas people did not go to bed, fearing to lose a half night's time in starting the lottery.

PASTOR REFUSES PAY INCREASE

Declines Call and Remains with Congregation He Has Served.

Rev. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Pittsburg, recently received a call to the Bedford Avenue Presbyterian church of Brooklyn. His salary is $7,000 a year, but his congregation voted to increase this to $10,000 if he would stay in Pittsburg. Told of this, Mr. Young said: "I will certainly stay with my people if they feel that they need me so badly, but I will not take one cent of the raise in salary offered."

FARMERS' TRUST MEETS.

American Society of Equity Opens Convention at Milwaukee.

The American Society of Equity, having a membership of 100,000, opened its annual convention in Milwaukee Tuesday. The society is made up of farmers, and its object is to regulate the price of farm produce. It is a part of the program to establish elevators and warehouses in different parts of the country and by keeping grain and other produce in store and placing it upon the market as there is a demand for it to regulate prices.

62 Die in Cholera Epidemic.

The cholera epidemic in St. Petersburg is being kept well in hand, considering the hold it had on the city before proper measures to prevent its spread were taken. In the twenty-four hours from noon Saturday until noon Sunday the new cases numbered 136 and the deaths 62.

Burglar Gets Unlucky Ring.

Mrs. Silas Smith of Paterson, N. J., reported to the police the loss of an opal ring which she declares has always brought bad luck to its owner and which she believes the burglar took in order to pass it on to some one against whom he has a grudge.

Cincinnati Packer Drops Dead.

Thomas Morrison, prominent in railroad and business circles, dropped dead in Cincinnati. He was a member of the firm of Thomas Morrison & Co., meat packers, a trustee of the Cincinnati Southern Railway and a former president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Philadelphia's 225th Birthday.

Philadelphia celebrated her two hundred and twenty-fifth birthday, the feature of the day being an address by Herman Ridder on German influence in the development of the nation.

War Ships Outride Hurricane.

The Atlantic battle ship fleet has safely outridden a hurricane which swept Manila bay for twelve hours and did much damage ashore.

Night Riders Kill Three.

Fifty night riders set fire to the home of Dave Walker, a negro, near Hickman, Ky., and, as the house was burning, shot Walker, his 5-year-old daughter, and his infant child to death as they attempted to escape. Mrs. Walker and three other children are believed to be fatally injured.

$20,000,000 IN SMUGGLING PLOT.

Customs Officials Seize Cameos and Jewels, Exposing Big Swindle.

News of the seizure by custom-house officers in New York City of more than $20,000 worth of costly cameos and coral jewelry led to the disclosure of a gigantic smuggling plot involving more than $20,000,000. These seizures are the first open moves in an investigation which Collector of the Port Edward S. Fowler has been conducting for the last three weeks with the utmost secrecy, for fear that the conspirators might take alarm and escape before the evidence against them had been completed. Already it has been ascertained that the smugglers did not confine their operations to jewelry. The scope of their illicit traffic was of the widest and embraced almost every article of value that is imported into this country from Italy. Priceless laces from Florence and Venice, silks and gloves of the costliest grades were smuggled in by the barrel and bale, the one under the guise of apples and the other listed as hay.

LIVES OF MANY BABIES SAVED.

New York Conference on Care of Infants Proves to Be Success.

With 727 fewer deaths among children under 1 year of age in New York City from approximately June 1 to Oct. 1, as compared with the same period of last year, Dr. Thomas Darlingfon, the health commissioner, is so well satisfied with the work of the conference on the summer care of babies, that he expects to organize the same force for a renewal next year. It was early last June that Dr. Darlington called a meeting of the managers of the charitable and other organizations of the city which work among the children of the poor. Dr. Bensel organized a plan for united effort, a committee was appointed to direct the work and late in June the crusade was begun. The forces of the department, consisting of about 140 physicians, an average number, and eighty-one nurses, were divided into groups. Some were detailed to investigate births, to visit recreation piers and the summer schools and as a general duty report disabilities among children.

MISSING BOY HAZERS' VICTIM.

Bound, Gagged, Put in Box Car and Shipped Away by Students.

Through a sensational story told in Lexington, Ky., by a small boy it is regarded certain that W. S. Smith, who disappeared from the State university recently, was overpowered, bound and gagged during the course of a hazing at the university and then placed in a Queen and Crescent box car, the door of which was afterward locked, and Smith was shipped away. The car was sent out of the yards, but no trace of it can be found. The seal on the car was broken by the students, who are said to have sealed it up again. The police and the faculty of the university are at loggerheads over the investigation. A detail of police was sent to the university by the Mayor. If anything definite is learned, arrests will be made.

Mormons Are for Prohibition.

Having heard their president expound the revelation of the words of wisdom which prohibit the use of all intoxicants by the faithful, 15,000 members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints have proclaimed their faith in the practical application of the ecclesiastical law by voting unanimously approval of a resolution pledging the entire membership of the church to support prohibition legislation.

Bear Trio Shot Near School.

Harry Steele, who recently won fame by shooting four out of six bears which sprang up about him one after another just outside the city limits of South Bend, Wash., has added to his reputation as a nimrod. While hunting in the woods only a little distance from the high school building he was suddenly confronted by three bears. He shot all three, killing two and fatally wounding the third.

Shot by Unknown Persons.

Henry C. Risley, a prominent contractor of Chattanooga, Tenn., was shot and killed as he lay in bed at his home by someone who forcibly entered the house while the other members of the family were attending church, a double-barreled shotgun with both barrels discharged being left by the murderer.

De Wolf Hopper Badly Hurt.

De Wolf Hopper was the victim of a serious accident on the stage of the Wieting Opera House in Syracuse, N. Y. The buckle of a belt by which he was suspended in the air slipped and Mr. Hopper fell to the stage floor, a distance of about eight feet, with great violence and suffered a slight concussion of the brain.

American League Champions.

Detroit won the American League championship by defeating the Chicago White Sox 7 to 0. The National League directors' decision holding the Giants-Cub disputed game a tie may further complicate the race in that league.

Blizzard Cripples Railroad Traffic.

A blizzard, general over that section, struck Butte, Mont., Thursday night, and six inches of snow fell, crippling traffic and telegraph service and delaying trains.

Divorced in Record Time.

Nat C. Goodwin was granted a divorce from Maxine Elliott at Reno, Nev., in the record time of eleven minutes and the judge held a legal residence in the State unnecessary.

Bulgaria Declares Independence.

Bulgaria asserted Monday her independence, repudiating even the nominal suzerainty of Turkey. Turkey, not taken wholly unawares, continued her preparations to fight for her suzerainty, though manifestly being reluctant to go to war.

BIG MEET TO ADVOCATE LAKES-TO-GULF ROUTE

Greatest of Deep Waterway Gatherings Is Opened in the Chicago Auditorium.

ADDRESSES BY NOTABLE MEN.

Boom for Improvement of the Country's Natural Transportation Resources Given New Impetus.

The greatest deep waterway convention ever held began its sessions in the Auditorium Theater at Chicago Wednesday, and the city on that day was host to two presidential candidates and one vice presidential nominee, who were guests of honor of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association.

William Howard Taft, Republican nominee for President; William Jennings Bryan, Democratic nominee for President, and John Temple Graves, vice presidential candidate of the Independence party, were the three distinguished guests. These three men addressed the waterways convention—Taft and Bryan at a banquet Wednesday night and Mr. Graves at a great smoker held Thursday night at the Coliseum for 5,000 of the waterway delegates and their friends. Taft also spoke at the opening meeting of the convention Wednesday morning. Bryan spoke at the session Thursday morning.

William K. Kavanaugh, president of the association, called the convention to order and introduced Bishop Samuel Fallows, who pronounced the invocation. Bishop Fallows prayed for the early consummation of the convention's objects in the interest of American progress and the greater glory of God. The address of President Kavanaugh followed the invocation, and after it Secretary William F. Saunders read his report.

The audience presented an unusually beautiful assemblage, every delegate holding an American flag, which had been presented to him at the door on his entrance. On the stage, in addition to the officers of the association delegates, sat Governors, United States Senators and Congressman of the various States and officials of many different cities.

Waterway History Is Related.

William F. Saunders of St. Louis, secretary of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association, in his report to the convention detailed the history of the deep-waterway movement, the difficulties it encountered in the beginning, its purpose, scope and prospects for the future and the benefits that the United States would derive from it.

The work of the association in teaching through newspapers, magazines, pamphlets and speakers the importance of the deep-waterway project was explained by Secretary Saunders.

"Through its publicity," the report sets forth, "the association teaches the merchants and manufacturers that with the building of the deep waterway freight rates will be steady and reasonable and not subject to the violent fluctuations such as occur at present. It also teaches the 1,500,000 men directly employed by the railways that rail and river transportation are complementary; they must help each other to perfect the transportation of the country."

According to Secretary Saunders the doctrine of the association is that the first duty of the government is to perfect its transportation and that this can only be done by building the deep waterway from Chicago to New Orleans, improving at the same time into complete navigability the principal tributaries of the Mississippi river so that the ship waterway between the lakes and the gulf will be the trunk line of a comprehensive system of waterways.

The actual launching of the deep waterway movement by the trip down the river from Chicago to New Orleans over the route of the proposed waterway made by Congressmen William Lorimer and Henry T. Rainey of Illinois and Ben Humphreys of Mississippi and their organizing of the deep waterway association was related by Secretary Saunders and every step taken in that connection by the various associations, officials and citizens since then was explained.

"The first convention of the association held in St. Louis had on its roster 1,100 delegates representing twelve States," runs the report. "The second convention in Memphis last year had on its roster 2,900 delegates, representing nineteen States, and this convention has on its roster 3,517 delegates, representing forty-four States."

Would Segregate Cows.

Dr. V. A. Moore of Cornell university in a paper read before the convention of the American Veterinary Association urged that the only course that offered hope of checking the rapid increase of bovine tuberculosis in America is to segregate the healthy herds and pass laws to control the sale of cattle.

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

Frank A. Day has been re-elected chairman of the Minnesota Democratic State central committee.

At Sheepshead Bay Priscillian, carrying top weight, won the Occidental handicap at one and one-eighth miles in the fast time of 1:52.

On Labor Day labor organizations throughout the country received an address from Samuel Gompers, in which he reviewed the events since the previous Labor Day.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Business activity responds promptly to the stimulus of seasonable weather, and, with the passing of the drought throughout the agricultural regions, plowing and seeding are vigorously advanced. A better tone develops in money, employment of funds has increased and recently bank statements testify to an abundance of resources for the normal requirements of commerce.

Distributive trade shows further recovery, lower temperatures helping the general demand for necessaries, and there is strong absorption of apparel, food products and house furnishings.

Forwardings of staple merchandise compare favorably with this time last year, and jobbers' house and mail orders remain of fair aggregate in dry goods, footwear, hats and caps, woolens and suits.

Mercantile collections in the interior are fairly prompt, and an increasing number of country merchants take the best discounts on current purchases.

Money is seen to be circulating more freely among the farming classes, and there is less drain of currency shipments to move crops than a year ago, although marketings thus far have been liberal. Manufacturing moves steadily forward, more machinery and hands being active, and there is notable decline in the number of idle cars.

Movements of raw materials to some extent exceed those at this time last year, while values mainly hold firm. The absorption of forest products steadily improves, and yard stocks being lower than usual, it is easier to obtain better prices for some varieties.

The total movement of grain at this port, 9,508,199 bushels, compares with 10,283,375 bushels last week and 15,180,032 bushels a year ago. Compared with 1907, there are decreases in receipts of 36.4 per cent and in shipments of 48.9 per cent.

Bank clearings, $226,493,030, are 13.9 per cent under those of the corresponding week in 1907.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 27, against 28 last week and 25 a year ago. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 6, against 7 last week and 4 in 1907.—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Cooler weather is the mainspring of the moderate improvement in retail and jobbing trade reported at most cities this week. Additionally helpful features have been the numerous fairs and festivals, which have enlarged distribution locally at many points.

While there are reports of holding crops, notably at the South, where prices are much lower than a year ago, the crop movement is liberal as a whole. Reports from industries are rather better as a whole. Good reports come from the lumber trade South and West, and a good volume of building is going forward.

Election uncertainties are reported affecting demand for iron and steel, but cool weather has helped the coal trade East and West. The leather and shoe trades are reported quiet, with cheaper grades in most demand. The wool trade reports the largest week's sales for over a year past, and from 50 to 60 per cent of the leading interests' machinery in operation.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Oct. 1 numbered 235, against 207 last week, 177 in the like week of 1907, 136 in 1906, 189 in 1905 and 195 in 1904. Canadian failures for the week numbered 30, which compares with 32 last week and 32 in this week in 1907.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

THE MARKETS

Chicago—Cattle, common to prime, $4.00 to $7.50; hogs, prime heavy, $4.00 to $7.05; sheep, fair to choice, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2, 97c to 99c; corn, No. 2, 70c to 77c; oats, standard, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 75c to 76c; hay, timothy, $8.00 to $12.00; prairie, $8.00 to $11.00; butter, choice creamery, 22c to 26c; eggs, fresh, 19c to 23c; potatoes, per bushel, 62c to 70c.

Indianapolis—Cattle, shipping, $3.00 to $7.00; hogs, good to choice heavy, $3.50 to $7.20; sheep, common to prime, $2.50 to $3.75; wheat, No. 2, $1.03 to $1.04; corn, No. 2 white, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2 white, 50c to 51c.

St. Louis—Cattle, $4.50 to $7.40; hogs, $4.00 to $7.10; sheep, $3.00 to $4.35; wheat, No. 2, $1.02 to $1.03; corn, No. 2, 74c to 75c; oats, No. 2, 47c to 48c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 79c.

Cincinnati—Cattle, $4.00 to $5.25; hogs, $4.00 to $6.95; sheep, $3.00 to $3.60; wheat, No. 2, $1.04 to $1.05; corn, No. 2 mixed, 78c to 79c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 2, 78c to 80c.

Detroit—Cattle, $4.00 to $4.50; hogs, $4.00 to $6.50; sheep, $2.50 to $3.50; wheat, No. 2, 99c to $1.00; corn, No. 3 yellow, 80c to 81c; oats, No. 3 white, 50c to 52c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 78c.

Milwaukee—Wheat, No. 2 northern, $1.02 to $1.04; corn, No. 3, 76c to 77c; oats, standard, 49c to 50c; rye, No. 1, 75c to 76c; barley, No. 1, 65c to 66c; pork, mess, $14.95.

Buffalo—Cattle, choice shipping steers, $4.00 to $6.40; hogs, fair to choice, $4.00 to $7.20; sheep, common to good mixed, $4.00 to $4.75; lambs, fair to choice, $5.00 to $7.00.

New York—Cattle, $4.00 to $6.10; hogs, $3.50 to $7.00; sheep, $3.00 to $4.50; wheat, No. 2 red, $1.05 to $1.07; corn, No. 2, 84c to 86c; oats, natural white, 58c to 55c; butter, creamery, 24c to 27c; eggs, western, 20c to 25c.

Toledo—Wheat, No. 2 mixed, 99c to $1.00; corn, No. 2 mixed, 79c to 81c; oats, No. 2 mixed, 49c to 51c; rye, No. 2, 77c to 78c; clover seed, October, $5.80.

OCTOBER

0361
L 903

The Whited Sepulchre
The Tale of Pelee

By Will Levington Comfort

Copyright, 1906, by Will Levington Comfort
Copyright, 1907, by J. B. Lippincott Company. All rights reserved

CHAPTER XVI.—(Continued.)

How many times the blue eyes of old Ernst rolled back under the lids, and his grip relaxed upon the oars, only to be recalled by the pleading voice and the face of tragedy before him; how many times the whipping tongue of Macready mumbled, forgetting its object, while his senses reeled against the burning walls of his brain; how many times the splendid spirit of the woman recalled her own lowlier faculties to action and the terrible meaning of the quest—only God and these know. But the little boat held its prow to the desolate shore.

They gained the Sugar Landing at last, and strange sounds came from the lips of Ernst, as he pointed to the hulk of the launch, burned to the water line. Gray-covered heaps were sprawled upon the shore, some half-covered by the incoming tide, some entirely awash. Pelee had brought down the city; and the fire-tiger had rushed in at the kill. He was hissing and crunching still, under the ruins. The woman moaned and covered her face.

"There is nothing alive!" she said with dreadful stress.

"What else could you luk fur?" Macready demanded. "Wait till we get over th' hill, and you'll hear th' burrds singin' the naygurs laughin' in the fields an' wonderin' why the milkman don't come."

"I can live—yes, I can live—until I see our house crushed to the hill, all coated with paste, and those heaps lying about on the ground! * * * 'A woman can't be a friend like a man'! You will stand and uncover your heads—when you see your friend lying upon the ground—and I—I will die!"

She was walking between them, up toward the market place, fighting back her terrors, which added to the burdens of the men. The opened space was filled with the stones from the houses, hurled there as from a dice box. Smoke and steam oozed forth from every ruin. The silence was awful as the sight of death. Rue Victor Hugo was effaced, the way up toward the morne undiscernible. A breathing pile of debris barred every way. It was plain that they must make their way southward along the shore.

"If I cud only get holt o' that barnacle av a shark's toot,' Pugh—if I cud only get him here wance bare-futted," Denny gasped—"sure I'd lie happy holdin' av him! Ha!—don't sthep there!"

He pulled her away from a puddle of uncongealed stuff as hot as running iron. * * * Once he had stepped upon what seemed to be an ash-covered stone. It was soft, springy, and vented a wheezy sigh. Rain and rock-dust had smeared all things alike in this gray, roasting shambles.

"Speak—won't you please speak?" the woman cried suddenly.

"It luks like rain, ma'am," Macready's quick tongue offered.

They were on the shore, nearing the rise of the Morne d'Orange. Saint Pierre had rushed to the sea—at the last. The mountain had found the women with the children, as all manner of visitations find them—and the men a little apart. There was nothing to do by the way, no lips to moisten, no voice of pain to hush, no dying thing to ease. Pelee had not faltered at the last. There was not an insect murmur in the air, nor a crawling thing beneath, not a moving wing in the hot gray sky. They traversed a shore of death absolute—these three—and the woman was thinking ahead.

From the shoulder of the morne Lara turned back one look. Saint Pierre was like a mouth that had lost its pearls. The land ahead was a husk divested of its fruit. Pelee had cut the cane fields, sucked the juices, and left the blasted stalks in his paste. The plantation house pushed forth no shadow of an outline. It might be felled, or lost in the smoky distance. The nearer landmarks were gone—homes that had brightened the morne in their day, whose windows had flashed the rays of the afternoon sun as it rode down overseen—levelled like the fields of cane. There was no balm, no saving grace. Pelee had swept far and left only his shroud, and the heaps upon the way, to show that the old sea-road, so white, so beautiful, had been the haunt of man. The mangoes had lost their vesture; the palms were gnarled and naked fingers pointing to the pitiless sky.

She had known this highway in the mornings, when joy was not dead, when the songs of the toilers and the laughter of children glorified the fields; in the white moonlight, when the sweet draughts from the sea met and mingled with the spice from torrid hills, and scent of jasmine and rose gardens. * * * The dark eyes under the huge helmet were staring ahead; her lips were parted and white. Though they had passed the radius of terrific heat, she seemed slowly to be suffocating. Macready remembered his voice.

"Things are queer by the sea, ma'am. Now, if I'd ha' tuk Pugh be th' t'roat I'd be intertainin' Mr. Constable presently in the bottom av th' ship, togged out head an' fut in irons fur th' occasion, an' he'd say, 'Dinny, why didn't you sthand be th' lady whin I tould you? Perhaps you can stand be th' bunkers betther, me son. Go to thim, ye goat!' * * * Ernst, lad, you're intertainin', you're loquenchus."

The woman was stepping forward swiftly between them. Words died upon Macready's tongue when he saw her face and thought of what she would find ahead. He believed that she would keep her word—that she would break, brain and body—if the mountain had shown no mercy at their journey's end. * * * And Macready did not hope. The man to whom he had tied his own life would be down like the others, and the great house about him! All that a soft Irish heart could feel of terror and bereavement had waged in his breast for hours. To let the woman succumb among her dead was more than he could bear.

The ruins of the plantation house wavered forth from the fog. The prayer had not availed; the day still lived. A swoon had not fallen pitifully upon the woman. He was allowing her to walk forward to her end, this beautiful creature whose courage was more than a man's! * * * Her fingers were upon his sleeve, pulling him forward. She had no need of words from him now. Life remained in her to reach the place ahead. She did not want more life, if the dead were there.

"Wait, ma'am!" he pleaded.

"No, no! I cannot wait!"

"Fur ould Dinny!"

"I thank you both. You have been very brave and kind; but, Denny, don't keep me back—not now!"

"Let me go firsht!" he implored, harboring the mad idea that he might put something out of her sight.

"No!" she screamed, breaking from him, and rushing forward through the fallen gate.

Her cry brought an answer—a muffled answer, the voice from a pit. Macready and Ernst plucked at the charred boards in the circle of ruin.

"Peter, King Peter! Where are you, Great-heart?" she called, laughing, crying, picking at her hands.

"In the cistern—in the old cistern," came the answer. "Why—did—they—let—you—come—here?"

"Didn't I tell you 'twud take more than a sphit av a mountain t' singe hair av him, ma'am?" Macready yelled, dancing about the rim. "Are you hurted, sorr? Tell me, are you hurted?"

He was pushed away, and the woman knelt at the rim, bending far down.

CHAPTER XVII.

Constable rested and reflected in the cistern. It did not occur to him, save in the most flimsy and passing way, to doubt the efficacy of the distance in the case of Lara. She was safe, eight miles at sea, and watched over by Macready, whom he had learned thoroughly to trust. Here was gladness immovable. Second, for the present and to all intents, his own life had been spared. This was not so important in itself, but was exceedingly vital in consideration of the third point—that she loved him, and had said so. His first worry was that Lara might be thinking him dead.

The aspect of Constable's mind being touched upon, it may be well to outline the state of affairs as a third party would see it. In the first place, there was a woman in his arms, a woman whom the fire had touched and in whom consciousness was not; the mother of the world's matchless girl. Then he was sitting upon a slimy stone in a subterranean cell, the floor of which was covered with six inches of almost scalding water, and the vault filled with steam. The volcanic discharge, showering down through the mouth of the pit, had heated the water and released the vapor. An earthquake years before had loosened the stone walls of the cavern, and with every shudder of the earth, under the wrath of Pelee, the masonry lining the cistern tottered. Then, his hand had been torn during the descent of the chain, and the terrific heat in the well livened his burns to exquisite painfulness. But, as has been stated, these were mere cuticle disorders, and the heart of the man sang again and again its tuneful story.

Pelee was giving vent to the afterpangs. Torrents of rain were descending. The man in the cistern had lost track of time. Though replenished with rain, the water was still too hot to step in; therefore, he could not change his position and relieve the tension of his arms. Still, he felt that he owed an astonishing debt to the old cistern. No sudden impulse had brought him there. Since he had discovered the place in his night's vigil, and examined it more closely, the following day, the idea had become fixed in his mind that it might be used at the last minute.

The women sighed now and stirred in his arms. The first gripping realization took his mind. He waited in embarrassment for her to speak. Would the fact that he had saved her life stand as extenuation for his rough treatment? Constable was by no means sure that he was not about to hear her estimate of him on the old footing, with the rage of a manhandled woman added—the whole a finished document delivered with Mrs. Stansbury's art and force. But she did not yet awake.

His brain worked rapidly now. She had lain upon his shoulder during the descent. Livid dust had fallen through the orifice. His burns were slight. * * * His eyes strained into her face, but the cistern was dark, dark. The fire had touched her hair—he knew that. Her bare arm brushed his cheek, and his whole being crawled with fear * * * It seemed that hours elapsed. Where had Uncle Joey been at the last? Did Pelee tolerate any favorites? Breen, Soronia, Pere Rabeaut, Mondet, the ships in the inner harbor, the thirty thousand of Saint Pierre—were they all wrecked in the mills of the world? * * * But the Madame was eight miles at sea! Pelee had waited for the woman. His heart of hearts held this joy.

The breath of life was returning to his burden. She sighed once more, and then, full pityingly, he felt her wince with the pain which consciousness brought.

"What is this dripping darkness?" he heard at last. The words were slowly uttered, and the tones vague. * * * In a great dark room somewhere, in a past life, perhaps, Constable had heard such a voice from some one lying in the shadows.

"We are in the old cistern—you and I, Peter Constable." His tones became glad as he added, "But your daughter is safe at sea!"

"Did you forget something, or did Lara send you for her parasol?"

"I came for you—came to tell you how much we needed you—how much we feared for your life, and to ask you once more——"

"What—an—extraordinary — youth!" she murmured. "Was—there—ever—such—darkness—as—this?"

The cavern was dark, but not utterly black now. The circle of the orifice was sharply lit with gray.

"They will come from the ship to rescue us soon. Please—please turn your face to the light—so! * * * Yes, that will do!"

"Did you not know that I am blind, boy? * * * How big you seem! I should think you would put me down and rest your arms——"

Her face had been turned upward in the descent of the chain! He steeled himself to speak steadily. There is a cumulative harshness in that her face, above all others, so fragile, of purest line, should meet the coarse element, burning dirt. Furies leaped upon him that he had not saved her.

"The water is still hot in the bottom of the cistern,' he said. "My arms are not in the least tired."

An interminable interval passed before he heard the voice again, slower, fainter: "And so you came back for me—and you knew Pelee—better! * * * No, the burns do not hurt terribly. My—face—feels—dead. You were not burned—so?"

This was the moment of dreadful memory. Her body, her face, arms, throat, had covered him, as the rusty chain slipped through his hand. The molten stuff had not cracked his flesh because she had stood between.

"I tried to save you—you know that—but you kept the fire from me!"

His voice was broken with rebellion. Then out of a sigh came the words that lived with him always:

"I—would—have—you—know—that—la Montagne Pelee—is—artistic!"

(To be continued.)

SHARPENING A PENCIL.

In This Act You May Read a Man's Character.

No woman should marry a man till she has seen him sharpen a lead pencil. She can tell by the way he does it whether he is suited to her or not. Here are a few infallible rules for her guidance in the matter:

The man who holds the point toward him and close up against his shirt front is slow and likes to have secrets. He is the kind of man who, when the dearest girl in the world finds out that there are "others" and asks him who they are and what he means by calling on them, will assume an air of excessive dignity.

The man who holds the pencil out at arm's length and whittles away at it, hit or miss, is impulsive, jolly, good-natured and generous.

He who leaves a blunt point is dull and plodding, and will never amount to much. He is really good natured, but finds his chief pleasures in the commonplace things of life.

He who sharpens his pencil an inch or more from the point is high strung and imaginative and subject to exuberant flights of fancy. He will always be seeking to mount upward and accomplish things in the higher regions of business and art, and his wife's greatest trouble will be to hold him down to earth and prevent his flying off altogether on a tangent.

The man who sharpens his pencil all around smoothly and evenly, as though it was planed off in an automatic sharpener, is systematic and slow to anger, but he is so undeviating from a fixed principle that he would drive a woman with a sensitive temperament to distraction in less than six months. On the contrary, he who jumps in and leaves the sharpened wood as jagged as saw teeth around the top has a nasty temper and will spank the baby on the slightest provocation.

The man who doesn't stop to polish the point of lead once the wood is cut away has a streak of coarseness in his nature.

He who shaves off the lead till the point is like a needle is refined, delicate and sensitive. He will not be likely to accomplish so much as his more common brother, but he will never shock you, and is without doubt a good man to tie to.—New York Press.

RUSSIAN RAILROAD STORY.

How a Student Thought to Relieve the Tedium of Travel.

The tedium of railroad traveling in Russia was relieved the other day in an unexpected manner, says the London Globe. In a compartment of the train going from Kursk to Kiev sat a beautiful young lady next to a chatty priest, with whom she held an animated conversation. Opposite sat a student who envied the priest the causerie he was enjoying.

As the evening came on the girl fell asleep and the priest nodded his head in slumber. That was an opportunity which no self-respecting joker could afford to let slip. Bending forward the student kissed the sleeping damsel and sprang back into his seat.

The salute awakened the girl, who, thinking that it was her neighbor, the priest, who had dared to kiss her, jumped up and gave him a sounding box on the ears. The student rejoiced greatly. There was a commotion, the policeman accompanying the train was summoned, and he at once drew up a "protocol" against the wronged priest, while the student offered to appear as a witness in the law court at Kiev.

But at the last moment a young Jewess who had been sitting in a dark corner unobserved by anybody stepped forward, exonerated the poor priest from the terrible accusation, and then it was the student's turn to feel miserable.

To Be Exact.

"Gee whiz! Here's the rain coming down again and somebody's stolen my umbrella."

"Somebody's stolen what?"

"Well, the umbrella I've been carrying for the last two weeks."—Philadelphia Press.

A self chalking chalk line is the latest addition to the carpenter's kit.

RIVAL RULERS IN THE BALKAN CLASH, BULGARIAN AND TURK WARRIORS.

ABDUL-HAMID

PRINCE FERDINAND of BULGARIA.

TURKISH TROOPS ON THE MARCH

EUROPE'S WAR CLOUD.

Muss in the Balkans Has Served to Greatly Excite the Powers.

It is a long time since Europe has had anything as exciting as the Bulgarian muss. Turkey had just begun business under its constitution, and Hon. Abe Hamid had begun to get used to the sight of his subjects and quit wearing sheet iron linings in his bloomers. There was some prospect that the army and navy might get a few years' overdue back pay, and the ladies of the zenana were figuring on a few new Paris gowns and high-heeled slippers. Everything was sailing along smoothly when Prince Ferdinand suddenly got the bit in his teeth and ran away with the whole outfit. His independence party movement has set all Europe worrying.

Austria has announced her intention of annexing the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and as Cousin Wilhelm is backing up this little land grab it is pretty likely to go through. Italy is mad because Austria is seizing a territory largely peopled by Italians. Russia is mad on general principles. Turkey is busy trying to thrash naughty, naughty Ferdinand, and Austria is unopposed. There is a demand for a congress of the signatories to the Berlin treaty to decide what shall be done, now that Austria has violated the integrity of Turkey, but students of European politics fear that such a meeting would result in trouble.

However, it is not believed that war will result unless the progressive element among the Turks feels that something must be done to prove that a new era has dawned in Turkey. The chief danger apparently is that Russia and perhaps certain other countries of Europe will demand something to compensate them for the increased strength of Austria and its allies. Further, the fury of the Servians, at the growing prestige of their old rivals, the Bulgarians, may lead to armed attacks along the Bulgarian or Austrian frontier.

The Bulgarians of Macedonia who, opposing Greece an one side and Turkey on the other, long have sought to come under the political domination of Sofia, doubtless will take new hope from the formation of an independent nation ruled by a "czar of the Bulgarians." Only a war of conquest against Turkey could join them to the new Bulgarian kingdom. The Bulgarian army is remarkably efficient for its size, but the staying power of the Turks has been abundantly demonstrated.

Russia's wish for a new conference of the powers which signed the treaty of Berlin to modify that instrument seems to be generally shared by the governments of Europe. The present feeling at Paris and London is that the emperor of Germany, by encouraging Francis Joseph and Ferdinand in their daring course, has scored heavily against the new western alliance formedy by King Edward. Still, it is probable that the whole matter will end merely in peaceful diplomatic passages.

BULGARIAN and TURKISH SENTINELS AT A BRIDGE ON THE FRONTIER.

PRAISE GIVEN RAILROADS.

Declare Country's Amazing Development Is Due Largely to Carriers.

The work of the railroads in in developing the West was highly praised at the meeting of the Trans-Mississippi Congress in San Francisco by J. C. Stubbs, director of traffic for over 16,000 miles of Harriman railroads. His subject was, "Transportation," and he spoke at the request of E. H. Harriman.

The speaker went into the relation of railroads to the work of developing trans-Mississippi country very fully, and showed how the big transportation companies had been doing work along the lines mapped out by the congress for many years.

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, spoke on "West of the Mississippi River—what does it mean?" He said a great future is opening out before the trans-Mississippi country in general and California in particular.

Col. Fred W. Fleming of Kansas City took for his subject "Western Insurance," while Gov. Cutler of Utah and former Governor Pardee of California both paid attention to "The conservation of natural resources."

The delegates were greatly impressed with the work of conservation that has already been done in Utah and California as outlined by the speakers and warmly applauded Gov. Cutler's remarks as to the prominent part President Roosevelt has taken in forwarding the work in all parts of the country.

Attorney General Dickson of Colorado, speaking on the topic, "Irrigation and disposition of public lands," drew the attention of the meeting to the importance of guarding government lands from too free distribution.

James J. Calibreath, secretary of the American mining congress, talked on the conservation of mineral resources, and Frank Short of Fresno, Cal., discussed the relation of the natural resources of the country to its social and political conditions.

Progress in the South.

Reports published by the Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore show that stone roadmaking is in progress throughout the South without let-up, and that contracts are constantly being made. Also huge sums are being spent on the development of various industries, such as coal, oil, cotton, etc.

At Edinburgh, Scotland, Andrew Carnegie announced his decision to set aside $1,250,000 for the foundation of a hero fund in his native land.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

In the shipbuilding trades on the Mersey and Tyne there are 20,000 fewer men employed than last year.

At Davenport, Iowa, on Labor Day, Editor Hearst and Candidate Hisgen addressed a number of labor unions.

Gov. Johnson of Minnesota commissioned 1,300 farmers as delegates to the Farmers' Congress at Madison, Wis.

In opening the State campaign in Illinois, Speaker Cannon made reply to the attacks of both Bryan and Gompers

CURRENT COMMENT

The Disastrous Drouth.

This year will be memorable for one of the most extensive and damaging droughts the North American continent has ever experienced. How great a loss it has inflicted upon all sections of this country and a large area of Canada is impossible to say, but it is of enormous proportions.

Forest fires due to drought are said to be the most destructive in twenty-five years. They have ravaged the southern part of Canada, New York, Maine, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, and as far south as Pennsylvania. The loss from this source is probably not less than $100,000,000. Scarcity of timber makes the seriousness of this loss hard to overestimate. It will undoubtedly cause an advance in the price of lumber and may check building operations all over the country.

The drought has left Lake Champlain eight feet below high-water mark and the Ohio river is fordable where the water is usually thirty feet deep. A number of cities are threatened with lack of water for fire protection and mills and factories using water power have been compelled to shut down.

The government has sent experts to study the causes of forest fires with a view to prevention. Catching flood waters in reservoirs for use when needed is now done to some extent. The present disastrous experience with widespread drought justifies careful consideration of all suggestions for safeguards against a repetition of this year's devastation.—Chicago Journal.

The Corn Crop.

The yield of corn this year will probably be somewhat larger than that of last year. The drought following the month or two of heavy rains in the corn belt cut deeply into the promised harvest, the reduction in the prospective yield in the month of August being 122,000,000 bushels.

Illinois, which produces more corn than any other State, was the greatest sufferer, the depreciation being 7.2 points. In Indiana the falling off was 6.6 points, and in Kansas 6.2. Ohio, where climatic conditions were fairly close to being perfect for grain raising, showed only a slight loss in the conditions. Missouri, Texas, Oklahoma and Iowa also reported a small dropping off in prospects in the month of August. Nebraska is said to have actually made gains.

The corn crop of 1907 was 2,592,320,000 bushels with an acreage of 98,099,000. The area under this grain this year is estimated at 100,996,000 acres. The conditions on the first of September were 79.8 as compared with 80.6 on the same date in 1907. Considering all these figures the yield will be more than three billion bushels. The frosts are still to be reckoned with before the final figures are written.—Toledo Blade.

The Campaign.

One of the new methods of stimulating popular interest in the presidential campaign is the distribution of phonograph records of speeches by the leading candidates. Hundreds of thousands of voters may thus hear the voice of the party nominees, even though they may see only a picture of the men themselves.

At the same time, the number of salaried campaign speakers is much smaller than in former years. Those who talk are expected to give their time to their party because of their belief in its principles.

Political campaigns are quieter and more business like than they used to be. The speeches of the candidates are reported in the press, and the voter thinks the questions out at home. The political rally does not attract a generation of newspaper readers as it aroused their fathers in the old days when talk was cheaper than print.

Yet the voice of a man of conviction, the living words of a great leader, will always be a power. There is magic in the personal contact of the politician with the voter, and political speeches can never go wholly out of fashion. Even the phonographic reproductions, interesting and valuable as they are, will not quite take the place of the real thing. But people are getting too intelligent to have their convictions swayed by "spellbinders," who receive fifty dollars a night for their efforts to save the nation from disgrace.

If a lively campaign is known by the amount of shouting and eloquence, perhaps we shall never have another one. The vitality of a political contest depends on the interest the people take in it, and their interest may be intense although they sit at home and say not a word until the time comes.—Youth's Companion.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Government regulation of the meat industries will be hailed as dear to the packer's heart at the coming meeting of the American Meat Packers' Association, which is to be held at the Grand Pacific hotel in Chicago. Fullest co-operation between packers and government in order to hold up the grade of meat will be urged, and the federal inspection act will be called a boon to packer as well as public in the papers that are to be read.

If the recommendations adopted at the twelfth annual meeting of the interstate association of live stock boards, at its concluding session in Washington, are approved by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the federal quarantine regulations for preventing the spread of the Texas or "tick" fever in cattle in certain Southern States will be raised next year. Cattle in certain areas in the States under quarantine are said to be entirely free from the Texas fever.

John Barke, a prosperous farmer living near Henderson, Minn., has the champion cow of his section. This bovine gave birth to three calves. They are all heifers and give promise of doing well.

An unknown incendiary set fire to and burned four settings of grain belonging to J. M. Buckley, and those belonging to P. Kieff of Morris, Minn. About a week ago some party set fire to Edmond Barry's granary in the same neighborhood, and although the building was destroyed, some of the grain was saved. There was no insurance in any of the cases.

OCTOBER

0362
L 903

Pressing Down Pains

are a sign of serious female complaint, that should have immediate attention.

If you begin in time, you can generally treat yourself at home, without the need of consulting a physician, by the regular use of Cardui, the well-known remedy for women's ills.

Composed of purely vegetable and perfectly harmless medicinal ingredients, being, besides, a gentle, non-intoxicating, strengthening tonic,

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

relieves all female complaints.

"My wife," writes John A. Rodgers, of Hampden Sidney, Va., "was nothing but a walking skeleton, from female trouble. She suffered agonies with bearing-down pains, backache and headache. Doctors failed to relieve her, so she took Cardui, and is now entirely cured."

At All Druggists

WRITE FOR FREE ADVICE, stating age and describing symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. B 36

J. A. PROVINES
TRUSTEE
of Concord Township.

OFFICE DAY:
THURSDAY OF EACH WEEK
at residence in Spencerville, Ind.

DENTIST.

C. R. PRICE,

ST. JOE, IND.

Office in Case building.

Bell Phone No. 44.

Editorially.

The next Senator who exchanges letters with the Standard Oil or other suspicious corporation had better secure a safety deposit vault for his correspondence.

The fact that so many undesirable citizens are taking to woods is another reason for forest preservation or reforesterization. It is awful to think there may not be woods enough to hide the grafters.

The trade territory of a town is not dependant upon the distance to neighboring trading points. The trade territory depends upon the enterprise of the merchants and the residents of the town. If the town does not reach after the trade it will come only as fast as it has to and it will grow as it is forced to. But if the merchants go after business in the surrounding country, advertising in every possible way, and making good every word of their advertising, trade will come from an ever increasing radius. The town will gain a reputation for being awake and it is bound to forge to the front.

All good Anglo Saxons whether they reside in the British Isles or in the United States or in any of the four quarters of the globe where the Union Jack or the Stars and Stripes float, must rejoice at the advent of two cent postage between the two largest bodies of the English speaking races There are many, but all too few, unifying influences of these two great peoples who are substantially one in language, in law, in literature and in religion. There are thousands, of Englishmen and Americans who cordially dislike each other, and with cause, for cousins, brothers and sisters do the same. There are many disagreeable, selfish and mean people in both countries but these people are not typical of either country for in heart and purpose and aspiration the spirit of both countries is progressive, tolerant and altruistic beyond that of any other country or time,

WABASH

Wabash Time Table.

Trains leave the St Joe Station as follows

GOING WEST
Ft. Wayne Acc & Mail 11:34 a. m
Western Express 7:58 " "

GOING EAST.
Express 6:34 a. m
Toledo Acc & Mail 7:36 p. m

The St. Joe News

One Year - - $1.00
Six Month - - 50c
Three Months - - 25c

LEE O. TUSTISON & FRED B. LEIGHTY
PUBLISHERS.

Entered at the Post Office in St. Joe as second-class mail matter.

ancient or modern. It is inspiring as it should be to every Englishman and every American that the common language is slowly but surely prevading the entire world and that national honesty benevolence and beneficence are following in its wake.

The "Dry" Party

Nearly every body is now familiar with the methods of the two leading political parties for regulating (that's the right word) the liquor traffic. The Democrats favoring local option by township and ward, the Republicans declaring for local option with the county as a unit. Then up bobs our Governor, Hanly, calling a special session of the legislature in which the county local option bill is passed, a strictly Republican measure, in which all well disposed democrats can assist, making it a non-partisan affair, of course. It could not be a political ruse to gain votes, still we wonder how many democrats will nibble at this bare hook.

In our rambles over town the other day we heard a gentleman laughingly declare to a group of men of his own political faith, that the democrats hated to acknowledge that they were the wet party but would have a hard time proving they were not, or in words to that effect. Well, let's see if the great party, the only party that ever did any thing for temperance, has the advantage over their greatest opponents, the democrats, or has always acted most consistently on this question. When have the Republican or Democrat parties ever abolished the license system, that thing alone which is the bulwark of the liquor business, without which the business would immediately fall to rise no more and without which no man could conduct such a business? I answer, never. So much for that. Now as to the attitude of the great G. O. P. Who introduced into the last legislature a bill for state wide prohibition, and who supported it? Democrats. Who turned it down, voted against it? Republicans. Now Mr. Republican, does it sound nice in you to berate your democratic brethern for being the liquor party, in face of these facts? It reminds us of a story we once heard of a pot that called the kettle black.

No party no matter what its name or pretensions can justly lay claim to the name dry party, that supports by any form of license, high or low, or in any manner regulates this iniquitous business. The sooner this truth takes possession of us the better for humanity. As a political crank, we welcome any experiment that may be tried, feeling fully confident that the great thinking mass of people after seeing the folly of trying to mix oil and water will finally demand state wide prohibition, for no question is truly settled until it is settled right.

Ex Proh.

Twelfth District Medical Society.

This Society will meet in Ft. Wayne October 27, 1908. In the morning Dr. John Ridlon, professor of Orthopedic Surgery in Northwestern University, and a famous specialist on crippled and deformed children, will hold a free clinic at the St. Joseph Hospital. This is quite an opportunity, for anyone living in the twelfth district has the privilege of his free consultation. The Doctor will do a Lorenz, or bloodless, operation for a congenital dislocation of the hip. This is the same operation Dr. Lorenz did on Lottie Armour, the Chicago Millionaire's daughter, a few years ago, and the Doctors are much interested in seeing this, and bringing their crippled and deformed patients in to get his advice or have them get proper corrections for their affections.

Had A Close Call.

Mrs. Ada L. Croom, the widely know proprietor of the Croom Hotel, Vaughn, Miss., says: "For several months I suffered with a severe cough, and consumption seemed to have its grip on me, when a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. I began taking it, and three bottles affected a complete cure." The fame of this life saving cough and cold remedy, and lung and throat healer is world wide. Sold at H. Milliman's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Mixed Pickles.

This is the season of applebutter, tomato catsup, grape marmalade, mixed pickles and other culinary mysteries the well-drilled housewife loves to delve and revel in.

Just when and where and by whom the first mixed pickles were mixed is difficult to determine. It is evident however that no two housewives today make the mixture alike. It is also known how jealously they guard their recipes from infringement, and how slow they are to accept innovations as improvements. It seems that the best mixture is the one that contains the most articles. They are gathered from all corners of the garden, snatched from the last withering melon vines, picked from autumn tinted trees, dug up from mother earth and purchased from the grocery. Just how the mixed pickle expert succeeds is a question. She defies all chemical laws in an adroit combination of entirely antagonistic qualities. She blends sugar with vinegar, mustard with molasses, lemons with sweet cider and cucumbers with red peppers and tumeric. The grand result is pronounced satisfactory—even with some doubts as to digestible qualities.

Our political chefs are at present serving the people with their culinary mixtures. They have gathered from all corners of the American commonwealth all the material they could find whether sweet or sour, alive or dead, green or ripe almost to rottenness, and after spicing and boiling with a fervent heat, it is now being served out to a waiting people. And, oh, how satisfying is this political mixture! If one is permitted to partake of the product of his particular chef, he is satisfied. No matter how the mixture is made or of what it is composed, so long as the hero of his political affiliations put the stuff together.

Really now, isn't there too much odor about the average political speech? What the people need is more of the solid. Not that the campaign has failed to be consistently clean, but not enough of the vital issues for the promotion of the general welfare. Of course there must be issues, but the country is not going to destruction just because someone said it would, if any one party or candidate is elected. It behooves the real American citizen to maintain his independence, not to partake of too much mixed political dope, but rather try to dig up the real solid issues of the present campaign.

Headache?

If it does, you should try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Why not do so. They will relieve the pain in just a few minutes. Ask your druggist There are 45,000 druggists in the U. S. Ask any of them. A package of 25 doses costs 25 cents. One tablet usually stops a headache. They relieve pain without leaving any disagreeable after-effects—isn't that what you want?

"My son Frank Snyder has used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a long time. He never had anything to help him so much for headache. A year ago he came home, and I was down sick with such a dreadful nervous headache. He gave me one of the Anti-Pain Pills, and after while I took another and was entirely relieved. I always keep them in the house now, and gave many away to others suffering with headache."
MRS. LOUISE LEWELLYN,
Powell, South Dakota.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, and we authorize him to return the price of first package (only) if it fails to benefit you.
Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

Buzzer's Hot Air Club and Grand Order of Wind-Jammers

This is to certify that Chastine Johnston has been elected member of Buzzers Hot Air Club and is allowed to expound his hot air with police protection—A Air Merchant, President.

The above is a copy of an anonymous card I received Saturday, mailed at Auburn Oct. 9th, at 11:30 A. M., but I don't think the angel (?) who sent it lives there. I wish to thank the sender for the compliment as it shows that even fools and skunks notice my ads. What more could a business man want? Only blackmailers and criminals (at heart) ever get so low as to resort to such methods of venting their spite. I will laugh over that and with others for several weeks. If anyone thinks I will ever feel bad about it they are mistaken. No one ever gets kicked or noticed until they begin to do something and the kickers are always jealous, ignorant dunces who need police protection and the penitentiary is a paradise to what some deserve and what they would get if the truth were known.

What do I care whether they speak to me on the street or not, as some refuse to do. I laugh every time we meet. They began it. I hope they are satisfied I am. They know what success they have in had business, and my success. I believe people get what they deserve when the truth becomes known. I don't envy them or talk about them behind their back. I havent time to waste that way, I suppose they have and I hope they keep it up as it does me lots of good. Buzzards and Billy Goats are in their class. Ignorance is shown even in the disguised handwriting and spelling.

I wish them joy and success and finally what they deserve. That will be a plenty, and they will get it in time.

CHASTINE JOHNSTON.

GENERAL ITEMS

Hicksville is to have a cigar factory. R C. Westfield of Fayette, Ohio, is the proprietor.

The famous book, Black Beauty, has been dramatized and began its fall and winter campaign as a drama, at Brockton, Mass., last week.

The new Garrett Savings Loan and Trust Company has decided on a location for the bank's quarters, and will be ready to begin business about November, 1.

The new building of the Tri-State College at Angola is ready for use, except for the blackbourds and seating. The seats are being made by the students taking shop work in the Engineering school.

The Garrett Daily Press, now three weeks old underwent a change of management last week. It was started by C. W. Hess and W. G. Kist. Mr. Hess retires and E. C. Combs of Ft. Wayne takes his place.

The W. H. Kiblinger company of Auburn by its attorneys, Rose & Rose have filed a petition it the circut court praying the court to change the above incorporate name to the W. H. McIntyre company

Prof. J. F. Kinsey instructor and composer of music, died at his home in Ft. Wayne, Friday morning. Mr. Kinsey is known personally by many of the people of this community having taught here in earlier years.

In the county option election Defiance county, Ohio, went wet. The wet voters gave a majority of 791. Defiance city is responsible for the majority. Hicksville rolled up the unprecedented vote of 206 majority against the traffic.

The earnings of the Toledo and Indiana electric railway have increased so materially since March 31, that there is talk of extending the road from Bryan, Ohio, its present western terminus, to Butler, Indiana. It would then be but a short time until the line could be extended so as to make connections with the Ft. Wayne lines at Waterloo. This would permit the selling of through tickets from Toledo to Ft. Wayne and Indianapolis.

S. S. WIDNEY,

NOTARY PUBLIC
ST. JOE, - - INDIANA.

WRITES INSURANCE

against fire, loss of life or accident. Good insurance protects your family and your home.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

A good residence property and business location in St. Joe.

Other town and farm properties. Call at office or write.

314 West Second St AUBURN, IND

FLOWERS.

In ordering flowers for a sick or departed friend you want nothing but the best, artistically arranged. Our funeral designs are winning favor from the most critical, from the fact that they are beautiful, substantial and lasting. We grow only a No. 1 stock, and carry the largest variety of wire designs in Northern Indiana.

In placing your order with us, you take no chances, for we guarantee satisfaction, and our reputation of fifteen years standing is back of our guarantee.

We pay phone charges on all orders amounting to $3.00 or more and prepay express charges on all orders amounting to $6.00 or more.

MAKE OUR ACQUAINTANCE

C. M. TenEyck & Son,
Proprietors.

HOME and BELL TELEPHONES.

Prohibition Ticket.

Published under contract.

National.

President—Eugene W. Chafin.
Vice President—Aaron S. Watkins.

State.

Governor—Sumner W. Haynes.
Lieutenant Governor—Abraham Huntsinger.
Secretary of State—William H. Hill.
Auditor of State—Dr. Henry Coons.
State Treasurer—Wm. H. Crowder.
Attorney General—Tilman E. Ballard.
Reporter of the Supreme Court—Benjamin F. Watson.
Superintendent of Public Instruction—Monroe J. Vayhinger.
State Statistician—Jesse B. Davis.
Congressional, 12th District—Chas. Eckhart.

County.

Representative—Emery Johnson.
Clerk—Joseph Haifley.
Treasurer—Frank Hamman.
Recorder—Job A. Reinoehl.
Sheriff—David Hollinger.
Surveyor—T. C. Benson.
Coroner—William R. Lee.
Commissioner S. E.—Emitt J. Armstrong.
Commissioner S. W.—L. E. Lane.

Township.

Trustee—W. B. Lucas.
Assessor—Frank Johnston.

Man Wanted

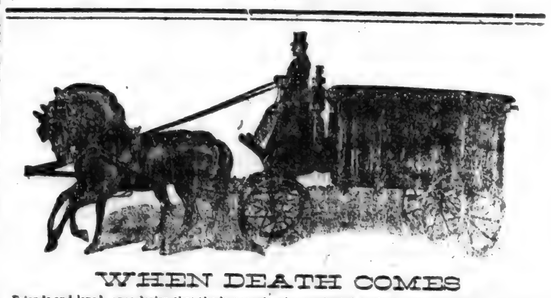
WANTED—SUCCESS MAGAZINE requires the services of a man in St. Joe to look after expiring subscriptions and to secure new business by means of special methods unusually effective; position permanent; prefer one with experience, but would consider any applicant with good natural qualifications; salary $1.50 per day, with commission option. Address, with references, R. C. Peacock, Room 102, Success Magazine Bldg., New York.

Public Sale.

The undersigned will sell at Public Sale at his residence one mile southwest of Cedarville on the Zoller farm on the Ft Wayne road, Thursday, Oct. 15, at 10:00 a. m. the following:- 2 milch cows, one fresh now and one to be fresh soon, heifer calf 4 weeks old, 100 chickens, old and young, one horse wagon, 2-horse wagon, bunch of 16in. wood, fanning mill, hay in mow, 2 heating stoves, cook stove, chairs, tables, beds and other articles. Terms made known on day of sale.

CHARLES ZOLLER.
J. L. RHODENBAUGH, auctioneer.

Money to loan on farms a 5 per cent interest. Payable on or before 10 years. Partial payments allowed. Call on or write us. Brown & Rhoads, Lawyers, City National Bank Building, Auburn, Ind.



WHEN DEATH COMES

Friends and loved ones desire that the last services be conducted in the best way possible. The embalming and funeral need careful attention. Elza Kinsey, a licensed embalmer, takes charge of all funerals. Satisfaction guaranteed. Calls answered day or night

H. V. Kinsey & Son,

Phone No. Office 37-2. Residence 37-3

KAGEY'S RESTAURANT

These frosty morns and cool evenings create a desire for a change in diet, and to meet your needs we have a full stock of seasonable fall food products. We especially call your attention to the famous

SEAL SHIPT OYSTERS

These are the famous pure food oysters. No ice to melt in the oysters and they always retain their salt water flavor.

HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR YOUR PRODUCE

All The Time

Bring us Your Butter and Eggs.

OCTOBER

U363
L903

SPENCERVILLE NEWS.

A Department of the ST. JOE NEWS for the Spencerville People.

Erick & Co.

THEY ARE HERE.

Our new fall goods are here and more are coming. We want to call your attention to this stock and invite you in to see them. Here are some of the specials:

Outing Flannels, EXTRA FINE ONES.

HATS & CAPS, A new line
NEW COATS, Just In.
HOSIERY & SHOES.

Men's Sweaters, All the Rage.

A Large Line of BED BLANKETS

Bring in your produce

Quietly Wedded.

Clinton Webb and Grace Baltz were married at Spencerville, Wednesday evening. Squire Allen tied the nuptial knot. The contracting parties are both well and favorable know through out this entire community.

Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's father, Wm. Baltz, who lives north of St. Joe, the benedicts were given a shower. Fifty of the neighbors and friends were present and brought many gifts to their married friends. A two-course supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Webb will go to Messex, Colorado, sometime next month.

Teachers Meet.

The second regular Institute of the Concord township teachers was held in the school house here, Saturday. Supt. H. E. Coe was present. He was unable to attend the first institute on account of his typhoid illness.

Opening exercises were conducted by John Rineohl. At this time he discussed the kind of excerises for opening the schools. The School and Its Life was taken up for study and Prof Keating discussed as a phrase of work the Morale of The School. His exposition was extra good. The discussion was ably continued by O. K. Shull. The period before noon was taken by Miss Witz in explaining methods for starting beginners.

After the dinner hour, those who were to have been on program gave their time to Supt. Coe. He used this in outlining helpful points for the teachers during this year. When he had concluded George Beam taught a model reading lesson, taking the teachers as his class and using Lowell's "The Heritage" as the study. Following this the institute was adjourned.

These sessions held each month by the teachers are exceedingly beneficial and bring about more systematic work. The public are welcome to attend any and all of these institutes and are urged to do so.

Spencerville R F D No 2

John Koch and family spent Sunwith Will Smith and wife.

Quite a few from this way attended the fair at Auburn last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Baltz, Mrs. Wm Summers and Miss Weltz spent Thursday evening at the home of H. Kimes.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Grats of west of Spencerville, Edward and clint Kinsey spent Sunday with Clint Wearley and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benninghoff, Wm. Lake, wife and children spent Sunday with J. Benninghoff and family.

Lizzie Shull and daughters of Coburntown, Mrs. Harmon and daughter from Berne and Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Lake of St. Joe spent Sunday with N. Lake and family.

Mardie Widdifield wife and children of Harlan spent Saturday night with Harvie Kimes Jr. and the two families spent Sunday with E. Fales and wife.

ZYMOLE Hair Tonic

A scientific preparation for the hair and scalp. Allays itching, eradicates dandruff, stimulates the growth of the hair and prevents baldness. A healthy scalp makes healthy hair.

Bowman's Drug Store

FOR YOUR DRUGS.

A Surprise Party.

On last Saturday evening, Mrs. George Paff was agreeably surprised by her Sunday school teacher and class No 4, who with their families gathered at the Paff home to spend the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Paff and daughter Gladys, before their departure for California, where they will make their future home. The evening was spent in music and social chat. The members of the class are the Medames Sylvia Furnish, Lizzie Horn, Mary Paff, Flora Means, Samantha Walter, Vina Quantz, Mattie Hart, Esther Bowman, Ella Horn, Lou Smith, Hattie Fairfield, Mandia Rhoads, Mary Silberg, Marie Hensil, Ella Fischer, Lizzie Wearley and Ella Carnes, who are all under the protecting care of their teacher, Mrs. Wise. Lunch was served at 8:30 and the guests departed for their homes at a late hour wishing Mr. and Mrs. Paff many more pleasant evenings and a safe journey to their future home.

Keesler Milling Company

ST. JOE, INDIANA

Grinding Away Day After Day

Turning the golden wheat of the harvest into flour to make "OUR DAILY BREAD." It is flour that makes good bread. Why? Because it is properly milled proper cleaning of the wheat correct care of the grain and grinding in the right way.

Feed grinding is a specialty with us, and many daily customers speak highly of the manner in which it is ground. Bring us your feed and grist and be satisfied.

WABASH CORNERS.

Miss Pearl Shurtz is on the sick list.

John Thomas of Concord, was a passenger to Butler, Saturday night.

John Bowman and family of Spencerville, were Sunday guests of Gene Whites'.

Mrs. James Draggoo and son were Sunday afternoon guests of Mart Hull and family.

The correspondent was the guest of Mrs. Ella Gill in St. Joe, on Tuesday of last week.

Wes Bradfield and wife of Monge, Ind., spent part of last week with the formers sister, Mrs. Roy White and family.

A large crowd from this place attended the Fall Festival at Auburn, Thursday and Friday.

Wm. Lucas receives the Auburn Courier a year, which was given away at the Festival, as a premium on buckwheat.

Note books at THE NEWS office

D. D. Burley and wife were Sunday guests at George Wilsons' in Spencerville.

Mrs. Emma Bowers of Illinois, came Friday night to help care for her father, Johnathan Boyles, who had been in bed over four years. He died Sunday night at a ripe old age.

S. S. Kimes

—M. D.—

Having located in the Markle building, is now ready to answer all calls, day or night. He invites you to call at the office and is ready to extend you every courtesy in keeping with the profession.

Phone No. 10.
Spencerville, Ind.

News Items

George Henderson was at Ft. Wayne Saturday.

George Culbertson of St. Joe called on Samuel Steward, Sunday.

Mrs. George Shutt went to Ft. Wayne, Saturday and remained until Monday visiting relatives.

Mr. James Furnish, Mrs. Roseln Wilson and children, took dinner with Lyda Jane Steward last Sunday.

Cal Squires and wife from north of St. Joe and Dan Rhoads and family of Harlan, visited at the home of Fred Thomas, Sunday.

Ora Spitler and John Miller are cutting logs in the John Koch woods for the Steward saw mill. They have erected a tent and are camping out these pleasant frosty nights.

Geo. Henderson and Wm. Tyndall the regular rural carriers are taking a fifteen day vacation. Their substitutes, Raymond Rhoads and G. M. Shutt are now carrying the mail.

Dr. Kimes accompanied by the stork made a visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Moody one evening last week and left a tiny four pound baby girl. The mother and baby are getting along fine.

Rev F. A. Dressel attended the Northern Indiana Synod of the Lutheran church at Three Rivers, Mich, last week. At business session Rev. Shrock a former pastor at this place was elected president of the Synod, and Rev. Dressel was made secretary.

Edward Hull, who had been at the Hope hospital at Ft. Wayne for two weeks, returned home Saturday evening. Ed looks as if he had been through a long sick spell. The blood poisoning has been checked and it is hoped that he will shortly be alright again.

Grandma Miller is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Beams.

Samuel Steward is not improving very fast from his injury. He is only able to get about in the house by the aid of crutches.

Mrs. Magdalena Henderson, from near Cedarville, spent a few days this week with her sister Lyda Jane Steward and other relatives.

The Ladies Guild Society of the M. P. Church, who were to have held a meeting last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Sam Markel, postponed their meeting until the next Thursday, October. 15, on account of so many of their members wanting to attend the Auburn Fair. All the ladies are requested to meet at Mrs. Markel's Thursday.

W. M. ALLEN,

BARBER.

Barber Supplies
Dermotine, Eczema and Dandruff Cure.

A new phonograph record known as the Edison Amberol will be on sale October 1st.

This record is capable of taking a song or speech twice as long as the usual record.

Attachments for the Edison phonograph to use with these records for sale at a low price Call and learn more about it.

JUSICE OF PEACE
Deeds, Mortgages and Contracts Written.

FRED THOMAS

THE BLACKSMITH

My shop is not under the spreading chesnut tree but around the corner on the bank of the river you will find my anvil clanging merrily.

Blacksmithing and All Kinds of Repair Work.

Horse Shoeing and Tire Setting

All Work Guaranteed.

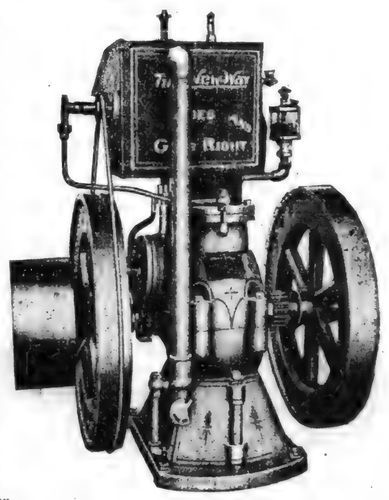
I would be pleased with the opportunity to show you the merits of my work.

INTERESTING TO UP-TO-DATE FARMERS.

What you need is a reliable gasoline engine to do your work and increase your profits.

The "NEW WAY" Engine is conceded by Mechanical Engineers and men of high authority to be the most perfect engine in mechanical design and construction manufactured.

No water tanks or water. Cooled perfectly by air.



SO SIMPLE YOUR BOY CAN RUN IT.

The next time you are in town, just drop in and examine the 3 to 3 1-2 H. P. "NEW WAY" engine on our floor. If you don't say it is the best engine you have ever seen or heard of, we will be greatly mistaken

Engine can be seen running at The News Office, St. Joe, Ind.

Eugene Hubbard, Butler, Ind.
Exclusive Agent.

Undertaking and Embalming.

Two Funeral Cars. One in White and the other in Black. We also furnish one elegant cab for Pall Bearers or friends. Prices reasonable

Beams & Baker.

Bank Statement.

The following is a true and correct statement of the financial standing of the Grabill State Bank at the close of its business, September 30, 1908.

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts, including Mortgages	$65	915	81
Overdrafts,		560	77
Banking House,	3	300
Furniture and Fixtures,	2	343
Due from Banks and Trust Companies, including Certificates,	10	615	99
Cash on Hand, actual Money	3	541	15
Total,	$86	276	72

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock—paid in,	$25	000
urplu s,		500
Undivided Profits, net,		840	41
Individual Deposits on Demand, including Demand Certificates,	26	271	12
Individual Deposits on Time, including Time Certificates and Savings Deposits,	33	665	19
Total	$86	276	72

Grabill State Bank,

Grabill Indiana.

Beams & Co.

These frosty nights and mornings make us think about warmer covering. Our Fall and Winter goods are here and ready for your inspection. We call your attention to a few of these.

Good Cotton and Woolen Blankets

Winter Underwear

Outing Flannels

Extra Fine Patterns. See Them.

Ladies Black Underskirts

Full Line Ladies Gloves and Mittens

Shoes for Everybody

Spencerville, Indiana.

OCTOBER

0364
L 903

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

GIRL WAS DELIRIOUS

With Fearful Eczema—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but the disease spread to her back, and then the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she was delirious and she did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first. Then I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

The Perfumed Cloud.

The dentist's sleeve was smeared with a pale dust. He beat it with his palm, and a perfumed cloud arose.

"Makeup," he said, laughing, "the day's unusual harvest of makeup. Why the deuce, to front the fierce white light of a dental chair, will women come to me with makeup plastered thick on their pretty faces? They all, or nearly all, do it. Their lips are reddened, their brows pencled, their cheeks rouged, and in a few cases the tiny network of veins in the temples is outlined in blue. Pegging away at their teeth, I mop up all that makeup on my coat sleeve. I smear red over white noses, black over pink cheeks. Phew! Look out!"

And, brushing his cuff again, he leaped back to escape the sweet smelling cloud that filled the air.—Exchange.

DRAGS YOU DOWN.

Backache and Kidney Trouble Slowly Wear One Out.

Mrs. R. Crouse, Fayette St., Manchester, Iowa, says: "For two years my back was weak and rheumatic. Pains ran through my back, hips and limbs. I could hardly get about and lost much sleep. The action of the kidneys was much disordered. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and the result was remarkable. The kidney action became normal, the backache ceased and my health is now unusually good."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Airy Persiflage.

Mrs. Cuppotee—How could a woman ever bring herself to marry an aeronaut? He's so flighty.

Mrs. Waypher—Yes, and too often he lacks ballast.

Mrs. Marmalayde—Then, too, he looks down on ordinary people.

Mrs. Chillicon-Kearney—And again he moves in the higher circles, and you don't.—Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

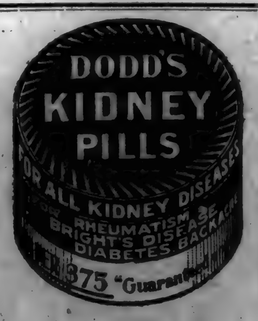
Tea Table Etiquette.

A hundred years or more ago there was a quaint tea table etiquette. It was considered a lack of courtesy to take much cream or sugar in one's tea. Etiquette demanded that the tea should be tasted from the spoon and that the hostess should then inquire, "Is your tea agreeable?" Modern women would be shocked by a fashionable lady of those days who cooled her tea with her breath, yet Young wrote of a certain bewildering Lady Betty:

Her two red lips affected zephyrs blow
To cool the Bohea and inflame the beau,
While one white finger and a thumb conspire
To lift the cup and make the world admire.



POPULAR PULPIT

PLEA FOR PRACTICABILITY.

By Rev. Howard R. Pell.

Everyone that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand.—St. Matthew vii. 26.

The Christian religion is not merely a philosophy. It is a divinely revealed rule of life. The church is not a university. It is a technical school. The function of the preacher is to teach men how to take the raw material of life and build it into character. The founder of the Christian church was a great preacher. During His three years' ministry thousands hung upon His words. And yet, at the end He had only about 120 disciples. Of the many who listened only these few were actually learners.

In the Sermon on the Mount, Christ lays down the great fundamental principles which should guide His followers. He closes by telling His hearers that those who not only hear His words, but do them, are like a wise man who built his house upon a rock. When "the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon that house," it stood. But those who hear without attempting to practice are like a foolish man who built his house upon the sand. When the time of testing came, his house fell. There are many such to-day. Men and women whose religion is that of hearing only.

